ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST." MONDAY, JUNE 1, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

HONORING THE DEAD.

MEMORIAL DAY APPROPRIATELY OBSERVED IN THIS CITY.

The Graves of the Dead Soldiers Decorated.—The Poets' Visit to Westfield.—Garfield League Exercises.—The Parade and the Exercises at Music Hall.

Dame nature was in sulks Saturday morning, and a genial May sun was clouded therefrey for several hours, making it seem almost improbable that the Memorial Day parade and observances would be favored by good weather.

But when the scarred, crippled and grizzled old veterans began to turn out and march to martial music the sulky Dame showed signs of pleasure and the people of this city and surrounding villages began to participate in the Memorial Day observances.

Early in the morning details from Winfield Scott and Major Anderson Posts visited the various cemeteries and began the work of decorating the graves of the dead veterans. When that had been completed the posts assembled at headquarters, and about nine o'clock formed in line headed by the Plainfield cornet band went to Westfield to decorate the graves there. The religious services were conducted by the G. A. R. adjutant George W. Moore under the National Orders, Comrade Samuel Hees the ritual, Comrade McVoy placing the flowers on the graves, and Comrade John Goodwin as chaplain making the prayer. The Commander of Winfield Scott Post, Comrade W. O. Smith, introduced Comrade Cornelius H. Paine, who made an appropriate address, which the members say they will remember many a day for its excellence.

A detail, commanded by the surgeon of Post, 73 Comrade William Day, decorated the graves of the dead soldiers at Scotch Plains. In the cemetery there is buried the first New Jersey soldier who was killed in the war, John Hand who met his death in a skirmish at Munson Hill, Va., Aug. 11th, 1861. His brother, Capt. Hand, resides on Park avenue.

While the members of the two Plainfield Posts of the G. A. R., were at Westfield Garfield Post of the State "Ladies Loyal League" assembled in the Presbyterian cemetery in North Plainfield, and proceeded to decorate the graves of the seventy-eight soldiers buried therein. About sixty young girls, dressed in white and carrying flowers strewed them on these graves. The services consisted of singing by the children led by the president of the State league, Mrs. Olsen, prayer by the Rev. Dr. Ketcham, and a patriotic address by Mayor Charles Place of the borough. There were several hundred people assembled who were deeply impressed with the address.

At about two o'clock the veterans indulged in a short parade through some of the principal streets of the city and borough. One of the pleasing features of the parade, and one that was noticed and commented on was the able manner in which the Edwards Zouaves, and military of the boys' Club marched. They were thoroughly trained and presented a fine appearance in their new suits of red, white and blue.

At the conclusion of the parade memorial services were held in the new Music Hall. Every available seat in the large building was occupied and a large number of people were compelled to stand.

The stage was handsomely decorated with flowers and in the center a cenotaph had been arranged.

Commander William G. Smith called the meeting to order and Adjutant George W. Moore read the memorial orders from headquarters.

When he had concluded reading the curtain was raised and a pretty sight greeted the eye. Seated on an inclined platform were between one hundred and fifty and two hundred little boys and girls, the latter dressed in white and wearing the National colors. They sang a patriotic song, after which Commander W. G. Smith of Winfield Scott Post, delivered an address of welcome. He reminded the audience that Memorial Day was dear to the heart of every soldier because it was set apart in honor of those who had met their fate by doing the country a great service, that of abolishing slavery and re-uniting the North and South.

At the conclusion of his address the children sang another patriotic song, after which the memorial services were conducted by the commander, the Senior Vice Commander, the Junior Vice Commander, the Officer of the Day and the Chaplain. A recitation followed and then Commander Smith introduced the orator of the day, Comrade Roberts.

He delivered a patriotic address, giving a brief course of the war, told of the trying scenes of the years between 1861-65 and said they were more than a memory to the soldier: they were a sad reality. Continuing he said: "Memorial Day is not observed to resurrect the sad reality, but to pay homage to our brothers who were shot down that the fair name of the country which they honored would be saved. We went to war to put down the slave-holding power, to fight for emancipation. We also had another motive and that was that all men should live honorably. By the war 4,000,000 slaves were freed and are to-day living as honorable men and women. There has been a struggle for human rights and that struggle is with us to-day. Our boys and girls will take it up and march to victory. I hope the children will carry on the good work the members of the G. A. R., began.

"We now look upon the Southern men as our brothers. They found out they were in the wrong and are men enough to acknowledge it. Why to-day one of them is delivering an eulogy over the grave of our dead leader, Gen. Grant. Isn't it much better for us to be able to say that we have but one flag and one Nation?

Isn't it much better for us all that the North and South has been reunited although it was the result of a civil war. The rebels acknowledge to-day that we were their friends. It was the G. A. R., who broke from the feet of labor the shackles of servitude.

The question of emigration is now uppermost in the minds of the public. Some of the great leaders are in favor of curtailing it. The population of these United States is now about 62,000,000 of people. The State of Texas alone could accommodate 250,000,000 and then not be as crowded as some of the countries of Europe. We have plenty of territory to accommodate all. We have room for every honest man and woman, but we have no room for dishonest men or murderers. Some of our best soldiers were foreigners. Some people say America for Americans. I say America for American citizens. As soon as a foreigner arrives on our shores and takes out his first papers or expresses his intention of becoming a citizen he should spread out our arms to welcome him.

On Decoration Day the American flag alone should float from the domes of our public buildings. It should have the same prominence on the Fourth of July.

"In reviewing the war we should take into consideration the work of the noble women. Gen. Kearny's wife followed him up until he was shot. She attended to the dying and bound the wounds of the wounded. There were thousands of others like her. It is not to be doubted but those noble women the war would undoubtedly have been prolonged a number of years. They were present at the couch of the wounded in the hospital. Be it either a wounded Union man or a rebel both were cared alike and when the rebels left the hospital they had not the heart to fight against such noble women.

"Even when Gen. Lee surrendered and went to Gen. Grant's tent the articles of agreement which he signed were so modest in their demands that when he read them they brought tears to his eyes.

"We should forget the animosities of the past but remember the history. It is right and proper to scatter flowers on the graves of the dead on this Memorial Day. The groundwork, which is more valuable than all the gold in Europe, has a spot which looks like blood on it. No genuine greenback can be made without it.

"Scatter, the flowers profusely, not only to-day, but throughout the coming time.

Mr. Roberts' address was loudly applauded and when the applause had subsided, Commander Smith, in behalf of the Women's Relief Corps, presented him with a handsome bouquet of flowers.

In a few appropriate words he thanked the corps and informed the audience that they were doing a noble work.

"Guarding the flag" was one of the pleasing features of the programme. A number of boys and girls, representing every State in the Union, appropriately dressed, recited short stanzas of poetry telling how their respective states would guard the flag after their fathers had departed from this life. Some of the children were scarcely able to speak distinct enough, but they had committed their little stanza to memory so well that after they had concluded a round of applause, which lasted several minutes, among them all the audience had thoroughly appreciated their efforts.

Lony Rickert, Carrie Hoffman, Lilly Myers, Ella Pearson, Carrie Howard, Ray Perry, Arthur Clark, Laura Kreamer, Agnie Moore, Emma Stramm, Bertha Clum, Florence Carver, Fannie Westphal, Ella Van Nest, Carrie Pangborn, Milla Uldrick, Edna Clum, Carrie Ross, Clara Southard, Carrie Night, Try Mattice, Maggie Bass, Jessie Lee, Laura Van Nest, Florence Smith, Jessie D. Smith, Edna Weigman, Louisa Sprag, Laura Hanglighter, Retta Nash, Anna Wedgman, Lucy Caspar, Mable Smith, Minnie Farley, Florence Taynor, Lida Day, Carrie Hutchinson, Carrie Rhea, Minnie Moss, Emma Anglesman, Ida Usslinger, Bertha Saylor. Mrs. E. C. Morse, Mrs. Charles Westphal and Mrs. H. C. Drake had charge of States.

Veterans—E. C. Morse, John Goodwin, John Finley, Chas. Stephens and R. Mattox.

Sons of Veterans—Raymond Mc Voy, Elmer Neal, Ed Smith, B. L. Mc Voy, Joe.

Adjutant's exercises were concluded by singing "America" and the members of the G. A. R., may well feel proud of the able manner in which they conducted the Memorial Day services on May 30th, 1891.

The members of the Memorial Detail were as follows: J. L. Mc Voy, E. J. Stewart, J. R. Dunn, C. Stephenson, J. Mackey, John Emmons, Samuel Morse, A. Thiesworth and Charles Rudolph.

Memorial Services at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

Exceedingly interesting services were held at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church in this city, on Decoration Day. The pulpit was draped with the National colors, and the platform was loaded with flowers. "1861-1891," written with daisies, stood out in white and gold. A tattered silk banner which a Vermont Regiment carried at Cedar Creek (loaned from the studio of Julian Scott), adorned the front of the organ. It was a pathetic memento of the sad scenes, and terrible days of the war. Doctor Lewis touched the audience deeply, when he refered to it as the symbol of what the nation would now be, had not the "Veterans" shielded it from the Nation's foot.

The services opened with the "Soldier's Requiem," commencing:

"Let them rest, let them rest, where they so tenderly laid them."

The war drum is silent, the battle is over."

In the further order of the services came Mrs. Hoyer's "Battle Hymn of the Republic," "My Country 'tis of Thee," Three, with the organ accompaniment, were rendered with great appropriateness, and with telling effect. A Veteran said: "They opened fire beautifully."

The sermon, (Text, Rev. 4:17, "Throne, "God's Hand in the History of Nations,") reviewed the "Causes, the cost and extent, the results, and the duties pre-consequent upon the war." It was full of facts and figures relative to Human Slavery, Greeley, Rossel and European the rise of the modern African slave Trade in 1442, and its development in Jamestown, Va., in 1620, down to 1861. Among the multitude of facts presented, we will speak for the following:

The British government controlled the larger half of the slave trade, during the 18th century, and forced upon the American colony which was not slave-holding from the beginning. It legalized the institution of Slavery in Virginia, and salem, in Massachusetts, Bristol, and Newport, R. I., and New York led the importation slaves. The first invoice came to Jamestown, Va., in 1620, and the first in the North, into the Massachusetts Bay colony in 1627, by a Colonial act, 300,000 were imported before 1776. The census of 1790 showed 697,897 in the Northern and 657,827 in the Southern colonies. Slavery was abolished in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont about 1780, in New York in 1827, and in New Jersey in 1804. Strenuous efforts were made to provide for the early extinction of slavery, when the Federal government was formed, but Georgia and the Carolinas refused to come into the compact on such terms, and the effort was practically abandoned. Slavery increased rapidly, after the opening of the present century. After the admission of Missouri as a slave State, in 1820, a compromise was effected by making 36° 30' the line between free and slave territory. Nothing came of this compromise. The rise of the "Anti-Slavery" publications began in 1808: of petitions to congress in favor of the abolition of slavery by National law, in 1835. By 1845 there were 200,000 members of "Abolition Societies," in the Northern States. The agitation was hastened by the abolition of the slave trade in England, and Wilberforce, and the Quakers, in 1808, the abolition of slavery in the British W. I., in 1834, and in Hayti by its independence, in 1806. Acts of violence, by the slave-holders, including murder, broke out along the border-States, as early as 1834. Then came the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, the Fugitive-slave Law, the demand for Kansas and Nebraska, as slave territory, the cruel domination of the slave-holding power in all National affairs, and the fire which swept the fires of agitation into a resistless conflagration of feeling, pro and con. The Dred Scott decision was a direct issue in the National elections. The "Free Soil" party championed the cause of freedom, and the Republican party took the cause of slavery. The party of freedom was born with the motto: "Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor, Free Men." The election of 1856, was a close one. It gave the victory to the slavery party, but the discussions in the chair. He was a weak, truculent, and traitorous to the Nation over which he presided. The election gave strength and advancement to the cause of secession. It was the culmination of the efforts of the Southern leaders of the National Congress, and Abraham Lincoln was inaugurated President of the United States. Most of the traitorous defenders of the "Old Flag" commissioned of God, led the party of freedom—now known as the Republican party. Then the South rushed more wildly towards the vortex of open rebellion. Democratic Senators and Representatives began to resign—as soon as Congress met in December, 1860. South Carolina (Jan. 26th) seceded next month, and seized the National supplies and fortifications within her borders. On the 4th of February, 1861, the Southern Confederacy was formed about the close of February, and when President Lincoln arrived at Washington he was congratulated, threats of assassination were so loud that he left his family and fled secretly by the night train. Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederacy, arrived at Montgomery, Ala., and came to Washington in disguise. Through careful navy preparations, provisions were sent into the fort of Sumter, which was besieged, without disturbance. The rebels fired upon Fort Sumter on the 12th of April, 1861. The release of that shot did not cease until Lee laid down his sword four years later at Appomattox.

Some idea of the rapidity with which the North, the loyal part of the Nation, responded to the call for defense, the following figures: Sumter fell on the 14th of March, on the next day the President issued a call for troops for ninety days. 91,000 men responded to the call. On the 1st of January, 1862, 575,917, men were mustered, of 15,907 men. July 1st of the same year, it numbered 186,751. On the 1st of January, 1863, 918,877. July 1st, 1863, it numbered 918,191. Jan. 1st, 1864, it numbered 959,460. May 1st, 1865, it numbered 1,000,516. Over one million. Averaged by the three years standard, the North placed in the field 2,190,979 men.

There were 272 regiments of cavalry, 26 of artillery and 1,047 of infantry. In 1861, 304,000 were raised and placed in the field in less than one month; 82,000 were raised and placed in the field in three weeks, at several different times. At one time 80,000 were furnished from New England in 10 days. 75,000 in ninety days. 91,000 men responded to the call. On the 1st of January, 1862, 575,917, men. July 1st of the same year, it numbered 186,751. On the 1st of January, 1863, 918,877. July 1st, 1863, it numbered 918,191. Jan. 1st, 1864, it numbered 959,460. May 1st, 1865, it numbered 1,000,516. When the final surrender came, Sherman's army discharged at the various recruiting stations.

THE LOSSES WERE AS FOLLOWS:

Killed in battle, 61,362; died from wounds, 43,726; died from accidents, 186,326; accidentally killed 500; executed on sentence, 267; murdered by guerrillas, 1,745; died in rebel prisons, 26,436; died of disease, 174,577; dishonorably, 3,095; for disability, 224,096; casualties, 2,261; resignations, 7,022; dismissed, 1,313; resigned, officers 47,574; enlisted men, 261,939; total, 913,068.

Killed in battle, 94,000 out of 42; died of wounds, one out of 10; of disease, one out of 13; died in prison, one out of seven; died in rebel prisons, one out of nine. It is said that for every man killed in action, one hundred people will be left in mourning. 60,000 are buried in our National cemeteries. About 140,000 of these are "Unknown." Pennsylvania and the seventh Wisconsin suffered most severely in battle. The cost of the war in money is placed at $6,189,623,900.58.

RESULTS.

1. We have vindicated our right to equal liberty with mankind.

2. The Nation is purged from a great sin, and the contradiction of saying that all men are free and equal. Slaves were not.

3. The South is saved from a vampire which was sucking out its life blood.

4. The stability of our Republic has been tested and proven.

5. The negro race in America has entered the road to elevation and higher manhood.

6. The old world has been more fully taught to respect us.

7. We have learned through tears, as the symbol of what the nation would

The Theosophists always said the Spiritualists were humbugs, and since the death of Mme. Blavatsky the Spiritualists are remarking anew that they always knew the Theosophists were frauds. The outside world accepts the judgment of both, and believes that both are right.

Forty million dollars in gold left the United States for Europe in the three months ending with the middle of May, yet there has been no great disturbance of finances on this side. The people of Europe will begin to believe this is a great country, and that we are a nation of resources.

"We are as yet but children," says MAX MULLER in a recent lecture. "Man's life on earth is only in its beginnings; the future before him is immense; the past that lies behind us is but the short preface to a work that will require many volumes before it is finished; before man has become what he was meant to be."

Better Than Ice Water.

In Great Britain, for toilers in hot places and on heavy labor, as in foundries and iron mills, a drink is recommended that is pronounced better than ice water: better than the foaming ale when it is brown, better than beer or any of the mild drinks by which hot and thirsty men cool their throats. This is simply oatmeal water.

It is made in a small quantity by putting two tablespoonfuls of oatmeal into a glass and then stirring in cold water. When the mixture settles the liquid is drunk off it. This drink is more refreshing than either beer or simple water. The oatmeal in it is nourishing, so that the man who takes it gets both food and drink. The iron workers throughout Europe use this preparation, and the temperate men among them declare that it is much better than either ale, beer or porter. To make it in larger quantities add slightly over half a pound of oatmeal to a gallon of water. Among laborers in the Brooklyn navy yard this is the popular drink. Six pounds of the meal being stirred into an ordinary pail of cold water.

The ice water season is at hand, bringing with it dyspepsia, the sudden chilling of the blood, the decay of the teeth and all the other ills that doctors declare are attendant on the imbibing of this favorite American beverage. Instead of the ice water, instead even of the iced beer, try the oatmeal drink, just cool enough to taste agreeable.

The Chilian Troubles.

Since 1833 Chili has maintained her standing as a republic without a revolution. That is a long time for a South American country, and as far as it goes it proves that even Spanish blood may be sufficiently Americanized for self government. But, unfortunately, in the very foundation of the Chilian republic the seeds of future troubles were planted. The country at the beginning of the republic was parceled out among the conquering leaders. They hung together, and have been able to govern the country in their own way ever since. Chili was a republic ostensibly modeled after ours. The president was chosen for five years, with the privilege of naming his successor, who was put into the office as a matter of courtesy perhaps.

In this way the rich governing party always kept the upper hand and the ins always staid in. But the present president, Don Jose Manuel Balmaceda, was, unfortunately, born with liberal leanings. He wanted Chili to be a republic in more than the name, and up with the times in all modern ideas. He was elected president in 1886. Through strenuous effort he managed to secure a liberal majority, that by act of congress secularized marriage and graveyards. This arrayed against him all the power of the conservative and clerical parties, and they refused to accept as president the liberal and man of the people whom Balmaceda named as his successor.

Thus we have the spectacle of an administration that represents liberal and progressive principles opposed by revolutionists who represent conservatism, and practically the government of an aristocracy. The sympathy of the American people, therefore, must naturally be with President Balmaceda. One feature of this contest is that the insurgents have possession of the nitrate beds, which form the chief revenues of the Chilian government. British sympathies will therefore probably be with the insurgents, since British subjects have immense interests here.

The army went with President Balmaceda. The navy, on the other hand, sided with the insurgents. President Balmaceda is a man of splendid physical development and statesmanlike ability. With him is the cause of the common people. Against him are the wealth and aristocracy of Chili, the power that has governed the republic nearly sixty years, and how the conflict will end nobody knows. If the United States can intervene in any way to stop this useless and wicked fighting, in the interest of the principle of republicanism it ought to do so.

CREEDS USED AS CLUBS

Heretics Convinced by the Process of Stunning.

THIS IS R. HEBER NEWTON'S IDEA.

He Believes That Creeds Are Not Transcripts of Some Heavenly Manuscript Set Up from Copy Brought Down by Angels, but the Work of Faithful Men.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The interest felt in the series of discourses on creeds being delivered by Rev. R. Heber Newton was attested by the presence of a congregation which filled All Souls' church to the limit of its capacity Sunday. Mr. Newton's sermon was entitled, "How to Read the Creed," and was based on the text: "Understandest thou what thou readest?"—Acts viii. 30. "A creed," he said, "rests upon the authority of Christ himself. Creeds do rest apparently on the authority of the councils which issued them, but a universal council is not a synonym for the Almighty. Creeds are not transcripts of some heavenly manuscript set up from copy brought down by little angels. Constantine, indeed, commanded the assembled bishops to receive the decrees of the council at Nice as 'dictates of the Holy Spirit,' but then Constantine was a heathen not yet baptized, and being an expert in 'things of the spirit.' The story of many of the councils is a tale of violent and acrimonious disputes, of metaphysical hair splitting and theological jugglery, of political intrigue and ecclesiastical autocracy, of bitter passions breaking forth into words of execration with anathemas instead of benedictions, a scene of clenched fists and drawn swords, of soldiers keeping bishops from each others' throats, of bloody massacres and stealthy assassinations.

The Creed's True Test.

"The decrees of such councils are plainly not matters of plenary inspiration by any spirit whose dominating characteristic is holiness. One thing is thus made providentially clear, that the truth of the creed rests not on the authority of the body setting it forth, but on its own intrinsic truthfulness, its interpretation of the Christian consciousness. Its authority will last so long, and only so long, as it continues to express the Christian consciousness and to interpret satisfactorily the problems of nature and man in the light of the spirit of Jesus Christ. A creed is tested aright if it is continually carried back to its sources. The Nicene creed was an attempt to state logically and philosophically the teachings of the New Testament. It can only continue to stand as it is seen to rest unmistakably on this foundation. This forces on the church the continual duty of showing that every affirmation of the creed must be proved from Scripture, and of stretching her authority generally whenever there is any question on this point.

By Reason and Conscience.

"The Scriptures are not the bedrock of the foundation of the faith. Reason and conscience tested them and stamped them as divine. A creed is to be tested by reason and conscience. It must be shown not to have depreciated. No creed can stand long which does not square with the facts of life found on the granite rock of reason, which does not stand plumb with the line of eternal righteousness. To know the creeds of other religions is to gain many a clew to the meaning of our Christian creeds. What is the prospect for an intellectual understanding of the great creeds, if a church practically reissues that edict of the fourth council of Carthage, 'No bishop shall read a Gentile book.'

"A creed is to be read as dealing with themes transcending all human thought, and therefore its affirmations are not to be read as exact statements. The themes are those which level deaths are the profoundest problems which can tax man's mind, the riddles over which successive generations have puzzled themselves wearily. What then can be the use of all his thoughts upon such high things? 'Words thrown out at transcendent mysteries,' attempts to express the inexpressible, to define the indefinable, to know the unknowable.

No Use for a Dictionary.

"The true meaning of a creed is to be found not in what it states, but in what it suggests. A dictionary will not adequately interpret a creed. A creed is to be read as including a philosophy, which can be rightly interpreted only by the philosophically minded. The language of the Nicene creed concerning the incarnation is pure philosophy. We know this from the character of the words employed. They are technical terms of metaphysics. They can be traced up to the philosophers of paganism by whom they were minted. The popular prejudice against the doctrine of the trinity is mainly due to this failure to recognize it as philosophy. A creed dealing with transcendent themes must not only philosophize. It must positively strive to interpret through the imagination the mysteries of the faith. God is declared to be 'the maker of heaven and earth.' Yet in the Old Testament we find a subsequently reissued

HARRISON AND BLAINE.

Their Relations Discussed by Russell and Quay,

ALL RUMORS OF COLDNESS DENIED.

The Pennsylvania Senator Reported as Saying Said That the Secretary of State Could Get the Keystone Delegation Regardless of the President.

PITTSBURG, June 1.—Ex-State Senator James S. Rutan, of Allegheny, has been quoted as saying that Senator Quay would endeavor to turn the Pennsylvania delegation to Mr. Blaine.

Senator Quay was asked about this last night, and in reply says: "You may say of the statement that it is entirely unfounded. I am on the best of terms with both Secretary Blaine and the president. So far as I know, there is nothing but good feeling between them. I do not think Senator Rutan should be held responsible for that statement.

Blaine Could Have It.

"Mr. Blaine could have the delegation from Pennsylvania whenever he wanted it, no matter what President Harrison's course may be."

"Is there any truth in the rumors that there is to be a disruption of the national Republican committee?"

Perfect Harmony.

"None whatever. There is perfect harmony in the committee, and everything is running along smoothly. Mr. Clarkson is regard as an exceptionally strong man. He has executive ability and is a thinker. He is a born statesman, but has not been in a position where he could show it. He ought to be in the United States senate."

What Russell Harrison Said.

While in Pittsburg for a short time Russell B. Harrison confirmed the accuracy of the interview he had with him in Chicago concerning the presidential race of 1892. He said: "I was asked whether my father would be a candidate in 1892. I replied that as far as he is concerned personally, he did not think he would enter the race. If the wishes of his family are consulted he will not be a candidate. If the people demand it, that is a different thing."

No Coldness Between Them.

"The newspaper stories that there is a decided coldness between the president and Secretary Blaine are all exaggerated. I assure you that there is nothing but the most cordial feeling, socially and politically, between them.

The President and His Cabinet.

"As to the charge that the president is too cold toward the members of the cabinet and that he does not allow them much freedom of opinion on great questions, the truth is quite the contrary. I have heard it said that President Harrison holds more frequent meetings of the cabinet than has been the custom of his predecessors, and always invites the fullest discussion."

Halstead on Harrison and Blaine.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The World says Murat Halstead, a warm friend of Mr. Blaine, says that the secretary does not "hanker for the presidency. He has more seriously and honestly declined a number of similar offers than any other American living or dead, with a single exception. That exception is General Sherman, who was the man Blaine wanted to run for the presidency in 1884. I should think that if Mr. Blaine were convinced that he was the only Republican who could be elected to the presidency he would withdraw all objections to making the race.

Harrison Would Support Him.

"I am of the impression that the circumstances that would implant that conviction in the mind of Mr. Blaine would also persuade the president to the same effect, and that the president would himself lead the way as a Blaine man."

"Should he be nominated, would he be in condition to make the fight of a hot canvass?"

"I am well persuaded that he would not take a nomination that implied that he must go upon the stump, as he did in 1884, and make speeches in half a dozen states. I don't think that such a task should be set before him or that he would accept it."

Mr. Halstead says that the rumors concerning Mr. Blaine's mental condition are "cold blooded inventions," and that he is as bright and keen today as he ever was.

MACDONALD'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

It Is a Hopeless One, but the Premier Battles Bravely.

OTTAWA, June 1.—Sir John Macdonald is still living, but it is only a slender cord that binds him to earth, still the attending physicians are astounded at the marvelous vitality that he displays. The old premier is fighting with characteristic tenacity, but the fight cannot be much longer maintained.

Since Friday afternoon, though deprived of the power of speech, he has maintained the cheerfulness for which he was so noted while in health. He realizes that the end is approaching and seems to be prepared for the final call. A crisis in political circles is imminent.

Mrs. Harrison's Housekeeping Cares.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Mrs. Harrison has been giving much of her time lately to settling upon the plans of the redecoration and various other changes which will be made in the White House during the summer. The decoration of the vestibule and corridor, the green parlor and the state dining room are what the public will see the most of, but the necessary changes and repairs in the plumbing and other work of that character is giving her as much concern. If the weather is favorable for the change, she now expects to go to Cape May Point about June 15 and spend the entire summer there. The White House will scarcely be habitable at all after July 1.

A Farmer Robbed of $9,000.

WOOSTER, O., June 1.—Samuel Behm, a farmer residing near Marshallville, was robbed of $9,000. Behm was roused from slumber by hearing the burglars at their work. He discovered three men in the house, and drawing a revolver fired at them. Traces of blood were found in the room and one of the thieves was evidently hit by a bullet. There is no clew to the identity of the burglars.

They Saw the Pictures Sunday.

NEW YORK, June 1.—The Metropolitan Museum of Art was opened for the first time on Sunday yesterday. The new privilege seemed to be thoroughly appreciated by the large crowd that attended.

Mr. Blaine Slowly Improving.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Mr. Blaine was reported as slowly improving in health. It was not yet been fully decided at what time today he will leave for Bar Harbor.

IN THE BASEBALL WORLD.

Reports of the Sunday Games and the Various Clubs' Prospects.

COLUMBUS, O., June 1.—O'Brien was an easy mark for the home team, and it had no trouble in winning from Boston. Knell was very effective. The score:

Baltimore	2	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	4

Base hits: Columbus, 10; Baltimore, 8. Errors: Columbus, 0; Baltimore, 4. Batteries: Jones, Knell and Downs; O'Brien and Farrell.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 1.—The Louisvilles and Washingtons played a poor fielding game here. Louisville won by bunching hits when the visitors made errors. The score:

Base hits: Louisville, 9; Washington, 12. Errors: Louisville, 6; Washington, 4. Batteries: Sharrott and Cook; Baldwin and Snyder.

ST. LOUIS, June 1.—Over 9,000 persons saw the Browns defeat the Athletics in the third successive time. McGill was hit for three earned runs in the sixth inning and Stivetts relieved him. The visitors did no more scoring. The score:

St. Louis	4	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	6

Base hits: St. Louis, 12; Athletic, 8. Errors: St. Louis, 2; Athletic, 2. Batteries: McGill, Stivetts and Boyle; Weyhing and Cross.

CINCINNATI, June 1.—There was no game here Sunday. The police interfered.

ALBANY, June 1.—About 4,000 people witnessed the game Sunday at Pleasure Island between Albany and Troy. Both teams played poorly, Albany especially, allowing several opportunities go by to win the game. Murphy was knocked out of the box in the first inning, Troy scoring six runs, and Casey was substituted. The features were home runs by Mesnit and Shea. During the game Manager Gerhardt was hit on the arm by a ball and will be laid up for a couple of weeks. The score:

Base hits: Troy, 11; Albany, 6. Errors: Troy, 4; Albany, 2. Batteries: Shea and Cote; Murphy, Casey and Hoss.

Henry Watterson as a Peacemaker.

LOUISVILLE, June 1.—James B. Heth, of Chicago, and G. Douglas Sherley, of this city, between whom a sensational personal encounter occurred last Monday and who have been talking of a duel ever since, have finally been persuaded not to shed each other's gore. Mr. Heth was recently informed that certain remarks, supposed to reflect on a lady of his acquaintance, had been made by Mr. Sherley, and thereupon sought that gentleman at his home, but, as the story goes, attempted to strike him when he opened the door. When Sherley recovered from his astonishment he tossed Heth into the street and subsequently received a call for an explanation and apology, intimating that his hot southern blood boiled and that he would be pleased to carry no about Mr. Heth at the latter's earliest convenience. Henry Watterson and Dr. D. W. Yandell, acting for Mr. Sherley, and Messrs. N. B. Johnson and John W. Grenough, acting for Mr. Heth, then took the affair in hand, with the above result.

Both Were Badly Burned.

CHICAGO, June 1.—W. O. Worth, president of the Chicago Bicycle company, and A. L. Jordan, a clerk in the employ of the concern, were terribly burned by an explosion which took place in the Keene block. Worth and Mr. Jordan visited the basement room of the factory. Jordan struck a match with the intention of lighting the gas under one of the enameling ovens. Instantly there was a terrific explosion, which threw both men about ten feet away, setting their clothing and the room ablaze. The men rushed down stairs, where passersby extinguished the flames on their garments. Both men were badly burned about the face, arms and hands. The three upper stories were completely gutted. The total losses are the Chicago Spring Bolt company, loss $25,000; fully insured; the Bicycle company, loss $50,000; little or no insurance. The explosion was the result of a leakage in the gas pipe.

Dr. Fordyce Barker Dead.

SPORT IN A CANOE

THE POPULARITY OF PADDLING.

In a Dozen Years This Exciting Method of Amusement and Exercise Has Grown Wonderfully to Public Favor and Has Apparently Come to Stay.

To the unaccustomed observer canoeing appears to border on foolhardiness. The sight of a man or of two men trusting themselves on deep water, far from shore, in a tiny shell that looks too frail to stand the buffet of a single wave, is provocative of nervous shudders. When the weather is stormy, and preposterously disproportionate sail is spread, the shudder becomes a thrill of horror. Yet the lovers of this sport seem more infatuated than the devotees of any other form of adventurous amusement with their special pursuit. Within the past ten or twelve years the sport has grown in public favor, and where as there were not a dozen canoe clubs in the country in 1880, there are now more than 120, with a total membership of something like 4,000.

It is impossible to resist the belief that a considerable part of the fascination of the sport lies in the danger, and yet there are comparatively few serious accidents recorded, and every year witnesses large accessions to the ranks of the canoeists. Probably one cause of the rarity of accidents is that only skilled athletes are likely to be attracted, and another is that the canoe is not as dangerous a thing as it seems to be. With a club membership of about 4,000 it is probable that the devotees of the sport are at least double that number, and the present season, now just beginning, is likely to see the number largely increased.

The 120 clubs mentioned are scattered all over the United States and Canada. Almost every where where a good sheet of water—ocean, lake, bay or river—is to be found the canoeists are to be found. Of the clubs twenty-three are in New York state, seventeen in New Jersey, a like number in Massachusetts, nineteen are in Canada and Ontario, nine each in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and the others are scattered everywhere from Maine to California; one being in the District of Columbia, one in the Northwest territory, one in Washington, and only one in a southern state, namely, Virginia. It is difficult, not to say invidious, to pick out individual clubs from this number for special mention, but it is at the same time impossible in a brief article to mention all. One of the best known, perhaps, is the Knickerbocker club, of New York city, which has a membership of seventy-six, according to the latest list that has been compiled. It owns a handsome club house on the Hudson river bank. L. W. Seaver is the commodore, F. C. Moore vice commodore, J. K. Hand is secretary, and J. R. Steers is treasurer.

Perhaps as large a number of this club as can be presented in the Jabberwock club, which is situated in the Tuxpy woods—wherever that is—and which announces somewhat vaingloriously that it has "no house, officers, constitution, flag or prince." Mr. George A. Warder acts as its scribe. The Laurence club, on the Merrimac river, is one of the largest in the country, having 250 members. Its officers are: Commodore, Harry B. Dow; vice, Colonel Henry C. Nevins; purser, F. L. Leighton; secretary, James E. Simpson. At Fort Qu'Appelle, Northwest territory, thirty-five canoeists have organized the Qu'Appelle club, of which S. G. Elliston is commodore.

Sixty-two of the members of the Forty-third battalion, Ottawa and Carlton rifles in Ottawa, Canada, have organized

clubs are remarkable either by reason of their location or their prosperity, but cannot be specified here.

Following the fashion of the sporting world, these clubs have formed themselves into associations. Of these there are two. The larger is the American Canoe association, which is officered as follows: Commodore, Walter U. Lawson, Boston; secretary, Ralph P. Braden, Boston; consul, Mass.; librarian, W. P. Stephens, Bayonne, N. J.; regatta committee, Dr. J. A. Gage, Lowell, Mass.; W. G. Macdonald, Toronto; Ralph Palmer, Newark, N. J. Signal officer, Henry D. Marsh, Springfield, Mass.

This association is separated into the Atlantic, the Central, the Eastern and the Northern divisions, each having a vice commodore, a rear commodore and a purser, besides an executive committee.

The other is the Western Canoe association, having its headquarters in Chicago. Its officers are: Commodore, D. H. Crane, Chicago; vice commodore, N. H. Cook, Chicago; rear commodore, O. A. Woodruff, Dayton, O.; secretary-treasurer, J. H. Ware, Chicago; executive committee, W. H. Huntington, G. H. Gardner, C. J. Stedman.

The distinguished canoeists—those who have made long and adventurous voyages—are a legion, and not a few of them, being as skillful with the pen as with the paddle, have written entertaining stories of their adventures, so that there now exists a respectable literature on the subject which ranks high among the writings of sportsmen.

PLATINUM MIRRORS.

An Application That Explains Some of the Illusions of the Stage.

The mirrors in common use are as a rule provided with a reflecting surface consisting of an amalgam of tin and mercury. This reflecting is liable to injury by accident, as are not only satisfactory in point of brilliancy but are as permanent as the glass itself.

A thin film of metallic platinum is deposited upon the glass by precipitation from a solution of the chloride, by oil of lavender and afterward burned in by heating the glass nearly to redness in a muffle, thus incorporating the reflecting surface into the glass itself.

A peculiarity of this coating of platinum is its extreme thinness, which readily allows light to be transmitted through it. Thus if the light falls upon the mirror from the front it will be reflected back again the same as in an ordinary mirror, but if the source of the light is behind the plate of platinized glass the rays will be transmitted to the observer standing before it, as if it was a plate of ordinary glass. The illustrations from La Nature show an amusing application of this principle. The first picture shows a man, Simon Stern, by name, in front of a show containing a grotesque head, and which can be illuminated or darkened at pleasure. In Fig. 2 the light behind Mr. Stern's head is extinguished, and the person looking into it sees only his reflection. If now the globe in the rear of the glass is illuminated the effect is that shown in Fig. 3, and the victim of the scientific joke sees instead of his own features the less flattering image depicted in Fig. 2.

THE VICTIM OF A SCIENTIFIC JOKE.

SEES ONLY HIS OWN REFLECTION.

Under favorable conditions ordinary plate glass without any metallic coating will reflect nearly all the light falling upon it, and it is possible to see what part of the world you are talking about. The latitude of a place changes the length of the day to a remarkable extent. At Stockholm, Sweden, it is eighteen and one-half hours in length. At Spitzbergen the longest day is three and one-half months. At London, England, and Bremen, Prussia, the longest day has sixteen and one-half hours. At Hamburg, in Germany, and Dantzig, in Prussia, the longest day has seventeen and one-half hours. At Memel, the longest day lasts from May 21 to June 23 without interruption. At St. Petersburg, Russia, and Tobolsk, Siberia, the longest day is nineteen hours. At Archangel it is twenty-two hours. At Tornea, Finland, June 21 brings a day nearly twenty-two hours long, and Christmas one less than three hours in length. At Cape Horn, the longest day is about fifteen hours, and at Montreal, Canada, it is about sixteen hours.

How Fish Hooks Are Made.

The Industrial World tells how fish hooks are made. There is a little machine which turns out fish hooks in six strokes. Stroke No. 1 bites off a morsel of steel wire; No. 2 makes the loop where you fasten your line; No. 3 hacks the other end; No. 4 fattens and bends back the barb; No. 5 makes the point; No. 6 bends the wire—and your fish hook drops in a little box—and it need be finished. Then it is either japanned—these are the common black fish hooks—or they are tinned, the tinning being done by hand sometimes see in cutlery. For this finish they are heated red hot and then cooled in oil.

The Steam Engines of the World.

The steam engines of the world represent approximately, says The Manufacturer and Builder, the total power of 4,000,000 of men; or more than double the working population of the world, the total population of which is usually estimated at 1,483,000,000 inhabitants. Steam has accordingly enabled man to treble his working power, making it possible for him to accomplish in a lifetime three times as much attending to his intellectual development.

A Botanical Curiosity.

At a meeting of the Royal Botanic society the secretary brought to the notice of members a portion of a large poplar lately blown down in the gardens, showing a network of roots running almost round the trunk between the bark and wood, at some distance from the ground. The plant had apparently derived its nourishment, not from the soil, but from the decaying portions of itself.

HOW TO MAKE A KITE.

Some New Ideas Given with a View to Pleasing the Boys.

We are indebted to Country Gentleman for some new ideas on kites which we have great for the benefit of boy readers:

Find some straight-grained, light wedge wood (we use cedar) and make four sticks about ¼ inch thick and ¾ inch wide; two of them 29 inches long, one 17½ inches long and the other 18½ inches long. and place them as shown in the cut. Saw grooves where they cross; cut small notches at the ends of the sticks and put string around. Then cut out a piece of thin paper an inch larger than the kite and paste edges over the string. Make a small hole at the ends of all the sticks except at the lower cross stick for attachment of strings, which must be on the opposite side from the sticks. Put strings loosely from A to F, from B to E, from C to D. Make a loop from E to F for fastening the tail, which must be made of a long, slender piece of fabric or metallic about 1 inch wide and 15 feet long, with ten bobs. Attach your string where the strings cross with a loose knot. If the kite dives, put more tail on. The kite without the tail ought to weigh two ounces. The string ought to be a fine cord.

Lily's Saturday Baking.

Lily is going out in the snow to see little Tim Two-Stilts, who lives down the lane. Tim is a happy little cripple in summer, when he can walk about on his two crutches, but he is lonely in winter.

Then Tim is alone all day while his mother is away at work. But on Saturday little Tim Two-Stilts wears a smile all day. He knows Lily Brown will come with her "Saturday baking."

When Mrs. Brown does her Saturday baking, Lily puts on a big check apron and a big paper cap. When her mother bakes large loaves of bread, Lily bakes little loaves. When Mrs. Brown bakes large family pies, Lily bakes small pastry pies, salmon and apple and pumpkin. But Lily's cookies are the best of all—"hearts and rounds" and dogs and cooky boys and girls. Mrs. Brown whisks over the cookies with white of egg, and Lily powders them with white sugar, and on the boys and girls she puts tiny colored candies for eyes and nose and mouth. When all are baked she packs the big package to Little Tim Two-Stilts. The "Saturday baking" makes two children happy.—Little Men and Women.

A Little Seeking.

Ruth Ashmore, writing in The Home Journal, says: "It's about the brothers. Your brother and mine get their ideas of what girls are from their sisters, so I want every one of you to learn not to answer them quickly or indifferently, but to feel that it is worth your while to be as attractive, as loving and as sweet to 'brother' as possible. I want you never to find it a trouble to chat pleasantly and sensibly with him. I want you to be interested in whatever is of interest to him. I want you to make him feel how good a girl can be and how sweet a good girl is; then you are doing for him the best thing in the world—you are making him so appreciative of the virtuous woman, whose price is above rubies, that he will never want to see or speak to any other kind. That's what I want you to do for your brothers. You see it was a very little scolding after all, but I wanted to point a good moral."

The Month of May.

Some one drops a rose
On the window ledge.
Through the open door
Glimmers one by one,
Tendrils green and fine
Pluck the sunny floor
In a shadowy dance.
Who is this that stands,
At the threshold's edge,
Pale, with flower full hands,
Shy, with waiting eyes;
Greet her, heart, and say
Let your welcome rise.
This is lovely May,
Dear and bright and shy,
Of spring's children three.

Counting Chickens Before They Hatch.

Like pie, it is considered rather a rash undertaking to count chickens before they are hatched, but the good folks in Scotland have entirely overcome this difficulty. It is so simple as possible. The hen has only to be set on an odd number of eggs and they will not be addled. But there is another danger—namely, that of the proverbial blind hen—to be avoided, and this is done by placing the eggs under the mother bird only after sunset, or the chickens will be blind. And while she is at it she may as well further provide that the magicians that are bent on frustrating her future plans for the hencoop by repeating a formula of which, for some unaccountable reason, the stand in great awe. It is, in the proper vernacular,

A' in thegreithie,
A' out thegreithie,

And here, in conclusion, are a few more useful items concerning eggs:

The hens on Good Friday—Ascension Day in the roof of a house preserveth the same from all hurts.

If you have a desire to see the ladies of the broomstick on May Day—their festival—you must take an egg laid on Maundy Thursday and stand where four roads meet; or else you must go into church on Good Friday, because it gives the blessing.

An egg hung up in a house is a lucky amulet; hence the colored eggs, and cocoanuts resembling them, in the east.

HOME DECORATION.

New Handy Pockety Designs, Washable Cushion Covers, Fancy Aprons and Sachets.

The small floral designs known as Dresden are in great vogue at present for all kinds of fancy work. They are embroidered on cloth, plush, silk, doilies, bureau sets, and even on pillow shams. These minute sprigs are scattered with irregular regularity over the surface they are to ornament, and are worked in their natural colors. A favorite combination is that of pansy and forget-me-not. This style of decoration is sometimes called "powder-work," on account of the scattered, irregular way in which are found also the following notes on decorative matters:

An effective background for the dressing table is made by filling the wall space between windows with a panel of India silk gathered full, on two rods, one just below the frieze, the other even with the top of the bookcase. The silk should be strained tightly from rod to rod.

Washable duck covers for sofa cushions are new. They are embroidered in white, and furnished with huge pockets for hair ribbon lacings. The tendency of all fancy work is toward materials that can resist the hard usage of the laundry.

Dotted Swisses are seen in coarse honeycomb material now so fashionable. Large patterned figures are stamped upon them and are left in the white, while the ground is darned in soft white cotton silk or rope linen. An ordinary honeycomb spread, such as may be bought for a dollar and a half, becomes a pretty beauty when the ground is darned in yellow rope linen, leaving the woven figures in relief.

The use of candles in dining rooms and parlors is increasing. The soft light of candles is more agreeable to the complexion of ladies than any other light.

Rich and beautiful foot cushions are made of dyed chamois skins, embroidered with silks and tinsels. These cushions are softly stuffed with curled hair or fiber.

French Pancakes.

Make a very smooth batter with half a pound of fine flour, six eggs beaten till light, two teaspoonfuls of brandy, one of good salad oil, a pinch of salt, a grate of lemon rind (or a few drops of vanilla, if preferred), and a pint and a half of milk; mixing it till of the consistency of good cream. Melt a tiny piece of butter in the frying pan, then pour in the batter till it covers the bottom of the pan thinly. The under side will be done in a minute or so; then shake the pan to loosen the pancake, and toss it lightly over on to the other side. The batter should stand for a couple of hours before it is used. This is a French recipe, and, though a little troublesome, is pronounced by an experienced cook to be very good.

Rhubarb Tartlets.

Make a short paste with one white and three yelks of egg, one ounce of sugar, one ounce of butter, a pinch of salt, and as much flour as is needed; work it lightly, roll it out to the thickness of a quarter of an inch. Line some patty pans with it, fill them with stewed rhubarb, cut the paste shape and bake them in a moderate oven till done. Remove the rice and fill the tartlets with rhubarb, stewed with plenty of sugar, and a little lemon juice, and at the top put a heaped spoonful of whipped cream.

Candlesticks are in more or less request for bedrooms; many of these are of low enough price to be bought in the fashion of a diamond, a club, a heart or a leaf.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE SIXTEENTH SESSION HELD LAST EVENING.

Councilman Ginna Catches the President in His Attempts to Rush Through the Order of Business.—The Same Councilman Also Denounced the Street Committee.—Other Business.

The City Common Council met in regular session last evening. It was 8.35 o'clock when the meeting was called to order. Besides the President Messrs. Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, See and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

Councilman Bushmore was absent.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Spangenberg, Mr. James L. Anthony was given the privileges of the floor.

Mr. Anthony complained that the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company had refused to light one of his houses at Netherwood because the wiring had been done by a person not employed by the company. He thought it was a conspiracy and wanted to know if Council would permit such a thing from a company having a franchise from the city.

Mr. Spangenberg moved that the matter be referred to the Committee on Public Lights. It was so ordered.

Cornelius Kelly applied for a hack license. It was referred to the Committee on License and subsequently granted.

The Board of Engineers recommended the election of William T. Kirk as a members of Alert Hose Company. The recommendation was adopted.

The monthly reports of the collector and treasurer were presented and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The City Clerk presented his quarterly report. It showed that $616.50 had been collected by him during the past quarter. The report was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The quarterly report of City Judge Codington showed that eighty-nine persons had appeared before him during the preceding three months; that forty-four had been fined; sixteen committed; sentence suspended on sixteen; and thirteen discharged. The report further stated that he had collected fines amounting to $292.50. The report was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The quarterly report of the Overseer of the Poor was read. It showed that forty-two families had been supported by the city during the past quarter at an expense of $666.45. The report was received and referred to the Committee on Finance.

James O'Neil applied for a license to sell liquor in a building on South Second street. The application was referred to the Committee on License.

The President called for new business.

Mr. Spangenberg moved that the ordinance in relation to dogs be placed on its third reading.

Mr. Ginna wanted to know if he had not made a mistake. If he was not rushing things.

The president replied that he was following the rules of order.

Mr. Ginna said the exact rule called for the reports of Standing Committees.

The president, apparently very much confused looked at the rules and then begged Mr. Ginna's pardon.

The report of the delinquent tax collector showed that the Committee on Finance was pushing the collection of back taxes.

Mr. Ackerman offered a resolution authorizing the transfer of $1,800 from the general fund for the temporary use of the Permanent Improvement Fund. The resolution was adopted.

In explanation of his resolution he said that two fire department bonds would fall due in July and that the purport of the resolution was to make provision for the payment of the same.

Mr. Hetfield from the Committee on Fire and Buildings recommended the purchase of the harness, bedding and sliding pole from Gazelle Engine Company, the cost not to exceed $150. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Hetfield from the Committee on Fire and Buildings reported unfavorably on the petition of Mr. J. T. Vail asking permission to erect a conservatory in the rear of his building on North avenue and recommended that the permission be refused him. The report was received and the recommendation adopted.

Mr. Ginna offered a resolution to the effect that the Committee on Laws and Ordinances be instructed to have a survey made of Peace street from the railroad to Greenbrook, looking forward to the widening and opening of that thoroughfare. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Spangenberg moved that when the Council adjourned it would be to meet again next Monday evening for the purpose of considering with the citizens the advisability of granting a franchise to another Gas Company. The motion prevailed.

The dog ordinance was adopted on its final passage.

The Board of Engineers were instructed to take extra precautions to guard against fire on the Fourth of July.

A communication from Engine Company No. 2, offered for sale the old double set of hanging harness and single set of hose cart harness. The matter was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings.

Mr. Ginna arose and asked where the Street Committee got authority to expend so much money. He stated that heretofore the Committee on Finance could keep track of the expenditures but that now they found it impossible to do so. The way things were going, he said, the committee could spend the whole of the appropriation in one month.

The president explained that it was always the custom, but that if the committee exceeded the appropriation the members would lay themselves liable.

Mr. Ginna said the street bills for the past month amounted to $1,502.39, where heretofore they only amounted to about $600.

The bill of Mr. A. D. Thompson was referred back for correction.

Mr. Hetfield moved to take a recess of ten minutes.

Mr. Ackerman called for the ayes and nays on the motion.

Mr. Ginna said that if the Council took a recess of ten minutes he hoped that the meeting would be called to order again at the expiration of that time.

Mr. Hetfield's motion was then adopted.

Upon re-assembling, Mr. Hetfield from the Committee on Water, Printing and Stationery stated that the committee were not prepared to report on the plans and specifications of J. M. Low & Co., for a water works franchise.

Mr. Moffett moved that the Council adjourn until to-night. The motion was carried.

PERSONAL.

Hannah A., the wife of William V. Dunham, died at her home in New Market Sunday afternoon.

Ex-Governor Beadle of Pennsylvania was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Memorial day.

Mr. Ed. Marble, the interlocutor for George Thatcher's Ideal minstrels, is spending a few days with friends in this city.

Mr. Joseph Eder, the manager of the of the Postal Telegraph Company in this city, and Miss Lillie Sheehan of Bound Brook will be married at the home of the bride next Wednesday evening.

Mr. J. K. Hoyt, an old and distinguished New Jersey editor, and author, who for the past several years has been sojourning on his farm in Florida, is spending a portion of the Summer in Plainfield, as the guest of the mother of Dr. Rushmore. While at the same time, over two doors on each side of the pulpit platform three bridesmaids and three ushers appeared. Finally, from the left, the bridegroom and his best man, Capt. M. R. R. Andain, of the Royal Fusiliers, appeared at the right.

The bridegroom met the bride in front of the pulpit and led her in front of the two ministers who were to marry them.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. John G. Bliss, now of New York. A soft melody was played on the organ during the ceremony.

The six bridesmaids, all dressed in pink organdie trimmed with Valenciennes lace, were Miss Mildred Howells, daughter of the novelist; Miss Edith Ayers, Miss Catherine Meade, Miss Elizabeth Stuart, Miss Maude Ayers and Miss Sadie Hayes.

The ushers were Capt. R. W. F. Monteith, of England; Richard Irvin and Harry L. Saltonstall, of New York; Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., and Burritt Hamilton Shepard, brothers of the bride, and Fred M. Wendt.

The bride was dressed in a handsome gown of white silk, trimmed in old Venetian lace. She wore on her arm an exquisite diamond bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom, and about her throat a $15,000 necklace of pearls and diamonds, the gift of Col. Elliott F. Shepard. She carried an immense bouquet of La Bride roses.

Among the guests which a special train brought from New York, were: Col. and Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard and family, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Howells, John W. Howells, Mrs. Charles F. Meade, Mrs. Margaret Miller, of London; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rutherford, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hatch, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. John H. Van Antwerp, Mr. and Mrs. James Mac-Donough and others.

Among the Plainfield guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Palmer Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. William Bloodgood, Mr. and Mrs. William Patton, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cox, Herbert Johnston, Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Miller, Mr. Edward Mayo and Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, Alex. Hadnut, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. R. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Kaufman, Mrs. Munn, Miss Jessamy Harte, Miss Wotherspoon, Mrs. George Lissignolo, Miss Augustine Lissignolo, Mrs. Ruthman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hyde, Mr. W. E. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Hengerer, Mr. and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. M. Chase, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. H. B. Updyke, Mr. James McGee, Mrs. Jas. R. Joy, Miss Eleanor T. Morrison, Mr. T. W. Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Hoagland, Miss C. E. Church, Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. Everts Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Dumont, the Misses Van Buskirk, Miss Taylor Johnson and Miss Mary Noxworthy Shepard, cousin of the bride.

The presents were numerous and costly, the most noteworthy being Col. Shepard's gift of a necklace, and a solid silver and gold tea service from the bride's parents. Edmund Clarence Stedman, the poet, sent a richly-bound set of his own works, and novelist Howells gave a lot of old and rare china. Several works of art were presented by Mr. George Wharton Edwards. After the ceremony a reception was held at the "Oaklea," Mr. Shepard's Summer home, where the bride and bridegroom received the congratulations of their friends under a beautiful canopy of roses. An immense bouquet of jaqueminots was received from President and Mrs. Harrison. This was placed near the bride under the canopy. A late train carried them to New York whence they start for Montreal, where the first six months of their married life will be spent.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING.

MISS ELINOR M. SHEPARD MADE THE BRIDE OF MR. JOHN DOULL, MILLER.

The Ceremony Performed in the Sarah J. Larimer Memorial Church, Before a Large and Fashionable Assemblage.

BILLIANT and novel to an exceptional degree was the wedding in the First Presbyterian church last evening, which made the beautiful Miss Elinor Matilda, daughter of Augustus D. Shepard of Plainfield, who is president of the American Bank Note Company, the bride of John Doull Miller, son of William Miller of Lancaster Gate, Hyde Park, London.

The bride is a niece of Mr. Elliott F. Shepard, of Mrs. William Dean Howells, and of Mr. Meade, the sculptor.

The groom is a nephew of Mrs. Patton of Ninth avenue.

The First Presbyterian seemed particularly appropriate for such a wedding, designed as it was by that prince of architects, Mr. O. S. Teale, to embrace all the most approved ideas of modern church architecture, and erected by the munificence of the late Sarah J. Larimer as a memorial. The church was elaborately decorated with flowers, the pulpit and platform being fairly imbedded in palms, roses and smilax.

The Shepards attend the Crescent Avenue church, but as it cannot be reached from the Shepards home except by passing under a railroad bridge, and as the old English wedding superstition makes it the direst kind of bad luck for a bridal party to pass under a bridge, the use of that edifice was precluded.

Soon after six o'clock the guests began to arrive at the church, and were guided by most accomplished ushers so that there was no confusion in accommodating so large and fashionable an assemblage.

At seven o'clock, as the strains of the Wedding March from "Lobengrin" pealed forth, the bride, on the arm of her father, was led down the left aisle of the church. The pathway of the bride was profusely strewn with roses by her little maid of honor, Wilhemina Patton, and page, Fred M. Shepard, who preceded her. At the same time, from two —What's the matter with that new Borough street?

—The Borough Council will meet in regular session next Friday evening at eight o'clock.

—Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, will hold a meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

—The Germans of this city are arranging for the inspiration of a new lodge of the Knights of Honor.

—The base ball team of the Bicycle club were defeated by the Somerville team Saturday morning by a score of 20 to 11.

—At a meeting of Easter Lodge, Knights of Honor, held last evening, seven candidates for membership were initiated.

—Eight persons were admitted to full membership in the Trinity Reformed church at the communion service Sunday morning.

—The ladies of the First Baptist church will hold their strawberry festival tonight. A very interesting programme has been arranged.

—A dog belonging to John Goff, the saloon-keeper, on Sunday bit a child who was walking along Liberty street. The animal was shot immediately.

—Examination of candidates, for State Scholarship for Union County, will be held at the Court House, Elizabeth, Saturday, June 6th, commencing at nine o'clock a. m.

—The members of the Grand Army of the Republic and the Women's Relief Corps, desires to publicly thank all persons who contributed in any way toward the proper observance of Memorial Day.

—Manager Wilson of the Railway Base Ball team, in company with ex-Mayor Daly and several other friends, visited Plainfield last evening and endeavored to arrange a series of games with the Crescents of this city. Their trip proved unsuccessful.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Young Ladies' Missionary Circle, of the Central M. E. Church, will be postponed until next week Thursday so as not to interfere with the Strawberry Festival, given this Thursday and Friday, by the ladies of the church.

—A very amusing trick and one which causes much mystification, is to take a small, smooth, goblet, fill it with water, and hold tightly against the opposite side, a ten-cent-piece, in the palm of the hand. Have the side with "lady" on toward the piece. Ask someone to look through and tell you what size coin it is?

—Mr. I. Warren Randolph is having a great demand for the new mixture of syrups, for soda-water, which he has named, as advertised, "Delmar." Mr. Randolph is a "man of the day," and believes in the liberal use of printers ink and newspapers, and is, as a natural result, successful.

—THE NEWS began yesterday the seventh year of its existence, steadily growing as grows the tree which bears its name, and is clearly identified. We suppose we might, with propriety, indulge in a little reference to review of the numerous things THE NEWS has done during its existence, of benefit to the locality, but these are so well-known that it is unnecessary, especially in the present crowded state of our columns.

Saturday's Races.

The track of the Gentleman's Driving Park on Park avenue was opened for the season Saturday afternoon. MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL.

The Tenth Annual Report of the Board of Governors.

The tenth annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held May 25th, and the reports presented showed that during the year 105 indoor and 26 clinical patients have been treated at the hospital, a number larger than ever before, and including, moreover, an unusual proportion of serious cases of illness and of accident.

Balance in bank May 26 1890..... $288 29

RECEIPTS

Cash donations	1,911 00
Hospital Sunday collections	5 6 16
Ladies' Auxiliary Board	600 00

The Ladies' Auxiliary Board, in addition to the $600 which they paid into the treasury of the hospital, have expended for repairs, furniture and supplies of different kinds, about $900. Many and liberal donations of old and new clothing, provisions, books and miscellaneous supplies have also been received at the hospital.

Mrs. Walrod, the efficient matron, and her assistants have had a year full of hard work, but they, as well as the physicians of the hospital staff, have the satisfaction of looking back upon a year of the greatest success and usefulness.

Rufus K. Case was elected president, W. R. Cock, secretary; G. H. Goddard, treasurer; and Edward B. Clark, Rev. G. L. Geodrich, W. R. Cock, E. N. Erickson and Francis Wood, managing committee for the ensuing year.

The annual report of the hospital for general distribution is being prepared, and will soon be issued.

Royal Arcanum in Scotch Plains.

The meeting of Panwood Council, No. 764, Royal Arcanum, held Tuesday evening last, was one long to be remembered by the members who were fortunate enough to have been present.

The Council had been expecting for some months a visit from the membership of Oxford Council, No. 629, R. A. of Brooklyn, who had become somewhat acquainted of late with Panwood Council through the attention given by the latter to one of their members, Brother Fred Cox, who resided in the Scotch Plains section near the village, having come to the Highlands with the hope of being benefitted by so doing.

Last Tuesday evening, being the regular meeting night of Panwood Council, was especially looked forward to.

There were present as representatives of Oxford Council: Regent Edwin F. Codet; Vice-Regent Morris L. Shillock; Past Regent C. O. Bunnell; Orator, C. G. Secretary William H. Riley; Collector C. L. A. Baldwin; Treasurer George W. Barnes; Chaplain A. C. Dunham, and Guard John Barnett.

Among other visitors were D. D. G. R. A. W. Reed of Plainfield, and P. W. Quest, of Vigilant Council, Brooklyn.

Panwood Council's membership now numbers 46, of whom 34 were present, including all the officers except the Sentry, who was unavoidably detained in New York.

The Council was called to order promptly by the Regent, Paul A. Oliver, the regular order of business carried out, and at 8:30 o'clock the guests arrived. They were introduced to Regent Oliver by Retired C. Trendwell, and when properly seated the Regent called upon Orator Bunnell to address the Council, the theme of which, with a few words of preface, (such as "we only can produce") he elected upon the subject of visiting Council to address the Company. He commenced by saying that he was "to be a wide-awake, earnest member of the Order; and a man whom the Council could look to for help in a time of need."

Then followed short speeches from Secretary Riley and the other visiting officers.

About nine o'clock the Orator, who had previously left the room, returned laden with the old-fashioned Panwood cake, cake and coffee, the latter being served in the regulation army tin cups, for the reputation Panwood has won a widely regretation.

Having thus been re-inforced, speeches were resumed rapidly in which A. W. Reed and the Collector, Bro. J. H. Parks, D. D., of Panwood, took part.

The meeting of the evening was "Fraternity," as exemplified by the membership of the Royal Arcanum. The practical benefits members derive therefrom while living, and the comfort given to those they leave behind when death comes among them.

Everyone seemed to enjoy the evening's entertainment thoroughly, and when 10 o'clock came and the announcement was made that the stage was in waiting to convey the visiting Oxford brothers to the station, one could scarcely realize that two hours had passed.

On behalf of Oxford Council, its Regent requested Bro. Reed to say to Bro. Cox and to Panwood to meet with them at some time in the near future, when they would be glad to welcome them to Brooklyn and convince them of the fact.

The address Panwood's Regent responded to in a most eloquent manner, and asked him to be the right man in the right place. Bro. Reed, in reply to a request during which the visitors departed for the station, giving three cheers for Panwood Council, they returned, and the latter in tones which echoed from the distant hills and awakened the whole neighborhood, responded with three cheers for Oxford Council, from their sound slumbers.

The Regent, who resides in New York, having accompanied the Brooklyn brothers, the Vice-Regent, William Colbert Strong, took charge of the meeting and conducted it in due form at 10:30 o'clock.

The Behring Sea Seal Case

"If the matter can be threshed out in a court of law in the way to which both nations are accustomed, the risk of misconception is reduced to a minimum," remarks the London Spectator of the seal fishery dispute. The Spectator observes also that the English speaking race never fully understand a disputed question till it comes into court. Both sides are therefore to be congratulated that the matter will in the court assume a far clearer shape than it did in the "jungle of diplomatic correspondence between the governments of London and Washington."

In consequence of the illness of Justice Bradley the trial of the Sayward case before the supreme court of the United States has been put off till October Then it will doubtless be settled. The claim that will be made then on behalf of the United States is that we have a right to patrol and protect the waters of Behring sea for a distance of 100 miles from shore, and that vessels of no other nation have a right to take seals within this 100-mile limit. Mr Blaine, however, expressly disclaims that we consider Behring sea as a closed sea, mare clausum, on general principles. It is only a closed sea as far as seal fishing goes.

Our claim is based on two propositions: 1 The nature of the seals themselves, that require such protection as we shall exercise over them or they will be exterminated. 2 Russia made such claim as this before us, and handed over to us all her rights along with the transfer of Alaska.

Mr Choate, however, counsel for the owners of the seized Canadian schooner Sayward, will argue before the supreme court that when we give up the claim that Behring waters are a closed sea we give up the very point that Russia always held fast to, and, giving up this, we surrender all the rest. Further, seals are wild beasts by nature, ferae naturae. They belong in whatever waters they are caught, and when they depart from the 3-mile limit of international law beyond the coast of a given country they become public property Furthermore, the claim of Russia that Behring was a closed sea was never made in due form till 1821, and Great Britain immediately protested against it, and Russia accordingly receded from it. Such are briefly both sides of the sealing schooner case, which is to be argued before the supreme court.

San Juan, Not Greytown.

The United States wants two naval stations in the West Indies, and one of them should be the Mole St. Nicholas, off the northwest coast of Hayti. The other should be in such a spot that the two together will command the entrance to the Gulf. Besides these we want the Nicaraguan canal finished specially. Then the United States will be master of the situation in the western hemisphere, as nature and the Almighty meant it should. If the Nicaragua canal had been finished and United States war vessels stationed at each end of it then the catching of the rebel Chilian runaway Itata would have been an easy matter.

Meantime the work of the Nicaragua canal has been well begun apparently. The first obstacle was the sandbar at the entrance to the harbor at Greytown, which should not at all be called Greytown, but San Juan de Nicaragua del Norte, as it is when written out—for short, San Juan, pronounced San Hooan. The name Greytown is a reminiscence of an incident which it is no particular satisfaction to Americans to remember Nearly a century ago Lord Nelson bombarded the place, lost an eye there, and planted the British flag over the town. Lord Grey was then governor of the British possessions in that region, hence the place was called by the English Greytown. It means nothing, has never been recognized by the Nicaraguan government, and ought not to be recognized by the United States company who are building the canal.

Whether the new party over is heard from again or not, there is one thing the members of the old parties will do well to heed. There was at the convention that formed the People's party an earnestness and intensity of feeling that suggested earthquakes and volcanoes. When the vote for the measure was finally adopted the suppressed emotion burst forth. There were cheers and a roar; tears rolled down tawny, weather beaten cheeks, and men threw their arms around one another The United States flags in the hall were torn from their fastenings and wrapped around some of the speakers. Altogether a more dramatic and striking scene has not been witnessed in this country since war times. The mood of thought that led up to it is one that the old political parties cannot afford to ignore. Enthusiasm is something that cannot be reasoned with. Moreover, it is catching, very.

The Atchison Globe puts a great truth into the following words: "There is nothing a man is so proud of as a child that is sound asleep in bed."

England Is Pushing Her Behring Sea Bill.

LATE CORRESPONDENCE PUBLISHED

Salisbury and Pauncefote Were Rather Slow and the President and Secretary Blaine Had to Keep Punching Them Up—The Outlook Seems Favorable.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The state department has made public the recent correspondence on the Behring sea fishery question. The first communication is from Secretary Blaine to Sir Julian Pauncefote, It reads as follows:

WASHINGTON, May 4, 1891.

SIR: During the month of March last, a few days after the adjournment of congress, acting under the instructions of the president, I proposed to you that a modus vivendi be agreed upon touching the seal fisheries pending the result of arbitration of the question at issue between the two governments. The president's first proposal, as I informed you at the time, was that no Canadian sealer should be allowed to come within a certain number of miles of the Pribyloff islands. It was, however, the conviction of the president, after reading Lord Salisbury's dispatch of February 21, that this modus vivendi might possibly provoke a conflict in Behring sea, and to avoid that result he instructed me to propose that sealing, both on land and on the sea, be suspended pending negotiations during the progress of arbitration or during the season of 1891. On both occasions it was a convenience to me, and always to you, the first in my office at the state department, the second at my residence.

The President Was Anxious.

The president was so desirous of a prompt response from Lord Salisbury to his second proposition that I ventured to suggest that he request an answer by cable if practicable. Especially was the president anxious to receive an answer owing to the truce which he favorably believe he should set on his tour to the Pacific states. He left Washington on the night of April 14 without having heard a word from your government. It was then a full month after he had instructed me to open negotiations on the question, and the only information was that Lord Salisbury would not agree to the proposal. The silence of Lord Salisbury implied, as seemed but unpreventable, the duty to send vessels of the Canadian sealers from entering Behring sea, and as all intelligence from British Columbia showed that the sealers were getting ready to sail in large numbers, the president found that he could not with justice prevent the lessee from taking seals on the Pribyloff islands. The president therefore instructed the secretary of the treasury, who has official charge of the subject, to issue to the lessee the necessary sailing on the Pribyloff islands the coming season of the maximum number of 60,000 (sixty thousand) seals, subject, however, to the absolute discretion and power of an agent, appointed by the secretary of the treasury, to limit the killing to such a number as, in the condition of the herd might, in his opinion, demand.

Lord Salisbury Was Willing.

On April 22, eight days after the president had left Washington, I received a cable from you that was absent from the capital, that Lord Salisbury was willing to agree that all sealing should be suspended pending the result of arbitration. On April 21 I telegraphed Lord Salisbury's proposal to the president. He replied April 25, expressing great satisfaction with Lord Salisbury's message, but instructed me to inform you that no seals must be killed by the natives for food," that "the lessees are bound, under their lease from the government, to feed such natives," and that although it is necessary to send a ship to the Pribyloff islands each season at their expense," and that for this service a very expensive one, the "lessees should find their compensation in taking a moderate number of seals under the lease." The president expressed the belief that this allowance would be readily agreed to by Lord Salisbury, because the necessity is absolute. You will remember that when I communicated this proposition from the president to you on the evening of Monday, April 27, you did not agree with the president's suggestion. On the contrary, you expressed yourself as confident that Lord Salisbury would not accept that in your judgment the killing of seals must be cut off absolutely on the land and in the water, and that it could not be stopped on either unless it was on both.

He Did Not Believe It.

The narrative of facts which I have now given sufficiently conveys (or ought to in your understanding the position of this government) brings me to a further statement which I am directed by the president to submit. The president refuses to believe that Lord Salisbury can possibly maintain the position you have taken, when he invites the president to submit the facts which I shall now submit to you somewhat in detail. When the privilege of killing seals on the islands of Behring sea and Saint Paul, in Behring sea, was leased to the North American company for a certain sum per skin, to be paid to the government, other duties of an onerous, costly and responsible character were imposed upon the company.

The Company's Duties.

In short, then, the means of living, the facilities for education, the care of health, the relief during sickness or old age of the young and old in a community of over 300 persons, are all imposed upon the company as its solemn duty by specific articles of the lease. I inclose you a copy of the census of 1890, giving every name of the 300 persons, old and young, male and female, who constitute the native community of the Pribyloff islands.

The duties thus imposed upon the company must be discharged annually with punctuality and exactness. The comfort, possibly the safety, of all these persons, especially during the seal less when left to themselves, is dependent upon the company under the lease, and the lessee said therefore to be under the control of the executive, which the company receives for the service. If the company shall, as you say Lord Salisbury requests, be deprived of all privilege of taking seals, they certainly could not be compelled to minister to the wants of these 300 inhabitants for all time. If these islanders are to be left to charity the North American company is under no greater obligations to extend it to them than to other citizens of the United States. It evidently requires a considerable sum of money to furnish all the supplies and provisions for these people, which are carried 4,000 miles on a specially chartered steamer. If the lessee company is not allowed payment in any form for the amount necessary to support these 300 people on the islands then they will naturally decline to expend it.

Human Life More Valuable.

No appropriation of money has been paid by congress for the purpose, and the president has refused to allow the whole innocent people to be hazard of starvation even to secure any form of agreement with Lord Salisbury touching seal life. Seal life may be valuable, but the first duty of the government of the United States in this matter is to protect human life.

You express your belief that precedents are no to propose to Lord Salisbury that he concede to the North American company the right to take a sufficient number of seals to meet the needs sufficient, to recompense them for their outlay in taking care of the natives; and that in the event that the lessee fail to comply with killing of seals be prohibited pending the result of arbitration." The secretary of the treasury has the right to fix the number necessary to the end desired. After full consideration, he has limited the number to seven thousand five hundred (7,500) to be killed by the lessee to repay them for the outlay demanded for the support of the 300 people on the Pribyloff islands. He further directs that no females be killed, and that thus the productive capacity of the herd shall not to the slightest degree be impaired.

The Joint Arrangement.

This point being fixed and agreed to, the proposed arrangement between the two countries should be as follows: The government of the United States limits the number of seals to be killed on the islands for purposes of revenue to seven thousand five hundred (7,500). The government of the United States guarantees that no seals shall be killed in the open waters of Behring sea by any person or vessel subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, including under the American flag or by any American citizen sailing under any other flag.

The government of Great Britain guarantees that no seals shall be killed in the open waters of the Behring sea by any person on any vessel subject to the jurisdiction of Great Britain. No British subject shall engage in killing seals for the term agreed upon. It may perhaps be wise to further agree upon penalties for violation of these prohibitions shall continue until the first day of May, 1892, within which time the arbitrators, to which the final award or awards to both governments. These several propositions are submitted for the consideration of Lord Salisbury. The president believes that they are calculated to produce a result at once fair and honorable to both governments, and that will be the permanent adjustment of a controversy which has already been left too long at issue.

I have the honor to be, sir, with the highest consideration, your obedient servant.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, G. C. B., K. C. B., etc.

Sir Julian's Reply.

To this letter Sir Julian Pauncefote made the following reply:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of yesterday in which you have forwarded to me the proposal of the Marquis of Salisbury detailed proposals for a modus vivendi during the approaching sealing season in Behring sea, on the principle of a cessation of seal killing both at sea and on land, and arrangements for its working. I informed you in my note of the 30th ult., his lordship was disposed to give his favorable consideration.

I have now received from the marquis by this day's mail a copy of your note, and I have telegraphed to his lordship the precise terms of the proposal with which it corresponds. I am sorry to find that a misconception has arisen as regards your complaint of delay on my part in acquainting Lord Salisbury with your second alternative proposal for a cessation of seal killing at sea and on land which you originally made to me verbally. You will recall to you may remember that I expressed some reluctance at sending any further proposals to his lordship while his dispatch of Feb. 21 was submitting amendments on the questions for arbitration, remained unanswered, and that I suggested that it would be more satisfactory if this new proposal were made concurrently with your reply to Lord Salisbury, which I hoped to receive with the least possible delay. I understood you to assent to that suggestion and to say that "you would speak to that effect."

The President's Name Not Mentioned.

If you had informed me that the president for any reason desired that this alternative proposal should be made in his name I should, of course, I need hardly say that I should have complied at once with his wishes. But I cannot call to mind that you mentioned the matter, and I mentioned at our interview, which you correctly describe as "conversational exchange of views." Fortunately, however, no irreparable loss of time occurred. I acquainted Lord Salisbury with your alternative proposal by the mail of the 7th of April (a few days only after it was made), and I received a prompt answer by telegraph which enabled me to inform you by my note of April 20 that his lordship was disposed to consider the proposal favorable. TO SAVE HIS HIGHNESS.

IS HE THE VICTIM OF A PLOT?

A Sensational Theory That the Family of a Woman He Had Been Intimate With Laid a Trap for Sir William to Procure His Disgrace.

LONDON, June 2.—The sensational trial that has just begun before Lord Chief Justice Coleridge and a special jury will determine whether Sir William Gordon Cumming, who is almost as well known in America and on the continent as in England, will hereafter mingle with the society to which he has had the entry by right of birth, education and more than the average accomplishments of a man of the world, or continue to live as he has lived for months—dead, comparatively speaking, to the world.

The History of the Case.

The case is generally known as the "baccarat case." The affair happened at Tranby Croft on the evening of Sept. 10 at the residence of Mr. Arthur Wilson. Among the guests were the Prince of Wales and Sir William Gordon Cumming. During the evening baccarat was introduced, and the Prince of Wales held the bank. Among the players were Sir William Gordon Cumming, Lord Coventry, General Owen Williams, Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Arthur Stanley Wilson, her son; Mrs. Ethel Lycett Green, her daughter; E. Lycett Green and Berkeley Levett.

The game had been in progress for some time when Mrs. Wilson concluded that Sir William Gordon Cumming was not playing fair. She communicated her suspicions to her son and daughter, the latter's husband and Mr. Berkeley Levett. They watched Sir William Gordon Cumming and agreed with Mrs. Wilson that he was transgressing the rules of the game in a flagrant manner.

Accused Him of Cheating.

The first Sir William Gordon Cumming knew of these suspicions was when Lord Coventry and General Owen Williams came to him and told him that Mrs. Wilson and the other four mentioned had accused him of cheating and that the matter had been brought to the attention of the Prince of Wales.

Cumming indignantly denied the truth of the charge, went at once to the Prince of Wales and appealed to him on the strength of their long intimacy and his stainless record as a soldier and unblemished reputation as an English gentleman to be cleared by him. The prince was greatly moved, but said he did not see how he could champion Cumming against the five witnesses. Though greatly excited, he kept his head sufficiently to ask if it were probable that a man in his position, with all the money he wanted and whose whole career ought to stamp the accusation as unfounded, could by any means be induced to run the risk of being stamped as a cheat, particularly in a game in which the prince kept the bank. His royal highness answered, "I am sorry, but the evidence is overwhelming; there are five against you."

Cumming "Swore Off."

Cumming's friends advised him to sign a paper promising to never touch cards again, and he did so. It was understood that if Cumming signed such a paper the affair would be kept secret. It leaked out. Then Cumming brought his suit for slander.

MRS. ARTHUR WILSON.

The Beginning of the Trial.

When the trial opened yesterday the crush in court was tremendous. A distinguished company was present, including the Prince of Wales, who will be a witness.

The prince sat in court from 10:30 to 4:30. During that time his expression was placid. It never changed to anything else, in spite of the frequent allusions to him. The plaintiff was represented by the solicitor general, Sir Edward Clarke, and C. F. Gill; Berkeley Levett, one of the defendants, by the attorney general, Sir Richard Webster, Mr. Charles Matthews and Mr. Lopes, and the remaining four defendants, Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, by Sir Charles Russell, Mr. Asquith and Arthur Russell.

The Plaintiff on the Stand.

Sir William Gordon Cumming, erect as if he were on parade, entered the witnesses' box. When asked if he had not been on close terms with the Prince of Wales, he said "Yes." After Cumming had told his story of the proceedings at Tranby Croft prior to signing the ultimatum, he was asked how he came to sign it.

He said Lord Coventry and General Williams came to him as friends and told him it was the only thing to do. Completely unnerved by the charge he did as they advised. Then suddenly Sir Edward Clarke put in the words, "Did you cheat at baccarat that night?" In the intense quiet Sir William replied, slowly and firmly, "I did not."

"Is there any truth in the charge whatever?" Sir Edward pursued.

"None whatever," was the reply, in the same tone and manner as before.

During his examination Cumming made a good witness. He was not so good when Sir Charles Russell took him in hand for cross-examination.

He Signed to Save the Prince.

"Sir William, if you were innocent why did you sign that paper?"

"Because it was put to me by those two friends of mine that I had no chance of proving in my innocence against charges with five people against me. That myself, my name, my regiment and everything would suffer unless I signed the document, so I signed."

"But what about the scandal?"

"It would have been caused by the impression that the Prince of Wales had been playing with a man who had been accused of cheating. To avoid the scandal I signed the paper."

One Theory of Cumming's Friends.

Many people believe that the accusation against Cumming is the result of a plot for revenge.

In point of character it is stated that he is a ladies' man and that he is given to boasting of his successes. He is said to have boasted of his success with a member of the household in which he once played baccarat.

This came to the ears of the household, and its members determined in revenge to kill him in cold blood, for that is what the charge of cheating at cards amounts to.

HELD FOR A RANSOM.

A Train Derailed and the Passengers Captured in Turkey.

VIENNA, June 2.—Brigands derailed the eastern express near Tcherkesskoi, Turkey. Several German and English tourists, including a German banker, were captured. The brigands demanded a ransom of £5,000 for the prisoners. The latter sent word to the German ambassador at Constantinople, De Radowitz. Chancellor Caprivi, on being communicated with, authorized Radowitz to advance the amount, and the prisoners were released.

The other passengers, not tourists, were plundered, but not carried off.

The place where the act of brigandage occurred lies between Constantinople and Adrianople. The band, which made the attack on the train numbered thirty men, led by the noted robber Anastasius. The brigands first seized the watchman on duty at the railroad station, and when they had prevented him from giving an alarm they set to work and tore up the rails for some distance. They set no warning signal for the engineer of the train, but allowed the cars to dash on to possible destruction.

When the eastern express reached the spot the engine tumbled over on its side, dragging everything with the tender, a baggage car, and all the third class passenger coaches. The first class passenger cars, luckily, did not follow the other cars of the train, but remained safely on the road.

When the train was thus disabled, the brigands rushed forward, uttering loud yells, brandishing their guns in a most threatening manner, and boarded the cars.

Several of the passengers resisted the attack made on them by the brigands, who replied with a volley from their guns, and dangerously wounded one of the men who sought to repulse them. The outlaws finally overcame the occupants of the cars and proceeded to plunder them, stripping the travelers of all their valuables and looting their baggage. When the brigands ended their work of robbery they seized four of the passengers in the first class cars and also the engineer of the train and then started with their captives for their rendezvous in the mountains. The men carried away by the outlaws were:

Oscar Gruger, Herr Israel, a banker of Berlin; Herr Maguschaw, a landowner of Siegelsdorf, Bavaria; Herr Oscar Kotysch, of Zorbig, Prussian Saxony; Freundiger, the engineer of the eastern express. Upon reaching their retreat, the bandits sent Herr Israel to get the ransom of $40,000 which they demanded for the release of the prisoners. Herr von Radowitz asserts that the porte will refund this money.

Bought by the Mackey Syndicate.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 2.—It is announced here that the Mackey syndicate has purchased the Ohio and Mississippi. The amount involved in the deal is $2,500,000. Mr. Mackey will probably be elected president in place of J. C. Clark. The new management is to mile long, and extends from East St. Louis to Mobile, Ala. By the acquisition of this line Mr. Mackey has a great system both north and south. It connects at East St. Louis with the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis and touches Peoria, St. Louis, Louisville and Chicago over the various Mackey roads.

Rev. Young in Trouble.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Rev. Conrad Young, pastor of the German Pilgrim Baptist church, on Lincoln street, Jersey City Heights, has been committed to the Hudson county jail on a charge of embezzling $1,200 given him to invest by William Schmitz, of 31 Chff street, who since April, 1890, has been unable to get any satisfactory account of the money from Mr. Young. Pastor Young says the money is safely invested.

Treasurer Dunn Stops Down.

TRENTON, June 2.—Philip P. Dunn, treasurer of the Star Rubber company, has resigned his position as president of the First National bank. A short time afterward made an assignment of his large clothing establishment to George S. Grosvenor. Jonathan Howard, who was president of the Star Rubber company, which failed recently, has advertised his large wholesale grocery for sale.

HOW.

How to Clean Tinware.

Apply common soda with a moistened newspaper and rub with a dry piece. The tinware will look like new after this treatment.

How to Prevent Corns.

One of the chief causes of corns is the wearing of ill fitting shoes. To prevent their growth only one thing is necessary. Always purchase well fitting shoes and wear them in the house for a week or two, to accustom them to the shape of your feet, before putting them into general use.

How to Obtain a Passport.

Send five dollars to the secretary of state, Washington. A blank will be sent to you, which you fill out and certify to before a justice of the peace or notary public and return to the secretary, who thereupon issues the passport. Every passport must be renewed within one year of its date. The oath of allegiance is required in all cases. When husband, wife and minor children travel together a single passport is all that is needed. A separate passport is required for any other person, except servants, in the party. On the Franco-Spanish frontier the possession of a passport is obligatory, and is likely to prove of great service elsewhere at any time.

How to Cut or Bore Glass.

Any hard steel tooth will cut glass easily when kept wet with camphor dissolved in turpentine. A hole can be readily enlarged by a round file. The ragged edges of glass vessels can be smoothed by a flat file. In fact the most brittle glass can be wrought almost as easily as brass by the use of cutting tools kept wet with camphorated oil of turpentine.

How to Eat an Orange.

Cut the orange in halves, longitudinally, with a sharp knife. Then insert the point of a teaspoon into each section and with a slight twist of the wrist dig out the juicy part, leaving the pulp. The best results are with the ripest oranges, for where they are slightly green it is more difficult to separate the substance from the pulp. Special orange spoons are quite the thing, and can be obtained at your jeweler's.

How to Change American Into Foreign Money.

When about to leave the United States it is advisable to secure whatever foreign money you may need from a reputable exchange broker, of whom there are a number in every city. If you intend crossing the ocean you can often change greenbacks for English money to the amount of about $100 on board the steamship. It is not prudent, however to trust to this chance, as there are frequently more demands on the purser than he is able to meet. Besides, the premium charged is usually higher than you would have to pay to the broker at the port of embarkation. American and English gold is readily exchanged in most foreign countries, but in England, if you depend upon the chances of the hour, a five dollar gold piece is often received at the rate of a sovereign, and in France it is not uncommon to have a sovereign received as a twenty franc piece. Both prudence and economy therefore, suggest dealing with the regular exchange brokers, who can be found in the vicinity of the railroad depots in most European cities.

How Grain Shrinks.

From the time it is threshed, wheat will shrink two quarts to the bushel, or 6 per cent., in six months. Corn shrinks much more from the time it is first husked. One hundred bushels of ear will be reduced to about eighty in the same period.

How to Test Milk for Water.

Thrust a dry, cool knitting needle deep into the milk and withdraw it slowly. If the milk has been watered as much as 5 per cent. scarcely a trace of its oil elements will adhere to the needle. If pure, the needle will be quite oily.

How to Clean Hair Brushes.

Dissolve a little soda in warm water and add a little ammonia. Hold the brushes in it with the bristles downward and avoid wetting the back. Shake until the grease is removed, rinse in cold water and put in the air to dry.

How to Remove Stains.

Rubbing with common salt will take egg stains from spoons. Fruit stains can be taken from the hands by washing them in clear water, drying slightly and holding them over the flame of a sulphur match while they are moist. Stains can be taken from linen by laying salt of wormwood on the parts when wet and rubbing.

How to Detect Death.

If, when the hand of the supposed dead person be held toward a candle or other artificial light, with the fingers extended and touching each other, and one looks through the spaces between the fingers toward the light there appears a scarlet red color where the fingers touch each other, the person is still alive. The color is caused by the blood still circulating, showing itself through the tissues which have not yet congealed. When life is entirely extinct the phenomenon of scarlet space between the fingers at once ceases.

How to Dress a Shop Window.

A window dresser can secure the best results by working along geometrical lines. To be the most attractive the goods on one side of a window should have the same shape as those on the other. Beauty of design can never be obtained by throwing a small selection of the stock into the window in a confused mass. The dresser should aim to work out some figure in his arrangement of the goods.

SPORTING NOTES.

The open games of the New York A. C. are down for June 13.

On June 13 the New England A. A. U. will hold its championship games at Worcester, Mass.

The individual Athletic championship of the A. A. U. will be held June 2.

A novelty in bicycling will be the hill climbing contest at St. Louis, June 6.

The Columbia and Cornell Freshmen crews will meet on the Thames June 19 or 20.

The Schuylkill navy's annual regatta will be held June 20.

The great Suburban Handicap will be run at Sheepshead Bay, June 15.

For Racquets and Tennis.

Here is a picture of the handsome new home of the Racquet and Tennis club of New York. The building was opened for the first time May 1. It is situated at 27 West Forty-third street. The style of the structure is a combination of Venetian and Roman, and the front is constructed of terra cotta, brown stone and dark Pompeian brick. On the left of a broad hall is the visitors' room, library and billiard rooms; on the right the cafe, smoking, card playing and grill rooms. There is an elevator, and the building throughout is finished in oak. On the second floor are two racquet courts, a lounging room and members' bath. A completely equipped gymnasium is on the third floor. The fourth floor is devoted to tennis, and in the basement are Turkish baths, bowling alleys and a shooting gallery.

Miss. Jamaschek Has Not Retired.

The report that Miss. Jamaschek permanently retired from the stage at the end of her Pittsburg engagement has proved to be untrue. It reached the newspaper office with every semblance of being genuine. Even The Dramatic Mirror was deceived into giving it space. Miss. Jamaschek produced a new play, "Harvest Moon," in Pittsburg, which is said to have much merit, and which her manager says she will appear in next season. The news that this grand old actress has not left the stage is welcome.

Sally McClelland.

Sally McClelland, owned by Byron McClelland, of Lexington, Ky., is a chestnut filly 3 years old, and one of the leading performers on the turf.

She broke the record at the New Jockey club May 21, 1890, covering a distance of five-eighths of a mile in 59 seconds.

SALLY McCLELLAND.

In her 2-year-old form she started nineteen times, won five 4ds times, second six times, third twice, and unplaced five times. The amount of her winnings in 1890 was $54,600.

In the Kentucky association races at Lexington during the spring of 1891, Sally McClelland fully sustained her record.

FEAR OF DISEASE.

It Prevents Mortality by Inducing People to Seek Proper Advice.

No one fails to send for a physician in typhus, yet only six persons in a million die of this disease since efforts were made to suppress it, says Dr. R. G. Eccles in Popular Science Monthly. Four hundred and twenty-eight in a million die of whooping cough because it seldom frightens patients, and eighteenly old ladies of both sexes give advice. Three hundred and forty-one in a million die of measles because it so frightens us to induce the friends to send for a doctor. Two hundred and twenty-two in a million die of scarlet fever because medical advice is sought sooner and more implicitly obeyed. One hundred and eighty-six in a million die of diphtheria because it frightens more than most other diseases and induces people to send for a doctor quickly. Thus we may class diseases as more or less fatal as people are afraid of them and seek proper advice to both prevent and cure.

Beauty as a Means of Health.

Dr. Louise F. Bryson, in an address before one of the New York Working Girls' clubs, summed up in a general way "the great secrets of beauty and therefore of health," as follows: Moderation in eating and drinking; short hours of labor and study; regularity in exercise, relaxation and rest; cleanliness; equanimity of temper and equality of temperament. To be as good looking as possible and to be physically well one must in general be happy. And to be happy it is necessary to carry out kindly, practical, unselfish principles, as many of them as can be put into definite form without infringing upon the rights of others. Happiness has a distinct æsthetic and hygienic value. In itself it will secure perfect poise and respiration. To be happy is a duty just as style is a duty, and both are in great measure an affair of intellect and management. The old order put the cart before the horse; it said, "Be virtuous and you will be happy"—a rule with many exceptions. But the old order changeth. And the modern gospel postulates happiness and material prosperity as the basis of morality. Other times, other manners. The ardent pursuit of good looks sums up the best there is in hygiene and becomes a legitimate and praiseworthy means of health. The world has put reason for two or three truths, of which not the least is the fact that the definite desire for personal beauty—which was in the beginning, I have said, the chief human constitution in itself a perfectly proper and meritorious inspiration to effort, especially in a country where the shades of Puritanism linger on and where the memory of disinterested Buddhism claims too often the frail nourishment for its own.

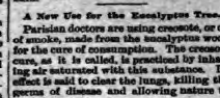
A Delightful Perfume for the Bath.

For the bath proper there is nothing like soap and water; but to do the dainty part afterward a writer in The World recommends the following:

Have your druggist mix for you 1 oz. ether, 1 oz. benzoin, 10 drops oil of neroli and 10 drops oil of lemon. To use this perfume add a tablespoonful of it to about a pint of warm water. It will turn as white as milk and the real perfume will be given off, whereas while in the bottle it has anything but a pleasing odor. Now, after your bath just take a soft cloth and go over yourself with this milk, dry thoroughly and you will smell like a bunch of violets. The perfume may be altered to suit you, or you may add a little alcohol extract, but don't omit the benzoin, for that is what gives permanence to the perfume and softness and smoothness to the skin.

A New Use for the Eucalyptus Tree.

Parisian doctors are using creosote, or oil of smoke, made from the eucalyptus wood for the cure of consumption. The creosote cure, as it is called, is practiced by inhaling air saturated with this substance. Its effect is said to clear the lungs, killing the germs of disease and allowing nature to perfect a cure.



The Number of Cards to Leave.

An authority on manners and social customs thus solves the sometimes perplexing question of how many cards to leave.

"Upon a married lady whose husband is living, by a married lady whose husband is living, one of the lady's cards and two of her husband's.

"Upon a married lady with a daughter in society, two of the lady's and three of the husband's."

A gentleman in making a call sends in or leaves a card for each of the ladies of the family. If he is calling upon a young lady who is a guest in a household to which he is a stranger, he must ask to see her hostess at the same time and also send her his card.

Wedding Anniversaries.

Following is one way in which the list of wedding anniversaries is enumerated: The wooden wedding is celebrated on the fifth anniversary of the marriage, the tin wedding on the tenth, the crystal wedding on the fifteenth, the linen wedding on the twentieth, and the silver wedding on the twenty-fifth. Next comes the golden wedding on the fiftieth anniversary; the diamond wedding is on the sixtieth.

Useful Hints.

A letter sent by one friend or acquaintance to another, through the hands of a friend or acquaintance of either or both, should always be unsealed.

Silver or linen given to a bride is marked with the initials of the maiden name.

Temper has been called the "climate of the mind," but people who keep others waiting are the promoters of a tempest. Morally speaking, women should not quarrel with each other anywhere, but especially not in crowds. Every one respects a woman who can smilingly keep her temper.

Olives should be taken from the dish with a spoon or olive fork and not with the fingers, though they are afterward eaten by aid of the digits.

Tudor and Henry II Capes.

The tudor cape is considered a very pleasing garment. As a matter of fact, it only looks well on a tall, slim figure; a little woman is lost in it. The Henry II cape is considerably longer than the tudor and fits the figure at the back. It suits a matron better than it does a girl. The cape generally worn with tailor made dresses resembles that worn by policemen in wet weather, and save for a bow at the neck has no trimming. The interior, however, is of colored silk.

French Tea Gowns.

The charming model here illustrated is a princess robe with trained skirt in silver gray satin, the fronts cut without any gores and plaited at the waist, and crossed with vandyked panels of lace. The cape sleeves are made in lace to correspond. A puffing of pink chiffon goes around the throat and down the front to the feet, or the gown may be rendered quite elegant by substituting a band of pink ostrich feathers for the chiffon.

TEA GOWN WITH CAPE SLEEVES.

An attractive tea gown seen recently was in rose and black. The petticoat, of a delicate shade of rose color, was covered with black grenadine, which fell in soft folds and was finished with two flounces at the bottom. The long jacket bodice was of black brocade with red rose, with flowers of a conventional pattern; high, full sleeves, a high collar, and a good deal of soft black lace, caught in the waist band at the wrist with green velvet, toning with the green of the rose, completed the trimming of a most becoming frock.

This Date in History—June 2.

177—Blandina, the noble Lady of Lyons and famous Christian martyr, gored to death after enduring dreadful tortures.

1533—James Douglas, Earl of Morton, beheaded at Edinburgh as an instrument called the "Maiden," which he introduced into Scotland, himself was convicted of high treason.

1794—Bampfylde, the most skillful of modern impostors, born; died 1795 in prison; he traveled in many lands, spoke various languages and assumed different religions for skillfully as to deceive their most learned doctors; he was successively a gypsy, convict, beggar, student, natural apostle, quack and devils and healed diseases by magnetism.

When you buy a pair of shoes you make, on a small scale, what is just as much of an investment as though you bought a hundred shares of railroad stock. For in this investment you look for a return. If the shoes have not been misrepresented, you'll get it; if they have been you won't. What we claim for our shoes is that you run no risk when you invest in them—that it will pay you to buy our $3.00 shoe.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE SEVENTEENTH SESSION HELD LAST EVENING.

Mr. Ginna Protests Against Meeting from Night to Night.—He Said It Was Boys' Play.—Another Meeting Will Be Held Friday Night, Nevertheless.

The City Common Council met in adjourned session last evening. At 8:45 o'clock when the president called the meeting to order Councilmen Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Rushmore, See and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with.

Mr. Moffett moved that the meeting adjourn until next Friday evening at eight o'clock.

Mr. Ginna said he thought it was entirely out of order to hold meetings from night to night. Continuing he said: "It is simply boys' play and it is about time it was stopped. It is pretty near time we acted as sensible men about the matter."

Mr. Moffett stated that the Committee on Water, Printing and Stationery were unable to report on the matter of Water and Sewerage at the present meeting.

Mr. Ginna.—"If I am correctly informed the Committee on Water, Printing and Stationery was advised by both the Corporation Counsel and ex-Chancellor Runyon not to take any action in the matter of water and sewerage at present. The Committee knew it last night and still they called this meeting." Addressing Mr. Moffett, Mr. Ginna asked, "If in consultation with the Corporation Counsel and the Special Counsel the Committee had not been advised by both not to take any action in the matter of Water and Sewerage at present."

Mr. Moffett said he could not answer the question.

Mr. Ackerman thought the Chairman of the Water Committee should be able to answer.

Mr. Moffett replied that probably some of the other members of the Committee could answer.

Mr. Hetfield explained that the ordinance was not completed and he understood that the Chancellor was not satisfied with it as it was. The question is a matter of importance, he said, and if contracts are given out they should be given out right. We do not wish to rush the matter and that is the reason we wish to adjourn to-night in order to give the Corporation Counsel a chance to complete the ordinance and have it in proper shape for that meeting. We do not propose to introduce it until they say they are all right."

Without any further debate the motion to adjourn was carried by the usual vote of combine 6 to loyal 5.

Will Build Fish Ladders.

The Fish Commissioners have completed their survey of the Raritan and its tributaries and have decided to erect fish ladders on all the dams. These ladders will be constructed at Dam No. 4, at Bound Brook, South Branch, Neshanic, Weston, Blackwell's Mills, Griggstown, Rocky Hill, Millstone, North Branch, Burnt Mills, Pottersville, North Plainfield and Green Brook. The cost of the work at Bound Brook will be about $5,000 and at the other places from $600 to $800. The work will be done at the expense of State, but an effort will be made to collect the amount from the owners of the property. This will be strongly resisted.

Annual Meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed Church for receiving reports and the election of officers will be held to-morrow evening at eight o'clock in the Sunday school room of the church.

The annual celebration of the organization of the society in connection with an entertainment will take place one week from to-morrow. All members of the society are cordially invited to attend both meetings.

An Old Offender Arrested.

Mary Lyons, alias "Mary Lake," caused a disturbance at the corner of Third and Liberty streets Monday evening. Policeman McCue arrested her. Yesterday morning she pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct and City Judge Codington imposed a sentence of twenty days in the county jail. Mary pleaded hard for a suspension of sentence on the ground that she had not been arrested before in five years, but her plea proved unavailing.

A Large Fire.

A disastrous fire occurred at Plucksmin Friday evening, when a block of stores, known as the Van Zandt block was burned to the ground. The upper portion of the building was occupied by families as dwelling apartments. The members of the family of Mr. Philip Vroom, who lived directly over the stores, narrowly escaped with their lives. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin. Mr. Vroom is a nephew of Mr. J. S. Powlinson of Somerset street.

INJURED BY A FALL.

A Painful Mishap to a Bicyclist.

Monday afternoon Mr. John Keely met with a painful accident. He was riding a high bicycle along East Front street, and when near the residence of John Taylor Johnston the machine struck a stone which was lying in the roadbed causing Mr. Keely to take a "header". In falling he struck on his face and his forehead came in contact with a projecting stone, inflicting a wound which rendered him unconscious. He was assisted to the residence of Mrs. Carpenter and later to his home on East Seventh street, where Dr. Boone attended him. It was at first thought that the skull was fractured but an examination proved that it was not. Mr. Keely remained in a comatose condition until yesterday afternoon when he rallied and he is now thought to be on the road to recovery.

—There will be a devotional meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

—The conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union will be held in Rahway on June 19th.

—The Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A., will meet at the residence of President W. D. Murray to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—Frank Mogeton was fined five dollars in the City Court Monday morning. The charge against him was drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Policeman Cooney made the arrest.

—There is a three days' clearing sale in ladies and children's trimmed hats, at "The Emporium," 72 Park avenue, near Fourth street, where bargains are offered as elsewhere advertised.

—The competitive examination for free scholarship to the New Jersey State College at New Brunswick will be held in the court house on Saturday. Further information may be obtained of Supt. B. Holmes.

—Warrants have been issued for the arrest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rothenhouse. The charge against them is disorderly conduct. Their neighbors on West Second street say that they annoy them continually.

—At about eight o'clock Monday evening a horse attached to a park phaeton became frightened at the corner of Peace street and ran away. One of the wheels of the wagon was wrecked before the animal was caught.

—Farmers, beware of a slick canvasser who is going about trying to find a market for a "chicken exterminator" at 25 cents per bottle. Our exchanges pronounce the fellow a fraud and his "exterminator" another.

—The new Mildmer organ of the First Baptist church will be exhibited for the first time next Tuesday evening, June 9th, by Dr. N. S. Penfield, the celebrated organist of Bound Brook Tabernacle, New York, assisted by Mr. William Mac Clymont.

—Mr. Frank L. C. Martin has a novel and useful sign in front of his bicycle agency store on Park avenue. It is a bicycle of the "ordinary" pattern up-lifted on a pole. From the axle hangs a lamp, which illumines the surroundings at night by electric light.

—Mr. W. L. Saunders of Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, has greatly improved the interior of his handsome residence by having a hard wood floor substituted for the former flooring. Mr. G. B. Mansfield, the contractor, put it down in his usual workmanlike style.

—Children's Day, an important period in the year to the rising generation of the Methodist churches, will be observed on Sunday, June 14th. Indeed, from the large attendance at these annual exercises, it may be said that the celebration is enjoyed by adults as well as children.

—Mr. A. Keyser, formerly of Salt Lake City, moved last week, with his family into the handsome home he has had erected on Broadway, near Woodland avenue. The house, which is of Queen Anne style, is a neatly built structure and ornaments the street it faces. Mr. George B. Musgrave, the well-known contractor, did the carpenter work.

—A special meeting will be held at the Salvation Army, Wednesday, June 3d, at eight o'clock, conducted by Col. Evans, Major and Mrs. Evans and Ensign Dunham. The main object of this meeting will be "swearing in of recruits." Every body come and bring all your friends with you. Come early and secure a good seat. Admission 10 cents. B LEAY, Adj't, officer in command.

—Last evening about half-past seven two wheelmen riding along Park avenue were run down by an intoxicated driver. The cyclists were riding on the right side of the road, a few feet apart. A horse, rapidly driven, approached, and instead of turning to one side, the driver attempted to go between the bicyclists. In so doing he upset and smashed both their wheels, the young men just jumping in time to escape injury. After continuing his drive a short distance further the man returned and began using very profane language, and saying that he would do it again if he had the chance as the wheelmen had no chance there. He forgot there was a law giving as much right of way to the bicycle as to the carriage. The wheelmen will sue him for damages.

A CHURCH FESTIVAL.

GIVEN BY THE YOUNG LADIES OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

Illustrated Poems by Tableaux, Solo Singing, and Strawberries and Cream Yield Pleasure and Profit.

The parlors and lecture room of the First Baptist church, never contained more people than assembled there last evening, on the occasion of the tableaux entertainment prepared by the Young Ladies' Mission Band.

The rooms were decorated very tastefully, with ferns, etc., the trimmings being yellow. The effect was pleasing.

The first illustrated tableaux was Tennyson's "Day Dream" and the principal characters were:

Mr. Martin L. Cooley	King
Mrs. E. J. Waring	Queen
Miss May Taylor	Sleeping Beauty
Mr. L. H. Inglee	Prince
Miss Emma Case	Maid of Honor

Misses Dollie Chawson, Susie Woodland, Bertha Koelbius, Elizabeth Smalley and other young ladies with their escorts composed the court.

All the parts were well taken.

The second tableaux was, Will Carleton's poem the "Three Links."

This was well rendered and was encored several times.

The principal parts were taken as follows:

Mr. George H. Batchelor	Father
Mrs. Harold Peirce	Mother
Miss Grace Yerkes	Daughter
Mr. Arthur Sorrell	Indian
Miss Helen Hetfield	Indian

At the close of these Mrs. Martin I. Cooley sang one of her solos in her usually sweet manner, and Mr. Raymond McGee rendered a correct solo which deserved special mention.

Strawberries and cream were next on the programme and after a social season the most successful entertainment of the Mission Band was brought to a close, netting over $100.

The poems were read by Miss Roesp.

Boys' Club Notes.

[Omitted.]

The average attendance for last week was 44 per evening. The largest being 64, and the smallest 26 in any one evening. The monthly average is 43.

All the members should turn out to see the game next Saturday morning, at 9:30 between the boys from Elizabeth and our club. The battery for our team will be Bosterie and Adams.

Games for July are now being arranged and we would like to receive challenges for games on Wednesday afternoons from other towns whose members are under the age of seventeen.

The Edwards' Zouaves made a very appearance in the parade on Memorial Day and marched exceedingly well for their first appearance. After the exercises at the Music Hall, the members of the company marched to the residence of G. W. Edwards, on Madison avenue, where they were entertained by the ladies with refreshments. An exhibition drill was given and then the boys marched back to the club rooms.

More Dock Privileges Granted.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met yesterday and granted dock licenses to George W. Rodgers, George F. Roll, and Job and John Winans. Five dock privileges were granted in all, the Winans family getting three. The board is in session this afternoon hearing other applications. A visit to the sites was also made.

—There is to be a strawberry and ice cream festival in the Vincent chapel tomorrow evening.

—The Y. M. C. A. bowling team will roll a game with the Crescent League team on the alleys of the league this evening at eight o'clock.

A RUNAWAY HORSE KILLED.

Struck by Two Trains and Pulverized. A Sickening Sight.

At about eight o'clock last evening a horse having on a set of harness, but with no wagon attached ran along Front street in the direction of Grant avenue at a break-neck speed. It was afterwards ascertained that the horse belonged to a Mr. Cook of Washington Valley and that while in the act of hitching the animal to a wagon in the yard of a farmer named Joseph Stiles on the Terrill Road, where he and his wife were visiting, the horse became frightened and ran away.

The animal was but four years old and had been in Mr. Cook's possession only a few days, he having purchased it from Mr. J. H. Foster of Grant avenue. The horse was apparently going to its old home, but when it reached Grant avenue, instead of turning down that thoroughfare, it proceeded along the driveway leading to the Grant avenue station. In the latter locality it reached the railroad track less than four minutes before the east-bound train.

A few minutes afterwards, one of the Royal Blue Line trains drawn by engine No. 273, came along at a high rate of speed. The engineer did not see the the carcass of the dead horse lying across the track until it was too late to prevent a collision.

The engine struck the carcass with a sickening thud and literally ground it to pieces. One of the animal's hoofs became clogged between the wheels of the locomotive. The front of the engine and the head light was all bespattered with blood and pieces of flesh, and the cow catcher was twisted into a shapeless mass—so much so that the engine could not pass over a switch safely. Travel was delayed two hours by the accident.

In conversation with a News' reporter at the depot, the engineer on the Blue Line said that when the engine struck the animal it was making over a mile a minute. "When I left Philadelphia, he said, "it was thirty-five minutes late and was trying to make up as much of the time as possible before I reached New York. After we struck the carcass, I did not know whether the engine was off the track or not. All I could hear was a grating and grinding sound. I thought the locomotive had left the track and was running over the ties. I expected every minute to be thrown down an embankment."

The passengers, though badly shaken, escaped without injury.

The engine was one of those large camel backs, and is one of the largest used on the road.

PERSONAL.

Miss Carrie Covel, of Brooklyn is visiting her sister, Mrs. Taft of Front street.

Miss Agnes Geary and Mr. Frederick Cropper both of this city were united in marriage last evening.

Miss Francis Mattison of Somerset street is convalescent after a two weeks' illness with "la grippe."

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

Mr. William Sutton of Somerset street went fishing yesterday afternoon and returned with four large bass. So he says.

Miss Wilkinson, formerly of Plainfield returned to Engine No. 1 her Western home in Spokane, Washington, after a three weeks' visit with Mrs. C. T. Pond of Central avenue.

Mr. Alexander D. Button died at his home on LeGrande avenue yesterday morning after a short illness. Deceased was seventy-eight years old at the time of his death. He was formerly a member of the editorial staff of the New York World. The funeral will take place from his late residence to-morrow afternoon.

Mr. J. H. Pollion of Broadway is considered one of the leaders in style of coaches and other vehicles. His turnouts are always harmonious and stylish and when the glossy blacks, his favorite horses, dash through Plainfield's shaded streets, gaily bedecked Pollion, who is quite a "whip," the attention of horse-lovers is always attracted. Mrs Pollion is also an expert handler of the "ribbons" and enjoys nothing more than the novel and enjoyable trips frequently taken by her husband and herself on tandem through the beautiful country of lower New Jersey, and near-by States.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's New Summer Excursion Route Book.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's Summer Excursion-Route Book for the season of 1891, just from the press, is undoubtedly one of the most elaborate reference compilations issued by any railroad company in the world. The company this year has used new illustrations, printed on a very high grade of paper, while a decided departure from the old cover is therefore observable, the work is now in its new one, which is beautifully illuminated, and would do credit to the brush of a Rossi, so cleverly French is it to every detail. The new map embraces a territory from Canada to the Carolinas, and from the British possession of New Brunswick to beyond the Great Inland Lakes. When comparison is made with this volume of 272 page, 100 illustrations, and over 1200 routes, a book which enters its year of publication the first day of June, 1891, and the tiny pamphlet of 24 pages and 61 routes issued twenty-one years ago by the Pennsylvania railroad, and considered at that time a marvelous departure in railroad advertising, the growth is highly creditable.

CONSIDERED A SWINDLE.

"Give Us the Picture, We Do the Rest."

A concern called the Pacific Portrait House which has offices in the Broadway Theatre Building in New York, and it apparently shows more of a "green goods" game than a legitimate enterprise.

Gaylor Bailey of New York, has endeavored to drive the concern from its present quarters, but has failed dismally. The manager is never at a loss for an explanation when the police pay their respects to him to ascertain why he has not carried out his contracts.

The Pacific Portrait House is said by its management to be the successor to the Metropolitan Crayon House. Its ostensible purpose is to make from photographs enlarged crayon portraits. The concern advertises largely in out of town newspapers. This is a fair sample of its card:

FREE FOR TWENTY DAYS from date of this paper. Wishing to introduce our CRAYON PORTRAITS and at the same time extend our business and make new customers, we have decided to make this special offer: Send us a photograph, tintype or ambrotype of your family, living or dead, and we will make you a LIFE SIZE CRAYON PORTRAIT FREE OF CHARGE, provided you exhibit it to your friends as a sample of our work and use your influence to secure us future orders. Give name and address on back of picture and it will be returned in perfect order; we make any size you wish and you wish not interfering with the likeness; refer to any bank in New York. Address all work PACIFIC PORTRAIT HOUSE, Broadway Theatre Building, New York.

This advertisement has been running in the papers for months, and the twenty day limit as extensively advertised apparently never expires.

Apparently not satisfied with advertising the concern also sends circulars to the residents to near-by towns, procuring their names from directions. Among those in this city who were swindled by the bait was express messenger Frank Runyon. He received one of the circulars, a fac simile of the above advertisement, and in good faith sent a picture of one of his children. Shortly afterward he received a sample of a frame with a note stating that the firm did not wish to send the picture unless it was framed fearing that it would be soiled. The prices of the frame varied, we understand, from twelve to twenty dollars. Mr. Runyon wrote for his picture but it is not as yet forthcoming.

Corporations Taxed in New Jersey.

The State Board of Assessors has just filed with the Secretary of State their schedule of taxes of miscellaneous corporations for 1891. Eighty-two gas and electric light companies will pay $93,393.94, the Domestic Life Insurance Companies $61,998.93, fifteen fire marine and casualty companies $6,164.26, two pipe-line companies $6,482.95, two parlor or sleeping car companies, $1,975.12; express companies, $9,008.94. Twelve hundred and fifteen companies are taxed upon capital stock, making a total of $1,382 companies. Eight will pay a total tax of $407,564.98. The greatest tax in the schedule is paid by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, of Newark. It is $60,194.68. The following-named Trusts are included in the schedule: American Sugar Company, American Tobacco Company, American Cotton Oil Company, American Sugar Refining Company, and the National Cordage Company. Among the big New York Companies included are: B. B. Chaffin & Co., Park & Tilford, Thurber, Wayland & Co., Metropolitan Trust Company and Equitable Mortgage Company, successors to the Oregon Transcontinental Company.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The annual Y. M. C. A. boys' camp will be held this year on Lake Champlain, near Westport, New York. Boys of the Y. M. C. A. of New Jersey who are over fourteen years of age are admitted to this party upon making application to the secretary of the association. The party will probably be as large this year. The party will leave New York on Monday evening, July 6th, reaching Albany the next morning, will visit the State Capitol and the Association building, will remain over night and for supper.

The old Adirondack guide, Sam Dunning, has been engaged and some interesting trips to the mountains will be taken in his care. One day will be spent at Fort Ticonderoga. The party will return on July 21st or 22d. Full particulars will be sent to any one upon application to the General Secretary of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The camp prospects of last year contained a number of letters from parents warmly endorsing the plans, and a copy of which will be furnished to those who may be informed from the experience of others.

—The W. C. T. U. have arranged to have their final sociable for the season on Tuesday evening, June 16th. All members of the Union and their friends are invited. An enjoyable time is anticipated. The sociable will be held at their rooms on West Front street.

F. C. Brink, Pought-ypsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh in the head for 15 years. He tried to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—Adv.

Future Fighting.

Archibald Forbes contributes to The Nineteenth Century some of the results of his investigations into warfare and battle campaigns. He tells us plainly in the beginning that modern fighting, compared with that of the past, is feeble and dilatory. He says that the first five and a half decades of the century were smoothbore decades. Then the old smoothbores were changed into rifles, while the past twenty-five years constitute the breechloading period.

With each improvement in firearms, with railway transportation and machine gunnery, the fighting of the present day ought to be all that is short, sharp and decisive. So far from this being the case, however, the fact remains that in the old smoothbore period battles were shorter, sharper and more decisive than they are now, and in spite of inferiority of weapons more men were killed than are now, and since killing is the object of war, the warfare of fifty years ago must therefore be considered superior to that of today.

Campaigns were conducted with celerity in the smoothbore period, whereas they are now dragged out to tedious length. The Franco-German war lasted 8½ months, but Napoleon conquered all Austria in 2½ months. In the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-8 it took the Russians "eight weary months" to fight their way from the Danube to Constantinople, but fifty years earlier a Russian general, Diebitch, marched from the Danube to the Ægean sea in 3½ months, fighting as he went. The feeble and dilatory modern warfare is nowhere more strongly illustrated than in the production of fortresses. In this respect the comparisons made by Forbes are as "odious" as in the case of the smoothbore and rifle period. Mr. Forbes does not pretend to explain the reason of this degeneracy. He passes to the more agreeable task of picturing the coming warfare.

With the magazine and machine guns and changed fighting methods the offensive will get the worst of it at the hands of the passive defensive. Magazine and machine guns also seem to sound the knell of possible employment of cavalry in battle. "French cavalry never got within yards of German infantry, even in loose order, and the mag*azine or repeating rifle* held reasonably straight will stop the most thrusting cavalry that ever heard the charge sound."

As to the fortress of the future, which would play so important a part in a war between any two of the states of Europe, Mr. Forbes writes:

The fortress of the future will probably be in the nature of an entrenched camp. The interior of the position will provide casemate accommodation for an army of considerable strength. Its detached works will consist of a circle at intervals of about 7,500 yards, of permanent redoubts which will be invisible at moderate ranges, for infantry and machine guns, the garrison of each redoubt to consist of a half battalion. Such a work was in 1881 constructed at Chatham in thirty-one working days, to hold a garrison of 330 men housed in casemates built in concrete, for less than £3,000, and experiments prove that it would require a "prohibitory expenditure" of ammunition to cause it serious damage by artillery fire. The supporting defensive armament will consist of a powerful artillery rendered mobile by means of tramways, this defense supplemented by a field force carrying on outpost duties and manning field works guarding the intervals between the redoubts. Advanced defenses and exterior obstacles of as formidable a character as possible will be the complement of what in effect will be an immensely elaborated Plevna, which, properly armed and fully organized, will "fulfill all the requirements of the defensive," while possessing important potentialities of offense.

In the event of a Franco-German war, if, instead of the immensely expensive series of fortresses with which the French have lined their frontier, they had constructed, say, three such intrenched camps as those we have been sketched, each quartering 50,000 men, it would appear that they would have done better for themselves, or far less out. Each intrenched position containing a field army 50,000 strong would engross a belligerering host of 100,000 men. The positions of the 150 entrenched are claimed to be impregnable; they could contain supplies and munitions for at least a year, defending themselves for that period with 50,000 of the enemy. No European power except Russia has soldiers enough to spare so large a host, mass of troops standing fast, and simultaneously prosecute the invasion of a first rate power with approximately equal numbers. France at the cost of 150,000 men would be holding copies on her frontier double the number of Germans—surely no disadvantageous transaction.

For many years it has been contended that if the Mississippi, near its mouth, can be tapped and made to drain off a portion of its waters through Lake Borgne as an outlet there will be vent enough for the stream, and the floods could pour out into the gulf without breaking the levees. The advocates of this plan have not tried to do, but are as enthusiastic as ever, and Capt. Cowden recently addressed the Mississippi river committee of the national house of representatives in its favor.

Inoculating for disease germs is now to be tried in the agricultural field. Professor Snow has cultivated the germs of a disease that is expected to wipe out the chinch bug, which is so destruct*ive to field crops. The chinches eat up* the corn, but Professor Snow will endeavor to scatter among them an infectional microbe that will eat them up.

A learned doctor says that the running of open street cars in cool weather may be dangerous to health, but that cars closed up all around are a good deal more so, in any and all weathers.

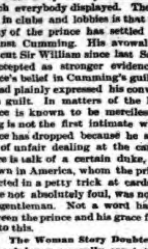
WALES CUTS CUMMING.

The Prince Believes His Old Friend a Cheat.

TACKLED BY ONE OF THE TWELVE.

A Plucky Juror Searchingly Cross-Examines the Heir Apparent to the Astonishment of the Spectators—Sir William's New York Sweetheart Believes in Him.

LONDON, June 3.—The Prince of Wales made a decidedly favorable impression as a witness in the baccarat case. His testimony was given with a frankness that seemed to command the belief of all present, and the assertions that the prince was unable to conceal that he felt himself in an unpleasant position. His popularity was shown by the spontaneous respect which everybody displayed. The general talk in clubs and lobbies is that the testimony of the prince has settled the case against Cumming. His counsel that he had cut Sir William since last September is accepted as stronger evidence of the prince's belief in Cumming's guilt than if he had plainly expressed his conviction of such guilt. In matters of the kind the prince is known to be merciless. Cumming is not the first intimate whom the prince has dropped because he suspected him of unfair dealing at the card table. There is talk of a certain duke, not unknown in America, who the prince once detected in a petty trick at cards, which, while not absolutely foul, was not the act of a gentleman. Not a word has passed between the prince and his grace from that day to this.



PRINCE OF WALES.

The Woman Story Doubted.

The clubmen generally scout the story that a woman's revenge was at the bottom of the Cumming case—the leading men of the Marlborough —the Prince of Wales' own set—but last night that it was a story impossible to keep, and that it was well for society and the army it could not be kept. The prince, he said, had erred only in attempting to keep the matter secret, through his sympathy for Cumming. One of the rumors floating about in the afternoon was that Cumming had doubly offended the prince by his free remarks regarding the prince and Lady Brooke, and that had Cumming kept his tongue still as to the prince and the lady, he would have had influence enough behind him to save him from the present disgrace.

The Prince Tells His Story.

When the Prince of Wales was called to the stand he smiled good naturedly and walked slowly to the witness box. Not every movement was watched by all present. The prince gave his testimony in a clear voice and with an unruffled brow. In substance the prince said:

"I have known the plaintiff for twenty years and have been his friend for the past ten years. He visited my house several times. The intimacy continued unimpaired until last September. I observed nothing suspicious in the plaintiff's play at Tranby Croft. I was first informed of the reports current in regard to Sir William Gordon-Cumming by Lord Coventry."

Continuing, the Prince of Wales said that the said conversation took place upon the party. He, the prince, sealed the document up, put it in a packet, and sent it to his secretary, Sir Francis Knollys, who was not aware of the nature of the contents of the packet. The latter, said the Prince, remained in a safe place until it was sent for in connection with the present proceedings. The document inside the packet, the prince explained, was the statement of three gentlemen and of two ladies, whose names had been mentioned (Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, and Mr. Borckeley Levett). The prince then said:

"I did not see any of the five persons in question until after Sir William Gordon Cumming had an interview with me and denied the charge brought against him. When I heard the charge I made up several days afterward. Lord Coventry and General Williams prepared a precis of what had taken place and handed it to me."

Cross-Examined by Russell.

Cross-examined by Sir Charles Russell, the Prince of Wales was asked:

"Do you recollect whether in addition to the three gentlemen referred to, you also saw Lord Edward Somerset and Captain Somerset an Tranby Croft?"

"I believe that I did."

"To whom certain statements were made by the eight or three gentlemen?"

"Yes."

"Had you also been informed that the two ladies, whose names did not at the time see, had alleged that they also witnessed the cheating?"

"I was not."

"In reference to this statement," continued Sir Charles Russell, "could you charge your memory as to whether any of the three gentlemen said anything about withdrawing a portion of the stake and that Sir William Gordon-Cumming systematically placed a larger stake on the table than was originally placed there?"

"I do not recollect that any such statement was made."

"Was the memorandum a suggestion of yours or another's in which you acquiesced?"

"The suggestion did not come from me. I acquiesced in the suggestion made by Lord Coventry. I was greatly distressed at the occurrence. I was present at an interview with Sir William Gordon-Cumming in the presence of General Williams and Lord Coventry, I think. He (Sir William) asked me whether I believed the statement made about him, but I do not recollect what I replied."

The Prince Cuts Cumming.

"You are quite clear in your recollection of the fact that Sir William Gordon-Cumming referred to the Duke of Cambridge?"

"I am quite certain of it. He seemed to think that the authorities of the Duke of Cambridge would not look so leniently upon the matter as we did."

"Did you desire under the circumstances to act as leniently as possible out of regard for Sir William Gordon-Cumming?"

"Most certainly. The date of the document was omitted by Lord Coventry and affixed to it after it had been signed. This was done on the same night that the document was signed."

"Have you met Sir William Gordon-Cumming since the occurrence at Tranby Croft?" asked Sir Charles.

"No," answered the prince. "It would be more agreeable not to do so." At this stage Sir Edward Clarke, leading counsel for the plaintiff, interposed by remarking to the prince:

"I do not ask your highness to remain in court any longer than necessary."

A Juryman Takes a Hand.

What the conclusion of the solicitor general's observation was to be will probably never be known, for a bold juryman interrupted him and thereby caused a sensation. The juryman, who sat up in his place in the jury box and deliberately questioning the Prince of Wales. This audacious subject of the prince's royal mother said in a loud voice:

"Are the jury to understand that you were banking on these two occasions and saw nothing of the alleged malpractices?"

The prince hesitated a moment as if undecided as to whether he ought or ought not to reply. Finally concluding that it would be answer, he said, with a half smile:

"It is very easy for a looker when dealing cards not to see anything, especially when in the company of friends in a country house. You do not for a moment suppose that any one will play unfairly."

The juror, returning to the charge, asked:

"What was your opinion at the time of the charges made against the plaintiff?"

He Believed Sir William Guilty.

"The charges made against him were so unanimous that I had not any other course open to me than to believe them."

This answer caused another slight flutter of excitement. The juror, apparently, had succeeded in bringing out squarely the fact that the prince in view of the evidence which had been placed before him at Tranby Croft, had become convinced of the plaintiff's guilt. When the prince had admitted which greeted the juror's questions Sir Edward Clarke, seeing that he must do everything possible to regain the ground which seemed to have been lost by the plaintiff in the estimation of the juryman, said, addressing the Prince of Wales:

"I take it that your highness' answer to the first question put to you by the juror was, substantially, that you had not seen any malpractices during the game of baccarat played at Tranby Croft last September?"

It Made Him Very Tired.

The prince assented to this and his examination was concluded. He gave his evidence in a halting, hesitating manner, and he seemed exceedingly relieved when his examination was over. Though it only lasted twenty minutes, the examination of the prince evidently wearied him exceedingly and made him extremely nervous. The prince seemed to lose his usual state of calm and dignity shortly after he entered the witness box. He did not seem able to make himself at ease on the stand.

When a question was pressing, more to the point than usual, the prince's face was observed to flush considerably and then to turn pale again. Except to those in proximity to the witness box, but two or three of the prince's answers were fairly audible throughout the court. The Prince of Wales glowered when the bold juryman stopped him by his questions, but toward the end of his answers to the juryman the prince smiled benignly at the entire jury box. Then he shrugged his shoulders, passed to his seat on the bench, and from there, in company with the chief justice, to a private door, through which the prince and the judge disappeared on their way to luncheon.

They Handled Him Very Tenderly.

Sir Charles Russell cross-examined the Prince of Wales with some show of sirtness. The word "you" in Sir Charles' cross-examination of the prince generally took the place of the usual "your royal highness" and "sir" which had plentifully interlarded Sir Edward Clarke's questions. But he was manifestly tender in his handling of the royal witness. In fact, the general opinion formed in the court room was that there was evidently a tacit agreement between both counsel, Sir Edward Clarke and Sir Charles Russell, that they were to fish for and get nothing from the prince which any other witness could supply.

Only once did the Prince of Wales betray any open sign of impatience, and that was when Sir Charles Russell asked:

"Did Mr. W. Wilson say to you about Sir William Gordon-Cumming cheating:

The prince replied somewhat shortly, somewhat angrily, it appeared, "She said very little."

And there the subject was dropped, as any lawyer can see, at a most important stage. The prince had admitted that Mrs. Wilson had told him something about Sir William's cheating, and Sir Charles wanted to find out what she had told the prince, but the latter's annoyance at the question caused counsel for the defendants to turn his legal mind to other matters.

Williams' and Cumming's Evidence.

General Owen Williams was called next. His line of evidence left the impression that Cumming's friends did what honorable men could do to assist him. After admitting that the plaintiff had reproached Lord Coventry and himself for giving him (Cumming) what he termed "bad advice," witness said that Cumming had before asked whether he (witness) believed the charge. Witness told him the evidence was so overwhelming that he could not do otherwise.

The witness, who knew the accusers, could see no interest in their making false charges.

Sir William Gordon-Cumming, the plaintiff, during his cross-examination was compelled to admit that he signed the compact of secrecy and the promise to play cards no more, for the reason that if he had not done so the thing would have been taken up by his clubs, by his friends and by his regiment.

SHE WILL MARRY CUMMING.

A New York Belle Who Clings to Sir William in His Dark Hour.

NEW YORK, June 3.—However the suit for slander brought by Sir William Gordon-Cumming against a prominent English society people turns out, it is said that the unfortunate baronet will shortly be consoled by a matrimonial alliance with a wealthy New York belle, a Miss Cornell, a lady. A dispatch from London states that as soon as the trial is over, Sir William will marry Miss Florence Garner, of this city. The marriage is now confirmed.

Miss Garner's friends in England state that she is confident of the innocence of Sir William of the charge of cheating at the baccarat game of which he was accused, and prove her confidence by giving him her hand in marriage, whatever the result of the trial. Miss Garner is now in England with her mother, and nothing could be learned yesterday of the approaching marriage at the Garner house, No. 18 East Thirty-sixth street. Ward McAllister says the marriage will come off as reported.

The Charleston's Movements.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—No news has been received at the navy department from the Charleston, and her silence, naval officers think, indicates that she had nothing of importance to report at Chili, and has taken on her supply of coal and left for Iquique, where she will report to Admiral McCann and set sander his orders.

ALMOST GIVEN THE LIE.

Exciting Scenes at the Presbyterian Synod.

M'ALLISTER AND THOMPSON ARGUE

"You Are Slandering Them," Said Rev. Thompson—"I am Not," Replied Dr. McAllister—"You Are," Provoked the Other and Then Came Cries of "Order!"

PITTSBURG, June 3.—The Reformed Presbyterian synod added another stormy session to its already unprecedented record. The church was crowded to the doors and the large audience suffered greatly from the heat. The trouble began early and grew out of a feeling on the part of the liberal element that the clerk of the synod, the Rev. R. J. George, was "doctoring" the minutes to suit the wishes of the conservatives. Then, again, Dr. McAllister jumped right into the arena at an early stage in the proceedings and, as usual, succeeded in stirring up the liveliest kind of a hornet's nest. Outbursts of applause and scathing personalities were not infrequent. The most bitter feeling existed between certain members of the two factions came to the surface repeatedly. Finally the motion to adopt Friday's minutes as read and revised was carried.

The Record False, They Said.

Rev. J. G. Cassaday and Elder David Torrence at once gave notice of dissent, *claiming that the record was false in many re*spects and that it was not a true record of the proceedings of Friday. Their objections were, however, not on record.

Rev. Dr. McAllister then read for the second time a letter of explanation for his action in reading extracts from a private letter. The letter was, however, amended in several places. Instead of referring to the famous letter as one "written by one of the seven suspended ministers," he this *time spoke of it as "a copy of a letter pur*porting to have been written by one of the seven ministers."

To Table McAllister's Resolutions.

Considerable objection was offered to Dr. McAllister's letter being incorporated in the records. The objections were not sustained. Rev. Mr. Somerville made a motion to lay on the table the resolutions offered by Dr. McAllister, and which called upon the suspended ministers to purge themselves of all contempt of Pittsburg presbytery. This also led to long debate as to whether the motion was in order. Rev. Mr. Graham, of Boston, rose to a point of order. The certificates of suspension say the young ministers shall not during their suspension preach in the Reformed Presbyterian church. There is nothing to prevent them occupying pulpits in other churches.

Almost Given the Lie.

Dr. McAllister—I believe other churches have been guilty of a great discourtesy—an act bordering on slander.

Rev. J. R. Thompson—I object. I hope Dr. McAllister will not slander sister churches.

Dr. McAllister—I am not slandering them.

Mr. Thompson—You are slandering them.

Dr. McAllister—I am not.

Mr. Thompson—You are.

Cries of "Order!" "Order!" from all parts of the house. Rev. J. Chiniquy, of New York, next got the floor and proceeded to pull Dr. McAllister over the coals in a most unfeeling manner.

He Splintered His Desk.

Dr. McAllister, he said, in spite of all his talk about the action of the presbytery being treated with contempt was the first to do just what he had been censuring others for doing. He cited instances in support of his statements. In the heated argument which followed the moderator fairly splintered the top of his desk in his efforts to maintain order. The roll was called on adopting McAllister's resolution several delegates, who were refused the privilege of explaining their votes, refused to vote. The motion was lost by a vote of 147 to 27.

The Ministers on Trial.

The trial of the suspended ministers who subscribed to the east end platform, was then begun. The case of Rev. A. W. McClurkin was taken up. A motion for the adoption of Dr. McAllister's resolution calling upon the suspended ministers to clear themselves of contempt of the Pittsburg presbytery was adopted. The Rev. A. W. McClurkin, J. G. Milligan, H. W. Reed, W. L. C. Sampson, E. M. Milligan and J. R. J. Milligan said they never knowingly had shown contempt for the court of God's house. The complaints and appeals of the ministers were heard. Rev. McClurkin made a speech in his own defense. His brother, W. J. McClurkin, followed from the others. After the defense has been heard the Rev. David McAllister will conduct the prosecution.

Delaware Support for Brooks.

MILFORD, Del., June 3.—The standing committee of the diocese of Delaware at 11 o'clock last night consented to the consecration of the Rev. Phillips Brooks as bishop.

Thirteen Members Indicted.

BUTLER, Pa., June 3.—The grand jury have returned true bills on thirteen indictments against members of the West Sunbury Methodist Episcopal church charging them with forcible entry, disturbing a religious meeting and rioting. The cases will be tried next week. Rival factions in the church have for some time been carrying on a bitter contest for the possession of the church property. The suits grow out of the latest attempt of one faction to forcibly eject the other while services were in progress.

The Reformed Church Synod.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 3.—The eighty-fifth regular annual session of the general synod of the Reformed church in America convened here this afternoon. In the evening the retiring president, J. Ameyn Berry, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., will preach the annual sermon. A new appeal in the case of the Third Reformed church of Philadelphia, which was disbanded six years ago by the classis of Philadelphia, will be heard at one of the sessions of the convention.

Infanticide at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., June 3.—The body of a prematurely born infant which was found in the yard of a tenement house here led to the belief that a child murder had occurred. An investigation was instituted, and it was ascertained that the mother was Mary Cogswell, who lived with George Corss, a well known young man. It was also learned that Corss had *previously secretly buried at least one in*fant. Corss has disappeared.

SALSBURY'S SHARP GAME.

He Has Packed to Long That the Bad Feeling Cannot Be Restrained.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—The treasury department is ill, or says it is, over the fines the British parliament regulating sealing becomes a law, since supplemental instructions to the revenue cutters as to the catch of the North American Commercial company. If the bill passed by Thursday next those instructions will be sent to the Seal Islands by a vessel of the Commercial company which sails from San Francisco on that day, otherwise they will have to be sent by the Corwin or a United States man-of-war. The opinion is expressed very freely in official circles that the poachers will have the season to themselves. It is simply impossible to reach them in time before the season closes.

The secret service has a treasury official today, who, a few years ago made a number of captures in Behring sea. "Pinal, we would have to find here the warrants of the agreement, then, in case they did not heed the warning and captured seal, we should have to hunt them again, and capture them if possible. All this takes time. They have an area of 400 square miles to poach in, and a few cutters in the dense fog could do little good here. If they were directed to act at once all at the beginning of the season the task would be much lighter. As it is they are in there, and for the season, at least, they will get a full catch. Of course the Commercial company will obey the orders and catch only what the limit allows."

It is conceded on all sides here, however, that an agreement to maintain a closed season in the seal fisheries of Behring sea will result in no danger of all species of the nature of poachers during the season, and will indicate an earnest purpose on the part of both governments to reach an agreement on the main question in dispute, but it is still an open question whether or not they will be able to agree on the terms of arbitration. The state department is expected to make a reply to Secretary Blaine's counter suggestions for the questions to be submitted to arbitration, and until a reply is received the department cannot even form a guess as to the prospects of a speedy settlement of the dispute. It is thought likely, however, that Lord Salsbury will make changes in the form of the questions to be presented, and yet department officers are confident that the two countries can get together on the terms of arbitration.

PITTSBURG, June 3.—S. H. Chisholm, a millionaire iron operator of Cleveland, was arrested by secret service men here for passing counterfeit money last night. Mr. Chisholm sent a messenger from a detective agency to purchase him railroad and sleeping car tickets home. He tendered two new five dollar notes to the messenger boy, and the detectives jumped to the conclusion that it was the old dodge being worked by only a boy to work off bad money. Mr. Chisholm was shortly afterward arrested and taken before Inspector McAleer, and, upon proving his identity and producing a large sized wad of the same kind of greenbacks, was promptly discharged.

Yale Students Must Pay for Their Fun.

NEW HAVEN, June 3.—Twenty-five students were summoned by the Yale faculty to appear before them and answer for their alleged misconduct during the Barnum parade, when they showered torpedoes upon the horses and elephants, thereby causing a stampede among the animals. One of the professors saw the whole performance. The faculty regard it as a very serious matter, and will probably punish the culprits.

The Briggs Committee.

DETROIT, June 3.—At the Presbyterian general assembly the moderator gave the following as the names to fill vacancies on the directors of Union seminary on the Briggs matter: Rev. F. L. Patton, Rev. J. H. Wiggenton, Rev. W. M. Moore, Rev. W. H. Roberts, Rev. S. J. Nicholls, Rev. George Alexander, Rev. Herrick Johnson, Rev. John I. McIntosh; Elders George Junkin, Jr., of Chicago, and Samuel Murdock, George H. Ely, Samuel I. Broadwell, Edward P. Durant, George Ketcham.

General Stanley's Alleged Discovery.

LONDON, June 3.—General Stewart Stanley, of southern California, announces that he has discovered the law of variation of the atmosphere of the steam engine. The principle hitherto regarded as impossible of discovery. It would thus appear that after a hundred years of research science has at last succeeded in solving the difficult problems of terrestial physics and that we can now legislate for the control of the atmosphere and of the steam engine.

New Rutgers Freshmen Drowned.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 3.—Walter Pfeifer, of Williamsport, N. J., and William Hall, of Hightstown, N. J., both freshmen in Rutgers college, were drowned last evening while bathing in the canal. It is supposed that one of the young men was seized with cramps and that his companion went to his assistance and tried to save him, when they were both drowned.

"The Poor Man's Lawyer" Dead.

ERIE, Pa., June 3.—William Benson, one of the oldest and most widely known members of the Erie county bar, was found dead in his room in the Old block last evening. He took supper yesterday in apparently good health. He was known throughout the state as "the poor man's lawyer." Heart failure was the supposed cause of death.

Grave Charge Against Parnell.

DUBLIN, June 3.—Mr. Parnell is accused by The National Press of having misapplied certain funds. The paper announces its purpose of reiterating the charge so as to compel him to take legal proceedings against its publishers. The National Press adds: "Our secretary waits in his office to receive service of a writ from Mr. Parnell."

THE EVIL THAT MEN DO.

That of Lucas Did Indeed Live After Him.

HENIGAN THE QUAKER CITY CRASH.

How Three Banks Were Wrecked, One President Placed in Jail, Another Forced to Flee and Ex-Treasurer Bardsley Bailed.

PHILADELPHIA, June 3.—"The evil men do lives after them; the good is often interred with their bones," said one of the highest officials of Philadelphia to your correspondent today in speaking of the astounding developments in the City bank defalcations. John C. Lucas, the dead president of the Keystone National bank, started the gigantic bank wrecking, which two years after his death has ruined three banks, made one president a defaulter, another president a fugitive and the treasurer of the city, "Honest John" Bardsley, a bankrupt, with a prospect of twenty years in the penitentiary.

All Mourned His Death.

John C. Lucas was universally esteemed. His management was said to have created the Keystone bank, which, before he died, built one of the finest bank buildings in the country. His untimely death was attributed to overwork. His life had been put into the bank, every one said. Rev. Dr. Tiffany came over from New York to deliver a eulogy. Mr. Wanamaker, the postmaster general, spoke with visible emotion over the coffin of the high qualities which had won universal esteem for the dead man, whom he had known in business for years. The directors of the Keystone bank met and voted to change the name of their new building to the "John C. Lucas Building." Last December the extreme stringency of the money market made every bank look to its resources.

Nearly One Million Dollars Gone.

Then, two years after the revered President Lucas' death, it was discovered that he had taken nearly $1,000,000 of the bank's cash and lost it in a land speculation. No one knew it except the cashier, Gideon W. Marsh, and when he was elected president of the bank he not only concealed the wrongdoing of the late president, but started in on the same line for himself. To obtain ready money he induced the city treasurer, Bardsley, who had also been speculating in stocks, to increase the city deposits in the Keystone bank. Bardsley put over $1,200,000 state and city money in the bank, and Marsh secretly paid him a "commission" or interest for the use of this money.

The bank thus tided over the December run, but suddenly a month later closed its doors. The United States bank examiner had discovered that something was wrong. Even then the bank examiner did not reveal what he found. He showed either culpable weakness or ignorance.

No Appeal to Harrison by the City.

Councilman Ezting introduced in councils a resolution directing Mayor Stuart to call upon President Harrison to order an investigation of the bank examiner's conduct. The resolution created a sensation, but was voted down. It is believed that the examiner was simply weak in not ordering the immediate arrest of President Marsh. As it was, he gave him time to close deals there on hand and then quietly slip away to Canada or Brazil.

Bank Examiner Drew Criticised.

Bank Examiner Drew was before the investigating committee and was tortured with questions as to his own blindness in permitting so many thefts under his official eyes and hands. He is believed to be only a tool and inefficient. The disclosures of the day were that Presidents Marsh and Kennedy constantly loaned to each other to fool the bank examiner and that Drew visited the Keystone on an average twice a week for six years.

John Wanamaker's Account.

It was also shown that the firm of John Wanamaker had $100,000 discounts more than the bank's capital allowed; that Mrs. John Wanamaker had overdrawn her account a few thousand dollars, and that there was an overissue of 4,816 shares of stock. Assignee Magill exhibited City Treasurer Bardsley's due bills for $945,000, and their difference in color and irregularity of numbers made it apparent that President Marsh had a private due bill book in imitation of the regular one.

Mr. Wanamaker is not concerned in the matter personally. He was not a stockholder in the Keystone. The bank is opposite his place of business, and is one of three in which his large running accounts are kept. His balance was sometimes so large that President Marsh was anxious to keep it. When the bank failed the commercial paper of the Wanamaker firm, which had been discounted there, was immediately taken up.

Kennedy and Bardsley seem to be standing their confinement well. Bardsley will soon be removed from the hospital, as he is much improved in health.

Davitt's New Paper Goes Under.

LONDON, June 3.—It appears that Michael Davitt's paper, The Labor World, which he proudly hoped to make the organ of British labor and the champion of English speaking workingmen, has been a complete failure financially. The paper had £30,000 behind it, and nearly £9,000 having been exhausted without any apparent prospect of success, the company concluded to give up the struggle and has ceased publication. It is said that the fact is unknown to Davitt, who is now abroad, and that if he knew of his disappointment might find serious expression.

Faulkner Will Meet Leonard.

BUFFALO, June 3.—James H. Faulkner, the well known lightweight wrestler, says in answer to Hugh Leonard's challenge that he will wrestle Leonard, catch-as-catch can, best two out of three falls, for $1,000. If Leonard does not accept his proposition in two weeks he will retire from the carpet and claim the lightweight championship of the world.

Train Wreckers Still at It.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 3.—An attempt was made to wreck the 12:15 New York express-bound train at Brown's farm, near here, yesterday. A number of ties and logs were found piled on the rails, but the engineer seeing the obstructions in time stopped the train.

BETTER FIGHT THAN RUN

SO THOUGHT CAPT. POWELL WHEN SURROUNDED BY INDIANS.

He Fixed His Handful of Men in a Corral Made of Wagon Boxes, and Showed the Savages a New Kind of Hornets' Nest.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

ANY a man of arms has taken up a breechloader for the first time, and in his enthusiasm over the deadly weapon of war has declared that with such a death dealing engine, and a good cover to shoot from, he could hold out against a regiment so long as his ammunition lasted. This extravagant idea was all but realized to the letter one summer day in 1867, in the wilds of Dakota, when Capt. Jesse Powell and twenty-eight followers kept at bay for three and a half hours over 2,000 Cheyenne and Arapahoe warriors. It was an accident, of course, that a handful of men should be pitted against such a host. It was an accident, too, but a very fortunate one, that the handful had just been armed with the serviceable repeating rifle, then quite new on the plains, and the Indians were not aware of it, and supposed that they had the Little band completely at a disadvantage.

Capt. Powell, with his company C, Twenty-seventh United States infantry, was guarding the wood train belonging to Fort Phil Kearny, and dispersed his men in the best manner possible in the timber where the choppers were at work. The pinery was about five miles from the fort, the nearest point from which help could be drawn. Ordinarily the hostility of the savages was displayed in harassing attacks on the choppers at their work and on the wagons passing to and from the fort. The summer previous, however, a body of seventy-nine men, including officers, led by Col. W. J. Fetterman, had been intercepted on the march from the fort to the relief of a wood train that had been attacked and slaughtered to a man. In anticipation of an attempt by the Indians to repeat that terrible act of vengeance, Powell, on being assigned to the duty of guarding the choppers and trains, prepared for the worst. The drivers, choppers and herders were under orders just where to go and what to do in case of attack, so that there might be no confusion or stampede at the trying moment.

Now in an emergency a man with a gun, standing or lying with an object between his body and the foe, no matter if the object is only a piece of canvas, feels better for the bit of cover. To have him feel just right at the outset will often make a brave man of him through a long fight. The better the protection as bullet proof the better he will feel and the braver he will be. Powell constructed cover for his camp and from the guards by removing the wagon beds from their gearing and arranging them with the right side upward on the ground in the shape of a circular parapet or a so called "corral." The beds were boxes of wood, of course, and were loopholed so that men could fire without exposing themselves. The wagons numbered only fourteen, and in order to enlarge the circle for the accommodation of all who might seek protection there, intervals were left between the wagon bodies, and filled up with cut poles made of green, rolled tent sheeting and other objects that would serve to stop bullets and arrows. There were also defensive positions on a rocky hillside close by the timber where the choppers were at work during the day, and in these the workmen and their immediate guards were to seek refuge in case of an attack.

Powell and his second in command, Lieut. John C. Jenness, remained in the corral with twenty-five soldiers and five scouts and herders, while the scout guides, interpreters, etc. Thus the quarter of fighting men in the corral was thirty-two in all, including the officers. Sharp vigilance was practised night and day to prevent surprise. On the morning of Aug. 2 faint signs of an attempt on the part of the Indians to stampede the animals in their grazing ground were discovered about daylight, and all of the men of the camp took up their fighting attitudes. In a very few minutes small mounted parties of redskins dashed forward toward the corral and toward the herd. The herders with their guards repulsed their assailants, and Capt. Powell promptly displayed his force to cover the return of the party to their hiding places among the rocks, where the choppers and their guards had already taken shelter. Small bands appeared in force, coming to level out of ravines where they had massed themselves while it was dark. A spirited skirmish took place along the rocky hillside, but the Indians were driven off with heavy loss. Powell's reserve party lost four killed, and the remainder retired to the corral to await the general assault. The tactics of the savages were to stampede the cattle and the outlying parties first, and then overwhelm the principal camp. The surprise having failed, they fell to more serious work, and formed a body of several hundred mounted warriors in sight of the corral. Capt. Powell distributed his men around the low parapet, and supplied them with blankets and other thick material to cover themselves as they lay prostrate in the wagon bottoms. On rode the Indians in a formless mass and at a keen run, but the merciless power of the breechloaders was too much for even their savage ardor, and after drawing a heavy fire they retired.

As soon as they reached the main host of their companions a lively and hasty gathering of the warriors showed that something unusual was on foot. Indians moving singly and in bands pushed their way through the disordered gathering toward the front, and soon a body of mounted men to the number of 1,500 stood apart from the rest, ready for a grand charge. The soldiers in the corral understood what was before them, and made a desperate effort to add something to the slender protection that stood between them and death. Extra clothing and bedding were rolled into bundles and scattered into the openings of the wagons. Sharpshooters were placed in front, and every man was ordered to conserve his fire and to shoot low. Jenness, with a few men, was to take to ride pits for a final stand. These little efforts in such a crisis may not be of actual material value, but they give a mind and are better than mere watching and dreading.

In a short time the Indians rushed forward, encircling the corral and sending up their fiendish shouts of triumph and taunting defiance. The soldiers waited until the warriors were within easy range, and then opened fire with the repeaters. This staggered the savages and finally brought them to a dead stop, amazed that a hot nest so small should have so many stings in it. For the next two hours the time for getting under headway they advanced again, and found the stings as plentiful and as hot as before. Small parties of mounted warriors, armed with rifles, crawled out of the ravines and advanced slowly, with bunches of grass held before them for screens. These foolhardy strategists fell one by one. Powell's stings were long-reaching as well as innumerable, and all that lived the venture out retired and gave it up.

The mounted warriors abandoned their ponies after the repulse of the grand charge and stripped themselves, and with a reinforcement that swelled the number to nearly 2,000 advanced in a semicircular line. When within a few hundred paces they started on a run, and kept it up in spite of the hot fusillade of bullets that met them until some of them dropped at ten paces from the corral. Among the dead was the war chief of the band. In this attack the men in the corral lasted the Indian fire for the first time. In their savage fury the redskins, as a rule, shot over the mark. During the run of the naked warriors Lieut. Jenness and one of the private soldiers yielded to a burning curiosity to witness the spectacle, and raised their heads above the parapets. Sudden death was the penalty.

The Indians found the little nest too well supplied with stings to be breasted in solid bodies on a charge and so changed their tactics. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, perhaps a dozen warriors each, paraded themselves on one side of the corral and set up a savage war song. When they got within range the breechloaders quickly scattered them, and as they ran off a swarm of their fellows arose from the ground on the opposite side of the corral and dashed impetuously toward the low parapet. This, too, was finally forced by the repeaters. Then the Indians withdrew to the ridges and left the whole valley empty dear down to Lake Desmet, after their fashion, when to say rest. Their wild war songs sounded out of the distance as a signal for the dispersion of the savages, and they crawled out by their many bloody failures, though every breech-loader in that pent up citadel had shattered its dusky victim many times over.

The loss of the Indians was one to scatter the fire of the soldiers by the simultaneous advance of numerous parties of determined warriors at close range. This time the breechloaders finished the business at comparatively long range, and sent the savages back again to cover in great confusion. The paroxysm of the Indian style of warfare had all been exhausted, and nothing more was to be expected from them for a time than the fatal attempts of a few bothersome braves to "get themselves killed most beautifully" just for glory. The fight had lasted three hours and a half, and over 300 savages had gone down before the pitiless hail of lead from the repeating rifle. The loss was not appalling, considering the number of warriors on the scene, but in view of the size of the horses' nest that did the mischief the savages must have still feel the humiliation and take alarm. As it would be only a question of time when the whole band would be wiped out if the battle was pursued in, they were glad for an excuse to quit the field. This was given them by the arrival of a relief detachment from the fort of fifty men of the repeating rifle. A STAYER ON THE SAFETY.

Bicyclist Henry J. Hall, Jr., and His Wonderfully Sustained Course.

Henry J. Hall, Jr., one of the men who will carry the colors of the New Jersey Athletic club this season, is well in the van of racing cyclists. He was born in Birmingham, England, is about 5 ft. 6 in. in height, weighs 140 pounds and for so small a man is a wonderful stayer. He reserves a fast really appreciated from the moment they he rides a 60% inch geared solid tire safety in his ordinary road rides.

HENRY J. HALL, JR.

Hall rode his first race in Springfield, Mass., in 1888, covered the distance, twenty-five miles, in 1h. 32m. 10s., and broke the twenty-four mile record, although he finished no better than fourth in the race itself. In 1894 he was the champion twenty-five mile rider of America, and in the following year he would have secured first place in the tricycle event had it not been for an accident.

He rode his first Irvington-Milburn road race in 1896, and won it from scratch, establishing a record of 1h. 37m. 40s., while in the following May he scored again, riding in 1h. 32m. 54s., and in July, same year, he placed a third race over the same course to his credit, defeating this time C. E. Kluge, who was then holding the twenty-five mile championship of America. His track races are likewise many and are marked by the score, but perhaps the best short distance work he ever did was at Springfield, Mass., in 1897, when he covered a mile in 2m. 27s., and at Roseville, N. J., where he won the big mile handicap, and was rewarded with prizes to the value of $400.

In all he has won eighty-six first prizes and twenty-two seconds in three seasons. This year he starts in the Irvington-Millburn road race, and probably in all the principal track races.

BOSTON'S CHINESE PUGILIST.

He Can Knock the Pigtail Off Any Celestial in America.

Boston, the hub of literature and pugilism, has added a new light to her list of celebrities in the person of John Lee, a 112-pound Celestial, who believes he can knock the very pigtail off any unenlisted Chinaman in America. John was born at Shanghai twenty-five years ago, and has all the pluck and endurance, it is said, of an American boxer. He has turned his back on the pipe, wiped the sawdust from his yellow cheeks, and is now prepared to imprint Chinese hieroglyphics all over the high cheek bones of any Chinaman who will stand up before him. Under the training of a Boston middleweight John has shown rare aptitude in the 'Melican man's style of fistic combat and also as a collar-and-elbow wrestler.

In the Flowery Kingdom John was quite a shifty man at the Chinese style of fighting, and won six victories when he was only fourteen years of age.

The Yacht Corsair.

J. P. Morgan's new steam yacht bears the piratical name of Corsair. Her length over all is 238 feet; length at load water line, 204 feet; beam, 27 feet; depth, 12 feet, and draught about 14 feet.

THE CORSAIR.

It is expected that she will develop a speed of seventeen knots, and if these expectations are realized she will be entered in the American Yacht club's steam yacht race from Milton to New London in July.

New Things in Hosiery.

Any color can be matched for stockings, and solid colors are worn. The chief novelty lies in the somewhat elaborate silk clocks which are embroidered on the outside of the leg. In Paris there is a growing feeling for a return to white stockings, but England would adopt such a notion slowly. There is, however, a compromise—namely, the Maggie, with white toes, heels and the upper portion of the leg, the foot and well above the ankles black. The plan is approved of on the score of cleanliness, but it has a very hybrid appearance. However, it is supposed that the white is inviable. The prettiest stockings for evening wear are of silver gray silk with openwork fronts. They go nicely with light or fashionable silver kid shoes. Shot silk stockings are a good deal worn. The newest stockings for brides are of ribbed white silk.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

MRS. MALONEY TOOK PARIS GREEN THINKING IT HER MEDICINE.

How Death Resulted Notwithstanding the Efforts of Two Physicians.—The Particulars.

The death of Mrs. Mary Maloney resulted last evening from a mistake, she taking a spoonful of Paris green, thinking it was a powder which she had been in the habit of taking for medicine.

Mrs. Maloney was eighty-four years of age. For a short time past she has been visiting at the residence of Mr. James Nolan on Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

She arose as usual early yesterday morning and at about seven o'clock went to one of the closets in the house and picked up a paper containing what she supposed was her medicine, took a spoonful, and after dehuging it in a cup of water, drank the contents.

A little while afterward James Nolan, Jr., a son of Mr. Nolan, picked up a towel and noticed a green substance imprinted thereon. He inquired who had been using it, and Mrs. Maloney replied that she had.

A little further inquiry revealed the fact that Mrs. Maloney had taken Paris green in mistake for her medicine.

Drs. Hedges and Carmen were summoned and they administered an antidote. But their skill proved unavailing, as the unfortunate woman died about half-past six o'clock last evening.

Deceased was the widow of the late Edwin Maloney of Piscataway, and since her husband's death had made her home with Mr. and Mrs. James McCarthy of Evona, where her remains were taken this morning.

Mrs. Maloney's husband was killed a few years ago by falling from a wagon loaded with hay.

Mr. Nolan was a land scape gardener and he used the Paris green for the purpose of poisoning potato bugs. The poison was supposed to be in an out of the way place and how Mrs. Maloney came to make the fatal error is not known.

Public Library.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library was held last evening. There were present Directors A. C. Baldwin, J. R. Dumont, M. W. Tyler, J. Evaris Tracy and W. M. Stillman. The minutes of the meeting of May 6 were read and adopted.

A letter was read by the secretary from Mr. Rowland Cox accepting the position of director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Male, which on motion was ordered and placed on file.

The following bills were ordered paid: W. H. Williams, periodical, etc. for May $12.12
Miss Tracy, assistant 11.75
Miss Adams, salary 30.00
J. B. Allen, salary and sundries 42.25

A communication was received from the librarian which on motion was ordered referred to the Library Committee. A communication from the janitor was referred to the president with power.

Moved and carried that the secretary and treasurer be requested to prepare the annual report and file the same with the city clerk.

The librarian's reports for May, and for the year ending May 31, '91, were read and ordered on file. A communication from Mrs. D. D. Randolph of Dunellen, requesting the use of the library was referred to the Librarian Committee. Adjourned. WM. M. STILLMAN, Secty.

SENTENCES PASSED.

JUDGE RICE PRONOUNCES JUDGMENT IN SEVERAL CASES.

The Beekman-Wiley Trial Postponed.

—Other Cases in the Quarter Sessions.—Strange Complications.

Judge Rice, of Middlesex county, presided in the Union county court of general quarter sessions yesterday, Judge McCormick sitting at New Brunswick.

The trial of the indictments against Samuel D. Beekman and Jennie Wiley for manslaughter in starving and beating Pearl Beekman, the nine-year-old daughter of Beekman, was set down for yesterday.

When court opened Prosecutor Marsh stated that the prisoners when arraigned had no counsel, and Jobe court assigned Mr. Lewis A. Groff as one of the counsellors. Mr. Groff was obliged to go to Trenton to-day for examination before the Supreme court for admission as counsellor. Under the circumstances the State was willing to have the case adjourned.

Judge Rice said he could sit in the case on June 10th, and it was placed on the calendar for that day.

PRISONERS SENTENCED.

Three defendants were arraigned on allegations as follows: Richard Barry, for grand larceny in stealing a watch from the pocket of his roommate, William Smith; James J. LeClaire, charged with stealing a horse and harness; David Lindley, accused of petty larceny in taking a coat from the saloon of Michael Connolly.

Barry and LeClaire pleaded non vult, and Lindley guilty.

Prosecutor Marsh stated that Barry sold the watch in New York, and that Chief Tenney traced it through several persons before recovering it.

Barry exclaimed to the court that he took the watch as a joke. He admitted selling it to a friend, but expected to reclaim it again.

Judge Rice imposed a sentence of one year in State prison.

LeClaire's counsel pleaded for him at great length, alleging that he took the horse from his employer while drunk and without any intention of stealing it. LeClaire, he said, was highly connected in Plainfield, and his friends hoped to save him from the disgrace of going to State prison.

The evidence for the State showed that LeClaire sold the horse for $6 to a hackman.

The prisoner was sentenced to State prison for one year.

In the case of Lindley it was shown on the testimony of Connolly's manager. He had never committed crime before, and was drunk when he picked up the coat, valued at $5, and went away with it. He lives in this city, and has a family.

Judge Rice said to the prisoner, "You had better keep sober." The chance is to hard labor in the county jail for thirty days. You may be thankful the cost was less than $20.

The next cases called were indictments against John Hagele, Joseph Conners and Edward Sullivan, youths charged with robbing the chicken house of J. C. W. Rankin in Cranford.

Hagele when arrested pleaded guilty and the others not guilty. This morning Conners was absent and his bail was forfeited. The mother filled Conners' place as his surety and a bench warrant was issued for Conners' arrest.

In the case of Sullivan, Mr. James C. Connolly appeared as counsel, and said that on his advice his client retracted his former plea and pleaded non vult. Mr. Connolly said that Conners was the only witness for Sullivan's defense. Sullivan and Conners were not at Cranford, but met Hagele getting off a coal train on Port avenue with the chickens in a bag.

Hagele who was also arraigned said this story was not true, and that Sullivan and Conners were with him and assisted in the theft.

Judge Rice examined both prisoners and they persisted in their versions of the affair.

Mr. Connolly charged that the State had refused to allow him to see Hagele who had been in jail since the day of the theft, arraignment and sentence. Mark said Mr. Connolly's statement was not true, and contradictions passed between the counsel and the prisoners. Judge Rice regard for silence, and said the court decided the matter of guilty or not guilty from a man who persists in saying he was innocent. He therefore ordered a plea of guilty.

The jury early this afternoon returned a verdict of guilty of petit larceny, and Hagele and Sullivan were arraigned for sentence. Judge Rice said he believed that Sullivan was equally guilty with Hagele and sentenced to the county jail for six months.

In the case of Hagele the plea was for a first grade of crime, but the court thought he ought not to be punished as severely as Sullivan, and gave the State's service in pleading. The court therefore saved him from State prison and sentenced him to the county jail for five months.

The trial of John Malvern, the burglar, on an indictment, next took place, and the jury went out at 2:30 o'clock.

The jury were out about an hour, and returned with a verdict of guilty. There are three other indictments against the prisoner.

Mr. Connolly, his counsel, wished him to plead non vult, but Malvern would not do so. Mr. Connolly asked permission to withdraw from the case, but Judge Rice would not allow him to do so, saying that the prisoner was entitled to a trial if he insisted upon it, and his counsel must defend him. The trial proceeded.

The Rev. Dr. R. S. Macarthur, of New York, was invited to take part in the memorial services of the late Dr. Abraham Coles, which were celebrated last Friday. Dr. Macarthur, on account of illness, was unable to attend; but, in a letter to the family, he wrote as follows:

Perhaps the words that I enclose might be read at the memorial gathering of your late father's friends? For my personal reference I prefer not to be present.

Few men have recently died whose position and work were as unique as those of Dr. Abraham Coles. Add to this the fact that so many of power united in a single life, his death created a genuine sorrow in wide and diverse circles of appreciative friends. He was a distinguished member of the medical profession, having given to it years of devoted study and labor in the highest and most difficult line. His poetical genius was as rare as it was genuine. There is no kind of literary beauty or excellence in which he has not written. Some of his hymns are to many of the choicest in the language. All the Days, We sing that hymn in the Calvary Church when we first entered our new church home. We sing it on many of our anniversary occasions. Other hymns which he has written are doubtless equally as good, but this one has for me a peculiar charm.

Many of his translations of the Psalms are worthy to perpetuate his name to remote generations. Love to the Lord, I suppose, I may get the full force of their rythm as well as the sweet influence of their divine thought. His knowledge of general literature and especially of Latin Hymnology gives him a place of high honor in the illustrious list of students of the early days of the Christian Church. But most of all, his beautiful character as faithful friend, physician and Christian man is worthy of the greatest encomiums on this occasion.

I should like to see page in expansion of this thought. He has graduated from earth and mastered into a higher school of science, and is now in the midst of a class of characters in the Celestial University with the Lord Jesus as his instructor. With a depth of sweetness I never before appreciated can we now read with fresh interest his hymn, which he loved so well, and whose meaning he now understands as never before:

"Ever, my Lord, with Thee,
Ever with Thee;
Through all eternity
Thy face to see.
I count this Heaven to be
Ever, my Lord, with Thee,
Ever with Thee."

LETTER FROM JUDGE BRADLEY.

In reply to a request to act as one of the pall-bearers at the memorial service, Justice Bradley, of the United states Supreme Court, wrote as follows to the family of Dr. Coles:

I was sorry that I could not comply with your wish and accept act as one of the pall-bearers of your father. He was one of my strongest friends and I one of his. He was the highest subject, but affectionate friend of ship. We walked side by side in the path of life for many years, and I cherish the memory mutual regard. I have been separated lately somewhat by official duties here, but I have not forgotten him, dear friend.

I tender you my sincerest sympathies for your loss of so excellent a father, and beg to assure you that I am, with sincere regard, even heartfelt sorrow for the breaking of another link that connected me with many past pleasant associations and happy recollections.

Sincerely yours, JOSEPH BRADLEY.

Dying in a Lodging House.

[From The New York World, June 6th.]

The Newark police were notified yesterday that a man was dying in the Keystone Lodging house, on Commerce street. His name is George Keller and he is a resident of Plainfield, N. J. He has no friends in Newark and is penniless. He is said to have friends in Plainfield. Efforts will be made to have him taken to the City Hospital.

Mr. Keller's brother Edward, left for Newark this morning.

F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. When all else to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—Adv.

JOB MALE'S WILL.

THE STATEMENTS OF WITNESSES.

As Presented to the Probate Court at Trenton by Counsellor Craig A. Marsh Yesterday.

In the Prerogative Court at Trenton yesterday an effort was made to have the successive will of ex-Mayor Job Male admitted to probate, by Counsellors Craig A. Marsh and ex-Governor Bedle counsel for beneficiaries named in it. A certificate signed by Drs. G. W. Endicott, T. S. Davis and Mr. A. C. Baldwin, who were present at the time the will was drawn up and when Mr. Male died was presented to the court by counsels of counsel. It stated that the witnesses were present at the time, that they heard Mr. Male acknowledge the will and the provisions as his last will and testament, and that he made them bear witness to it. The certificate says that in reply to a question by Marsh to him, he (Job Male) said that he wanted to make his will and that he wanted the children of his brothers to share equally, and added:

"But first I give the Park avenue house, 120 Park avenue, and 9, 11 and 13 College place, to the Plainfield Public Library. I make John W. Harrison, Job Male and George W. Fenno my executors. I give $10,000 to Mary Ann Gleason, my half-sister. I give my executors power to sell real estate, but not before five years after my death. I give the ornaments and brie-a-brac known as the Schoonmaker collection to the Plainfield public library. I give this house and lot to Job Male, but Mrs. Stout is to have it for her home, without charge, as long as she lives. After her death, I give it to Job Male. I give the house in which Mrs. Emma Rives, 119 Broadway, to her. What is left after the gifts to the public library, Mary Ann Gleason and Mrs. Stout, I want equally divided among the children of my five brothers, Simon, John, William, James and Ambrose.

The certificate adds:

"We further certify that at the time of pronouncing his said last will and testament, Job Male was of sound and disposing mind and memory, and that we were present continuously from that time until he died."

The Mrs. Stout mentioned is a sister-in-law with whom he lived. There are about thirty heirs who contest the probate of this will. They are represented by ex-Chancellor Runyon and Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth. The case of them is as closely connected with the ex-Mayor as the beneficiaries, however. Mr. Male, when he died, owned about ninety-five houses in Plainfield, besides having considerable property in Jersey City. He was worth $600,000. His gifts before to the public library which he had built and given to the city was manifested by his provision for it. W. M. Stillman represented the public library in the case. The provision providing for the disposal of the property at the end of five years would allow all mortgaged indebtedness to be paid off by the incomes from rentals. A forced sale would cause a shrinkage of nearly one-half the value of his estate. The court ordered testimony in the case be taken before Master in Chancery Herbert W. Kingsle in Newark on Friday June 12.

It will be remembered that the public reports at the time of Mr. Male's death were to the effect that he was about to sign the will presented to him by Mr. Marsh, his lawyer, and before he could sign it, he died, holding the pen in his hand.

A few moments before death the witnesses declare he acknowledged the will and requested to him as his last will, that is, so far as a dying man could make such a declaration.

A Great Storm Period Predicted.

Foster, the new weather prophet, has been making a lively forecast of the weather for a year to come. Read what he says, then watch his dates:

Beginning with the first week in May of this year and ending with the last week in June, 1892, will continue the greatest storm period since 1882, and it will be six years before we have during the coming Winter. The Winter will set in early, and with its usual cold and great snow storms and blizzards will be what is termed a very hard Winter. These Winter storms will begin in the northern tier of States with great severity in October, and an early Winter very severe all over the continent will follow.

The force of this storm period will increase very gradually, and the May storms will not be so marked as those later on. We will probably have an occasional tornado, but destructive storms will not attract general attention till after June 8th, when the great battle of the elements will begin in earnest and every storm will bring its record of havoc. June is not always a month of great storms, but it will be this year, and should my predictions be verified as to that month the public will give more attention to what I have said as to the storms of months to follow. October and November are the months that usually bring the topical hurricanes that are sometimes very disastrous on the Gulf of Mexico and occasionally do damage as far North as Tennessee and Arkansas. The storm that survivors now visited lower Mississippi and the coast of of the Gulf of Mexico in 1882-3 will be repeated next October and November.

I do not desire to create any unnecessary excitement, but this is a very grave storm period, but no harm can come by being prepared for the severe Winter and the great storms. Hundreds of thousands of people who read my weather forecasts every week will have great faith in the predictions made in this letter, for they know that I am very careful and seldom mislead them. The forecasts are not based on any superstition or secret, but on what I know to be and what any person may know to have a philosophical basis. Write for terms. J. Sverting. Cleveland, O. 4 15 Sun

Krupp, the gunmaker, calculates that his cannon have caused the death of no less than 650,000 men. He consoles himself, however, with the thought that they would have died anyhow.

It is cheerful to record that there is beginning to be less contention from the Little United States army than there was a year or two ago. The reason is that now an enlisted man is permitted to buy his discharge if he gets tired of army life. Desertion used to be the only way. Buying it out is really easier than running away Besides it is much safer Then again the hours of duty have been shortened, and other changes made which make life more endurable to the common soldier in America.

Civilizing Influence of Cold.

That original thinker, Dr. Felix Oswald, writes in The Open Court a paper showing that frost and freedom go together In cold countries man must wrestle with the wild, fierce forces of nature to get his living. Consequently he is little afraid of things and cannot easily be enslaved. Until the line of the sixty-fifth parallel of latitude is reached the freest peoples are those that live in cold countries. When it becomes so cold that wheat will not grow, then man as a civilized being must yield to a force stronger than his own. Frost is a good thing for freedom, but there is a line where frost is too strong to be fought.

At present the highest civilization is reached in countries that are comparatively cold in climate, and this is not because the warm countries are overpopulated either. It is the result of other laws. Perhaps Dr. Oswald does not lay sufficient stress on race development. There certainly were no freer or braver peoples than the ancient Greeks and Romans, or even the inhabitants of India and Egypt, before the days of their degeneracy, but the cold climate offers the best field for the development of the peculiar powers of the Teuton and Anglo-Saxon.

Dr. Oswald also hints that in his view of the case even religion is a matter of climate. Inhabitants of cold countries are natural Protestants, owing to their dislike to rendering obedience to anybody or anything. Dr. Oswald says further:

Hence the latent Protestantism of the north European nations, even in villages where Dan-mark was as full of convents as Italy. The precept of absolute obedience was always rather hard to swallow in those northern hemis-pheres, and the divine right of kings is liable to be challenged by men who had learned self reliance in their struggles with snow tornadoes and famished wolves. "How is it your sleeping countrymen were so fast in renouncing their allegiance to the Catholic fatherland?" Erasmus was once asked by an Italian prelate. "There was no time to lose; the costumes of the Flemlanders is so beastly in the climate they own," said the facetious Hollander, and Henri Rochefort is probably right that the czars will never succeed in frauding out the virility of their subjects, and ought to transfer their rebels to a sweat cure establishment, a la Cayenne.

All Her Fault.

A pretty Yankee schoolmistress has by this time found out the kind of man not to run away with. She thought she was awfully in love with a certain gay deceiver of a cashier, who unfortunately had already one wife and an interesting family. She also thought he was in love with her, and he certainly told her so often enough. At last she concluded life was no longer worth living without her own affinity, and he made her think so all the more. So she ran away with him, to go far away where they were not known, to make a home and live love's young dream for half a century.

But there was one thing the pretty schoolmistress did not remember. That was that a man who would run away from one woman could be infallibly depended on to run away from another. After a few weeks, somehow, this fickle hero got tired. Love's young dream began to be fatiguing. At home his moody was not forthcoming to support wife No. 1 and the interesting family. They missed that money, and the wife concluded that the husband wasn't so bad that he could not be forgiven, especially as forgiveness is one of the chief recognised virtues of woman's gentle nature. So there was a come-home-all-is-forgiven scene, and now the wife and children are occupied in explaining that papa wasn't to blame. 'It was the fault of that Bad Young Woman, who hung after him and coaxed him away.

The pretty schoolmistress has lost her school and cannot get it back again. She has lost also her standing in society, and cannot get that back. She has lost her ideal hero, and has not even the common, silly fellow she ran away with. She will think twice before running away with another man probably. In the not very jolly years that now stretch out before her she will have leisure to make up her mind that there are times when woman's beautiful affectional nature should be set upon severely and systematically. Besides that, she will have it on her conscience that she has led an innocent man away from the path of virtue.

But the warmest sympathies of an outraged public are hereby extended to the innocent lamb of a man who was thus led astray by this Bad Young Woman.

"FOR" BALLOTS ILLEGAL

An Important Decision in the Connecticut Muddle.

THE COURT STATES ITS OPINION

The Ballots Declared Void Because They Were of a Character Prohibited by the Laws of the Nutmeg State Which Were Framed to Secure Fair Elections.

NEW HAVEN, June 4.—The decision of the supreme court in the suit of C. Wilbur Fields vs. Sidney J. Osborne et al., better known as the contested Branford election case, has been announced, and with the announcement was filed the written opinion of the court. The opinion was written by Judge Seymour (Democrat) and concurred throughout by Judges Carpenter and Loomis. Chief Justice Andrews and Judge Torrance concur in the judgment which advises that the plaintiff was not elected selectman of Branford, and dismisses his petition which prayed that he be declared elected; but on the other parts of the opinion they non-concurred. This decision is of the greatest importance and has been awaited with anxiety.

The Legal Status of the "For" Ballots.

It involved the opinion of the court on the question of the legality of so called "for" ballots, which question is first and foremost in the controversy, a controversy and a judicial opinion of which practically decided the governorship. The decision called for a construction of those provisions of the statutes which prescribed that the ballots shall contain nothing on them but the names of the candidates for office and the rules voted for and the name of the party bearing it. The court decided that the ballots were not void for the reason that the word "for" was used. It considers their general form was in direct violation of the law governing the style of a legal ballot.

As to the reason for granting the petition that a hundred citizen ballots contained the illegal words "for judge of probate, Henry N. Steadman," the opinion says: "Now there can be no question but that the legislature intended to say that a ballot which failed to accord with certain specifically enumerated requirements should be void, irrespective of all considerations as to the intent or effect of such failure.

"It considered uniformity an important means of preventing fraud, and there were certain matters in which uniformity could be expressly provided for. But ballots which satisfied the expressed standard of uniformity might be made to lack entire uniformity, and so be identified by various devices which the legislature could neither provide against nor force. At the same time the 'for' vote were in violation of the terms of the law, and so there was no election for judge of probate. The office could not be filled at a town election. The title of the office and the name of the candidate were not given to it by the ballot, and were inserted in violation of the express and unambiguous terms of the act. So, too, were the words 'and ex-officio registrar of births, deaths and marriages.' They were not therein provided for in our first and only duty. It is at liberty to throw around the ballot box such safeguards and regulations as it may deem proper, and it is the duty of the citizens to conform thereto. Such inconvenience is not too great a price to pay for an honest, pure ballot.

The Ballots Declared Illegal.

"It is a matter of public notoriety that ballots prepared by different persons equally determined to observe the requirements of the law have in some cases contained the same words, and in connection with the officers voted for and sometimes omitted it. We refer to these instances in conformation of our position that the duty of construing the law of the state except upon a plain provision of the law we feel bound to hold that the act does not in terms expressly nor by necessary construction prohibit the use of the word 'for' before the title of the office. It follows, therefore, that neither its use nor the failure to use it necessarily and of itself invalidates the ballots. If the regular ballots issued by a political party contain the word 'for' before the titles of the officers thereon named, then it cannot be held to be a 'mark or device' so that the same may be identified in such manner as to indicate by whom it might have cast them, and, therefore, is not obnoxious to that provision. If the regular ballots of a political party omit the word 'for' in the connection stated, then the use of the word in some of the ballots cast, inasmuch as it would be a mark or device by which the same might be identified, would be illegal. Each case must be governed by its own circumstances and be decided as a question of fact under the principles herein stated."

"Upon the facts in the case we hold that the ballots in question were not illegal and void because of the use of the word 'for.' They were illegal, however, as we have already stated, for another reason. Being illegal, there is no foundation for the petitioner's claims that he was elected selectman, and his petition, which was based upon that claim, must be dismissed."

The Citizens' Party Existence.

The legal existence of a Citizens' party is defined by the court as follows: "The element of time is not essential to the formation of a party. It may spring into existence from the exigencies of a particular election, and with no intention of continuing after the exigency has passed. To hold the contrary would be to strike a blow at that independence in political action upon which the good government of a healthy state depend. Nor can the number of voters that must unite in order to form a legal party be prescribed by law without violating one of the fundamental theories of popular government.

"If it is shown, as it is in this case, that an independent political party was formed; that it assumed a distinctive name and that the ballots which it issued invited the support of its members, while they bore falsely the name of the political party bearing that, it is enough.

HE HELD THEM SPELLBOUND.

Rev. Milligan's Eloquence Before the Presbyterian Synod.

PITTSBURG, June 4.—The audience at the morning session of the Reformed Presbyterian synod was unusually large. Dr. Milligan was most intensely interested in the proceedings, which, however, were of an altogether different character than have marked the proceedings during the past several days.

The trial of the suspended ministers was the order of the day. It was 11 o'clock when the Rev. R. W. Bland, one of the accused, finished a one hour speech in his own defense. Next the youthful looking Rev. J. M. Milligan, another of the suspended ministers, stepped upon the platform and commenced to speak in a calm, deliberate manner. As he advanced in his defense he became more and more eloquent, commanding the undivided attention of the vast audience, who pressed forward and about him as if drawn by magic power. His thrusts at the hypocrisy of truth and sarcasm into the ranks of the enemy; told of how himself and others had been done an almost irreparable injustice by men who were possessed of authority in the Pittsburg Presbytery; of how he and his companions had been unjustly convicted without having a fair opportunity to be heard in their defense. "Twice during his remarks Mr. Milligan paused, having exhausted the time allowed for his address.

At the first pause the synod unanimously extended the time half an hour. At 12 o'clock Mr. Milligan had not nearly completed his speech, when, by practically unanimous vote Mr. Milligan was requested to continue his speech immediately upon the reconvening of the synod and to continue until through, without regard to time. Immediately after the noon adjournment Mr. Milligan was surrounded by conservatives and liberals, each and every one anxious to grasp his hand. Ladies in the gallery and ladies in the lower part of the house waved their handkerchiefs; old men turned to each other and spoke in terms of highest praise of the wonderful address they had heard, while those whom the speaker had arraigned in such a brilliant and manly, yet Christian-like manner, hung their heads and remained silent.

Reformed Church Officers.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 4.—The eighty-fifth annual session of the general synod of the Reformed church of America elected these officers for the ensuing year: President, Rev. E. T. Corwin, New Brunswick, N. J.; vice president, Rev. C. J. Wells, Flushing, N. Y.; permanent clerk, Rev. Dr. Teneyck, New York; temporary clerks, G. Z. Collier, Thousand Islands, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. W. H. Hart, Raritan, N. J. Rev. J. R. Berry, of Rhinebeck, preached the synodical sermon. Three hundred delegates are in attendance.

REVELERS CRUSHED IN THE RUINS

A Falling Building at Chicago Kills Three and Injures Many More.

CHICAGO, June 4.—With a loud crash the frame building at 161 West Jackson street toppled off its foundation last evening, burying in the ruins five young men who were carousing under the first floor of the rickety structure. Three of them were instantly killed and the other two badly hurt. The dead are Thomas Will, William Schwartz, George Schwartz and John Cahill. The injured are George Shiss and Gus Schwartz.

When the first floor was reached John Cahill was found lying on the ground, his right arm being cut off and his entire body crushed. Close by George Schwartz's body was found on the side opposite to Cahill, his head smashed in and his right arm crushed off. William Schwartz was found on the ground, his head also being badly smashed in by a heavy timber. Gus Schwartz had his left arm broken and received a cut in the back of the head. George Shiss received a bad cut in the cheek. The old structure had been condemned by the city authorities and Mrs. Clapp, the only occupant of it, had been previously ordered to leave. She escaped unhurt.

The Irish Census.

DUBLIN, June 4.—Dublin and Antrim are the only counties in Ireland which under the new census record an increase in population. Among the counties Dublin and Belfast contain more people than at the previous census. Decreased populations are exhibited in Cork, Limerick, Waterford, Galway and Wexford. Belfast shows an increase of 31 per cent.

A Murderer's Body Found.

BOSTON, June 4.—The body of the man found under Charles River bridge has been identified by the Dedham police as that of "August," the farm hand who is supposed to have murdered Miss Emerson of Dedham, June 2.

CHEATING AT BACCARAT

Young Wilson Describes Sir William's Little Game.

A BLACK OUTLOOK FOR CUMMING.

How He Is Alleged to Have Palmed Counters at the Notorious Tranby Croft Game—His Play Was So Peculiar It Attracted the Prince's Attention.

LONDON, June 4.—The appearance of the Prince of Wales in court the third day of the baccarat trial is accepted as evidence that he is determined for his own satisfaction to get at the bottom of the charge against Cumming, as testified under oath. It should not be forgotten that the prince, as a peer of the realm, has certain judicial authority which gives him a right to be present on the bench, although not to take part in the proceedings. He is therefore entirely within his rights in sitting beside the lord chancellor. Judge Hawkins has, however, been severely criticised for permitting ladies access to the judicial sanctum, and, indeed, making the court room generally a sort of aristocratic parquette. The jurymen are not above the average in class and probably not in intelligence.

They stand with true British stolidity the stare directed at them from all sides. It is utterly impossible to read their countenances or get an idea of their leanings. Two of the jurymen, however, have been noticed to let their eyes rest with something like sympathy on the plaintiff. The question addressed to the prince by one of them is generally regarded as favorable to the plaintiff, as showing a desire to get at the bottom of the charges of the defense. The result of the trial is a subject of betting in the London clubs, with odds against Cumming.

The Defense Has an Inning.

At the opening of the session the defense had their innings, a bad one for Cumming, though the witness was only a boy. There was a tremendous crowd in front of the court before it opened. Though not expected to be a witness, the prince was there. He took a seat on the bench and remained through the day. The day's proceedings opened with Sir Charles Russell's address for the defense. In solemn tones he reiterated that his client had found it impossible to say that they were mistaken, and remarked that the circumstances were simplified by the fact that no malice was suggested on either side. From the first Sir William had spoken of his accusers as persons of honor. With considerable warmth, counsel dwelt on the humiliating and disheartening terms of the press, and raising his voice to a passionate pitch, he declared that it was not until the plaintiff found himself in another impasse that he felt it was impossible to slip out, that legal proceedings were taken. Thus the months of the Prince of Wales' sojourn, General Williams and the five defendants remained sealed, and his clients were unable to pass over the bridge of a mistake, as they implicitly believed their cause.

With Deep Regret.

They did not look at the matter with the natural warmth of an advocate, but with the bitterness of deep regret, for it was inconceivable that an innocent man would have borne the odious burden and taint of dishonor placed upon him in signing the precis.

At least one satisfactory result of the trial would be to dissipate the absurd, preposterous and exaggerated notions as to the character of the play at Tranby Croft. Baccarat, for which a reasonable hundred, was not a bad kind of all around game. It was taught to Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green by the plaintiff.

Sir William on Their Appearance.

There was a painful silence when the counsel stated specifically the allegations and described what Mr. Arthur Wilson saw on the first night of play. It was only the recollection of the presence of the royal guest which prevented Wilson from yielding to his first impulse of denouncing the cheat then and there at the baccarat table.

Violently striking his hands together and in a voice hoarse with forensic passion, Sir Charles referred to the witness's conduct of an innocent, and a guilty man, charged with filching from the pockets of his friends, and in the presence of his commanding prudence first the prince in asking Sir William in the presence of Lord Coventry and General Williams, to waive all allegation of suggestion that there had been collusion for the Prince of Wales' name in connection with the scandal.

Not to Save the Prince.

"No; that won't do," said Sir Charles, pointing his finger at the barrister, "it was signed by Sir William to prevent his being denounced the next day at the St. Leger."

Counsel ridiculed the idea as to Sir William Gordon Cumming losing his head, and asked the jury to remember his cool, collected and intelligent conduct in the witness box.

Witness Wilson Examined.

Mr. Arthur Wilson, son of the host at Tranby Croft, was the first witness examined by Mr. Asquith. The witness is one of the "boys" alluded to by Cumming and is only twenty-two years old. In a deliberate manner Mr. Wilson gave a description of Sir William's play, and spoke as to his conduct when several coups were made. Many stood up in the gallery to watch the witness, as he illustrated his circumstantial story by placing his hands on the ledge of the witness box and showing how, according to question and reply, he slightly dropped additional counters through his clasped hands near to the one already staked.

Many listeners reproduced the heartrending tones of Mr. Berkley Levett when he thought his late captain had cheated. The witness gave many other instances of alleged cheating on the part of Gordon Cumming, either by dropping counters from his closed hands or pushing them forward with the pencil used for marking his tableau of the game, or twisting them over the line and near his stake.

The Prince Called Him Down.

Wilson bore out the statement as to the Prince of Wales calling attention to the conduct of Sir William Gordon Cumming. The banker had dealt himself baccarat or nothing, and having paid the punters in proportion to the money placed over the chalk line, plaintiff turned to him with, "There's another tenner to pay here, sir," and the prince, in handing the sum, remarked, "I wish you would put your stake in a more conspicuous place."

However, the Prince of Wales did not readily accept the accusations against Sir William, and closely questioned all the witnesses as soon as he was satisfied of the position.

Saw Him Draw the Counters.

The next witness examined underwent a stern cross-examination of Wilson with regard to his home, his age and occupation, but the witness showed no confusion. The probabilities of the case that he never did anything but waste his time. Touching the actual cheating, the solicitor general said: "Then I want to know the incident in which you do suggest that you saw him cheating."

"I leaned over the table and distinctly saw a red counter in Sir William's hand. Sir William had a red counter. His stake was on a piece of paper in front of him. Lord Edward Somerset had just declared a natural."

"Do you mean to say that there having been a piece of white paper on the table with Sir William Gordon Cumming's stake upon it immediately after Lord Edward Somerset had declared a natural? Do you say four red counters were upon it?"

"There certainly were four red counters. I saw him open his hands and drop them on the table."

"Did he put his hands over the table?"

"His hands had been there the whole of the time and he leaned over—like this"—leaning over the rail.

"Concealing the paper with his hand?"

"No; I should say the five pound sterling counter was underneath and he then lowered his hand and let three more drop out."

"And that immediately after a natural had been declared?"

"Immediately after he had seen the natural in Lord Edward Somerset's hand."

"Wait one moment, sir. Had the natural been declared or not?"

The Odds Against Cumming.

"I should think they were both done in the same minute, the cheating consisting in the plaintiff adding to his stake after the card was declared in his favor."

"Did you use the phrase, 'after the card was declared?'"

"I may have done so. Sir William saw the card, and if it were not actually declared it was virtually declared."

It looks as if the odds were against Cumming.

THE ITATA IN TOCOPILLA

The Runaway Steamer Reaches Chili in Safety.

THE INSURGENTS ARE JUBILANT.

But Their Joy May be Shortlived for the Reason That Their Leaders May Yet Be Obliged to Surrender the Rebel Ship to Uncle Sam.

Iquique, Chili, June 4.—The excitement and rejoicing recently caused here by the news that the United States cruiser Charleston had arrived at Callao, Peru, without having so much as caught sight of the insurgent transport Itata were as nothing compared to the sensation and enthusiasm created yesterday when word was received that the Itata had arrived at Tocopilla. Immediately upon hearing this welcome intelligence the insurgent authorities sent back orders to the commander of the Itata to lose no time in coming on to this port. It is, therefore, believed that the Itata will arrive here today. An ovation awaits her, her captain and her crew. The pursuit of the transport by the cruiser Charleston has been naturally followed with the keenest interest by the inhabitants of this town.

Few Details of Her Trip.

The dispatch of the Itata's commander was very brief. We shall have to await her arrival here to learn the details of her famous run from San Diego, Cal. Your correspondent was informed, however, that the commander of the Itata reports that he did not see any trace of his pursuer. He is confident that here that the Itata made a transfer of her arms and ammunition to the Esmeralda off the Mexican coast. While this rumor prevails it lacks confirmation. Nothing, apparently, is said about it in the report of the Itata's captain to his superiors. It is not thought likely, however, that the insurgents would order the Itata here if she had the arms and ammunition still on board. It may be that she has already discharged her cargo at Tocopilla.

She May Be Surrendered.

At any rate, if she has got rid of it in any way by transfer to the Esmeralda or by landing it on the Chili coast it may be that her being ordered here is in accordance with the report already sent out that the insurgents intend to turn her over to the United States government in order that the question of violation of the neutrality laws may be fully tested in the courts of your country. Whatever action is taken he skill of the Itata's commander in getting here in safety despite the pursuit put forth by the United states government to recapture her on the high seas, is the subject of praise on every hand.

Concentrating on Iquique.

All around Tocopilla are desert plains and arid hills. It is just the spot for the wily Yankee captain of the Itata to run his vessel. The nearest railroad town would enable him to reach an important railroad center if necessary, while in the small port of Tocopilla no one would expect to find the Itata. It would seem that the insurgent commander was fully apprised from some source, doubtless the Esmeralda as already reported, that a sharp chase after the Itata was being kept up and that it was hardly feasible for him to make for some small port in the insurgent territory and to steer clear of Iquique, where the United States cruisers were collected.

The shrewd captain of the transport therefore threaded as near to the danger line at Tocopilla as he deemed it safe to do.

Now that the insurgents have ordered him to return, all responsibility is taken off his shoulders. It is not he who surrendering his ship to it is another command, but the insurgent authorities. Tocopilla is about 200 miles north of the port of Caldera, where the Blanco Encalada was sunk, and is one of the ports closed by President Balmaceda's decree of May 6.

SAID TO BE $50,000 SHORT.

Bonded Treasurer of Pennsylvania Accused of Defalcation.

Buffalo, Under Arrest.

BUFFALO, June 4.—Jacob Miller, a prominent German, and for thirteen years the bonded treasurer of Pennsylvania for Jay Bacher & Davis, has been arrested, charged with embezzlement. The firm accuses him of appropriating its funds to his own use. It is said the firm has made discoveries which lead them to believe that Miller has stolen over $50,000. The embezzlements have been going on for several years. It is also said that Miller offered to settle matters by paying back $25,000, but that the firm refused to accept.

Miller's arrest created a big sensation. He is a member of several German societies, owned an interest in a couple of steam yachts and belonged to several fishing and gun clubs.

The New Party's First Convention.

DES MOINES, June 4.—The first state convention of the People's party since its organization at Cincinnati met at Grand Opera House at 10 a.m. About 400 delegates were present. Ex-Representative J. T. Anderson, of Winneshiek county, was chosen temporary chairman. He is the leading Scandinavian politician of northern Iowa, and heretofore has been a Republican. Resolutions were introduced declaring that prohibition must be related and better enforced; demanding the resubmission of the prohibitory amendment; declaring against the reopening of the world's peace exposition; demanding higher railroad taxation and exemption of homesteads to the amount of $1,500 from taxation.

Fine Play.

MAY'S LANDING, N. J., June 4.—Mrs. Evangeline Hamilton came here last evening and is now the guest of ex-Sheriff Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, her former sister. Mrs. Hamilton admitted today that she intended going on the stage in a play to be called "The Hamptons," in which was written especially for her, and which is to open all the sensational incidents in her career that once rang through the country.

Moses F. Walker Acquitted.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 4.—The trial of Moses F. Walker, the colored ex-ball player, for murder in the second degree ended last night in a verdict of acquittal. Walker is well known throughout the country as a ball player, but at the time of his arrest he held an important position in the railway mail service.

Tried to Horrible Suicide.

HAS BARDSLEY GONE DAFT?

The Report Is Believed to Have Been Started for Effect.

PHILADELPHIA, June 4.—There have been a number of interesting developments in the city treasury investigation. A report was circulated that Bardsley's mind is affected and frightened considerable attention. Dr. Thomas Stewart, the physician who has charge of the ex-city treasurer, has refused, however, to confirm it, and the prevailing impression is that the report was first started by Bardsley's friends for effect. John Dobson who, together with his brother, is on Bardsley's bond to the extent of $250,000, has had an interview with the prisoner. He has received from him the assurance that the missing million of state money was deposited in the Keystone bank, and if it is not there it must have been taken away by Marsh. Ephraim Young, a director of the Spring Garden bank and a member of the real estate firm of Van Gunden & Young, has made a statement denying that he overdrew his firm's account.

The experts appointed by Mayor Stuart to investigate the accounts of the city treasury have practically finished their work and made a report to Mayor Stuart, who announced that the report would not be made public until today, when it will be sent to councils. City Treasurer Ogilvie was at his office bright and early in the morning, and in answer to an inquiry said that he remained there undisturbed. His counsel, he said, would go to Harrisburg today and expected to argue his case before the supreme court on Friday.

The investigation of the affairs of ex-City Treasurer Bardsley was resumed in the afternoon by the sub-committee of councils. Peter A. Weidener, a well known capitalist, testified that he owned $400,000 worth of Chicago traction stock on Mr. Bardsley. The presidents of the Fourth National bank, Mechanics' National bank, Market Street National bank, Commonwealth National bank, People's National bank, Tradesmen's National bank, Merchants' National bank, Produce National bank and the Penn National bank were called and denied ever having paid Mr. Bardsley any money or received from for the city money deposited in their banks.

John W. Torrey, cashier of the Philadelphia National bank, when asked what Mr. Bardsley's line of business on his private account were, declined to answer. He admitted, however, that they were probably very liberal in view of the size of his deposit. Mr. Torrey said he knew of no consideration in any way that Bardsley had received from the bank.

Charles H. Bean, confidential clerk for Glendenning & Co., who has charge of the borrowing and loaning of money for the firm, and through whom Bardsley held all his transactions in his line, was plied with questions, but his memory was very poor, his invariable answer being "I don't remember." Among the loans of Bardsley to Glendenning & Co. was one of $100,000 in February last that fell due this month. Mr. Bean said it was repaid in March last. Mr. Bean said the firm regard Bardsley was in trouble and therefore paid it before it was due. He denied that Bardsley had sent hurriedly for the money, but said he had to pay it over to the treasurer on the presentation of the warrant.

WOMAN'S LOFTY AMBITION.

A Few of the Reasons Why She Likes to Dress Nicely and Make Home Happy.

If the men who criticise and condemn the fair ones for their extravagance in dress, their hats and the host of other things which are too numerous to mention, and which they call "only women's whims," that they can't see any reason for whatever, and wonder why women will do so many queer and silly things, would just put on their thinking caps they would very easily solve that interesting problem.

But as they won't or can't, I shall try to explain some of the reasons why women do a great many of those things for which they are criticised and condemned.

But first let me say right here that all the women are not quite as vain and silly as some would think they are. A great many have some purpose in view which they wish to accomplish, and have good reasons for what they do.

And those which I shall mention are only a few of the many reasons why they do so.

Every good and true woman, who has a due amount of respect for herself and others, likes to look her best, and have her surroundings as pleasant and attractive as her means or what they do will permit.

She likes to dress neat and becoming; not for the love of dress alone, but for the sake of others.

For if she is married and loves her husband and home she wants to make her home happy and pleasant, and herself look neat and attractive to the eyes of her husband and children.

She is content and willing to spare no labor or pains in doing those things which she thinks will increase his happiness and add to his comfort.

For she wants him to enjoy the comfort of a well kept and tastefully arranged home. She likes him to admire her work, for she likes to hear his words of praise, and a pleasant smile and a kind word, accompanied by a kiss, reward her for all trouble she has taken to provide for his domestic comfort and to make his home his bright and happy.

She is ambitious, if she knows her husband appreciates her efforts to make him happy and considers her his household angel.

And if she is single, you may just rest assured she has some one in her mind whom she dresses to please. Or if not already there, she is on the lookout for some one who will think she is the "best and dearest little girl the world contains," and who will love and praise her for her sake alone.

These are only some of the many reasons why women do a great many things which have puzzled more than one masculine mind and been termed "women's whims and foolish notions."

Now, I hope the men will be less severe in their criticism of the fair ones when they know that some of their dressing and the host of other things which are done are done for their own sweet sakes.

Criticise the really silly ones, who dress for no other earthly purpose but love of dress and show to excite envy in the breast of others, if you wish to, but for many of those who are trying to make home pleasant and true to render you happy and comfortable, and deserve sympathy for your own sweet sakes.—Chicago Ledger.

Women Love to Be Petted.

The majority of women love to be petted, but not one in fifty is the happy recipient of petting, nevertheless.

I was much interested in a group of young women at Block Island one summer. I described all the same hotel with them, and we were on quite friendly terms before the season was over. One young man-ried me very much by his rather free and easy manner. He was brimful of self help. When he entered a breakfast room he made the rest of the day on Sunday. I could not utter pains to watch them. It was as I had expected. He seldom waited upon her; she had always to prefer helping herself. If he brought a cup of tea he immediately took it from him and vigorously swung it about her shoulders. If she wanted a chair she rushed and procured one. She would be ready for him to move quickly to show the gallantry that I feel sure he possessed.

"Little goose," thought I, "Gad helps those who help themselves," as the man said. I may say, I learned afterward that no woman loved petting more than this same little wife, but for some unaccountable reason she could not resist the everlasting temptation to take care of herself.

Over the hotel was a bachelor's helpet by some kindly hand. Had she not been sure of the hand I am certain she would not have gone over the rocks. If her handkerchief fluttered to the ground the young gentlemen present were in danger of bumping heads in their mad desire to restore it to its fair owner, and I declare, in the absence of escorts, the ladies would stoop and lift it from the sand as a matter of course. Out fishing, the very sea dogs themselves vied with each other for the sweet opportunity of baiting her hook. All her life she had unconsciously demanded petting and devotion.

Here was a lovely character, gentle, refined and sensitive, but you could not be with her five minutes without feeling she was born to be waited upon.

She has been married three years. Her husband is still her lover, and pets her to her heart's content.

Those women who complain of a lack of devotion on the part of their husbands did not commence right. They should have trained their lovers.

Young ladies, my advice to you is, Be not only willing to accept the helping hand, but quietly demand it.

A little appealing helplessness goes a great way with a man.

The American Girl.

This charming product of the western world has come into great prominence of late years in literature and in foreign life, and has attained a notoriety flattering or otherwise, as the case may be. Certainly nation has been better known or more marked on the Continent or in England, not excepting the tramways and the Pullman cars. Her enterprise, her daring, her freedom from conventionality, have been the theme of the novelists and the horror of the dowagers having marriageable daughters. A coincident as the "Pride of the American girl has been quoted high, and the silliness that she has fawned with humble impecunious but noble have given her ethical standing in the world.

Whether these have been proper cases, and they have been, they have not by any means been the majority. The American girl is the product of the freedom of the home, the freedom of the family circle, the freedom of the school, the freedom to all of the healthful sports and pastimes of her native land. Freedom is the keynote of her character, and when driven into artificial ways, fights off as much discomfort as the poor fellow who is in the pitch-dark dungeon of the nonthing infantry of an Austrian fortress with wicked kind to have his full measure of light. Let her have her full freedom and she is the noblest work of God. She is a queen by right of birth, and a queen by right of her own personality. She is a queen, fighting

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

S. G. SMITH'S AFFAIRS,

TO BE INVESTIGATED BY THE COURTS.

The following appears in the New York papers to-day:

"Judge Lawrence, of the Supreme Court, has appointed Archibald C. Simmons receiver in supplementary proceedings of Stevens, G. Smith, of S. G. Smith & Brother, tea-packers, of No. 127 Water street, on the application of Edmund Pitzgibbons, a judgment creditor."

When a debtor has concealed his property to defraud those who trust him, or when it cannot be found, and when the sheriff has reported it is usual to have a receiver appointed for the management of the debtor's affairs pending an investigation in the shape of supplementary proceedings. This prevents a dishonest debtor cheating his creditors while these proceedings are in progress by disposing of his property.

Whether that is what is meant by the paragraph must of course be a matter of conjecture.

Mr. Smith is a member of the combine whose disreputable conduct, during the year and a half that they have been in power, acquired by treachery, has brought so much disgrace upon the city of Plainfield.

His name also was published in connection with a scheme recently exposed in THE NEWS and pronounced by Secretary of State Kelsey "A Swindle Pure and Simple." Smith, later, was published as claiming that he never signed his name to the call for the meeting. This, however, was two months after the publication, and not until after the exposure in THE NEWS. He has a fine residence in Plainfield, a coachman and horses, and seems to have plenty of money.

WETUMPKA'S OFFICERS.

An Election and a Banquet Last Evening.

At a meeting of Wetumpka Lodge, Knights of Honor, held last evening, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Dictator—William B. Rogers.
Vice Dictator—Louis F. VanAlstyne.
Assistant Dictator—Clifford VanSyckle.
Chaplain—Richard E. Seaman.
Reporter—John Sylvester.
Financial Secretary—Alfred E. Flower.
Treasurer—F. P. Hafner.
Guide—Andrew Stiglitz.
Trustees—R. B. Brown, George McGinnis and Eli Odam.

At the conclusion of the meeting the newly-elected officers of the lodge partook of a bountiful collation. After which Mr. Rogers of the firm of Rogers Bros., and Mr. Eli Odam, entertained the assemblage with several humorous songs, and a very pleasant evening was spent.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Henry Liefice of West Front street is expected to arrive home from Europe next week.

Mr. C. E. Boss will speak at the Memorial Chapel, at Washingtonville, on Sunday evening.

Ex-chief Engineer Stockton of the Plainfield Fire Department spent yesterday with friends in this city.

Mr. John A. Brisut, of Franklin street, Newark, has purchased a beautiful residence at Plainfield and in the future will make that his home.—Town Talk.

Mr. Peter Conde of this city has accepted an engagement to play the violin at the Albion Hotel at Asbury Park during the months of July and August.

Mrs. Lefebeau Manning died at her home on West Seventh street this morning after a short illness. Mrs. Manning's daughter, Mrs. McIntyre, is said to be dangerously ill.

Mr. Patrick Diver and Miss Annie Fitzgerald were married in St. Mary's church by the Rev. Father Smyth last evening. A reception followed at the residence of the bride.

W. O. Cone of Bound Brook, left that town last week for Denver, Colorado, where he was ordained in the Catholic Tuesday, with Mr. Bishop, late of New Market and Bound Brook, by Bishop Spalding. He will go to Pueblo, Col., to act as assistant to Rev. E. P. Newton, of Holy Trinity church.

To-Morrow's Game.

Mr. Green, the manager of the Crescents, says he has arranged with the original Acmes of New York, a very strong team, for a game Saturday. Last year they played the Crescents two games, each winning one.

Lovers of base ball will have an opportunity to-morrow afternoon to form an opinion as to the relative strength of the Crescents and West Ends, as the Crescents will play the Acmes of New York, the team which the West Ends defeated after a hard fight last Saturday.

The Crescents play at Somerville on Saturday of this week. Consequently there will be no game here that day. To-morrow the Crescents play the celebrated Acmes of New York, the same team which defeated the Crescents last season by a score of 7 to 2.

Ample provision has been made for carriages in anticipation of a large attendance at the game to-morrow.

—The butchers at W. W. Corlell's meat market on Front street, went on a strike yesterday and demanded that the proprietor discharge their foreman, Jerry Rowe, who had become obnoxious to them. Corlell refused to dismiss Rowe, and four men left.

MRS. GABLE VERY ILL.

Her Faithless Husband's Actions Greatly Distress Her.

The wife of John B. Gable, the upholsterer, who was deserted by her husband three weeks ago, that he might elope with Ida A. Avery, wife of Stationer William Avery, of Westervelt avenue, is lying in a precarious condition at her father's house. Her husband's conduct has so preyed upon her mind that she is not expected to live. She wrote a letter to him yesterday which she bade her father send to John if anything happened to her.

Gable recently sent to a friend in town a picture of himself and Mrs. Avery together. Gable wrote that he had gone to work, but that they expected to go West in a few days. The couple were then in Philadelphia. He promised to do the "right thing" by his children "some day," and said "the boys to take good care of Claude." Gable said he loved Ida better than anything else in the world."

—The strawberry festival given by the King's Daughters at No. 59 North avenue last evening was well attended and the receipts were correspondly large.

—Teachers will do well to remember the examination for first, second and third grade county certificates in the High School room at Westfield to-morrow.

—Insects are destroying the onion crop in Burlington, according to reports. On one farm a crop of 4,000 bushels has been destroyed. Those insects ought to have every month.

—A cake and candy sale for the benefit of the Kitchen Garden will be held Saturday afternoon at Miss Scribner's school building, corner of LaGrande avenue and Washington street.

—The Bible Normal class of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church conducted by Mr. C. B. Brown, meets as usual this evening from 7 to 8 o'clock. Subject: "Outlines of the Book of numbers."

—The celebration committee for the Emancipation celebration will meet to-night at No. 10 West Front street, and desire a full attendance. Prominent white citizens are co-operating to make the celebration a grand success.

—Dr. S. N. Penfield, the principal organist of the concert to be given at the Baptist church next Tuesday evening, is not only one of the most skilful of players in this country, but there are few composers whose musical productions rank higher.

—Mr. R. Thorn of No. 76 West Front street has a handsome new business wagon. Mr. Thorne's good reputation for sanitary plumbing and steam fitting is constantly increasing his business generally. His advertisement is in the usual place.

—"The Philanthropist" for June is out continuing the special work it has so well begun under the very able leadership of Mr. A. M. Powell of Plainfield. It is furnished with such a noble mission deserves to succeed. The June edition is No. 6 of Vol. VI.

—Warren H. Rice, a 16 year old North Plainfielder, issued to-day the first number of an amateur paper which he calls "Once-a-Month." It is a type-written, monthly devoted to the interests of all, and furnished by wholesale all over the country to aspiring boys generally.

—The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Maloney, who died Wednesday evening from a dose of Paris green, which she took by mistake for salts, will be taken from the residence of Mrs. James McCarthy, No. 378 West Front street, to-morrow morning at nine o'clock and from St. Mary's Catholic Church at 9:30 o'clock.

—The sentence of the court in the case of the burglar who has been doing his trade in this county, is a subject for sincere congratulation. Burglars do not fare well in this locality. They generally get sentences that entirely relieve the community of their presence for a good many years. Up-and-by thirgiving will learn to shun Union county.—Elizabeth Journal.

—We are glad to announce that a series of games has been arranged between the Crescents of Plainfield and the West fields. The dates have not yet been arranged, but they are the only things in the way, and the Crescents will soon either win or wane before or under the skillful playing of Westfield's best team. "Lay on Macduff, and cursed be he who first cries, 'Hold, enough!'"—Westfield Leader.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[In this column expressions of opinion from readers of THE NEWS are always welcomed. Communications may be on any subject whatever. Without any restriction as to the kind of matter to be published, however, and most always unless libelous or abusive, and generally for publication.]

Suggestions Respecting Ushers at Churches.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The writer and his wife visited a prominent Plainfield Church Sunday and after waiting patiently in the vestibule for some one to conduct them to a seat, were kindly invited by a gentleman to step inside, where an usher was requested to furnish seats.

This experience of waiting recalls an incident of a friend, who, with his wife, as strangers some time ago went to the same church, and, after standing in the vestibule for what seemed to them a long time, without being spoken to by any one, departed with the conviction that no strangers were wanted there. It has always since then seemed unaccountable to me that such a thing could occur in any church in Plainfield. I have now found the reason. The ushers instead of standing where they can quickly detect the presence of strangers are stationed inside the inner doors where visitors must go in search of them, unless some discerning brother, recognizing the fact that customs differ in various parts of our country, shall help them out of their difficulties by introducing them to the usher.

In the churches which my friend and myself were accustomed to attend in another State, the ushers were always stationed in the vestibule, so that the moment a stranger appeared at the threshold his presence was noticed and a seat provided.

Would it not be a good idea if the ushers were directed to watch for the new comers, rather than have the visitor search for them?

I suggest two methods. Place conspicuously this notice "To Strangers: Ushers will be Found Inside. Step in." Or select some alert brother whose special business it shall be to see that no stranger can possibly go away without being invited to a seat.

The writer is a church member who well knows that it is the earnest intention of every church in Plainfield to cordially welcome to its services all who may be influenced to attend, and it would be a source of real regret to any pastor to learn that one could come to the doors of his church and not be heartily urged to stay.

It is from a desire that nothing shall occur to injure the reputation of our churches as places where the spirit of the Lord is truly greeting shall find ways be shown, that the writer is influenced to express the above thoughts, and I close with this question: "Are all necessary means being taken to make sure that those who find their way to our church doors may easily enter and be promptly seated?"

Incorporation of a Big Company.

The Twin City Rapid Transit Company filed articles of incorporation here today with the clerk of Union county. The incorporators and stockholders are George Bliss of Morton, Bliss & Co.; George S. Coe, President of the American Exchange National Bank, New York; Henry W. Cannon and J. Kennedy Tod, New York; Charles Fairchild, Massachusetts; Thomas Lowey, Minneapolis, and ex-Congressman John Kean, Jr., President of the National State Bank, Elizabeth. The syndicate will deal in street railway bonds and stocks, and construct and operate street railways in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Their capital is placed at $20,000,000 and will begin with $1,000,000. The principal office will be in the International State Bank building in Elizabeth.

Seceders Form a New Church.

The seceders from the Fulton street Methodist Episcopal church organized a Protestant Methodist church of Elizabeth Wednesday night by the election of nine trustees and three stewards, in the German Presbyterian church, where a permanent organization will be effected by the Rev. Mr. Dyott, of the First Methodist church of Newark. The trustees elected were Messrs. J. G. Coleman, Elwood Phares, Charles Wetton, P. Heller, L. H. Woodruff, C. G. Hayes, Thomas Woodrine, H. Brooks and Samuel Mackey. A majority of these were trustees in the Fulton street church. Ninety persons signed the roll of membership. A Sunday-school was organized.

ATTACKED BY A MAD DOG.

A Farmer, His Horse and a Number of Other Animals Bitten.

A strange dog that was evidently mad has inflicted such severe injuries upon Mr. C. J. Fischer, of Round Brook, that the farmer's friends have thought best to remove him to the New York Pasteur Institute, where he is under the care of Dr. Paul Gibier for treatment for hydrophobia.

The dog which bit Mr. Fischer was a savage animal and one not known there. It came through the town Wednesday night and upon being pursued by a crowd of men and boys, took refuge in Mr. Fischer's barn. When the farmer entered his stable to rouse it out with a long handed pitchfork he found his horse unduly endeavoring to escape from the frenzied animal's attacks. The horse was plunging about the stable with the dog hanging by the teeth from its nostrils. Mr. Fischer sprang to its relief, whereupon the dog turned upon him, leaping at his face. The farmer warded off the furious beast with his arm and endeavor to split its head in two with a hatchet which he snatched up. The dog was too quick for him, however, and caught his arm at the wrist in a vise-like grip, sinking its teeth again and again into the arm. By unusual exertion Mr. Fischer succeeded in shaking off the animal, which ran out of the barn and into the yard of a neighbor, where it was shot.

There seems to be no doubt that the dog was mad, as he snapped and bit at every dog in its path as he ran through the town. Most of those animals were killed a few hours after they were bitten.

REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.

Eighty-Fifth Annual Session of the General Synod. Officers Elected.

The eighty-fifth annual session of the General Synod of the Reformed church in America opened at Asbury Park yesterday afternoon and will continue for a week or more. There were over two hundred delegates present at the afternoon session, which was held in the Reformed church. The Synod was called to order by the presiding officer, the Rev. J. Romeyn Berry, D. D., of Rhinebeck, N. Y., and the devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. E. C. Boudder, D. D., of Asbury Park. The balloting for officers resulted as follows: President, the Rev. Abram S. Kelly, D. D., of Hackensack; vice-president, Rev. C. L. Wells, D. D., of Flatbush, N. Y.; permanent clerk, Rev. Dr. TenEyck, of New York; temporary clerks, Rev. G. Z. Coller, of Thousand Islands and the Rev. W. H. DeHart, of Lodi.

The retiring president, Dr. Berry, then welcomed the new president in an appropriate speech. The Rev. Dr. Berry preached the Synodical sermon to a very large audience.

There were 50 in attendance from every part of the United States. The new appeal of the Third Reformed church of Philadelphia, which was dismissed several years ago by the Classis of Philadelphia, is expected to be heard to-day, and the discussion on the subject will be very lively.

To-day's session will be devoted to considering the advisability of uniting the branches of the Reformed Church in this country, the German Reformed Church and the Reformed Church in America. The Synod of the German Reformed Church will go into special session in Philadelphia this evening to take action on the proposed union.

Soap and Matches Trick.

[From Once a Week.]

A child delights to behold a number of matches rushing away from soap. Place some matches in a basin of water in the shape of a star. Take a piece of soap, insert it in the water in the middle of the matches and lo! they will fly from it in every direction as if in horror. If you wish to bring the matches all together again you treat them as you would children, with a lump of sugar. Only the sugar in the water and little bits of wood will come swimming to it, as though they yearned for a sip of its sweetness.

The Fair at the Methodist Church.

The storm somewhat interfered with the attendance at the fair which opened at Vincent chapel last evening, but those who braved the storm were amply repaid.

The fair will continue this evening and will probably have a large attendance.

Prof. Conde furnishes music for the occasion.

—Both the city and borough Councils will hold meetings to-night.

—The editorial excursion this year, as already stated in these columns, starts on Monday, June 22, and goes to Washington, and from thence passing Alexandria, Manassas, Culpeper, Gordonsville, crossing Blue Ridge and reaching White Sulphur Springs early Tuesday evening, where the two following days will be spent. The party will start on the return journey on Friday morning, reaching Luray in time for a visit to the famous cave. The cost of the excursion including all expenses, is $25. Those residing in Middlesex, Union and Somerset counties should apply for tickets to Hon. L. H. Dyer, Rahway. The sale of tickets closes positively on June 17, and we advise all who can to embrace the opportunity.

LONDON, England, June 5th. (Special)—The prosecution in the Sir William Gordon Cummings and Prince of Wales, etc., baccarrat case closed to-day.

MALWITH GETS TWENTY YEARS.

The Burglar Captured in Summit by Detective Kelly Severely Dealt With.

At Elizabeth Wednesday Joseph Malwith, the burglar who was captured by Detective Edward B. Kelly at Summit a short time ago after having committed thefts in Rahway, Westfield and Summit and who was convicted on four counts, was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment.

Judge Rice, of the Middlesex county courts, in passing sentence upon Malwith said liberty to him was a threat of evil to the peaceful citizens of the community. His character for desperate undertakings and the tools found upon him were such that murder followed in his footsteps. Therefore he did not hesitate to impose upon him the heavy sentence given.

The Union County Grand Jury for May term, before adjourning, adopted the following resolution, which has been forwarded to Detective Kelly with a certificate of attestation by Frank H. Dunn, Clerk of the Grand Inquest:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Grand Jury of the county of Union be tendered to the inhabitants of said county are due to Edward S. Kelly for his able and efficient services in capturing Joseph Malwith, who has burglariously entered the residences of many of said inhabitants during the past month.

Malwith is supposed to have burglarized several residences in this vicinity. In Mrs. Smith's residence in Rahway, which was stolen from her residence here was found in his possession when he was arrested by Detective Kelly.

Examine Your Buggy Seats.

According to the Sunday Call the Newark liveryman have a plan by which young men who like to drive are made to suffer. It is uncertain whether the Plainfield liverymen have adopted the plan or not.

The device is so planned that the young man who hires a buggy to drive a certain distance and returns within the trip to some more distant point, will be surprised upon reaching the livery stable to find that the owner of the rig is aware of the deception practiced, and is ready to charge for it. The young man may say that he has been no further than Dunellen, but the stable keeper can refute the statement with documentary evidence. This is how it is done. The stable keeper is a member of a home owners' protective association. Secreted under the seats of every one of his buggies or other carriages is a little box secured to the wood of the seat with screws and locked with a key which he alone possesses. In the side of this concealed box is a slot through which a card can be pushed into the box. The young man who hires a horse to go to Dunellen, pushes on to Round Brook, or some other point, and tells his horse at each of these points. The owner of the hotel is a member of the protective association, and his horse keeper is a member of the association. The cards into the card receiver of each buggy stopping at the stable, and if the driver tells the truth regarding the card about the condition of the horse and carriage. When the horse comes back to the home stable the card which is quickly examined and the owner of the hotel sees just where the horse has been. Each member of the association has a number, and this number is branded on the left fore foot of each horse.

The Boston Herald (Ind. Dem.) says that President Harrison comes home with a reputation as a pleasant public speaker likely to rival that of Chauncey M. Depew himself.

There is no doubt that Baron Hirsch and other millionaire Hebrews will found a colony for the oppressed Jews now being driven away from Russia. The colony will either be in Australia or South America. It ought by good rights to be Palestine. Palestine belongs to the Jews and the Jews belong to Palestine. With the money at their command the sons of this ancient people could make the land fertile and smiling once more, and bring it back to its former glory. The sultan might sell out cheap, and we should once again have a Jewish country.

The edict of the Italian government restraining emigration is not issued by way of shying a stone at the United States. The government circular prohibits minors from leaving the kingdom if they are unaccompanied by parents or guardians. Minors eighteen years of age will not be permitted to leave except by permit from the minister of war. This is done for military reasons. The young men eighteen years of age are wanted for the military reserves. The army of Italy 700,000 strong, must not be allowed to go down.

Open on Sunday.

After a struggle of ten years the doors of the Metropolitan museum in Central park, New York, have been thrown open to the public between the hours of 1 p. m. and sunset on Sunday. The high minded and far away trustees of the institution held out against the innovation for a long time, because they did not wish to seem to be yielding to "popular clamor." If this was their only reason every one of them ought to be bounced from their high and mighty places. Popular clamor indeed! What, pray, is popular clamor but the voice of the great people itself—that people who in a republic create trustees and public officials of every kind? In this country there is no higher will or rule than just the voice of this same people—"popular clamor," as the lofty trustees express it. A more silly or absurd statement was never made than that.

A reasonable person can understand and respect the state of mind of an individual who has conscientious scruples against the opening of picture galleries and other places of recreation on Sunday, but one who refuses to do a thing just because the majority of the people want it done can only be characterized as stupid and obstinate, and nothing else, especially when he is the custodian of a building created and maintained by the state for the benefit of these same people.

However, popular clamor or no clamor, the great and rich collection of art works will for the present be opened to the throngs of working people, who with their children take their little outings in Central park on Sunday afternoons. They will see in the beautiful Metropolitan museum the best representations of modern art and some mummies of old Egypt besides.

The People's Party.

Born in Cincinnati in May, 1891. Thirty-four states and territories sent 2,417 delegates to boom it.

The infant grows as the aims and objects of its advent into the world the following: It will work for, among other things, the abolition of national banks as banks of issue, and the issue by the United States of legal tender treasury notes instead of bank notes, also for the establishment of the sub-treasury loan system. It calls for free and unlimited coinage of silver, and the prohibition of alien ownership of land in the United States.

It calls for a graduated income tax, and demands national control of railroads, steamboats, ferries and omnibus and stage lines. If rigid government control does not correct the abuses that have grown up around our methods of travel and transportation, then the government shall possess and own out and out railroads and other means for moving about this country. Lands owned by railroads shall be limited to those in actual use, and all others shall be taken from them and bestowed on bona fide settlers. Next it wants the election of president, vice president and United States senators by direct vote of the people, and eight hours for a day's work. It condemns in unmeasured terms the action of the World's fair directors in refusing the minimum scale of wages asked for by the Chicago labor organizations.

By way of glittering generalities it recommends universal suffrage to the favorable consideration of the states and territories, equal taxation, so that one class shall not be built up at the expense of another, and that all public revenues shall be limited to actual expenditures and shall be honestly and economically administered. Finally first, last and always it demands the issue of more legal tender treasury notes—no end of legal tender treasury notes.

THE CHIPS WERE WALES

A Damaging Statement Made About the Prince.

SYMPATHY IS WITH SIR WILLIAM

It Begins to Look as Though He May Make It Warm for His Erstwhile Royal Friend Before the Notorious Baccarat Trial Is Over.

LONDON, June 5.—From the recent testimony it appears that the game of baccarat is indirectly aiming to the happiness of the future king of Great Britain and Ireland and emperor of India. During the cross-examination of young Mr. Wilson the fact was brought out that the counters used in the game at Tranby Croft belonged to his highness. The counters are about two inches wide and are used in the houses of his country friends who are not supposed to have counters. It is also evident that Gordon Cumming is getting somewhat tired of being the under dog all the time, and intends to make it uncomfortable for his whilom chum—the prince. Doubtless some racy facts will be brought out before the end of the trial, for the accused baronet is said to be revenged on the prince and young Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson.

The Royal Basket on Hand.

The royal basket was promptly on time and took his accustomed place. Mr. Arthur Stanley Wilson's cross-examination was continued. Replying to the questions of Sir Edward Clarke, the solicitor general for the defense for the plaintiff, Mr. Wilson said: "When I gave the order to change the tables after the disclosures of the first night's play I was ready to stake my life that Sir William Gordon Cumming cheated. I said my mother sat down to play on the second night, Sept. 9, believing that the chalk line which we had marked on the table would prevent any further attempt to cheat."

"And not a word was said to the plaintiff about it?" asked Sir Edward, in apparent surprise.

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Wilson sharply. "What was my word against that of Sir William Gordon Cumming?"

It Would Have Had a Result.

Continuing, the witness said: "On the second night I first noticed that there was something wrong with Sir William twenty minutes after the beginning of the play. Lady Coventry was sitting between the plaintiff and General Owen Williams. I sat around the corner. The plaintiff did not put his hands over the line until he knew that his own side had won, and then he put over a ten pound counter, making his stake fifteen pounds instead of five pounds."

"Then, why did you not say to Sir William, you only staked five pounds?"

"Because there were ladies present, and it would have been an ungentlemanly thing to have had a row before them."

"And," continued the solicitor general, "you went on staking your money after seeing the plaintiff cheat?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Wilson, coolly. He denied that he shared the plaintiff's winnings.

Sir William's Winnings.

Mr. Wilson generally qualified his answers with "I fancy" or "it is probable." He fancied his royal highness drew the chalk line on the table specially provided to prevent Gordon Cumming from cheating. The witness, who sat on the same side of the table as Gordon Cumming and was the best gentleman, stacked much smaller sums than his neighbor, for while they were thus both in the same tableau, Wilson won £89 in two nights against Sir William's £225.

Berkeley Levett Testifies.

Berkeley Levett, who looks quite seven years younger than his certificated age, evidently felt keenly the position in which he stood with regard to his brother officer; but after a few preliminary interrogatories he gave his answers with quiet distinctness. He was as certain as Wilson of the cheating of Sir William's actions, and demonstrated the alleged modus operandi of the plaintiff. He contradicted Sir William's account of the Sunday interview, asserting that when Sir William said "Good," what he saw him do at Tranby Croft, instead of replying "something," he answered "nothing counters." He only referred to the first night, for he noticed nothing wrong in the play on the marked table, although he sat immediately opposite his brother officer.

Another new point elicited was in relation to that interview, Levett saying that in the conversation, as to the decision to watch the play, Sir William asked, "Did it never enter into you head to warn me?" It was expected that Gresh would prove a bad witness for Sir William, but he did not come up to expectations. It afforded some amusement, for he apparently remembered nothing clearly. Everybody grinned when, in answer to Mr. Gill, the witness said his occupation was master of the hounds.

A Good Witness for Cumming.

Much surprise was manifested when Gresh said that he could not recall what were the specific acts of cheating alleged by his brother-in-law against Cumming. There was more surprise when Green said he had no recollection of them. Then Lord Coleridge reminded the witness that his brother-in-law had so testified. It made no difference to Green, he could not recollect. Thereupon Gill, Q. C., declared Green made rather a good witness for Cumming.

Sir William Taught Her Baccarat.

Mrs. Green was under cross-examination when the court adjourned. She told nothing new about the play after she had told her counsel (Russell) that Sir William had taught her baccarat in 1886. She said she had told every fashionable in relation of his ill Yorkshire, and still had a great regard for that relation. This was intended to show the jury that she had no animus against Cumming. Perhaps the jury will so believe. In fact, they will be compelled to do so unless Cumming can prove conspiracy; and it does not seem as if he would resort to this.

A Bad Outlook for the Plaintiff.

The jury does not know, but it is well known in Cumming's circle, that he was not asked to Wilson's as a friend of the host, but because the host and the Prince of Wales' party, which made an invitation to him compulsory. Unless Cumming introduces some new element into the case, the jury are almost bound to find a verdict against him, or to disagree, for it is a case of five to one. And in an English court of justice the five are certain to win, unless their reputation be impugned, and nothing of the sort has been attempted in this case yet. Public sympathy is altogether with Cumming.

Attorney Gillis Expostulates.

The plaintiff is a much better looking man than Mr. Gill, and he has a better address. His manner, collectively however, was obnoxious and he lost a friend or two a month and child with those who heard him. The counsel and worry which the baronet has suffered are beginning to leave their traces on his face. Outside of the immediate entourage of the Prince of Wales and of the Wilsons the public feeling against the plaintiff does not make no secret of the fact that their sympathy is with Sir William Gordon Cumming, though it is difficult for them to explain their sympathy for this personage.

Mr. Gill, who appears with the solicitor general for Cumming, said during the day, in an aside intended for the jury, that the case was one which could be decided on the surface. Many believe this, but that it is susceptible of proof is doubtful, apparently.

They Will Not Like It.

The Prince of Wales has been in court every day this week from the opening until the adjournment. When he enters the counsel rise and bow, the jury rise and everybody. The prince returns the bow and sits, then all sit.

The testimony taken yesterday brought out the first really important disclosure in regard to the prince, for it is admitted on all sides that the more conservative and religious subjects of the queen will be far from pleased to hear that the heir apparent has been in the habit of carrying a baccarat set about with him while paying visits to the country houses of his friends.

Thus far all of the defendants that have testified have substantially agreed upon the manner of Sir William's alleged cheating.

CUMMING'S BROTHER TALKS.

He Says St. Vitus Dance May Have Misled the Defendants.

BALTIMORE, June 5.—Arthur Penrose Gordon Cumming, brother of Sir William, has lived in Maryland for the past twelve years as a country gentleman, surrounded by all the luxuries of life. He resides with his wife in Carroll county, about forty miles from Baltimore. He has received several letters from Sir William, in which the latter denies the charges in his brilliance of the alleged baccarat cheating, and says he will fight the matter to the bitter end.

Mr. Gordon Cumming, referring to his brother's alleged mode of play, says that Sir William has since early youth been afflicted with a slight touch of St. Vitus' dance, inherited from the mother, which caused Sir William to exhibit a nervousness of the hands. When playing at cards Sir William usually plays very shy with his chips. Mr. Gordon Cumming thinks that those who accused his brother of cheating thus deceived themselves. He speaks of the Wilsons as very common people and of Berkeley Levett as a "cad." Concerning the signing of the famous contract by Sir William, his brother says it was done solely that there would be no expose of the Prince of Wales' exorbitant gambling.

WHAT BULKELEY THINKS.

He Has No Idea of Calling a Special Session.

HARTFORD, June 5.—Governor Bulkeley after reading the full text of the opinion of the supreme court in regard to the "tax" ballots said that he did not know what effect the opinion would have on the ouo warranto suits. As to what the senate would do in view of the decision, the governor thought it was safe to say that they would not call it up.

He was, however, confident that they would take one of the two courses opened by the house to supply the state institutions with money, either by passing the appropriation bills or repealing the special appropriation acts and allow the state institutions to be supplied with money from the general appropriation bill. They are allowed funds by the general statute.

On one point the governor was very emphatic. He had no idea of calling a special session of the legislature in any event. The decision, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding,

Much less would he try to call the house back, for it couldn't be called back. And as for a special session, even if it were well for other reasons to try and call it, it could do nothing with the election question, for that was now pending before the regular session of the general assembly.

Democratic party managers say they will continue the fight.

Suspended Ministers Speak.

The Reformed Church Synod.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 5.—The session of the annual synod of the Reformed Church in America was the most recall what were the specific acts of cheating alleged by his brother-in-law against Cumming. There was more surprise when Green said he had no recollection of them. Then Lord Coleridge reminded the witness that his brother-in-law had so testified. It made no difference to Green, he could not recollect. Thereupon Gill, Q. C., declared Green made rather a good witness for Cumming.

Sir William Taught Her Baccarat.

Mrs. Green was under cross-examination when the court adjourned. She told nothing new about the play after she had told her counsel (Russell) that Sir William had taught her baccarat in 1886. She said she had

MARSH NOT FAR AWAY.

A Man Who Says He Is Hiding at Thurlow.

TO INVESTIGATE THE CONTROLLER.

The Philadelphia Common Council Want President Harrison to Look Into the Treasury's Action in Regard to the Defunct Keystone National Bank.

PHILADELPHIA, June 5.—Gideon Marsh, the fugitive president of the Keystone bank, is said to be hiding within a few miles of this city, and while the detectives have been scouring the country for him and were watching the departing ocean steamers for South American ports, Marsh has remained snugly hidden away near at hand to the scene of his crime. So asserts Francis W. Lawrence, a reputable citizen of Thurlow, Chester county, who claims to have traced Marsh to his late. Lawrence has, however, been carefully guarding his secret, and so much time has been lost since he discovered Marsh's hiding place in making it known to the authorities that he may have again escaped and sought a new refuge.

According to Lawrence's story, and there is no reason to doubt its truth, Marsh has been in hiding all this time within two miles of the Highland House at Thurlow, the place to which he was traced on the Saturday before his flight was made known. Forced to fly from that refuge by the fear that he would be discovered by the reporters who haunted the vicinity of the house, or that it would be searched by the officers, Lawrence claims that Marsh left the Highland House and took up quarters elsewhere. The new hiding place is at Linwood, two miles further down the river from the Highland House, and here he has been repeatedly seen during the past few days. A warrant has been issued for Marsh's arrest and Lawrence deputized as a constable with power to serve it.

They Want the Controller Investigated.

City councils have adopted a resolution asking the mayor to request the president to have a thorough investigation made into the action of the treasury department with regard to the Keystone National bank, and that the controller of the currency be requested to appear before the committee of councils appointed to investigate the Keystone bank, and also that the receiver of the bank be directed to permit the committee to have access to the books and records of the bank. Resolutions were also adopted requesting the mayor to offer $5,000 reward for the apprehension of President Marsh, and requesting the city solicitor to institute proceedings to have a receiver appointed to take charge of the property of John Bardsley.

Loss of $900,000 in Notes.

For some time past the auditors of the city controller's office have been at work preparing a statement of the taxes due the city by delinquent property owners.

The statement has been completed for the years 1889 to 1890 inclusive, and shows that the city has been carrying on its books as assets claims amounting to nearly $1,000,000, most of which are absolutely worthless. Prior to 1889 there was no systematic bookkeeping in vogue, and the proper returns were not made to the controller.

Bardsley Short Here, Too.

Among the delinquent taxpayers is ex-City Treasurer Bardsley, who figures on the city's debtor list to the amount of over $11,000. In the select council a resolution was introduced reciting that the apparent amount of uncollectable taxes was over $4,000,000 and providing for an investigation into the manner in which the law for the collection of delinquent taxes is executed. After a long discussion of the resolution it was then referred to the law committee.

HE WANTS TO BE EXCUSED.

Ex-Senator Ingalls Declines to Be Mr. Harrison's "Clerk."

ATCHISON, Kan., June 5.—Ex-Senator Ingalls was asked by a reporter today if there was any truth in the report that there is a tendency of the new cabinet secretary of the interior. Waving himself up to his full height and looking through his eyeglasses at the inquirer, he said:

"My dear sir, I am going to old to go to Washington to be a private clerk to Harrison."

Waller Holds the Fort.

HARRISBURG, June 5.—Attorney General Hensel and Professor Snyder had another conference with Dr. Waller at the department of public instruction. Professor Snyder made a formal demand for the office, which Dr. Waller declined to surrender. Professor Snyder was nominated by Governor Pattison to be superintendent of public instruction, but the senate refused to confirm the nomination. Since the adjournment of the legislature the governor appointed Professor Snyder to the office, and issued his commission, but Dr. Waller refused to vacate.

Mooney Defeats Murphy.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 5.—A large crowd attended the shooting match at Hollywood park today between James G. Edgar Murphy, of New York, and Captain A. W. Mooney, of London. The match was for $1,000 a side and the conditions were a hundred birds each at thirty yards rise, with a twenty-one yards boundary line, the use of both barrels being allowed. Fifty $25,000 were wagered on the result. Mooney won by a score of 97 to Murphy's 93 killed. Mooney also made the heaviest run, killing twenty-one birds in succession.

In Opposition to the Standard.

BRADFORD, Pa., June 5.—The Producers' Protective association was in session all of yesterday. Last night the convention adjourned to 8 p. m. today, and the executive committee of the association immediately held a session. It is given out that the association will apply for a charter to produce, refine, pipe and market crude petroleum. The capital stock of the concern will be $600,000.

Schole Must Die.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 5.—Joseph Schole, who shot and killed Constable Drake in New Canaan in 1889, and who is to pay the death penalty on June 26, was informed yesterday morning by his spiritual advisers that the board of pardons had refused to commute his sentence to life imprisonment. The condemned man was completely overcome by the news and wept bitterly.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv

WHERE DID COLUMBUS LAND?

What Is the Question as Now Disputed by Many Savants.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The Weed Rose steamer Santa Maria, which has been engaging for the Behama islands, recreate a novel expedition organized by the Chicago Herald. The expedition is composed of Walter Wellman, the Herald's Washington bureau chief of the Herald, in command; Charles Ledyer, the artist of The Herald; a photographer, a mechanic and two servants. It left the Manhattan yacht club, and it these charters a vessel and makes a cruise of the islands thereabouts, following as nearly as possible the track which Christopher Columbus sailed on his first voyage to America. The object of the expedition is to discover the spot upon which Columbus made his first landing on the shores of the new world, and there to erect a monument in honor of the great discoverer. The mystery as to the actual landing spot has never been solved.

The only possible evidence available is that left by Columbus himself in his journal, which was copied in part by his friend, Bishop Las Casas, after Columbus' death. The original manuscript has disappeared. Columbus named the island he first visited San Salvador, and he described it as being low and level, and containing a large lagoon in the middle. Historians and geographers have selected no fewer than five islands as the San Salvador of Columbus' story. Some have said pamphlets have been written in support of various theories, but no one has ever done that which the Chicago Herald expedition was organized to do—take the journal of Columbus. The expedition goes without a theory, but with a determination to seek the truth.

It is believed this is the only manner in which the vexed question of the spot on which occurred the most tremendous event of history can be settled, and the expedition will spare no trouble or expense in its solution. If successful in locating the spot where Columbus first erected his standard in token possession of the land in the name of Ferdinand and Isabella, the expedition will there erect a handsome monument provided by the Chicago Herald. It will also bring back with it many interesting documents and copies of the leading daily newspapers of the United States. The expedition has been carefully organized. Walter Wellman, the commanding officer, is a writer of wide reputation and great experience in all fields of journalism.

A BILLION DOLLAR COUNTRY.

Secretary Foster Talks About Recent Appropriations and Finance.

BROOKLYN, June 5.—Secretary Foster was the guest of the Union League club, of Brooklyn, last evening. He spoke in part as follows:

"Our Democratic friends have had a good deal to say of late about the billion dollar congress. The late exculency, Grover Cleveland, would seem to be troubled on this score also. These gentlemen forget all the while that this is a billion dollar country. [Applause.] Congress did make large appropriations for pensions and for all kinds of public service. In no case, do I think, so far as these appropriations are concerned, were they greater than the necessity called for. I am not defending the appropriations. Some of them I would not defend. But every move we make our Democratic friends seem to think indicates poverty in the treasury department.

Recently I thought it wise and prudent to propose an extension of the 4½ per cent. bonds. The treasury department is abundantly able to pay these bonds when they mature. In view of the fact that $20,000,000 in gold had been exported within a short period of time, I deemed it timelse to do anything to reduce the volume of currency in the national banks. It occurred to me also that if we extended these bonds at a satisfactory rate of interest, say at the rate of 2 per cent., the bankers would buy the balance of these bonds and use it as a basis for additional currency. My prediction today is that the bonds may be extended at the rate of 2 per cent. The interest they will bear a premium, a condition of credit that exists nowhere in the world besides."

Mysterious Murder at Danbury.

DANBURY, Conn., June 5.—The body of an unknown man, who from appearances had been fourty days dead, was found in a secluded portion of the farm of Benjamin Lyons yesterday just outside the city limits. Around the back of the victim's head was a long, ugly gash, evidently caused by a blow with some heavy instrument. Several articles were found near the body which led to the belief that the police have as part of the goods stolen from Wilson's store, which was robbed in Mill Plain Tuesday night. The theory is that the man murdered was one of the burglars and that he was killed by his companions during a quarrel over the division of the booty.

Sheehan for Lieutenant Governor.

BUFFALO, June 5.—The Inquirer (Dem.) says that Republicans and Democrats alike are interested in the report that Speaker Sheehan will resign the leadership of the Democratic state committee and advocate the nomination of the able young Democratic leader from that committee will be equivalent to the announcement that he is to be his party's candidate for the office of lieutenant governor. No candidate for state office can act on the state committee. All of Mr. Sheehan's friends confidently expect that he will receive the nomination for lieutenant governor, and while Mr Sheehan says nothing, it is generally understood that he will accept."

The Premier's Condition.

OTTAWA, June 5.—After the consultation last night Sir James Grant said that it had been decided to telegraph for Dr. George Johnson, of Montreal, at the request of relatives and the members of the house of commons. He said there was not any change in the premier's condition. People generally, however, were hopeful and had taken a very encouraging and hopeful view from the nature of recent bulletins, but in this they were mistaken. Sir John's condition is not improved. His pulse is very feeble, and I think he is weaker than at any time since his illness.

The Delamaters' Plea.

HARRISBURG, June 5.—The appeal of the Delamaters for a change of venue from the court of Crawford county was argued before the supreme court. Counsel for the Delamaters claimed that so much prejudice existed in Crawford county against their clients that they could not have a fair and impartial trial. District Attorney Dean denied these allegations, and in support of his assertion presented the affidavits of more than 300 residents of Crawford county. The court reserved its decision.

Blaine at Bar Harbor.

BAR HARBOR, Me., June 5.—Secretary and Mrs. Blaine have arrived at Bar Harbor and were immediately driven to their cottage. They have spent the past two days with Senator Hale at his home in Ellsworth.

POLE VAULTING.

Malcolm W. Ford Describes a Popular and Simple Sport.

HOW TO BECOME AN EXPERT AT IT

A Lively Brain Is More Necessary Than a Particularly Athletic Body—The Best Records—How to Handle the Pole. Dangers of the Game.

Pole vaulting is a game which strikes the average spectator as being unusually exciting. To do it well an athlete must have plenty of science, for it is a combination of a little strength of arm, a little spring in jumping and a little speed in running. A champion at it need not be very strong, speedy or active, but he must have the ability to use what athletic talent he has to the best advantage. The game looks difficult, but in reality it is very simple. Any ordinary man, after a month's practice, should clear in the neighborhood of 9 feet. The average scratch competition at it is won between 10 feet and 10 ft. 6 in. There are only about a dozen athletes in the whole world who have cleared between 10 ft. 6 and 11 feet, and only four men, record who have cleared over 11 feet are E. L. Stones and Thomas Ray, of England, and H. H. Baxter, of America. Stones holds of oak or hickory or any strong wood that is not too heavy. Spruce and pine have the merits of weight, as it is light, but they are too brittle. A pole 12 ft. 6 in. long that is 1½ inches in diameter at the handle and tapers evenly to the top is a good all-around record.

A beginner at the game is not to be appalled at clearing even such a height as 6 feet, his arms are strong enough for that, and he looks as perfectly at ease that he generally sprawls over the ground when taking any form. The best position for a novice is to get a good length for the pole, about between 12 and 14 feet in length and about 1½ inches in diameter at the thickest part, which should be two feet from the top. They grow a little toward the ends. It should be then sent in some cases on account of their lightness, but unless they are extra large they are quite likely to break when an extra touch is put on them.

Athletes should take extra care never to use a pole too light for them. The fact that many athletes do use poles that are too small is no reason why the common should not be condemned. Several cases of death have occurred by the poles breaking and the pole in piercing the athlete's body, and broken arms and fractured ribs have been numerous. If the beginner acquires the habit of using a strong, heavy pole he will find that he will have no inclination to use a light one, on account of his losing confidence by doing so.

The first trial at the game should consist in jumping a height which can be easily cleared. If the beginner is in a gymnasium he should use a pole with a spike in the end, and stick it on a block provided for the purpose underneath the bar to save the floor from injury, and also to give the athlete a better hold. If out of doors he should dig a hold in the dirt right underneath the bar, putting the end of his pole, which should be blunt, in the hole, which should not be over 6 inches deep. After accustoming himself to the exercise, and getting a little skill in lifting with his arms when in the air, he may go a little higher, but under no consideration should he try to clear a height where he must use so much force that he loses control of himself.

The accompanying illustrations show very well the salient features of the game, and one can judge how far apart the arms should be on the pole, what sort of grip should be used and how the body must be handled while in the air. "Rising to the Bar" shows an athlete with his hands about three feet apart, and before he can clear it he must lift a good deal with his arms. A forward swing must then take place so as not only to carry the body over the pole, but to carry the pole over the bar. "Dropping the Pole" shows the position of the athlete when he has reached the highest point of his jump

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, JUNE 6, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE EIGHTEENTH MEETING IN FIVE MONTHS.

The "Combine" Ranking Through Franchises all for the Benefit of Mr. Low of Kingston, Regardless of Repeated Protests.—The Minority Without Avail Use all Parliamentary Methods to Protect the City.—The Matter will Probably be Carried to the Courts and the Combine Restrained as Usual.

The City Common Council met in adjourned session last evening. When the meeting was called to order at nine o'clock, the President and Councilmen Ackerman, Bedell, Scheerer, Hetfield, Moffett, Rushmore, Roberts, Ike and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

Mr. Ullman was absent.

Mr. Spangenberg moved that the reading of the minutes be dispensed with.

Mr. Ackerman objected and moved to amend the motion by having the minutes read. A vote was taken on Mr. Ackerman's motion, and it was carried.

The president then stated that the clerk had not the minutes prepared and consequently could not read them.

Mr. Moffett moved to adjourn. The motion was lost by a vote of five to four. Mr. Hetfield being elected with Mr. Low to one of the Committee's rooms.

Mr. Low is the individual to whom the combine are trying to give a sewerage franchise, the terms of which the people are not permitted to know anything about.

Mr. Spangenberg moved the regular order of business be suspended.

Mr. Ackerman moved to amend the motion by following the order of business.

The amendment was carried by a vote of five to four, Mr. Gallup voting with the Republicans.

Mr. Hetfield presented the petition, together with the plans, etc., of J. M. Low of Kingston, N. Y., asking for a franchise to enable him to establish a system of sewerage in the city of Plainfield.

The clerk read the document, which covered about seventy-five pages of legal cap paper.

The petition called for the granting of a fifty years franchise, giving the privilege to be charged private and public houses for the use of sewerage system.

Mr. Ackerman moved that the communication be referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances.

Mr. Ackerman called for the ayes and nays on his motion.

The clerk called the roll and the motion was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Ackerman then moved that the document be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Hetfield asked what object he had in making the motion.

Mr. Ackerman replied he thought it no more than right to refer it to the Committee in order to give the minority a chance to carefully examine it. Continuing he said: "We were given a copy of this a short time ago, and I, for one, since then the document has been changed materially, and I think we should have time to examine it. I now call for the ayes and nays on my motion."

The clerk called the roll and Mr. Ackerman's motion was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield moved to amend the specifications where the word "contractors" appeared to make it read "The Plainfield Sewerage Company."

Mr. Ackerman moved to amend Mr. Hetfield's motion by laying it on the table.

Mr. Rushmore was of the opinion that the matter should be laid over for a week in the interest of order to give the minority a chance to examine it. He said: "The contract was only completed a short time, the original one and are different from the one now being considered by Council. So much so that we cannot be expected to take in all the points at a single reading. It is right and proper and much more than just that we should be given the chance asked for."

The motion was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the terms of the agreement be approved and that the Mayor and Clerk in behalf of the city be instructed to enter into a contract with J. M. Low for the construction of a system of sewerage.

Mr. Ackerman moved to return the contract to Mr. Low for correction in the interest of the city. He said that several important amendments should be made on pages 3 and 15.

Mr. Rushmore said he is not a question which requires more thought than the matter of sewerage. And when we take into consideration the letter from the Mayor and also the letter from the State Board of Health, I think we should go slow in the matter. Why should we vote for the contract to-night? Why should we rush an important matter through at the present meeting? It would give rise to unpleasant comment. I, for one, object to being rushed into it. It is entirely out of order. Just think of it, that we should give out a contract without a part of the Council knowing about.

Mr. Hetfield—"We are not pushing the matter through. We have labored over the question for a year past. We spent days and nights on the matter. The contract is virtually in the hands of the men in possession of the other members of Council. They have had it in their possession several days. We have had the matter before us for months, and all that have been made are not material. The committee are satisfied with the contract. I say that is it just what we want. There has been a good deal of time lost. If some gentleman in the committee are willing to shoulder the responsibility of this thing. It is ridiculous for us to delay it. If the members of the other side of the house had any amendments to make they should have offered them with the contract when it should be approved."

Mr. Ackerman—"Did I understand the gentleman correctly to say if the contract had been ready last Tuesday evening, we would have been given three days' time to look it over?"

Mr. Hetfield did not answer Mr. Ackerman's question.

The motion to refer the matter back for correction was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Rushmore—"If the contract had been ready to be placed before the Council last Tuesday, I do not think we would have been given three or four days to examine it. I certainly thought it was ready. In fact they were surprised to find out that it was not. Mr. Hetfield said it was ready, and I was about to make we should have offered them. I would like to ask any gentleman in the committee how much time he had to do it in. We were given no time whatever. It strikes me in so absolutely out of order, so entirely devoid of responsibility."

Mr. Hetfield—"I call the gentleman to order."

Mr. Rushmore—"I said it strikes me so. Continuing he then said "that I hope the motion will not prevail."

The president then called for the ayes and nays on the motion. Before voting Mr. Ackerman addressed the Council as follows:

Mr. President:

I do not support the clearness of a motion to vote upon the contract.

The introduction of this ordinance and ordinance to provide the city with a private system of sewerage was made in open session of the city. At that time during the business of the Council and also in conference, we have had figures and estimates of what it would cost the city of sewerage, but when we leave the sewerage question and come to consider the contemplated organization or whatever it may be, it is time to take a step backward and consider the matter well before there is a likelihood of such ordinance becoming a law.

As our able executive stated a few weeks ago, no more important matter could be brought to the attention of any municipal body than this subject of sewerage. It affects the well being of a city more than anything else in the community. Improperly managed, they may become a breeder of disease, a curse instead of a blessing. Before the reputation of the municipality. The very fact that this matter is of such vital importance only emphasizes the necessity of approaching the matter with extreme caution, and every fact relating thereto should be most closely examined, and only adopted after the fullest consideration.

That party lines should for a moment divide Councilmen upon the consideration of this important proposition, and all should agree to consider the matter with that gravity that the occasion demands.

We should also remember that the consumption or having a sewerage system in our city does not date to-day, with the fact that we are considering the advisability of doing something that is to last not a day, a month, or a year, but by granting a franchise to a private corporation, we set in motion forces, the consequences whereof we may be compelled to submit to for many years to come. In considering this question, we as representatives of the people are on the eyesore of all eyes, and as we handle like a precious subject so will we be judged, but at the present time, owing to circumstances which do not need explanation, I would seem to me to be inexpedient to think of granting a franchise to anyone.

Further it can be urged that because we are to have water works in our city that sewerage works are a "sine qua non", and that unless the latter are at once provided the former will prove of no effort, for statistics prove and I am indebted to the Manual of American Water Works for the information—that 61 cities in the United States, having a population of 10,000 or over, have for a number of years operated water works without the introduction of works to carry off the sewerage.

Commercial Supremacy of the Future.

The development of the internal commerce of the United States has been such that in one year nearly three times as great a tonnage of freight passes through the Detroit river as through the Suez canal. Mr. Ulysses D. Eddy mentions this fact in a paper in The Forum, in which he discusses the probability that the future commercial supremacy of the world will pass to the United States and remain. He gives the reasons why we are to expect this, also the obstacles that are to be overcome before we thus secure it.

Already we are the greatest iron and steel producing nation on the globe. England has fallen to second place. Even in the matter of ship building, during 1890 our construction increased 25 per cent., while that of Great Britain diminished slightly.

Our time heretofore on this continent has been spent in subduing the virgin soil and getting ready for work. We have had too much to do at home to make a long and a strong reach out after the world's commerce. We have now come to that point where we can do so, and must do so. The people are awakening to the necessity of this. The first sign of it is seen in the general desire for a navy, which is always necessary to protect a commercial nation. Another sign of it is the general idea that the control of the Nicaragua canal must belong to the United States. Another strong sign of the times is the reciprocity treaties which are springing up thick and fast around the American state administration.

On the other hand, standing in the way of our advancement toward commercial supremacy, is the fact that heretofore we have made no effort to get foreign trade, allowing it to slip through our fingers into the hands of other nations, Great Britain especially. Last year our whole country exported not quite $900,000,000 worth of goods, which seems a large sum till we find that the little kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland alone exported over $1,500,000,000 worth, and that more than a billion dollars of this was manufactured goods.

Other barriers to commercial supremacy are declared to be our tariff system and our banking system, which last Mr. Eddy pronounces a poor channel for financing foreign trade. He also considers that the limited silver coinage and the consequent establishing of the silver standard would work to our injury in extending our trade among foreign nations. Finally:

The fruits of victory are worth considering. We shall have a trade that will fill the country with foreign gold, and overpay the distribution and climatic differences of the world's markets these need be no periods of idleness for workmen. The blandishments of fashion to destroy our exports of petroleum to the eastern hemisphere; our shipments of lumber and cotton reduced from exhaustion of our forests; experts tell us that our food exports steadily decline, and that by the end of the century we shall need nearly all our wheat for home consumption. As a result of the campaign this void will be filled by shipments of a wonderful variety of merchandise in which the smallest part of the value is that of the raw material, the greatest, that of skilled and intelligent labor.

Great Britain sold in 1890 more than $800,000,000 worth of goods produced by her operatives, while we sold but $13,000,000 worth. With the transfer of commercial supremacy much of this valuable and profitable trade would come to us. The steadily increasing importance of New York as an international financial center will be stimulated, and the first European war will see the transfer of the world's surplus capital from London to New York. Then we shall, if we remain financially spotless and trustworthy, become the world's savings bank and safe deposit.

The New York Tribune calls for a systematic course of physical training at West Point, and remarks that such training is the greatest need of the national military school today. There must be something in it, or the straight, slim young men that so bravely dance in the hotel hops at Fortress Monroe would not so soon degenerate into the fat, puffy, red nosed colonels and captains that are so common about military stations. The Tribune suggests also that there should be a regular record of anthropometric measurements kept at the military academy. It would be of value in determining the relative increase or diminution in size of West Point students from year to year. Besides that, it has been recently ascertained that no way of identifying a criminal is so perfect as that of measurement. It is now practiced in France. Heads, arms, fingers and body are measured thoroughly, and in this way a criminal can be recognized when other methods fail. If any of our young officers should ever do any very bad thing for which the law wanted to lay hold on them, here they would be, record all known.

The much overdone slot machine has been put to a new use in Birmingham, England. The principle is applied to the gas meter in tenement houses. When gas is wanted, the individual drops a two cent piece into the slot and gets gas half an hour. At the end of that time it goes out and only another two cent piece will turn it on.

Rev. Dr. Huntington remarks that "with so much Anglomania in the air it is a pity that the good old English usage of walking to church on the Lord's day should not be revived."

WOMEN SAW HIM CHEAT

More Interesting Evidence at the Baccarat Trial.

THE PAPER THAT CUMMING SIGNED

It Was Shown in Court for the First Time—Mrs. Arthur Wilson Adds Her Testimony to the Heavy Burden Already Against Sir William.

LONDON, June 6.—The Prince of Wales' baccarat counters, by which his highness is alleged to have been fleeced by Sir William Gordon Cumming at Tanby Croft, were exhibited at the new law courts in Westminster, by the direction of the lord chief justice they were passed into the jury box, where they were scrutinized closely by the jurors, while the spectators craned their necks to catch a glimpse of the counters which loyalty had carried from place to place.

The developments of the trial have aroused the strong Nonconformist feeling against the class of which the Prince of Wales is the leader, and from the talk in the lobbies of parliament today there is evidently fear that the disclosures may affect the next election unfavorably for the Conservatives. Among the nobility and gentry the conduct of the prince excites neither surprise nor objection. It is among the middle classes and the poor that severe comments are heard on the incidents of Tanby Croft gambling.

A Great Influence on England.

A leading Radical remarked today that the Cumming case would have an influence on the future of Great Britain that could not be measured in this generation. Lord Middleton, brother-in-law of Sir William, has been his backer from the first in the effort to redeem his name from disgrace, and his lordship's appearance in court was the open assertion of the sympathy he has felt for him and displayed for his unfortunate relative.

Mrs. Wilson Testifies.

When Mrs. Arthur Wilson was called she distinctly remembered her son looking at her with a puzzled expression on his face, and that he afterward made a "horrible communication" to her. It was to the effect that he had seen the plaintiff cheat while playing cards. Mrs. Wilson then repeated the evidence already given as to the manner in which the baronet cheated by slipping an additional counter out of his hand or flipping it across the line with a pencil when the card turned up was favorable to him. The position which Sir William occupied on both nights at the baccarat table was purely the result of accident. In other words, the baronet did not choose his position at the table nor was he placed in his position.

When her son told her the plaintiff had been cheating she said: "Oh, you must not speak of it. We must not have a scandal in our house."

Lycett Green's Accusing Note.

During the second evening's play the witness did not notice anything until she received a note written by Lycett Green (Lycett Green) informing her of the facts he had discovered. This note, produced, was as follows:

I have distinctly seen Sir William Gordon Cumming cheating twice. I cannot remain in the room any longer. Something ought to be done to stop this game.

Referring to the occasion when Lady Coventry declared a "natural," Mrs. Wilson said she saw the plaintiff push an extra counter over the line and in such an open manner that she wondered how it was possible that the other people playing failed to observe the plaintiff's action.

Mrs. Wilson then described the interview with the Prince of Wales on the subject the following day and expressed fears that her son Arthur would suffer, owing to the fact that he was the first to be called attention to the baronet's cheating. But the prince told her in the kindest manner possible that there was no need for her to fear anything of the kind.

The Prince Desires Secrecy.

From Sept 19 until the legal proceedings began she said absolutely nothing to anybody outside of her own family, who were already acquainted with the facts regarding the scandal. It was too much in her interest to keep the matter as secret as possible.

Mrs. Wilson, in reply to the solicitor general's questions, said that she had not signed a paper pledging herself to secrecy, but had promised the Prince of Wales and had asked her son to say anything about the affair.

On the night of Sept. 9 the Prince of Wales asked her if it was not possible to provide a proper baccarat table for the night following. This was before the prince knew anything of the alleged cheating. General Owen, for the second night's play, a fresh table was provided; but this was not done on account of Cumming, though it was hoped that the change would prevent a recurrence of the events of the previous night. The witness' husband had objected to baccarat playing being in his house, as the play might become high "among his female boys." [Laughter.] On a previous occasion the sum of $500 had got into the bank, which amount, her husband thought, was too large.

A Few Quiet Games Harmless.

"Why did you not tell the Prince of Wales that your husband objected to baccarat?" asked Sir Edward Clarke.

"Because," replied Mrs. Wilson, "we were such a small, non-gambling party that we did not think the prince would pay much harm resulting from a few quiet games at baccarat."

"And," continued the solicitor general, "you thought it unnecessary that any of your guests had been cheating, you sat at the next night's play."

"Yes," answered Mrs. Wilson quietly. "I had put that out of my mind. I had a lot of other things to think about."

In answer to the pointed question asked her by Sir Charles as to whether she had seen Cumming cheat, Mrs. Wilson replied with great emotion, her face flushing painfully:

"Yes, unfortunately, there is no doubt about it."

Lord Coventry Called.

Lord Coventry was the next witness. He repeated with but slight variation the narratives of the previous witnesses for the defense. He admitted that Sir William, in the presence of the Prince of Wales, asserted that the whole matter should be referred to the Duke of Cambridge, commander-in-chief, but was equally positive the plaintiff at no time expressed a desire to be cognizant with his accusers. Lord Coventry and General Owen Williams were anxious if possible to keep the matter secret, and they agreed that signing the paper would be the best means of insuring silence. Sir William had asserted that when he affixed his signature he had [illegible] Lord Coventry confirmed that it did not appear so from his demeanor.

He Believed Cumming Guilty.

From the first Lord Coventry believed him guilty, and it was when he and General Williams agreed that by signing the paper Sir William would be saved that Sir William replied, "Then I won't sign it." On being appealed to as a friend to give his advice, Lord Coventry said, "If I were in your place I should sign it," and this remark being supported by his old friend Owen, Sir William affixed his signature to what has been described as "the document." The full text of the letter was for the first time read to the court, and the effect of it was to put a slightly different complexion on the motive for signing, showing that the evidence against him was of an overwhelming character he placed himself in their hands.

It was also clearly shown from the precis, written in Lord Coventry's diary, that one of the principal reasons for drawing it up was to keep the name of the prince out of the affair, and that the fact that the accused had been very leniently treated.

A Copy of the Document.

The document signed by Sir William Gordon Cumming was worded as follows:

In consideration of the undertaking of the gentlemen whose names are here subscribed to present silence with regard to the occurrences which has been made known to my consist at baccarat on the nights of Monday and Tuesday the 8th and 9th of September, 1890, at Tanby Croft, I will on my part solemnly undertake never to play cards again so long as I live.

Alfred Ashmead Bartlett, Lord Coventry, Edward Somerset, Arthur Somerset, Arthur Wilson, John Wilson, Lycett Green, Berkeley Levett, Ruben Sassoon.

Sir Charles Russell began his speech in reply but did not finish, and the court adjourned until Wednesday. It is said here that Sir William could have made a much better case had he consented to tell all he knows.

Cumming Denies a Report.

In the course of an interview Sir William Gordon Cumming, the plaintiff in the famous baccarat case, denied that there was any truth in the story cabled from New York to the effect that he was to be engaged to be married to Miss Florence Garner, of that city.

GREAT BRITAIN'S GREED.

She Is Slowly Acquiring Venezuela and Defying the Monroe Doctrine.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Post in an illustrated leader says: "The usurpations of Great Britain in her encroachments upon Venezuelan territory have now reached a point which demands the exercise of the wisest as well as the most vigorous diplomatic policy on the part of the United States. Considering that the British power Great Britain has laid her cruising hand upon the little South American republic in the shape of an ultimatum, which presages a considerable war of aggression, and the culmination may be a bloody strife that will shock the people of North and South America out of an indifference that now seems almost wanton. That the state department has appreciated the serious condition of affairs will be shown when the delayed volume of diplomatic correspondence finally appears.

"Venezuela contends that the Essequibo river is the correct boundary of British Guiana, and has written the English line reaches to the mouth of the Orinoco, embracing a region in Venezuela greater in extent than is originally ceded by the Dutch to the English. And this is not all. Another line still more covetous, and which is known as the 'extreme British protension,' advances within a short distance of Ciudad Bolivar, capital of Venezuela. Lord Salisbury's ultimatum, therefore, means that England must be granted possession of the territory already usurped by her before she begins her endeavor to gain by arbitration an extensive district to which she has not even the shadow of a claim. No wonder that in Venezuela the situation appears a desperate one; no wonder that all believers in the Monroe doctrine stand appalled at the disposition of England to acquire a firm foothold in South America. If her experiment is successful, it will be difficult to thwart her designs on territory nearer the boundary of the United States."

IN THE CHARLESTON'S CLUTCHES.

The Cruiser Must Take Her Prize Back to San Diego.

IQUIQUE via GALVESTON, June 6.—The manager of the Itata has been conditionally sued in the sum of a good deal of time to put it in order. The Itata will then leave for San Diego, escorted by the Charleston. The insurgent Junta alleges that the arms on board were transferred from the Robert and Minnie to the Itata near the Island San Clemente, and therefore not in violation of the neutrality law. The Junta therefore hopes to regain possession of the munitions of war.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The case of the Itata is not yet in the custody of the department of justice and will not be until the vessel arrives at San Diego. In the usual course, Attorney General Miller said, will then be pursued, the vessel will be libeled and the case tried in the courts. If she is found guilty of having violated the neutrality laws she will be confiscated; if not, she will be released. The same course will be taken being pursued with the Robert and Minnie. The Itata has been delivered to the American admiral, with 5,000 rifles and 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition. She will soon return to San Diego under convoy.

MURDER'S PENALTY PAID.

Charles Shepherd and Chris Furst Hanged for the Murder of Carlos T. Pulsifer.

FREMONT, Neb., June 6.—Charles Shepherd and Chris Furst were hanged here for the murder of Carlos T. Pulsifer, an aged farmer, Caswell, Neb. Pulsifer was quite wealthy and as there was no bank in that village he carried his money with him at night. Two men planned to rob him, and on the night of Dec. 29, 1890, they waylaid and shot him down, robbing the body of $20, which was all he had.

Governor Thayer refused to interfere with the findings of the court and ordered out the militia to protect the sheriff at the execution and to keep the people from tearing down the stockade in which the murderers were hanged. The men confessed their guilt on the scaffold.

THEY WILL BACK BRIGGS

Union Theological Seminary Stands by Its Action.

THERE WAS A VERY HOT BATTLE.

Professor Preston Nearly Overcome by the Excitement—The Presbytery's Committee Will Be Courteously Received, but Their Visit Will Be a Useless One.

NEW YORK, June 6.—For three hours last evening the directors of the Union Theological seminary sat in secret session discussing the case of Dr. Briggs. A resolution was adopted at the meeting upholding the action of the board of directors, and final bound in the direction of their duties and their charter and constitution to adhere to the same.

"This is all," said Treasurer Kingsley, "that we can make public of the meeting, with the exception that there were two dissenting votes upon the passage of the resolution. The other points raised are deferred until after we hear from the general assembly."

The Fight Was a Warm One.

The fact that a struggle was in progress behind closed doors was evident when Professor Preston, who had stepped out into the hall after the discussion had been under way for two hours, and nearly sank to the floor through weakness brought on by over excitement. The venerable professor's body shook like a leaf and he had to be helped to all along feet until he had recovered. Then Dr. Hastings left his place in the meeting and accompanied the professor to his home. Only one ballot was taken on the resolution and the vote stood 30 to 2 in favor of the seminary.

It Will Be a Useless Visit.

The directors of the seminary express ignorance as to the duties of the committee of presbytery that will have now assembly, but say that they will receive them with all the courtesy possible when they visit the city. It is evident now, in the face of the opinion of the board of seminary directors, that the visit of the general assembly committee will be useless.

PEACE AT PITTSBURG.

Dr. McAllister's Opponents Now Credit Him with Patriotism.

PITTSBURG, June 6.—The interest in the proceedings of the Reformed Presbyterian synod appears to have abated as the close of the eloquent appeals for justice by the respective parties. Rev. George Scott resumed his argument in self defense and in defense of the action of the Pittsburg presbytery. His became greatly confused when pointedly questioned by those who said he was trying to prove guilty of violating church law.

Rev. Dr. McAllister, moderator of the Pittsburg presbytery, made an address in defense of the action of the presbytery in suspending the ministers. He argued that there was no ground for an appeal from the decision of the presbytery. On all sides, and even by the most liberal of the literalists, it was conceded that Dr. McAllister showed a dignified spirit to treat the question under discussion fairly.

"The presbytery is charged with having a 'scheme to obtain evidence,'" said he. "I don't believe it is necessary to speak of this point. I think the integrity of the men constituting that body is sufficient to repudiate the assertion and insinuation that we have a private scheme. Our purpose was to bring about a reconciliation." He spoke at length in regard to an alleged breach of confidence with which he was charged by Rev. W. W. Torrence, one of those who attended the East End meeting and who was secretary, told Dr. McAllister that an organization had been formed. This was told in confidence, but subsequently the seat of confidence was removed by the Rev. Dr. Temple himself.

The speaker then said: "I have here a sworn affidavit from Rev. J. K. Barnes, of New York, that there was no organization formed at the East End meeting. How are we to reconcile these two statements? One says there was an organization and the other one has an affidavit that there was not. There must have been an organization, because the platform was printed and Mr. Temple told me they were to secure signatures. I assert that until the affidavits and minutes of the East End meeting are put upon this floor I shall insist that there was organization was a secret organization."

The speaker referred to the fact that the presbytery did not wrongly impute the intentions of the young men to break up the church. He read several verses from the Scripture and the confession to prove that the opinions of the young men were erroneous and were destructive to the doctrines of the church, and that their promulgation would divide and overthrow the church.

RELIGIOUS NEWS OF INTEREST.

The Reformed Churches in America and the United States to Consolidate.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 6.—At the session of the general synod Reformed church in America the proposed constitution for the consolidation of the two churches—the Reformed church of America and the Reformed church of the United States—was considered, and after a long discussion was adopted. The vote will now be taken by the various classes of the two churches for approval or rejection. The Reformed church in the United States will meet in 1892, when they will ratify and adopt the proposed constitution. The proposed constitution provides for a federal union of each branch of the church to retain its district individuality and not interfere with the creed, culture or government of either denomination. The Third Reformed church of Philadelphia was refused reinstatement on the ground that the appeal was unconstitutional.

The Scheme of Union Adopted.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—At the first business session of the synod of the Reformed church (German) in the United States the report of the joint commission on the union of the Reformed church (German) and the Reformed church (Dutch) was presented. The terms of union include the formation of a federal synod, to be constituted by an equal number of delegates to be appointed by the general synod of each church. The proposed constitution, drawn up with a few amendments, was adopted.

Former Harvard Students Plead to a Cambridge Police Court.

BOSTON, June 6.—Harvard college students and a number of the police in Cambridge court room in Cambridge at the morning. Twenty-nine of the prominent sons of fair Harvard, with downcast eyes and heads, were in the dock for the early hour. Following them came thirty or more of their supporters, all attired in tennis trousers and blazers and wearing Harvard colors, and displaying the badge of the Hasty Pudding club. The witness summons to the members of the club. Great was the wailing at Harvard when the leaders, young and grave, too, was the hustling of the culprits to secure the necessary cash with which to pay their fines.

Among the culprits were Arthur J. Cumnock, captain of the university football team; Dudley S. Dean, captain of the university nine; Jacob Wendell, poet and one of the noted society men of the college; James A. Lowell, son of Judge Lowell; Bennis Trafford, the well known fullback of the Harvard team, and Wheelwaseman of the university nine. A second raid was made at noon on the clubroom of the Zeta Psi society, 34 Church street, and about a dozen of the boys were arrested. In fairness to the college fraternity of Alpha Delta Phi as a whole, it should be said that Harvard chapter, although never formally divorced, pulls the sack, has for a long time tacitly consented to be considered outside the fraternity fold, having evolved itself into a more social organization.

CIRCUS RIDERS NOT IN IT.

How the Cadets Handle Their Horses and Kill Imaginary Indians.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 6.—For the first time this week the post has been thronged with visitors. It has been a lovely day and all nature seemed to smile. So did the cadets and their many lady friends. The cadets because their trials and tribulations are nearly ended, the ladies for the reason that after today the dances boys will be superfluous to comrades with them the greater part of the day, as examinations will close within the next twenty-four hours. The farewell hop comes off this evening. The dress parade was a most magnificent sight.

The exhibition opened with assaults on regulation obstacles by the troops. The redskins were at various heights and at convenient points about the hall to permit of right and left lunges, thrusts and cuts with sabers and point with bayonets. When all the enemy had been killed off a dozen times the order to dismount was given, the trappings removed from the horses and the sham fight was indulged in. Having done this singly, a second man ran alongside of each animal, and with bows at full trot landed by the side of his comrade. Bareback riding that excelled the done credit to the greatest show on earth followed, the whole winding up by the cadets riding at full speed and giving them a good roll on the tanbark, which delighted the female portion of the spectators immensely, as the equines frisked and rolled about like children at play. Hurdle jumping came next and this, for one of indicrous side, for some of the horses kicked like mules and objected strenuously to being compelled to take the hedgerows. When the bar had been raised to five feet there was a general strike among the animals, and with one general dismounting rolled and kicked and attempted to reach the opposite side of the bar and that it attempted to do by lowering its head and endeavoring to go under, much to the disgust of the rider, who had a close call.

CHARGES AGAINST MR. WANAMAKER.

A Democratic Paper Alleges That He Closed the Keystone Bank.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Philadelphia correspondent of the New York World makes grave charges against Hon. John Wanamaker. The correspondent says that President Marsh, of the Keystone bank, according to the statement of two friends, went to Washington to see the new the controller of currency and Mr. Wanamaker, and that Marsh on the following day walked into the room occupied by some of the directors of the Keystone bank, prominent business man of this city, who was a friend to both, and thus described his Washington interview:

"It has come at last. Wanamaker has closed the bank, as he has threatened so many times.

"He used me like a hog. I begged and implored him to give up that over issued stock, and he told me that I must give him $200,000 or he would close the bank."

The correspondent alleges that Mr. Marsh and other directors issued 5 per cent certificates representing $150,000 of the Keystone bank stock, which certificates had been cancelled and issued, and which had been signed by John C. Lucas, as president, and by Mr. Marsh, as cashier, and which had been put up as collateral to secure a loan which had been made in the Reading railroad stock deal.

Mr. Marsh feared that he would be sent to prison for his share in issuing these fraudulent certificates, and he was very anxious to get them into his possession and cancel them. He said that he had implored Mr. Wanamaker week after week, constantly and earnestly, to surrender that stock, but that Mr. Wanamaker persistently refused.

"Time and again," said Mr. Marsh, "he has threatened to close this bank unless I did as he told me, and now it has come at last."

The World's correspondent says that the story gives an added significance to the challenge of Mr. Bardsley's counsel, "Let what he knows."

THE TILDEN WILL CASE.

Close of the Argument Before the General Term.

WILL THE TRUST BE SUSTAINED?

Lawyer Carter's Plea for the City of New York—He Says That the Eminent Testator's Intentions Should Alone Be Considered by the Court.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 6.—At noon the argument in the Tilden will contest came to an end. It has occupied seventeen hours of discussion since it was begun on Monday. The points submitted cover 700 pages, and the oral arguments will cover 400 more. Promptly at 10 o'clock the Hon. James C. Carter resumed his argument. He referred to the two difficulties in our law regarding the creation of a charity—one inherent and necessary, namely, that the beneficiaries cannot be so ascertained that they may appear in court to enforce an execution of the trust; and the other statutory and springing from public policy, namely, that such trusts are forbidden, both as trusts and because they create perpetuities, and then said:

It Exists Forever.

"There has always been a mode of creating a charity in which neither of these difficulties has any place. This is through the instrumentality of a corporate body. Such a letter is in itself a completely equipped scheme created by the legislature, whose powers for that purpose cannot be questioned. The corporate body exists forever, and has power forever to carry out its purposes, and to ascertain and designate the individuals who are to receive the benefits of the charity. It takes whatever property it receives, not in legal contemplation as trustee, although the duties of a trustee are really imposed upon it absolutely, and it holds its own use, holding the equitable as well the legal title, and no question of indefiniteness or uncertainty in the beneficiary can ever arise upon a conveyance to such a body.

Is It Valid?

"The question, then, is whether the primary gift of the Tilden trust is, when taken apart and by itself, a valid one." Mr. Carter quoted an observation made by Chief Justice Church, in the opinion in Burrell against Bement, to the effect that it was the intent of the testator in that case that his gift should vest in the corporation immediately upon the charter being granted, and that the absence of express words of gift was wholly unimportant, and continued:

No Such Action Required.

"If, therefore, action was required by the executors of Governor Tilden after the obtaining of the charter, in order to complete his gift to the Tilden trust, it would be wholly unimportant; but it so happens that no such action is required. He makes that action a condition subsequent, not a condition precedent. Their power is not to complete a gift, but to take a gift already completed.

"The testator does not give to the Tilden trust so much of his residuary estate as they may think expedient, and if they think it expedient, but he gives his whole residuary estate to the corporation unless they think that would be inexpedient, and only in that case, and confers subsequent power upon them to withhold any endowment inexpedient. The gift, therefore, vests in the trustees, the corporation, subject to a power to take it away in whole or in part."

The Intention of the Testator.

Mr. Carter then argued that the intention of the testator satisfied the whole matter; that the Tilden trust was the primary object of his bounty, and that if his executors had died after the charter had without action the Tilden trust could have asserted title to the whole residua. Nothing less than this is consistent with his intentions.

In closing Mr. Carter argued that the precise legal description of the disposition made in favor of the Tilden trust is that it was an executory devise and bequest, and that the objection that the bequest is void as transcending our statutes against perpetuities is too fanciful for serious notice. "The effect of my argument," he said, "if, as we have shown, the exercise of the discretionary power of the trustees is not a condition precedent, but a condition subsequent."

MRS. HARRISON'S PENSION.

The President's Sister-in-Law Receives $8,333.32.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Mrs. Elizabeth T. Harrison, wife of the president's brother, Archibald J. Harrison, lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-seventh Indiana Volunteers, has received $8,333.32 in settlement of a pension claim which was favorably passed upon at Washington within the past three weeks.

The pension was granted upon the declaration that Lieutenant Colonel Harrison's death resulted from consumption, which he contracted while serving his country in the field.

Lieutenant Colonel Harrison died in 1876 on a farm near Indianapolis, leaving a widow, son and daughter. Twelve years ago, after Colonel Harrison's death, before his widow presented a claim for a pension.

The payment covers the twenty-one years since the death of Lieutenant Colonel Harrison at the rate of $396.66 a year. During the rest of her life Mrs. Harrison will draw $99.05 every three months.

Lawyer Bartine's Awful Fate.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 6.—Lawyer Bartine's physicians do not believe they injected enough of mercury in order to counteract the effects of hydrophobia. His pulse at the last report was 120. Mr. Bartine cautioned his daughters to keep away from his bedside as he feared he would do them harm. During the day he attempted to leap out of a window, but was overpowered by his guard. He begged piteously to be allowed to kill himself.

It Was "Bridgeport Dick."

DANBURY, Conn., June 6.—The body of the man found here Thursday was identified by Jailor Alexander as Charles Clancy, alias "Bridgeport Dick," of Bridgeport. The testimony turned at the important points strongly toward the guilt of the man under arrest, Michael McCoy. The inquest will be resumed. Other arrests are expected.

Mrs. Young Goes Free.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., June 6.—The habeas corpus proceedings in the case of Mrs. Blanche Young, charged with poisoning her husband, was heard here. The judge discharged the woman on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to hold her.

PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

A Few of the Many Amusing Signs to Be Found on English Inns.

From an English directory have been culled a few curious names of public houses and inns, and, first, we have found several "Rising Suns," but no "Setting Sun." Then we meet with a "Schoolboy," but no "Schoolmaster." As to numbers, we come across "Two Dustmen," "Three Legs," "Four Ashes," "Five Alls," "Six Bells," "Seven Stars," a "Twelve o'Clock" and "Thirteen Bells."

The "New Inn" appears a great many times, the "New Inn" and the "New Inn" up, but an "Old Inn" we have not met with. "Old Barrels" we have encountered, "Old Hats," "Our Old Crown" and the "Old Clock," "Old Oak," "Number One" means we leave our young readers to imagine, but an "Old Mower" we can all picture to ourselves, also an "Old Mooncalf" and an "Old White Horse." An "Old Red Pump" we should take to be a temperance hotel. "The Brave Old Oak" surely goes to the hearts of all, and so does "The Old House at Home," and not less "The Warm Hearthstone."

The prettiest of all the signs we have noticed is, perhaps, "The Bunch of Roses," though we may fancy "The Babes in the Wood" better, or "The Babes in the Wood." If you are a poet and want inspiration you can sip our wine under the "Shakespeare," the "Milton," or even the "Mount Parnassus." If you are nautical you can visit the "Ship," or her "Keel," or if you are inclined for fun there are the "Jolly Sailors." If a very ancient mariner there is the "Noah's Ark" at your service, or the "Dove and Rainbow."

The sporting tastes of England come out strongly in the inn signs, especially, perhaps, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, where there are "Racehorses," "Hares and Hounds," "Horses and Grooms," "Greyhounds," "Dogs and Guns," "The Saddle," "The Mare and Foal," and such like in abundance. The clergyman can enter the "Mitre," the "Church House," or the "Lamb and Flag." Colors play a great part in the signs of these inns. White is the favorite; white harts, white horses, white swans; yes, even white lions abound. Black stands next in the race; then come red, and bay, blue, gray, brown, green and yellow. The browns are all sorrel, tan, etc., and the yellows are all lions. The bull is often black, but he is never white, nor blue, nor green, nor yellow; but he is fond of allying himself with other people, and he sometimes is in partnership with a bell, or a dog, a mouth, or a sun.

The sign of the "Bull and Butcher" has they say a story attached to it which is of some interest. When Anne Boleyn was put to death by her husband, Henry VIII, one of her friends set up a public house under the sign of the "Boleyn Bullcheard." This continued until the days of Queen Elizabeth, who induced mine host in each case to alter the sign to the "Bull and Butcher." The story first about, and many loyal publicans sold ale under the signal of the "Bull and Butcher."

The Baskets Full.

Issac Green has the following to say on the subject of the baskets given away at the close of the Sunday school concerts. "Some years ago I was asked to take charge of the baskets, and I myself distributed them at the close. On this occasion a small vase had by the person taking blind, and after the benediction was pronounced I went to the platform to get my vase. When the study was put in use the slips were tied on it, about both ought to ready for use when wound, and it was easy to unwind the slips so as to read the two on the outside of their dance for a while. The very humorous remarks made by some of the children that received baskets were the result of hanging these slips on the vase."

EXERCISE AND DIGESTION.

The Influence of Muscular Action and Absolute Rest on the Gastric Processes.

In a lecture upon the influence of exercise on digestion, the London Society of Arts, Dr. Stevens described some experiments made by Dr. Beaumont upon one Alexis St. Martin, a soldier of the United States army, who had received a gunshot wound in the stomach, and was completely healed, except that a permanent opening remained in the abdominal wall, through which the interior of the stomach could be seen. Through this opening Dr. Beaumont was able to introduce food, to withdraw it at any time, and to observe the progress of digestion. In this way he found that the process was much slower when the subject was asleep than when he was awake, and that when he was engaged in active exercise digestion was still more rapid. Dr. Beaumont, who was the first surgeon of the United States army, and was called to the bedside of the President of the United States when he was dying, was also

THREE FIRES.

TWO BARNS DESTROYED EARLY SATURDAY EVENING.

Another Fire in the Store of the Northern Pacific Tea Company.—A Dwelling House Afire. The Particulars.

At about nine o'clock Saturday evening an alarm of fire was sounded from box No. 47, which is located at the Pond Machine Tool Works. The department responded promptly. The fire proved to be at Evona. Two barns were destroyed. One was owned by Mr. Timothy McCarthy and the other by Mr. Robert Brant. Mr. McCarthy estimates his loss at $1,100. Insurance $100; Mr. Brant's loss will not exceed $400. No insurance. Two young men who were endeavoring to save Mr. McCarthy's property were badly burned about the face and hands. It is thought that the buildings were set afire by a spark from a locomotive.

THE SECOND FIRE.

At about half-past two o'clock yesterday morning Nightwatchman Wright discovered dense volumes of smoke pouring out of the store of the Northern Pacific Tea Company. Policeman Fredrickson sounded an alarm from Box No. 13. When the department arrived it was discovered that the fire was confined to the cellar of the building. The loss is about $500 and is covered by insurance.

THE THIRD FIRE.

At about half-past ten o'clock yesterday morning a shed in the rear of the house occupied by the family of Mr. James Daly at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue was discovered to be afire. Mr. John Daly extinguished the flames with a few pails of water, but not until the woodwork had been badly burned. No alarm was sounded.

The Hillside Tennis Club's Saturday Tea.

An enjoyable afternoon tea was given by the Hillside Tennis Club on Saturday afternoon from four until six o'clock. Mrs. H. Augusta Schuyler received, assisted by Miss Hunter of Plainfield, and Miss Edith Harding of New York. Tea was served in the picturesque Club House, and the guests well filled the pretty rooms which were made to look most attractive by a profusion of ferns and variegated wild flowers. The Tennis courts and croquet grounds adjoining the Club House were constantly occupied, many excellent sets having been played to the great enjoyment of those present. Among the guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pollion, Mr. and Mrs. Dewitt, C. Irvine, Miss Stesil, the Misses Hunter, Major Robert L. Burnett, Miss Jessamy Hart, Mrs. Robert L. Livingston, Mr. and Mrs. R. Henry Depew, Mrs. Emma C. Fox, Mrs. W. S. Patton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dexter and Mrs. Wm. H. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Morison, Miss Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brown, Mr. George P. Mellick, Miss Schneely, Rev. Mr. Goodrich, Mrs. H. Augusta Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. Mumford, Mr. Truman, Rev. Wm. R. Richards, Mr. James P. Murray, the Misses Miller, Mr. Davis, Mrs. Hart, Miss Leon Hart, Mr. Charles E. Schneely, Mr. and Mrs. Baker, Mr. Geo. Mahon, Mr. Louis Walz, Rev. Asa Dille, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Slasson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Pist, Miss Lawrence, and many others.

Afternoon Teas are to be served by the Club frequently during the season and friends of members all look forward to many pleasant afternoon gatherings.

New Market Notes.

C. E. Kelly and J. Y. Wilson are in attendance at the court in New Brunswick as jurors.

Arrangements are being perfected for a Fourth of July celebration at New Market.

Hon. A. L. Storms is absent in New York on business, where he will remain for some weeks.

Sneak thieves entered the cellar of S. B. Dayton, and caused the disappearance of all eatables.

Rev. L. E. Livermore is in attendance on the Association of the Seventh Day Baptists which convenes at Shiloh, N. J., this week.

Rev. Mr. Kinsley, pastor of the Dunellen Methodist church, will occupy the pulpit of the Seventh Day Baptist church to-morrow.

W. L. Lorraine, who is with the F. A. Ransom Dye Co., is absent on an extended commercial trip through central and western New York.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Baptist church has arranged to have a strawberry and ice cream festival. —Bound Brook Chronicle.

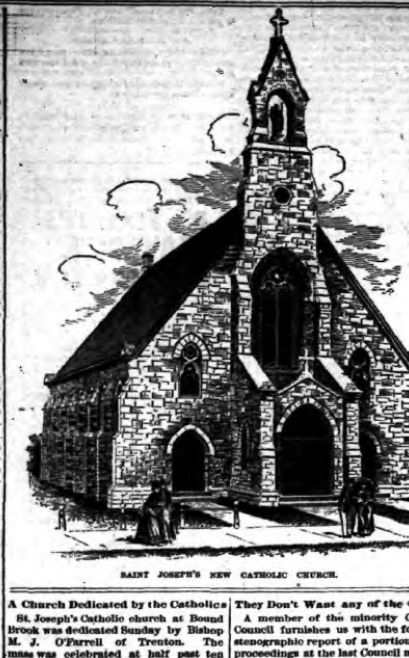
Another Burglary.

Some thief or thieves effected an entrance into the confectionery store of Mr. "Ted" Dunn on North avenue early yesterday morning by breaking a pane of glass in the rear of the building. Nothing is missing—the thieves were frightened off before they succeeded in ransacking the store.

Was It a Mafia Fight.

A number of Italians became involved in a fight at the corner of Third and Washington streets Saturday evening. Policeman Cooney was summoned and he dispersed the crowd in a very few minutes, but not until one of the participants of the melee was badly bruised.

—Prof. L. Virous, instructor in French at the high school, is highly recommended both by letters from abroad and by those in this city who have been taught by him, as a careful, conscientious and learned teacher.



SAINT JOSEPH'S NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH.

A Church Dedicated by the Catholics

St. Joseph's Catholic church at Bound Brook was dedicated Sunday by Bishop M. J. O'Farrell of Trenton. The mass was celebrated at half past ten o'clock, the Rev. J. P. O'Connell, a cousin of the pastor of the new church, being the celebrant. He was assisted by Father McPaul of Trenton. Father Bogaard of Somerville was the deacon and Father Zimmer of Raritan the sub-deacon. The Rev. Fathers O'Grady and Milligan of New Brunswick were the deacons of honor and Father Freeman, formerly of North Plainfield, acted as master of ceremonies. At the conclusion of the mass the Bishop preached a sermon. Among the clergymen present were the Rev. Father Smyth of this city, Father Cantwell of Long Branch, Father Grifton of High Bridge, Father Burk of Phillipsburg and Fathers McGivney and Begnery of Easton. The ceremonies were very impressive throughout.

The records show that the first mass was celebrated in Bound Brook by the Rev. Theodore Schneider, in the year 1764. He was pastor of St. Joseph's church in Philadelphia, and was one of the earliest Catholic missionaries in the United States. He was born in the Universal city of Heidelberg April 7, 1728. He was professor of Philosophy and Polemics at Liege and afterwards rector of the University of Heidelberg. He embarked for America in 1761.

The old church edifice was erected on the ground now occupied by the new stone structure, corner of Second street and Mountain avenue, in 1835. Prior to that time mass was occasionally celebrated, for the few Catholics in the neighborhood, in private houses, including those of Lawrence Wells, the late Anton Prehm and Edward Butler. A substantial and commodious rectory was built on Mountain avenue in 1877. Two years ago the old church was torn down and rebuilt in the rear of the rectory by James Vosseller, and services have been held there ever since.

A HANDSOME STRUCTURE.

The first stone of the present beautiful edifice was laid on April 5d, 1890. The architecture is of the English Gothic style, and is constructed of stone from the Connecticut Brownstone and Trimmings of Indiana limestone. It was erected by T. H. Prior and Son of Trenton, William Byrne of Jersey City doing the carpentry. It is a matter for congratulation that the building was practically completed within a year from the time of commencing the work. It is also worthy of note that notwithstanding the dangers attending such an undertaking no person was injured during the erection of the edifice.

The unbroken lines of the exterior do not give a fair idea of the size of the church to the casual passerby. The cap stone beneath the cross is eighty-five feet from the ground, and weighs 2,000 pounds. To place it there a scaffolding over 100 feet high was erected. Once inside the building one is impressed with lofty ceiling and beauty of finish. The rafters are exposed, and set off with pretty scroll work. The stained glass windows above the altar are real works of art, from the celebrated establishment of F. X. Zettler, of Munich, Bavaria. The cost of the church with its appointments has been $30,000, and the edifice stands to-day one of the most beautiful houses of worship in Somerset county. Father O'Connell and his parishioners, as well as every citizen of the thriving borough, says the Bound Brook Chronicle from which this account is taken, may well be proud of it.

Among the former pastors of St. Joseph's were Bishop Pink of Leavenworth, Kansas, and Bishop Seidenbush of St. Cloud, Minn., who doubtless rejoice over the prosperity of their former parish at Bound Brook.

—The City Common Council will hold an adjourned meeting this evening.

They Don't Want any of the Odium.

A member of this minority Common Council furnishes us with the following stenographic report of a portion of the proceedings at the last Council meeting, that this portion of the record many be given to the public in full. Our report necessarily gave it in brief. The point is to show that neither of the Counsel wish to shoulder the responsibility for such an ordinance, both being evidently satisfied that it cannot be sustained in the courts:

STENOGRAPHIC REPORT.

Mr. Mabst: Mr. President, will you allow me to say a word? Gentlemen of the Council: The matter having been brought to your notice that the special counsel and myself alone are responsible for the ordinance, I think it due to him and myself both that a word of explanation should be made. It is unqualifiedly true that we drafted that ordinance, that the Committee did not dictate its terms. The ordinance, however, refers to the contract, if I am not mistaken. This is the portion of it (reading): to such and according to the terms and conditions stated in a proposed agreement between this city and said Low which was submitted to the Common Council June 8th, 1891." It is with reference to that I think I owe a word of explanation is due to Chancellor Runyon and myself. The contract has been drafted and engrossed in different shape from the terms agreed upon between the Committee and Mr. Low.

Mr. Pammenter: Merely the terms?

Mr. Mabst: Merely the terms. The contract is in the shape that it was thought that contract up of these terms; merely put into legal words—legal shape—by the gentlemen mentioned. I say that now because the Chancellor wanted it distinctly understood that his work in the case was merely that of a typist. He does not undertake to pass upon any of the technical qualities of the proposition as a sewerage system, nor upon the terms of the agreement. All that we did or could do was to take the terms that were furnished us for the contract between the city and Mr. Low and then put them in legal shape.

Mr. Heuvelid: I would like to inquire, Mr. Mabst, if the ordinance would have been drawn different if the terms and conditions had been any different? Is the ordinance just the same as it would have been had any one of the contract had been different?

Mr. Mabst: The ordinance refers to the contract.

Mr. Heuvelid: I inferred from your remarks that the Committee had something to do with the ordinance.

Mr. Mabst: I stated that your remarks on that point were decidedly inaccurate; that the Committee did not have anything to do with the drafting of the ordinance.

Mr. Heuvelid: That is why I asked if the terms of the contract would have differed if the ordinance would have been different.

Mr. Mabst: Only so far as it embodies the terms and conditions of the contract. Its phraseology makes the contract a part of the ordinance.

A Decision that Effects Plainfield.

Justice Van Syckel rendered an important opinion in the Supreme Court Saturday, in regard to the Ballot Reform law. The opinion prescribes that the expense of erecting election booths shall be borne equally by the county and city. The county is to pay half the expense of making the registry and canvass and the city and township the other half. The county is to pay for revising the registry for the November elections, the township and either for the Spring elections, and the cities for the charter elections.

The Dwyer Forgers Sentenced.

Joseph C. Foley and Harry C. Meeks, the men who swindled Elizabeth merchants with checks forged with the signature of Michael F. Dwyer, were sentenced to State prison Saturday by Judge McCormick of the Union county court. Foley for five years and Meeks for two.

Charles Perleteo, colored, was sentenced to two years for atrocious assault on Willett Chase, a negro hostler. James Gaffney was sentenced to one year for assault and battery.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS AGAIN TO THE FRONT.

The Home Team Succeeded in Defeating the Original Acmes by a Score of 7 to 4.—Other Games.

The usual Saturday game of base ball was played on the Crescent League grounds Saturday afternoon. The game was called by Umpire Berryman at four o'clock.

The Crescents had for their opponents the original Acmes of New York, and the manager put a strong team in the field, having among them "Jack" Hatfield, who last season captained the Crescents.

The home team worked hard to win the game and succeeded in so doing by a score of 7 to 4.

The playing of both teams was all that could be asked for and the game was interesting throughout.

Hammill the Crescents' pitcher was a little wild at first and gave several of the opponents their bases on balls.

Features of the game were the double plays of McIndoe and Lafferty in the fifth inning, and Martin and Lafferty in the eighth.

When McIndo went to the bat in the fifth inning some one said that he was due for a hit over the fence but he compromised and hit for three bases.

Brown, the pitcher for the Acmes, was batted out the box in the second inning.

The score by innings is as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Acmes.....	0	0	0	1	0	0	2	0	0	—4

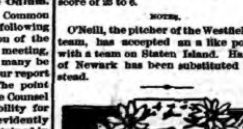
OTHER GAMES.

The West Ends of Somerville defeated the Star-Athletics of Newark by a score of 19 to 3.

The Westfield base ball team defeated the Dauntless Club of New York by a score of 25 to 6.

NOTES.

O'Neill, the pitcher of the Westfield ball team, has accepted an o like position with a team on Staten Island. Hammill of Newark has been substituted in his stead.



—Edsall's is a "tell tale" advertisement to-day, as all will readily perceive who read it.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association have a new announcement to-day.

—The Reading and Bound Brook Railroad company has given $1,000 to the Battle Monument at Trenton.

—Reserved seats for the organ concert at First Baptist Church to-morrow evening can be secured at Warren Randolph's Pharmacy.

—Mr. Warren Rice, the enterprising North Plainfield young man, who issues Once-a-month, is the son of Mr. R. W. Rice, the popular North Plainfield grocer.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Reformed church held a meeting in the Sunday-school room of the chapel to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The officers, directors and committeemen of the Y. M. C. A. will meet at the residence of Mr. C. T. Risson 226 Central avenue Saturday afternoon of this week from three to five p. m.

—The members of the congregation of St. Joseph's church have arranged for a strawberry and ice cream festival which will be held in the Gessng and Turning Society's Hall next Wednesday and Thursday evening.

—Boys who may wish to join the New York and Brooklyn Jersey State Y. M. C. A. boys' camp at Lake Champlain July 9th, should apply at the Association rooms at once as word has been received that there are now but six vacancies.

—This promises to be one of the greatest fruit years ever known in Northern New Jersey. In fact, all the crops are growing with a promise that the oldest residents declared they have never witnessed.

—There were 225 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 224 in the preceding week and 195, 148 and 135 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 5,373 against 4,863 in 1890.

—At the organ concert at the First Baptist Church to-morrow (Tuesday) Mr. John C. Dempsey, the baritone soloist who has so favorably received by the Plainfield people in the oratorio of "The Messiah"—given by the Choral Society last year, will sing "O God Have Mercy" from "St. Paul." Mrs. Doty will sing "Hear Ye Israel" from "Elijah," and "Come Unto Him" from "The Messiah."

—The oldest person living in New Jersey is supposed to be John Van Syckel, a colored man at Chester, Morris county, who is said to be 118 years old. He remembers one incident of the revolutionary war. He says when he was a small boy, a man with whom he was in a barn threshing, was induced to join a company of soldiers by being prodded a horse, and started off at once, leaving him in the barn.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Charles Vreeland of New York passed Sunday with Dr. V. W. Baker of this city.

The wife of Editor Demarest last night presented him with a son at their home on East Fifth street.

Mr. James Patterson, one of the foreman's of the Potter Press Works, has gone to Boston, Mass., in the interest of the firm.

Mr. J. W. Morpeth and wife of Michigan are visiting Mr. Morpeth's sister, Mrs. Alex. Black of West Front street this city.

Mr. E. P. McBride, who was one of the proprietors of the Union Pacific Tea Company, died at his home in this city yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burden of Elizabeth were yesterday the guests of Mr. John C. Moore of East Second street.

Miss Julia E. Bulkley, principal of our schools, who spent last year in foreign lands, will address the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Churches in the Chapel of the Crescent Avenue Church, Tuesday, June 9th, at four o'clock. The subject of her talk will be "The Condition of Women in the Orient," as she saw it. All ladies interested are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. M. M. Thorn, who is in ill health at Santa Barbara, California, has elected Mr. N. W. Pike, to distribute among old friends some of his handiwork in many kinds of native woods as follows: Polished palm wood paper cutter to Rev. J. P. Taylor; polished live oak paper cutter, E. R. Pope; polished olive wood paper cutter to Thomas Armstrong; polished casarena wood paper cutter to Wm. C. Ayers; polished olive wood knife to Geo. W. Rockfellow; polished olive wood knife to J. B. Cleaver; polished casarena wood paper cutter to Cashier Runyon; polished orange tree book mark Mrs. Vail; polished olive wood book mark to N. W. Pike; polished live oak paper cutter to M. C. Dobbins; polished live oak paper cutter to J. E. Martin. When in health and at home Mr. Thorn was known for his handiwork, a genius with knife, pencil and brush, and the above reminders are much appreciated by his friends.

Westfield.

The Westfield wheelmen will hold a five-mile handicap race on Saturday afternoon, June 27. The course will be laid from the Park to Scotch Plains. Three minutes will be the handicap limit. The prizes to be contested for will be a gold and silver medal for the best time and a gold and silver medal for the second man and a silver medal for the third man. Entry fee will be fixed at 25 cents. All entries must be recorded with the secretary before June 15.

The Young Men's Christian Association have been discussed for some months, and the proposition seems to be gaining ground both on the pro side of the question. Franklin Reed, who has taken a leading part in the movement, reports the most pleasant encouragement from the public. General Secretary Manning, of Plainfield, is much interested in the project, and while he proposes no one of the initiatory steps the immediate organization of workers is desirable. Mr. Reed and General Secretary Manning has requested Dr. W. Durand to call a meeting of the Board of Doctors to act in the matter under consideration.

Westfield will have an old-fashioned celebration on the Fourth of July. These celebrations have been a feature in Westfield for many years, but have fallen into disuse of late years. A committee composed of representative men from the various societies will have charge of the affair. It will open with a salute at sunrise, and will be followed by the ringing of bells till 9 o'clock. At 9 o'clock the "Yankee Doodle" will be escorted into the town, riding his historical pony, by a squad of Westfield's crack fife and drum corps. He will receive a royal reception.

Dunellen Notes.

Mr. James Roach has had a very severe attack of the measles.

At the Vail golden wedding which took place last week four generations were represented.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Elston Lowrie and family spent a few days last week visiting friends in New Rochelle.

Hida Vail, daughter of George and Malissa Vail, died on Wednesday aged nine months. The funeral took place Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

The Young People's Society of the Presbyterian church at Dunellen will give an entertainment on the lawn adjacent of the church next Friday evening, June 19th.

Henry Beaulieu, on the Dickens' place, claims to have the finest potato patch for many miles around. Last Sunday they were all hoed in full blossom and certainly looked fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Eder, of New York, spent part of last week with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lowrie. Mrs. Eder who is so favorably received by the Plainfield people in the oratorio of "The Messiah"—given by the Choral Society last year, will sing "O God Have Mercy" from "St. Paul." Mrs. Doty will sing "Hear Ye Israel" from "Elijah," and "Come Unto Him" from "The Messiah."

Not to be outdone by Yale, the Harvard students have gone into the question of tobacco smoking. The famous Dr. Sargent says that the action of tobacco is sedative; therefore, when a man uses it he does not want to exercise much, but rather to sit and meditate. Therefore few athletes use it. Few of the Harvard athletes are given to smoking. It is forbidden during the time they are in training, and perhaps as a consequence of this hardly any of them use it at any time. In Harvard, as elsewhere, the leaders in one branch of athletics are all-round men in physical development, and can hold their own in several branches.

The United States committee to visit the countries of Europe and investigate the methods of emigration pursued there have at length started on their mission. The chairman is an Ohio man, General C. H. Grosvenor. Their work will be to examine into the extent to which European governments systematically encourage the emigration of paupers, criminals and lunatics. There is said to be much of this sort of encouragement to emigration given by the municipal and charities of continental towns. It is a good way to get rid of public paupers, to unload them upon Uncle Sam's broad back. But at length he has concluded he will not stand it any longer. One member of the investigating committee —Dr. Walter Kempster, of Wisconsin—is an expert in insanity; another, Judson Cross, of Minnesota, is a criminal lawyer. They move quietly, giving no publicity to their mission, they can accomplish much good.

Free Niagara.

There is one international park in the world, shared amicably between two nations, each of which maintains its own side of this unique pleasure ground. The park is at Niagara Falls. One hundred and seven acres of it are on the American side of Niagara river at the falls, and 154 acres are on the Canada side. The state of New York bought the ground from private owners for nearly a million and a half dollars, and Canada did the same on her side for about $437,000.

The tourist can therefore now visit this mighty natural wonder free of charge. Formerly every visitor was taxed a dollar a head. Over half a million persons go to the American side of Niagara every year. The New York Park commissioners have done much to improve the place.

In one way scarcely less wonderful than the falls itself is the famous hydraulic tunnel that will bring to Niagara in time probably the most stupendous manufacturing interests that ever centered in one spot.

Nearly one cubic mile of water falls over the abyss at Niagara every week. If this immense water power could be harnessed and driven for the use of man, what could he not accomplish with it? This has been the idea of manufacturers for years, and at length the idea has taken practical shape and is nearing completion. The hydraulic tunnel, 160 feet deep, begins just below the Suspension bridge, and is cut through solid rock around in a crescent up to a mile above the falls. When completed it will furnish the equal of 130,000 horse power. By July 1, 1893, the mills run by water from this hydraulic tunnel are expected to begin operations. Then things will hum at Niagara.

Dear Me, How Shocking!

It is well known that in most cities and many of the larger towns of the Union a good share of social life has established homes for working women, where for a consideration smaller than that paid at the average city boarding house the working woman can get food and lodging. There are restrictions in these homes. Of course, say the ladies, rules are necessary, when one brings together a number of girls and women from the working classes. Whatever else they lack, therefore, these homes are well supervised. It is universally supposed that the hearts of the working women go out in gratitude to the good and rich ladies who thus establish homes for them. But hear how a writer in the New York Recorder "goes for" the working women's homes. It is enough to draw tears from eyes unused to weep:

In all the principal cities of the west there are established homes or clubs for working women where the price of living is much smaller than in ordinary boarding houses, and soon being seldom more than twenty and two or twenty-five dollars per month. But one thing is said in these homes quite the best of the independent brood winning American girl. While in no sense charitable, they have a flavor of charity which an independent woman does not relish, they are hampered by innumerable rules and are generally under the vigilant eye of some self-appointed matron.

The boarders one finds at these are usually a melancholy set; they mope about their rooms after working hours, or assemble in the chessless parlor. The people interested with the patronage invariably select ugly black hair-cloth chairs in comfortless rooms, with a depressing carpet, a portrait or two of some benefactor, and perhaps a funeral emblem of a deceased patron. One must not forget the piano, where there is always a doleful-looking girl laboriously picking with one hand "Rock of Ages," or some similar melody.

THE CRISIS IN CANADA.

Who Will Succeed the Late Sir John Macdonald?

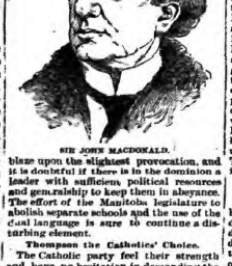
THOMPSON OR TUPPER IS THE MAN.

The Catholics Want the Former, While the Latter Is the Choice of the Orangemen—Religion and Race Feeling Two Great Factors in the Fight.

OTTAWA, June 8.—Since the death of Sir John Macdonald Saturday evening, June 6, the dominion has been filled with anxiety as to the dead premier's successor. It is not so much the questions of trade and tariff that is causing the public anxiety as an eager inquiry for a competent leader. There are questions coming up upon which the religious passions, always ready to be touched off into explosions, are expected to break with intense strife. There is also the fast developing ambition of the French race, which has already laid plans for the establishing of another French republic upon the northern portion of this continent. This element Sir John was always able to keep in check, though it required every effort of his resourceful mind and many draughts upon the public treasury.

The French Are Restless.

The opinion now is stronger than ever that a government of neither party can much longer harmonize the different race elements. The French people have become prosperous, and with the fine advantages for education the younger generation are growing more restless and chafing under a restraint which they consider confines their natural ambition. With their strong racial prejudice is added the difference of religion. The tumult that was caused last year by the discussion of the Jesuits' estate bill showed the fury of this religious passion and the intensity of the fires smouldering just under the surface of events. The flame is ready to be fanned into a blaze upon the slightest provocation, and it is doubtful if there is in the dominion a leader with sufficient political resources and generalship to keep them in abeyance. The effort of the Manitoba legislature to abolish separate schools and the use of the dual language is sure to continue a disturbing element.



SIR JOHN MACDONALD.

Thompson the Catholics' Choice.

The Catholic party feel their strength and have no hesitation in demanding the rights that they believe to be due them on account of their population and importance. In the discussion of the successorship to Sir John they are making their influence felt. Their choice is Sir John Thompson, the minister of justice, who is a Roman Catholic. The Protestant element want Sir Charles Tupper, and in case the gentleman expected soon to arrive from England, the second choice of that wing of the party is said to be Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, the minister of customs, and head of the Orangemen in Ontario. This at the very outset a bitter contest is predicted. The French element in the party seem determined to have Thompson, while their opponents, principally the Ontario portion of the party, are strong in their demands for Tupper.

Sir Charles Tupper's Chances.

It is said that Sir John expressed a wish that Tupper should be his successor, and he is said to be the choice of the party in all the provinces except Quebec. If he is willing to take up the tangled course of affairs where Sir John has left them he will in all likelihood be the next leader of the party. In point of age and of remarkable constitution, he is admirably fitted for the position, and is imbued with the methods that have so long given his party the sway of public affairs. As a colleague with Sir John Macdonald in all the affairs of state he is better prepared probably than any other man in the party to meet the emergencies that must arise. Sir Charles has strength with the party, but the recent public discussion of his relations with the Grand Trunk railway in the last election has not served to establish him in the confidence of the people. He is a power in parliament, however, a forceful debater and a man of political craft.

These two men, both natives of Nova Scotia, are far the most prominent in the race for the premiership—in fact, can be considered the only ones in it.

The Orangemen Against Him.

The feeling against Sir John Thompson on the part of the Orangemen has been found to be of considerable strength.

Immediately after the announcement of the premier's death all the fire and church bells were tolled, and the newspapers came out with special morning editions.

The Funeral Arrangements.

Sir John Macdonald's body will be privately removed from Earnscliffe to the parliament buildings and will lie in state from 10 o'clock Tuesday morning until the hour of the funeral. The state funeral will leave the parliament buildings at 10 o'clock p. m. Wednesday for St. John's church, thence to the Canadian Pacific station, whence the body will be conveyed to Kingston. The body will lie in state in the City hall in Kingston until Sunday, and the interment will take place. In all the city churches Sunday touching references were made to the late premier's services. Hundreds of telegrams reached Mrs. Macdonald during the day. They all extended condolences and sympathy. Queen Victoria telegraphed from Balmoral to the governor general that she was deeply pained to learn of Sir John's death, which she regarded as a great loss to Canada and the sovereign. Sir Charles Tupper established a message of sympathy from Vienna. Other messages were received from Lord Salisbury and scores of notables in England.

TO INDICT BARDSLEY.

He Was Never Sworn in as Treasurer of Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—This week promises to be prolific in developments in the Bardsley and Keystone bank matters. It is said that the experts examining Bardsley's affairs have in their possession all of his check books, cancelled checks and private accounts, and will thus be able to trace all of the missing state and city funds. District Attorney Graham will present to the grand jury today bills of indictment against Bardsley charging him with the embezzlement of $80,000 of city money and over $200,000 belonging to the state.

The charge of perjury in violating his oath of office will be dropped for the reason that no record of his having been sworn in can be found in the prothonotary's office, where it should be filed. It is also said that the oath Bardsley took was not one with reference to his duties toward the state under the act of assembly of 1887. This act has been nullified by the new charter under which the municipality is now operating, and the oath taken is therefore void.

The opinion in general that Bardsley, on entering upon the duties of the office of city treasurer, did not take an oath to faithfully administer the affairs of that office. Whether the omission was intentional or accidental will probably never be definitely known.

The meetings of the councilmanic committee, which is inquiring into Bardsley's administration of his office and his connection with the Keystone bank, are expected to result in important developments. It is understood that Postmaster General Wanamaker will appear before the committee today and answer any questions that may be put to him with reference to his knowledge of Keystone bank affairs.

Other witnesses who will appear during the week are Auditor General McCamant, to whom Bardsley made report of the amounts collected by him on account of the common wealth, and John Dobson and James Dobson, who were on Bardsley's bond to the extent of $120,000, and to whom Bardsley assigned his private estate before his arrest. The hunt for Marsh, the fugitive president of the Keystone bank, is kept up. All sorts of rumors as to his whereabouts are afloat, but no real clew has been obtained.

Captain George M. Chester Dead.

DETROIT, June 8.—Captain George M. Chester, one of the best known newspaper men in Michigan, died here Sunday, aged fifty-two years. He was in connection with the Detroit Free Press for many years. His service was, however, interrupted by a gallant career in the army. He was from 1861 to 1863 clerk in the office of Major Rucker at Washington. He was ordered as quartermaster to Elmira, N. Y., for the great draft, handled, clothed and sent to the front all of the troops raised in western New York. In 1864 President Lincoln promoted him to be captain and assistant quartermaster of volunteers. After the war he was city editor of the St. Paul Press and then went to New York, where he was employed on the New York Tribune, but finally returned to Detroit and the Free Press in 1876, and continued in its service until his death.

A Train Captured by Tramps.

COLUMBUS, O., June 8.—As the southbound freight train on the Louisville division of the Pennsylvania railroad limited due here at 8:30 was leaving Indianapolis it was boarded by twenty-three tramps at the belt crossing, who, when ordered off, refused to leave. They overran the train to suit themselves. The officers here were notified of this situation by wire, and together with a number of assistants were on the depot when the train arrived at 8:30. The tramps had congregated in a box car, and when the officers attempted to raid them they were met with a volley of shots which they immediately returned. After maneuvring for some time the tramps were routed from the box car and nine of them captured and lodged in jail.

Sir William's Marriage.

LONDON, June 8.—Although Sir William Gordon Cumming has allowed to be published a denial of the report that he was engaged to marry Miss Florence Garner, of New York, the fact has been learned that a special license is in existence permitting Sir William and Miss Garner to be married in any church within the London diocese. The granting of the license in this form was presumably for the purpose of avoiding the notoriety which would be incurred if the public were advised as to what particular church the ceremony was to be performed in.

For the Shipment of Cattle.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Secretary Rusk has issued orders prescribing the rules and regulations to govern the shipment and transportation of cattle from the United States to foreign countries under the new law providing for the safe transport of such animals. The regulations are elaborate and provide for ample space for the animals, suitable deck fittings, shelter and ventilation. Skippers are to furnish a foreman to be in charge of the cattle, and one cattleman for each twenty-five head of cattle shipped.

Superintendent Gray Goes Free.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 8.—Superintendent Gray, of Frick's Leisenring No. 3 coke works, has been acquitted of the charge of murdering one of the Hungarian strikers during a riot near Leisenring. The strikers had induced some of the workmen to join them in drinking beer. When Superintendent Gray refused to join the drinkers men he was assaulted and beaten. During the row one of the Hungarians was shot and killed.

They Wanted to Lynch Him.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 8.—An infuriated mob of negroes attempted to take James Lewis Sommerville, a white painter, from an officer and lynch him. Sommerville was arrested, for, attempting to enter a church, thence to the Canadian Pacific station, whence the body will be conveyed to Kingston. The body will lie in state in the City hall in Kingston until Sunday, and the interment will take place. In all the city churches Sunday touching references were made to the late premier's services. THE SOCIALISTS SCORED Archbishop Corrigan on the Pope's Encyclical.

THE RIGHT OF PRIVATE PROPERTY.

Like His Holiness at Rome, the Archbishop Assails the Theories of the Henry George Men and Sustains the Principle of Individual Ownership in Land.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Archbishop Corrigan preached a notable sermon yesterday in St. Patrick's cathedral. His text was the recent encyclical of Pope Leo XIII. Concerning the encyclical the archbishop said that in the whole history of the church probably no single document had ever been awaited with such widespread and universal expectation. Continuing he said:

"The doctrines contained in the encyclical on the condition of the working classes are Catholic doctrines. On account of the limits of time I propose this morning merely to touch on the first and most important part of the encyclical, which treats of the right of private property, and to put before you in a popular way as briefly and clearly as I can the arguments alleged by the holy father.

The Socialistic Idea.

"Many causes, he says, have brought about this seeking conflict now existing between capital and labor; and many theories have been advanced to solve this knotty question. The socialists contend that the remedy is to be sought in the abolition of private property and the substitution of common ownership. The change to be brought about by those in high official station. They are of opinion that by transferring property from individuals to the community, all these sufferings alike in the allotment of wealth and comforts, the present evil can be remedied. Now the holy father says [this solution in the first place does not benefit the working classes, secondly, it is unjust, because it offers violence to the legitimate owners and distturbs social order.

The Right of Private Property.

"The aim of the workman in hiring his services to another is clearly to obtain a recompense which he may dispose of as he thinks to his own profits. If he sets aside a portion of his daily earnings he certainly has a perfect right to employ it in any lawful way. If for the sake of greater security he invests in real estate he simply puts his savings in another shape. The land so purchased is undoubtedly as truly his possession as the wages were. He can dispose freely of the one as he did of the other. But this is neither more nor less than the right of private property.

The Land Question.

"Man has unceasing wants both for the present and the future, and, therefore, there ought to be for these abiding necessities an unfailing source of supply. Now, where can we find such provisions except in the unfailing and teeming fertility of mother earth, so that he may not only secure for the present wants like crops of to-day, but also have a reasonable guarantee of similar support in future.

"Consequently the right of private property in land comes to us by the very law of nature, and to deprive one of it is to do him grave injustice. One may object that God has given the earth in common to the children of men. Those who lack capital in this regard should labor. Whence it may truly be stated that the whole economy of food and clothing and other necessaries is derived from labor, exercised directly on the soil or else in lucrative occupation, the payment for which comes from the earth or some other value from that source.

The Pope Quoted.

"This again,' says the holy father, 'shows that the private property is according to the law of nature. Mother earth abundantly, no, not of herself, but by our own co-operation.' The hand of toil sows the seed and reaps the golden harvest, but self also implies patient thought and effort on our part, and the stamping of our own personality, so to say, on the soil, and so establishing a claim to it with which others may not interfere.

"'So luminous,' adds the holy father, 'is the force of these arguments that it is a matter of surprise that at this late day any should venture to revive the long since obsolete—namely, that private individuals may have the use of the soil and the various parts of the earth, but that no one might rightfully own either the ground on which he has built his house or the field which he has tilled and cultivated.'

The archbishop here gave numerous quotations from the scriptures in support of the pope's position.

"St. Paul, in his second Epistle to the Corinthians, twelfth chapter, says that 'the children ought not to lay up for their parents, but the parents for the children.' He would hardly have written this if he could not have given this advice. By the law of nature parents are obliged to provide for their children and to forestall many eventualities that may arise from day to day. It is difficult to say how this duty can be fulfilled except by the possession of property that may be left as an inheritance to the little ones, or to the widow deprived of her natural protector."

Fountain of Wealth Would Run Dry.

The archbishop said that to substitute the state for the parent according to the socialistic theory in caring for the offspring was to act against natural justice, and to look for bonds where bonds of home. Besides, if the ownership of all property were made common, disorder and envy and discord would follow.

The stimulus of exertion would be taken away and the very fountains of wealth would necessarily run dry. "We confess then, with the holy father, that this socialistic theory of the community of goods must be entirely set aside, because it injures the very parties whom it is designed to benefit. It is repugnant to the natural rights of individuals. It perverts the duties of the state and disturbs the peace of families. When, then, there is question of settling the limits, first of all, must be laid down as a fundamental principle that private property is to be held inviolate."

A LITTLE WOMAN WITH A PISTOL.

She Wanted to Kill the Girl Who Stole Her Husband.

ST. PAUL, June 8.—There was a tremendous sensation in the Manhattan block at the corner of Third and Minnesota streets, Saturday evening, when a little woman rushed from the elevator on the second floor directly into the school of embalming of Miss Margaret E. Gibson and began firing at Miss Gibson, at the same time hissing, "You won't steal any other woman's husband as you have mine."

Occupants of the offices in the neighborhood ran into the room and seized the woman just as she was dropping her revolver and swooning away. She proved to be Mrs. George L. Crosson, of 127 Nina avenue. Miss Gibson was not injured. Mrs. Crosson charges her husband, George E. Crosson, assistant engineer of the Omaha railway, with being too fond of the society of Miss Gibson, and sought to murder the latter on that account. Mrs. Crosson was injured in a cable car accident six months ago and has been quite ill most of the time since. The social prominence of all the parties to the shooting causes the incident to be the talk of the town.

MEN AND CATTLE DIE.

A Mad Dog Bit a Steer and Then Death Reigned.

KANSAS CITY, June 8.—A short time ago a mad dog bit a steer, one of a herd of cattle belonging to the Vandeventer Brothers, living in Atchison county. The steer was soon afflicted with hydrophobia, which spread to the remainder of the herd. There were three of the Vandeventer brothers, and each of them was bitten by one or another of the afflicted animals.

The brothers paid no particular attention to their injuries until Friday, when one of them became violently ill with hydrophobia. Last night he died in the most excruciating agony. Today another of the brothers died and the third is not expected to live more than a day or two.

Made a Chalk Mark Over Her Heart.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Mrs. Gail Barton, the twenty-six-year-old and pretty wife of Manager Barton, of the Casino theater, shot herself in the breast late Saturday night at her home, 237 Western Boulevard. The revolver used was a rusty old light caliber revolver, and the bullets plowed only through her dress, inflicting slight flesh wounds. Manager Barton said his wife was fond of toying with a revolver, and it was undoubtedly a case of accident. He denied that he and his wife were in the habit of quarreling. Mrs. Barton had drawn a round chalk mark had been drawn over the heart, and it is thought she made the mark in order to make sure of her aim.

To Reorganize the Cokers.

PITTSBURG, June 8.—Efforts will be made at once for the complete reorganization of the miners of the coke region by the United Mine Workers of America. Vice President Penna, of that organization, said today: "Our fight against the coke operators must be maintained and long as we cannot get our rights. The fight cannot be evaded. I believe it will not be long before there will be another strike in the region. The settlement at present is one purely through force. The men have no obligations, moral or legal, to remain at work for them any longer than they like the present one will never remain in force."

Charged with Counterfeiting.

WILKESBARRE, June 8.—Early Sunday morning secret service officers arrested Reuben Palmer, a horse trader, on the charge of passing counterfeit money. A complete outfit of counterfeiting tools was on the prisoner. For some time the country in the vicinity of Hornellsville, Elmira and Troy has been flooded with spurious coin. The government secret service men and officers on the case, who traced the counterfeits to Palmer. Palmer is said to be an assistant of the famous counterfeiter, James Hollen. Hollen was arrested in New York Saturday in connection with the same case.

Killed by Apaches.

TOMBSTONE, A. T., June 8.—Word was received Saturday of the killing of Frank Cathey by Apache Indians near Arispe, Sonora. Cathey was employed as a swamper on a mule train. There were other men with teams, and it is understood they resisted the Indians' attack. It is believed the Indians will make for southern Arizona. Ranchers have been notified and are determined to exterminate this band of Apaches.

Wilmington City Election.

WILMINGTON, Del., June 8.—Stanbury J. Willey (Rep.) has 643 majority for mayor over C. W. Wilson (Dem.). The rest of the other Republican majorities are: Joseph B. Adams, city treasurer, 932; Charles M. Curtis, city solicitor, 765; Manuel H. Benson, president of council, 732. The Republicans will have three majority in city councils and will have control of the city for the first time in seven years.

Three Women Asphyxiated.

NEW YORK, June 8.—Three women employed in the kitchen of the Manhattan Athletic club were taken to Bellevue hospital in a serious condition, they having been found in their room unconscious from the effects of inhaling illuminating gas. The gas was probably turned on by accident. The names are Kate Fleming, aged 23, Ann Tracy, aged 30, and Annie Cassidy, aged 30.

Good Money Burned Up.

OTTAWA, June 8.—In the contract to the Winnipeg express on the Canadian Pacific road at Straight lake, the sum of nearly $80,000 which had been mailed from two banks here to Winnipeg was destroyed. One package of $10,000 was entirely destroyed, but there was enough of the second bundle left to enable the bank to recover several thousand dollars.

Its Shortage Is $71,000.

AUBURN, Ills., June 8.—The commissioners of Wood River township have received a telegram form the sheriff of Portland, Ore., to the effect that Peter Greenwood, the ex-township treasurer, is under arrest in that city. The necessary papers for his return here have been forwarded. Greenwood's total shortage now foots up over $73,000.

Lawyer Barton's Sufferings Ended.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 8.—An autopsy on the remains of Lawyer Barton, who died from what is supposed to have been hydrophobia by a cat's bite, is being held this morning. Medical experts from New York have charge of the autopsy in the interest of science.

Ishpeming's Mayor Failed.

ISHPEMING, Mich., June 8.—Timothy F. Donahoe, mayor of Ishpeming, director of the National bank, and a leading merchant, has closed his doors. The assets are placed at about $25,000, which will not nearly cover the liabilities.

THE ALLIANCE IS ACTIVE.

Polk and Simpson to Make a Big Tour.

EVERY STATE WILL BE VISITED.

By November the New Political Factor Will Be Able to Tell What Sort of a Stroke It Can Pull in the Presidential Race.

WASHINGTON, June 8.—Colonel L. Polk, president of the Farmers' National Alliance, and Congressman Jerry Simpson have gone to Lacrosse, Wis., to attend a convention of the different industrial organizations of that state which meets tomorrow for the purpose of uniting with the National Alliance as one working body. After the organization of the Alliance is completed they will make several speeches in that state, and then proceed to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, where mass meetings have been arranged by the Alliance leaders of those states to discuss the principles of the order.

Every State to Be Canvassed.

President Polk said: "Every state in the Union will be actively canvassed by the best talent in the Alliance in the way of speakers, lecturers and canvassers, who will fully explain the objects of the Alliance and what will be asked in the way of state and national legislation."

Work in Forty States.

President Polk has arranged through his forty state Alliance presidents to have mass meetings at several points in each of the forty states during the next four months with a view of accomplishing the greatest amount of work in the shortest possible time. He will have hundreds of speakers at work at the same time throughout the entire Union electrifying, as he says, the people to the Alliance cause before the meeting of the Fifty-second congress.

They Will Know Their Strength.

By the time the national convention meets in November he thinks the Alliance will be fully posted as to what strength the order will have as a presidential and congressional factor in 1892. President Polk has taken the field in person, and will visit every state from Maine to the Pacific coast.

The Strength of the New Party.

NEW YORK, June 8.—The Herald has looked up the strength of the People's party and learned from Farmers' Alliance presidents that Colorado has 3,000 members; California, 20,000 (8,000 of whom are new members); Georgia has 60,000+, New York, 25,000; Iowa, 15,000; Kansas, 120,000 (men and women); Kentucky, 100,000; Missouri, about 90,000; Maryland from 6,000 to 8,000 (mostly in the eastern shore counties); Mississippi, 40,000; Virginia, 60,000, and there are about 15,000 in the territories. [These are all the states which have perfected state organizations. Work is being vigorously pushed in Oregon, which now has 100 sub-alliances with about 4,000 members; New Jersey, with 50 sub-alliances and 2,500 members; Wyoming, Idaho, Minnesota, Washington and Wisconsin. The national officials say that in the February convention every state except those in New England will be represented.

The total strength of the Alliance, then, is about 1,270,000, but from this number must be taken off 20 per cent, representing the women and minors. This would leave the voting strength of the order at about 1,016,000.

Still More Voters.

The Herald adds: "In addition to the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union there are, according to Colonel H. M. Hemphyn, 300,000 voters in the Colored Farmers' Alliance almost wholly in the southern states.

"Then there is the Northwestern Alliance, with its strength in Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa and Wisconsin, with about 175,000 members; the Farmers' Mutual Benefit association, strong in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, with 100,000 members; the Patrons of Husbandry, with about 30,000 members; the Knights of Labor, with 300,000 members, and the Citizens' Alliance, the membership of which is problematical. Making a reduction of 20 per cent. in these organizations for non-voters and to the strength of the Alliance must be added 1,400,000 voters, making the total voting strength of the combination 2,420,000 throughout the country.

"It is questionable, however, if this strength can be held. The 800,000 negroes are unreliable and the Grangers or Patrons of Husbandry are not inclined to the third party plan wholly."

A Pennsylvania View.

Secretary Henry C. Deming, of Pennsylvania, says: "Our strength in Pennsylvania is considerably over 30,000. The growth since the Ocala convention has been much more rapid and solid than before. Nearly 200 Alliances have been organized in Pennsylvania since the Ocala meeting, and these 200 now have an average membership of over fifty each.

"The disposition in Pennsylvania is to give each of the old parties a fair trial, and if they will not accede to the demands of the Farmers' Alliance then to take independent action. The manner in which we have been treated thus far this year indicates that we will be driven to independent action before the nomination is made for the presidency.

A New Sub-Treasury Scheme.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 8.—The Alliance executive committee of Kansas is considering a scheme which practically places the sub-treasury plan of the National Farmers' Alliance in the hands of private capitalists. The plan is to establish a bank in each county of the state under the direction of the local Alliance exchange. The capital stock is to be furnished by private subscription. In connection with each bank an elevator or storehouse is to be built. A farmer may then dump his grain, corn or cotton into the storehouse, receiving for it a check for 80 per cent of the value on the grain deposited by paying a small percentage for storage insurance. He will be allowed to keep his grain in the depository until such time as he may deem it best to place it upon the market. The amount of produce deposited in this way must not exceed the amount of stock subscribed for by the farmers. Checks to be issued by these banks are made payable in gold or silver at any of the banks run in this manner. It is intended that they shall be circulated as money.

A Sheriff Assists Sunday Ball Players.

DETROIT, June 8.—Last week the police notified the officials of the Northwestern league team that they would not be allowed to play ball on Sunday. The club started to play just the same Sunday after noon and hoodwinked the police. A deputy sheriff was on the grounds, and when the police were seen coming he hurried to the field and calling the players around him said they were all under arrest for disturbing the peace. When asked if he was going to stop the game he told them to go on and play, which they did. The police saw the game from the stand, but could do nothing, as the men were the sheriff's prisoners.

No Sunday Games at Seven Pines.

RICHMOND, June 8.—There will be no Sunday games of baseball played on the historic battlefield of Seven Pines. Such a scheme has been under advisement, but it was abandoned by Charley Donati, who was the engineer of the movement in this end, and who found that public sentiment was decidedly against thus breaking the Sabbath. The idea was for the Association clubs to come here and play Sunday games. It was proposed that the Washington and Boston teams should meet on the former field of carnage on the 14th and the Baltimore and Washington the 21st, but they will not come.

EXCHANGING DRESSES.

PEOPLE WHO SUPPLY EXPENSIVE COSTUMES FOR A SONG.

Where the Four Hundred of New York Sell Their Old Raiment and Here Many of the Four Hundred Themselves Secure Beautiful Gowns for a Small Price.

It is pretty generally understood that when a man of fashion has tired of his slightly worn clothing he disposes of it to his valet, who in turn disposes of it to a tailor, or to any needy friend or relative who will take it out of his way. But what becomes of the gowns the fashionable women wear once and then discard for ever? They are never seen again; but they are utterly useless to the servants, and to throw upon poor relations the burden of a fashionable gown of grenade and brocade would be like giving Dresden china to a man who has nothing to eat.

Sometimes one is tempted to believe that there is a kind of dress bureau to which these wonderful confections which flit before us for a moment are traced with set tenets of human hands. How many a woman would like to revel in the glories of such a paradise.

But there is a more tangible solution to the question of what the fashionable woman does with her gowns. A secret—sacredly concealed—sort of dress exchange gives occupation to many gentlewomen of modest means, behind the veil of most profound gentility. The most flourishing exchange is so managed that the proprietor's own husband never dreams that his clever wife clothes her daughters off the proceeds of buying and selling other people's gowns.

These places are never advertised, for publicity would speedily kill patronage. One woman whispers to another of the wonderful bargains to be found at Mme. A——, and one matron suggests to another the advantage of leaving her cast off finery in this market. The woman proprietor is emphatically one of the elect, knowing and known of a large circle of friends.

COSTLY ROBES CHEAP.

Perhaps her husband has lost his money; perhaps his income will not keep the daughters in Paris gowns and pay the coupons for balls and dinners. The lady begins in a small way to act as an intelligent between the woman who would like to sell a gown and some other friend whom she fancies it will suit, and all for a small percent. But when larger sums are secured she deals in more important affairs. A society woman who goes to many dinners and balls finds at the close of the season a large number of valuable gowns on her hands.

Each has been worn but once, or possibly twice, and cannot be worn again. She sends them by private messenger to the exchange, and they are sold for whatever they will bring, generally about half their value, the seller receiving a commission on the amount she manages to secure for the gowns. Perhaps a lady gets a misfit gown that she cannot wear. That, too, goes quickly to the woman, who perhaps knows some one it will suit and notifies her. A lady going into mourning usually has many gowns, and jewelers well, to be sold, all of which bring a fair price.

Now as to the purchasers. They, too, are ladies either of a different social circle from those who sell, from economical motives, or perhaps of small means, who would never dream of buying gowns in a second hand place, but can find wonderful bargains in these exchanges.

Cured for Joy Forever.

A mother came to her daughter and said: "I'm very glad to hear, finally, for that one fact you confess to your cousin, that you are not likely to inherit the color of the hair, and likely to inherit the eyes."

The lecture that she was preparing in the next few places afforded a scene on the poisoning line been discovered, in strong solution, in ordinary water. Plenty of water will cause it to precipitate, but it will not be obtained. Of course, after the introduction begins to show itself, the antidote is applied which, with black and mustard the eruption and swelling. The ointment is applied usually in which hand, which can be procured at any grocer's in small bottles. This is very good for the slight cases, but it has a tendency to relieve the itching and smarting sensation more than to check the spread and growth of the inflammation.

Perhaps one of the best things is to procure some common black wash at a drug store, and use it as a lotion twice a day for half an hour at a time. Between these times keep the poisoned surface covered with cold water dressings or ointments of some soft nature. Another good wash is a teaspoonful of sugar of lead to a pint of water, applied as a wash several times a day. Poison from ivy or sumach can be treated in this way, but it is well to state that neither one of these poisons is dangerous.

It requires about three or four weeks for the attacks to run their full course, and then the poisoned parts begin to heal up of themselves. Remedies can simply alleviate the pain and sometimes partly check the inflammation, but cannot entirely prevent and cure the poison at once. The eruptions seldom show themselves until a day or two after contact with the poisons, and after that there is no danger from coming in contact with another person.

Although the poisoning sometimes assumes the appearance of a very serious case the result is never permanent. No scars or disfigurements ever mark the skin or show after the poison has disappeared. The poison is a fluid which exists in all parts of the plants, but especially in the leaves. Though some persons are not affected by it at all, others are so sensitive to the acid that it is not necessary for them to come in contact with the vines to get poisoned.—Yankee Blade.

The Guelph Display.

Now look at this little blue bag, once belonging to Queen Charlotte, and vaguely described as made of silk, although it is to all appearance knitted with silk, possibly by the queen herself, who was fond of this occupation. The blue web ground is divided into lozenges by crossed rows of gold beads, and in each diamond a white fleur de lis is inserted, according to the Scotch knitting, being relieved with a double bar of the gold beads, employed also for the motto "Amitie" (friendship), inscribed in capital letters across the top. There is this respect as we find specimens of stocking, beaded and inlaid knitting.

A quite different decoration can be seen in the handkerchief sachet made by Queen Adelaide. On the white satin foundation, now mellowed by time, creeps a spray of fragrant roses; each raised bloom is deftly fashioned with white crepe, and cleverly beaded with beads embroidered with silk and chenille foliage. What, indeed, can be said of the christening robe of Princess Victoria, the most entirely beautiful composition with the exquisite creations of our days, nor does it call for any outburst of delight and wonder from visitors; yet it has a charm of its own, and therefore deserves to be noticed for its originality.

Made in ivory satin, the robe displays an open and floral pattern, but several glossy and matter beauty, combine so rather as to form a ribbon, while open work is filled in with different stitches, through which must be added satin diamonds edged with pinking and perforated with a small design in eyelet holes. The various parts are finally rendered conspicuous by raised strands in floss silk and fly tufts somewhat like a daisy fringe.—Queen.

A Fled Sociable.

"Compliments of Miss Dollie Dutton, for Wednesday evening, March 11, at 8 p. m. Fled sociable."

"Now, Jack," mused I, "may be the nature of a 'Fled sociable?'"

As one lives to learn I bethought me that it might be as well to find out by asking.

When the guests had all assembled in Miss Dollie's spacious parlors they were informed that many small articles had been hidden in various places in the parlors and hall, and a list of them was read aloud. They consisted of various toys, pictures, knives, watch keys, whistles and a number of small boxes filled with tiny bonbons. There were two first prizes, one to be given to the lady, the other to the gentleman finding the greatest number of articles. For the first was a quaint little coffee spoon, with gold bowl and curiously wrought silver handle; for a photograph holder was to reward like skill on the part of some gentleman. Should any one fail to find a single article he or she was to be rewarded with a booby prize.

Then the fun began. From vases and rose jars, from folds of portieres and window curtains, from beneath low easy chairs and lounges, from behind pictures, and in short from all likely and unlikely places, some of them having been stowed away with a degree of cunning that was almost diabolical, the "lost" things were brought to light and reported to the committee until but one small article remained unfound —the tiny gold thimble that fitted, but sel. dom adorned, Miss Dollie's pretty pink digit. This was finally discovered in the hat of one of the guests which hung innocently in the proper place on the hat rack. —New York Herald.

Cooling Off the Old Love.

An Arab woman, when left a widow, mourns her husband devoutly, but, like other widows, if she has the opportunity she may be married again. The night before her second marriage she pays a visit to her husband's grave. There she kneels and prays him not to be offended. As, however, she feels he will be offended, the widow brings with her a donkey laden with two goatskins filled with water. The prayer ended, she proceeds to pour the water on the grave to keep the first husband cool under the circumstances about to take place, and having well saturated him she then departs.—Iowa State Register.

Vaseline for Sore Throat.

For a sore or raw throat without much inflammation an excellent, soothing, emollient application is vaseline. A mass the size of a hazel nut should be taken into the mouth, and as it melts, which it does almost instantly, it should be allowed to trickle slowly back and down the throat.

The finishing of a dress is the most important part. Nothing is more unsatisfactory than a dress only half put together. There are so many little neat touches and so little that a well fitted dress stays in place and does not get out of shape with wear.

DEER HUNTING IN THE ROCKIES.

In a Few Years There Will Be No More Available for Sportsmen's Lodges.

The hunting of deer in the Rockies is fast driving them north into British America, and in a few more years our Indians will have no more buckskin to trade with the pale faces. Only the skin of the heavy hided deer can be used, that of the antelope and white tailed varieties being too tender for long service, says The Great Divide, in which we find the following:

The Apaches make their moccasins and leggins in one piece, in the style of hunting boots, while most of the Indians to the north wear slippers and leggins. Whenever a deer is killed and cut up the bladder is carefully cut away, cleaned and filled with the brain of the animal, and the little bag is most carefully guarded until a stream is reached, where the hide may be soaked. The entire skin is then put into running water and weighted down with stones. In four or five hours the soaking has swelled it and loosed the hair at the roots, when it is taken out and stretched on a frame, while the owner, with the aid of a cleansed rib of the animal, scrapes it down until the hair is rubbed off, very much in the same manner as overheated horses are scraped to remove the foam and sweat. The skin is then pulled and stretched for three or four hours, and at the same time oiled with the brain until it is perfectly dry, soft and pliable, when it is ready for use. When a tan color is desirable it is soaked in an infusion of red bark. The sole of the moccasin is always made of the raw hide of beef cattle and sewed to the upper with the sinews of the deer's tendon.

Chamois Skins.

Chamois skins should never be left in water after using, but should be wrung out and hung up to dry, spread out carefully so as to leave no wrinkles; neither should they be used to wipe off colors, as paint stains form hard spots and help the skin to wear out sooner. Chamois was never intended to wipe the face and hands with, and this should be avoided also, as the skins are liable to become greasy thereby. Never put a chamois skin into warm water—nothing shove lukewarm, as it will curl up, become thick, tough and useless. To bring back chamois that has been ruined by greasy paint, or has been used as a towel until it has all the resemblance of a dirty old rag, the following is recommended: Take a bucket of clean water, making it middling strong with ammonia; soak the skin in it over night, and the next morning rinse it out in pure water, after which use freely of pure white castile soap and water. It is claimed that the process will insure a very good skin again, available for considerable further service. The whole operation, aside from the soaking, need take no longer than a quarter of an hour, and in reality the skin after this treatment is, according to Hide and Leather, better than at first, having become thoroughly broken in and free from lint and other impurities.

Customs of Dining at a Late Hour.

M. Franklin explains in one of his curious essays on the private life of the Frenchmen of the present generation of Parisians that the custom of dining at a late hour is nothing but a return in the habit of the Seventeenth century, and that the Eighteenth century was a mere interval between the shifting of the hour of dinner and changing that has confused and worried the would-be cheerful diner. The only difference between the present day and the Seventeenth century is that what was then called supper is now known by the grandiloquent name of dinner.

Charles V had his breakfast at 10 o'clock, and only ate two meals a day, and his chronicles report that he supped "in a very good time." The oldest French cookery book, dating from the Seventeenth century, fixes the breakfast hour at the same time at which it is now fixed among the upper classes. "Nobody," says this old oracle, "should eat before the hour of 8, unless he be ill or feeble." It then goes on to put down a law the application of which at the present time would put most people into rather an awkward position.

To eat once a day, says The Menagier in quaint old French, is to lead an angelic life.

To eat twice is to be human.

Ten to eat three or four times is "vie de beste."

Effects of Music on Animals.

The keeper of a menagerie was once asked whether the band had any effect on the animals:

"To be sure it does," said he; "they like it, and therefore it does them good. If you were to come in and look at them in a morning when the band is perambulating the town, you would see many of them, the more savage beasts in particular, dull and moping, and either sitting or lying in their dens. We who travel with wild beasts cannot, of course, give them the room they ought to have, and being cribbed up in show boxes they degenerate for want of exercise, do what we will with them. But it would be very much worse, I reckon, if it were not for the music. When they hear the band strike up they rouse themselves, and begin taking what exercise they can, the beasts of prey by walking backward and forward, and the others by regulating their movements natural to them when at liberty. The birds will begin to chaffer and plume themselves at the sound, and even the snakes at times will uncoil and rear up, and convince the people, who sometimes seem to doubt the fact, that they are living creatures."

Biblical Facts and Figures.

It is told that the Bible contains 3,566,480 letters, 773,746 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189c hapters and 66 books. The word and occurs 46,277 times, the word Lord 1,855 times. The word reverend occurs but once, which is in the 9th verse of the 111th Psalm. The middle verse is the 8th verse of the 118th Psalm. The 21st verse of the 7th chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter j. The 19th chapter of II. Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah are alike. The longest verse is the 35th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther. The shortest verse is the 35th verse of the 111th chapter of St. John. There are no words or names of more than six syllables.

Plagiarism.

A considerable amount of plagiarism has been the subject of much complaint. A modified change is the instance of the old story of the cobbler who, on being remonstrated with when discovered at his delinquencies at the shoemaker's bench for his wife's funeral, replied, "Business first and business after," and like "the spinner" in Hardy when spoken to as to being on a lump of sugar, responded, "Business now and pleasure when it's swarm weather."

When you buy a pair of shoes you make, on a small scale, what is just as much of an investment as though you bought a hundred shares of railroad stock. From this investment you look for a return. If the shoes have not been misrepresented, you'll get it; if they have been you won't. What we claim for our shoes is that you run no risk when you invest in them—that it will pay you to buy our $3.00 shoe.

BALANCED ROCKS.

Striking Peculiarities of These Formations—The Cause of the Balancing.

The so called "balanced rocks" are not very uncommon, and are found in nearly all countries. Some of these are of glacial origin, having been left in their peculiar position by the melting of the glacier which brought them from some distant locality, while others have been carved out on the spot by the destructive action of the elements, especially by the erosive effect of sand blown by the wind, this natural sandblast having an almost irresistible power. The strangely carved rock formations of Colorado and the Rocky Mountains are due to this cause, while the glacier-borne bowlders are more common in New England and sections of the country lying north of the Ohio river.

THE BALANCED ROCK OF TANDIL.

The remarkable example shown in the cut, reproduced from La Nature, occurs at Tandil, South America, now Buenos Ayres. The Popular Science News says that the most striking peculiarity of this and other balanced stones is the fact that they can readily be made to move or oscillate by the application of a comparatively weak force. The stone of Tandil, for instance, can be moved by pushing it with a single finger; but the center of gravity is so low that only a small amount of vibration can be produced, and it would not be possible to overturn it by any ordinary means. The cause of the balancing of these rocks is not very mysterious. It is simply a case of natural balancing, due to the shape of the rock and the force of gravitation.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE TWENTY-FIRST SESSION HELD LAST EVENING.

The Gas Franchise Talked Over But Not Granted.—Another Company Also Applies for a Franchise.

The City Common Council met in adjourned session last evening for the purpose of conferring with the citizens as to the advisability of granting a franchise to another gas company.

It was 8:40 o'clock when City Clerk Coward called the meeting to order. In the absence of the President, Councilman Moffett occupied the chair pro tem.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting was dispensed with.

On motion of Mr. Spangenberg the regular order of business was suspended for the evening.

The clerk then read the call for the evening.

On motion it was decided to begin with the business for which the meeting was called.

A petition from I. S. Elkins & Company asking Council to grant them a franchise to erect and establish a gas works in this city, was read and referred to the Committee on Streets. The document set forth that the company would not at any time charge over $1.25 per thousand for gas for illuminating purposes and 60 cents per thousand for gas for domestic use.

The document of Mr. Ackerman was referred to the Committee on Public Lights.

Mr. Moffett offered those present supposed to be citizens a chance to express themselves. No one responded presumably from want of confidence in the sincerity of the offer.

Mr. Spangenberg stated that owing to a death in the family, one of the petitioners for a franchise was unable to be present.

Mr. Post spoke in behalf of the I. S. Elkins Company. He said that the company could furnish gas to the consumers at $1.25 per thousand feet and make a reasonable profit. The company, he said, have adopted all the recent improvements and can furnish light for illuminating purposes as cheap as natural gas.

If the company could establish works here and furnish gas for domestic use at 60 cents per thousand feet it would be used a great deal instead of coal, as it would be much cheaper.

Mr. Rushmore moved to adjourn and the motion prevailed.

TWO ACCIDENTS.

A Telephone Lineman and a Bicyclist Injured.

Yesterday afternoon Joseph Eder, a lineman for the Postal Telegraph company, met with a painful accident. He was engaged repairing a cross-arm on a telegraph pole on West Second street, when he missed his spur, slipped and fell to the ground.

His right arm was broken near the shoulder and he was more or less bruised about the body.

Mr. Robert Spooner of Grove street, North Plainfield, is recovering from a painful accident which befell him about a week ago. Mr. Spooner was riding a bicycle and was racing with a friend on Front street, near Dunellen, as he neared Evens he turned to see how far his friend was behind him. In doing so he lost control of the wheel and he was thrown to the ground with great force. His right leg became entangled in the wheel and was badly wrenched. He was badly cut on the hand and bruised about the head and body. His friend procured a carriage and took him to his home, where Dr. Jenkins attended him.

Mr. Spooner is now able to walk out with the aid of a cane, but is very lame.

Christian Endeavor Conventions.

The arrangements for the four-day convention of the International Association of the Societies of the Christian Endeavor, to be held in Minneapolis in July, are nearly completed.

Negotiations with the central and trunk roads have agreed to grant the delegates single fare rates.

It has been arranged to hold the next State Convention in Newark on October 23, 24 and 25 at the First Presbyterian church. A committee on programme has been appointed, and any information desired can be procured from Rev. William Hoppaugh, Springfield, the transportation agent.

Snatched Her Pocketbook.

Mrs. Joseph H. Bolsterli, of East Second street, was passing along Washington street, at nine o'clock Saturday evening, when a tall man wearing a slouch hat grabbed her by the arm and snatched a purse containing $15 from her hand. Mrs. Bolsterle has ever since been prostrated from the nervous shock. There is no clue to her assailant.

HER HUSBAND A THIEF.

The Distress of a Bride Over the Confession of Her Husband.

Reports were recently made to the county police authorities of numerous robberies of barns, poultry houses and granaries of farms in this, Middlesex and Somerset counties. The depredations have extended over six months.

On Sunday County Detective Keron and Detective John M. C. Marsh traced the thefts to Louis Wahl and August Arnold, who were living together in a small house near what is known as "The Fairs," midway between Metuchen and Plainfield.

The prisoners were taken to police headquarters in Elizabeth, where they were held until yesterday. Wahl is over fifty years of age. He persisted in his innocence, but Arnold, who is about twenty-five years old, frankly confessed to sharing in the thefts. Four weeks ago Arnold was married to a respectable young woman who lived with a family at Roselle as a domestic. She had no suspicion that her husband was engaged in such work, and her grief was pitiful to behold when Detective McGrail put the handcuffs on Arnold at police headquarters preparatory to taking him to the county jail. She threw her arms around the prisoner, kissed him and clung to him until she had to be gently removed by the officers and placed in Chief Tenney's room. There she became hysterical. Mean while her husband was taken to the jail.

When Wahl saw the grief of the young woman, he also broke in confession and said he planned the robberies, and "broke in" his youthful companion. The men were committed to jail.

THERE WAS NO CORPSE

FOR REVENGE A MAN SUMMONS HIS RELATIVES TO HIS FUNERAL.

James Smith of South Plainfield, who Thought he Was Ill-Used by His Wife's Relatives, Adopts a Novel Method to Revenge Himself.—He Watches Them Search for His Body.

No one ever suspected that James Smith, who lives at South Plainfield, was a joker. In fact every one thought he was a very sober-minded sort of fellow until the other day, when he gave the community a shock by having a funeral over himself—making arrangements for the obsequies and then welcoming the mourners.

James is a married man, but he has never lived much with Lizzie, his wife, because Lizzie's family were opposed to the match, and since the marriage have had sufficient influence to keep the couple separated. Lizzie went to work for a living, but "Jim" has "sort of lived around" in one place or another. All this time he has been considering a scheme of revenge against his wife's folks for keeping him in hot water and estranging his wife from him.

Last Sunday week he hit on a plan and spent the first few days of the week in perfecting it. Thursday morning he sent despatches to all his wife's relatives in Maryland, Long Island and New York, signing his wife's name and telling them that Jim was dead. He appointed his funeral for three o'clock Friday afternoon. He took the precaution of sending the telegrams "collect."

Friday noon "Jim," clad in his old clothes and comfortably smoking a clay pipe, seated himself upon a rail fence behind a brush heap to see the mourners arrive. When the train came in there were at least twenty mourners, most of them women. They brought flowers and other funeral offerings, and while the men of the party asked the way to Lizzie Smith's house, "Jim" heard the women moralize about his untimely death and tell each other that he was not such a bad fellow after all. Then the mourners trooped over to the supposed house of mourning, while "Jim" smiled softly to himself and proceeded to put the rest of his plan into execution.

On a piece of brown paper, in rude characters, he printed a sign, "I have gone to the woods to hang myself," and pinned it on a rail fence in a conspicuous position. Then he went to the post-office, and taking out a letter which he had previously written to himself over his wife's signature, read it aloud to the crowd. In it he begged himself to return to his wife, who was longing for his presence. As an evidence of his wife's good feeling he left it in the village store and went out.

The wife's relatives went back to the railroad station pretty mad. About the same time the villagers discovered the "Jim's" sign in the field. Searching parties scoured the neighborhood for "Jim's" body, but they did not find it. The mourning relatives went back home and said they wouldn't attend another one of "Jim's" funerals even if the corpse was produced. Saturday night "Jim" was found working in Plainfield and the excitement abated.

Ruinous to the Bass.

There are many fishermen who believe that the season for black bass fishing opens too early and results in the destruction of many of their young. Hundreds of bass can be seen guarding their spawning beds along the shores of the lakes, and these are the ones which suffer when fly casting begins. It is said spawn which survives the eggs and young fish of the parents' care, but the law sanctions it and no amount of moralizing can prevent it. Just as soon as the old bass is removed from the nest the spawn or young are exposed to the attacks of sunfish, perch, eels, turtles and water beetles, but while the parent fish stands guard nothing dares venture into the cleanly marked circle which is fanned constantly by fin and tail. Anything dropped within the nest is quickly removed by the old fish, and some take advantage of this habit to capture the bass. A naked hook is dropped into the circle, and when the old fish tries to remove it the line is jerked upward and the fish is hooked.

In the Court.

STREET RAILWAYS.

Facts About Those Operated in the State.

According to the report of the State Board of Assessors there are twenty-five horse railroad companies doing business in this State. They operate 209¾ miles of track; have a capital stock issued of $7,797,500; a paid-up capital stock of $6,171,920.50; a funded debt of $6,856,600, and other debts amounting to $462,209.80. The cost of these roads, including equipments and appurtenances, was $16,481,-242.93. The expenditures for repairs, superintendence, management, etc., during the fiscal year was $1,997,144.54, and the gross receipts were $2,339,560.95. Only five out of the twenty-five paid dividends. These were the Newark passenger railway, $27,000; Newark and South Orange Horse Car Railroad Com. pany, $11,818.14; North Boulton County Railway Company, $38,301; Paterson Horse Railroad Company, $2,000, and Phillipsburg Horse Car Railroad Company, $900, making the total amount paid in dividends to all the shareholders of horse car stock in the State $80,019.14.

The City Railway Company of Trenton, recently sold, had ten miles of track, $90,000 of paid up capital stock, $90,000 of funded debt, and $22,400 floating indebtedness. The cost of the road and equipments was $200,000. The expenditures for repairs, superintendence, management, etc., $75,015.84; the gross receipts but $70,617.18, or a falling behind in running expenses of nearly $5,000. The figures are for the year ending December 31st, 1890, last reported.

The same reports shows that the Trenton Horse Railroad has eleven miles of tracks and $36,100 of paid up capital stock. Their funded debt is $100,000 and their floating debt $91,000. The cost of their railroad, including equipments and appurtenances, was $188,623.16. The expenditures for repairs, etc., was, for the current year, $53,541.05; the gross receipts $58,470.57. No dividend was paid.

Litter in the Streets.

The following from the Newark Journal is meant for the city of Newark, but it applies so well to other places that we reproduce it:

The Journal has reminded citizens of the duty incumbent upon them of refraining from littering the streets with waste paper and sweepings from their offices and business places. If our streets are to be kept clean and presentable a restraint must be placed upon the careless habits of people.

So far as possible our streets should be kept as clean as our houses, and this, as every one knows, can only be done by attending to these small details. No one would think of throwing banana skins or orange skins on the floor of his house, or of tearing up letters and scattering pieces around the floor. It would be intensely revolting to see pieces of torn these of an exceedingly ill-bred person, and that they would involve the necessity of setting some one to work to clean up the litter thus made. Public opinion can be educated to bring about a reform in this matter, and it has been known to be as particular in the streets as they are in their own houses the problem of street cleaning will be simple enough.

Westfield Musical Society Concert.

The Westfield Musical Society gave its fourth and last concert in the First Methodist Episcopal Church at Westfield last night. The programme was made up of thirteen numbers, selected by the director, Prof. C. Mortimer Wiske. The following artists' names were on the programme: Mrs. Anna Burch, soprano; Miss Florence Bell, contralto; Mr. J. Adolph Johnson, violinist, and a quartet from the Mendelssohn Glee Club of New York, composed of William Albert Prime, tenor; Thomas M. Pearson, tenor; Alec Irving, baritone, and Robinson, basso.

Report Favorable.

ASBURY PARK, June 9th. (Special.)—The General Synod, which is in session here, reported favorably to-day on consolidating the Dutch Reformed church of America and the Reformed church of the United States. The report will be sent to the particular Synod which will meet next year and then back to this Synod in 1893.

REFORMED CHURCH SYNOD.

More Money to be Given to Theological Students.

The business meetings of the eighty-fifth annual session of the General Synod of the Reformed church in America were resumed yesterday afternoon at Asbury Park. The Synod received for a rising vote eighteen fraternal delegates from the General Synod of the Reformed church of the United States. The delegation was headed by the Rev. Dr. Fishback, of New York. The address of welcome was made by President Corwin and was responded to by Dr. Fishback. A long discussion ensued over the expenditures of the Board of Education. Rev. Dr. Teneck and others made fervent appeals to the Synod in behalf of the young men who are studying for the ministry and are without the necessary means for their support while pursuing their theological studies. The Synod decided to give them more money. A public meeting was held this evening under the auspices of the Board of Foreign Missions. The board supports missions in China, India and Japan. Last year the board expended $115,000. The board reported two large additions to the Neerbusch Hospital at Sioke, China, one of which is used for female lepers, and for persons suffering from the opium habit.

Encouraging to Farmers.

Secretary Dye, of the State Board of Agriculture, has the following words of encouragement for farmers:

The returns in the crop bulletin of September 5th, 1890, relative to the increase in prices of all farm products, owing to short crops both in the United States and Europe, have been fully verified, and stand now with as much force as they did then.

The prospect for a good wheat crop for 1891 in the United States, judging from the May report of the Department of Agriculture, is 97.9, or very near full condition. But should later returns sustain present hopes we are promised by a full crop in European countries is far from flattering, so that at present at least there is no good ground for decrease in price to the producer, nor is it at all likely that there will be.

The acreage in corn will be somewhat larger in certain sections than it was last year, but late frost and continued cold weather is retarding its growth. It will pay to take good care of this crop, as feeding stuffs, in view of the increased and increasing cost of meats, will continue to bring better prices. Meadow grass for hay in New Jersey has received a set back by reason of dry weather, and early and continuous cool weather since, from which it is believed it will not be able to recover even with favorable weather from this on.

Farmers having a surplus of hay on hand may well consider the prospects for the growing crop before disposing of it. The information now available from all sources the indications are that everything the farmers can produce, if well grown, will bring paying prices. The May report of the United States Department of Agriculture says: "All indications point to an unusual degree of prosperity among farmers. The Western prices of corn and oats are more than a hundred per cent. higher than they were twelve months ago, wheat and meats very much advanced, and an upward movement in nearly all rural values, those of lands included, has already commenced, in spite of the fact that there has been no reduction of area planted, no dead line of limitation to rural expenditure fixed. Everywhere a hopeful feeling is voiced in our official correspondence." And again, after speaking of the advance in prices of beeves, the report says: "These indications of marked improvement are stimulating demand for farm lands and advancing the offerings as sent and also the prices of lands. The agricultural authority in Iowa estimates the advance in that State at $5 per acre. It is confidently believed that farm lands generally now promise to be good investments at present prices."

About Clean Money.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

It must have been noticed by most people in this vicinity who have much occasion to handle money, that the cleanliness of the bills in circulation, especially of the smaller denominations, has depreciated within a few years. A new bill is seldom seen; clean ones are rare, and the public are forced to handle and carry upon the person paper money which is exceedingly worn, dirty, and even foul. The remedy for the present state of things is in the hands of the people, so far as the people are represented by the banks. The Treasury Department is always ready to give clean bills or certificates for soiled ones, and offers to the banks the benefit of its own contract with the express companies, by which bills can be sent to and from Washington at the nominal rate of twenty-five cents a thousand.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

There was a good deal to die when Mrs. Margaret Mulhane, of New York, departed this life. She weighed 650 pounds.

This from the Chicago Tribune: "It is a good thing these cranks have met together and formed their so called People's party. They will now have to stand up and be counted, and fight for their notions alone."

Emerson said, "When you come alone, dine always as with the king." That is to say, even though you are at home, with nobody there but your own family, nobody but yourself even, observe always your best table manners.

The law against objectionable immigration is beginning to be enforced rigorously, and everybody will be glad of it. Criminals, paupers, lunatics, idiots and persons suffering from contagious diseases are sent back to their own country when caught, and they are now caught in the majority of cases. Europe has been unloading her population sewers on our shores long enough, and it is now time to draw the line. Now not a week passes in which some objectionable foreigners are not returned across the sea. We are already so loaded down by the simultaneous rush from all parts of Europe hither that it will take some time to assimilate the strangers we have and make good republican citizens out of them.

Our Unchristian Funerals.

From Harper's Easy Chair comes a protest in no measured terms against the present fashion of funerals. The expense of them is something terrible, and it costs as much as many persons can earn in a whole year to get even their dead bodies decently out of this world where they will have to work no more. But the expense is not the worst feature. That the Easy Chair considers to be the unseemly and unchristian demonstrations of woe and gloom. On this point the editor remarks:

It is a sad commentary on a Christian community, which takes that distinctive title from a religion whose founder is called the consoler, because his word plucks the sting from death, that it surrounds death with every circumstance of woe and gloom. The distinctive ministry of the Spirit seems to fail at that very point to which it is especially addressed. The natural Christian tone at the burial of the dead should seem the clearer that springs from the thought of immortality—a sublime hope, a heavenly consolation. The Christian thought in that hour should instinctively dwell upon the soul, not upon the body, and the simplest and most unostentatious rite of burial would seem to be the most truly Christian.

The most common symbol in the cemetery is the broken column, for that is most expressive. It is essentially unchristian, because Christian. It holds death to be but the gate of heaven, of a life eternal. It is, indeed, the resurrection and of visible communion, but it is not the end of the earthly life, it is the beginning of the heavenly, which every symbol and emblem should express.

"Needs of the Farmer."

The two hundred dollar prize essay on this subject which The Cosmopolitan Magazine publishes was written by an Ohio man, Abner L. Frazer, of Milford, Clermont county. Among the first conditions of successful farming he puts contentment with the business, its environments and results. In this Mr. Frazer has stated one of the profound underlying universal truths. Contentment with one's occupation is in fact one of the vital conditions of success therein. The very reason farmers are so often unhappy and discontented is because they are such chronic grumblers. They seem somehow almost to take a real enjoyment in believing that the crops are going to be bad, or if the crops are not bad, then the price of everything will be so low that there will be nothing in them anyhow. This mood of always being in the dumps about something must inevitably react on the man who encourages it, making him far less successful in his calling than he would be if he forced himself to be cheerful and look on the bright side of things. Mankind draw to themselves the things they fear.

Mr. Frazer believes that in a short time the equilibrium between manufacturing and agriculture will be so well established that we shall be able to use up our agricultural products at home. Then the farmer will be sure always of a market for his products and will be more prosperous. We come within 8 per cent. now of consuming in the United States all our agricultural products.

Another great need of the rural population now is combination. Farmers must combine hand in hand against the huge corporations that are intent on getting money and power regardless of God or man. In their insane greed these corporations do not hesitate to corrupt and control legislatures, or to even enter the field of politics and have their own minions elected to high office that they may fix their yoke upon the people more absolutely. They buy up newspapers, men and political parties. "Fight them," says Mr. Frazer, "fight them with all the power at command, and stop them from getting control of this republic."

Finally, instead of mere boasts of burden-tired animals who have not a thought above the plow or hoe—we want gentlemen farmers, men who know how to get for themselves culture and leisure.

THE BEHRING SEA BILL

It Has at Last Been Passed by Parliament.

LORD SALISBURY'S PACIFIC ACT.

Both the United States and Great Britain Will Refrain from Seal Killing Pending the Arbitration of the Disputed Questions That Have Caused Apprehension.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Serious trouble with Great Britain over the seals has been averted by the passage of the "closed season" bill by parliament. Anticipating this friendly action, pending arbitration, the United States notified its agents on the seal islands to stop the killing of seals by the North American Commercial company when it has taken 7,500, the number of seals which the administration in its correspondence with the British government for a "closed season" made one of the conditions of agreement, on the ground that it was necessary to permit the sealeries company to take this number as compensation for the expense of supporting and providing for the welfare of the 300 and odd natives who live on the islands and derive their livelihood from the sealing industry.

When this number has been taken seal killing is to be stopped and further orders awaited.

The Bill's Passage.

LONDON, June 9.—In the house of lords Lord Salisbury moved the second reading of the bill to enable her majesty, by order in council, to make special provision for prohibiting the catching of seals in Behring sea by her majesty's subjects during the period named in the award. He explained so his motion Lord Salisbury said that the Behring sea measure was intended to settle differences between the United States and Canada. The long pending differences upon the claims of the United States to stop the hunting of seals in Behring sea had been agreed upon in principle and referred to arbitration. He hoped the terms of arbitration were also almost agreed upon.

The Object of the Bill.

There was no reason to apprehend that, if no restrictions were placed on the destruction of seals while the arbitration was pending, a serious if not fatal blow might be inflicted upon the valuable industry in the United States. Therefore it had been agreed to forbid the killing of seals on islands in those parts of Behring sea within their jurisdiction, provided her majesty's government also prevented seal killing by British subjects. It seemed to him (Salisbury) clear that they would justly incur the censure not only of the United States but of the civilized world if they risked they extinction of this valuable industry.

Therefore they had introduced the present measure, which enabled her majesty's government by an order in council to forbid the killing of seals in Behring sea by British subjects.

Canada Had Consented.

To this Canada consented on two conditions. First, that the restrictions should proceed; second, that compensation be paid to the owners of fishing vessels sustaining loss through this action of the British government. He thought the latter condition was a more difficult question. Her majesty's government did not deny that if compensation had to be paid a part should fall upon England; but they were not inclined to admit that the whole should be borne by England.

The government would persuade the Canadian government to take a part over he did not know, but it was impossible to defer action until the difficulty was solved; therefore this measure (the bill) was the first instance, assumed liability, which could not in any case be heavy.

The Bill Passed.

Lord Kimberley (Liberal) had no criticism to offer against the bill and expressed satisfaction that there was every prospect of closing a long controversy with the United States.

In response to an inquiry from Lord Dunraven, Lord Salisbury said he believed that Russia was favorable to the British views on this subject and would adhere to the suspension of the slaying of seals. At the conclusion of the prime minister's remarks the bill was passed.

The Harrison Pension Case.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Referring to the published statement that during the time he was a United States senator Mr. Harrison exercised his influence to have the pension allowed which was the other day granted to Mrs. Elizabeth L. S. Harrison, his brother Kerr's widow, Pension Commissioner Raum said today: "An examination of the papers in the case and inquiry among those who have had charge of it for years fail to disclose any intercession whatever by General, Senator or President Harrison, or by any one representing him. The case was never pushed nowhere. The truth is Mr. Harrison never made any request at any time in any form affecting the pension which has been granted his brother's widow, and knowledge about the merits of the case at the time the pension was allowed. It went through on its merits alone."

He Is Short $16,000.

NASHVILLE, June 9.—W. R. Minchen, individual bookkeeper at the American National bank, is a defaulter to that institution to the extent of about $16,000 or $17,000. Minchen has been in the employ of the bank for the past six years, and until very recently had the confidence of the officers of the bank. Mr. Minchen left the city May 30, and has not been seen since. The deficit is fully covered by bonds of guarantee companies.

Twenty Tramps Arrested.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 9.—A wholesale arrest of twenty suspected thieves was made by the New Castle police at Lawrence junction. The men were in camp in the woods and large quantities of silver and jewelry were found in their possession. All were committed by the mayor as vagrants and three-quarters of thieves. They will have a hearing Thursday. Nothing is known as to whom the valuables belong.

They Fought Over a Girl.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 9.—Two Swanson brothers, employed as watchmen on the West Shore road above Target Hill, had a controversy over a girl, when Peter swung a slungshot and fractured the skull of Charles in two places. It is thought that the unfortunate man will die. His assailant was arrested and incarcerated in the jail in this city.

The Itata to Sail Saturday.

IQUIQUE, June 9.—The Itata will be ready on Saturday to sail for California.

THOMPSON IS THE MAN.

Nearly All the Conservatives Want Him to Succeed Macdonald.

OTTAWA, June 9.—The political situation is beginning to assume definite shape. Sir John Thompson is the almost unanimous selection of the Conservative members of the commons and senate for premier. Hon. Mr. Abbott, who has been urged for the position, has stated that he would only accept it when no other man is possible. The cabinet will be reconstructed and the strongest men are to be taken from each province.

It will in all probability be composed of Thompson, from Nova Scotia; Foster, from New Brunswick; Chapleau and Langevin, from Quebec, and Dalton, McCarthy or Meredith, and Bowell, from Ontario.

Sir John Macdonald's remains lie in the great dining hall at Earnscliffe. The casket stands on a pedestal in the center of the room, and all of the appointments are most imposing. Lady Macdonald has somewhat recovered from the prostration consequent upon her husband's death. The ministers of the late cabinet met in the morning at 10 o'clock, after which they left the council chamber in carriages for Earnscliffe to view the remains of the late premier. The cabinet ministers will act as pallbearers at the funeral on Wednesday.

Phoebe Couzins Protests.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Miss Phoebe Couzins appeared in a protest to Secretary Foster against paying the bill of Rand & McNally, of Chicago, for printing the minutes of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian exposition during the time Miss Couzins was secretary. Miss Couzins alleges that she supplied the printers with the manuscript of the minutes which were a correct portrayal of the proceedings. At that time her status as secretary was undisputed. After she had been deposed the manuscript was withdrawn from Rand & McNally, altered, garbled and mutilated, returned to the printers in that condition and so printed; that a printed the minutes are not a correct account of what occurred at the meetings, and she therefore protests against the payment by the treasury department of Rand & McNally's bill. Assistant Secretary Nettleton will investigate the matter.

Baltimore's Turf Scandal.

BALTIMORE, June 9.—Another hearing was given the horsemen who were expelled last week at the Pimlico Driving park, and after hearing several witnesses a majority of the judges decided to reverse Frank Herdic, pool seller, and William Achuff, driver of the horse Tom Hamilton. Evidence was offered by both that they were not concerned in the steal. In vindicating himself, Achuff stated under oath that Davis, the owner of the horse, had offered him a bribe to pull the horse and that he had refused; that the animal had been fed while he was at dinner. Brewster, 18 stated, had been given $250 to throw the heat in which the horse was pulled. Herdic and Achuff were then reinstated, but Davis, the owner of the horse, Brewster, the driver, and the horse remain expelled from all tracks of the National association.

Denver's Walking Match.

DENVER, June 9.—The six day go-as-you-please pedestrian contest was begun here in the morning at 12:05 at Coliseum hall on a track of sixty laps to the mile. The starters were: Gus Guerrero, of San Francisco, his brother Pat; Tom Cox, of Philadelphia; Frank Hart (colored), of Boston; Moore, of Brooklyn; Carter, champion of England; Peter Hegelman, of New York; George Conner, of New York, and Dena, of Santa Barbara, Cal. The score at 12 noon was as follows: Cartwright, 70 miles; Conner, 71; Hegelman, 66; Pat Guerrero, 70; Moore, 69; Cox, 65; Gus Guerrero, 61; Dena, 54.

He Fought the Lynchers.

WICKLIFFE, Ky., June 9.—At 1 a. m. a mob lynched Evans Shelby in the jail at this place. Evans murdered Mrs. Sallie Moore, near Woodville, in October, 1888, for money. Shelby made a desperate resistance, fighting as long as life lasted. Some of the lynchers were badly hurt. The mob is reported to have previously hanged Mart Shelby, under indictment as accessory, in a cowper extillen manner. A working model circulating hot water through coils of pipe through a train of cars is shown.

Tammany Owns the Bridge.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The result of the annual meeting of the New York and Brooklyn bridge trustees was a surprise in that, although New York city only owns one-third of the big span, Tammany now contains the structure. Many of the Brooklyn members were absent, while the New York members were out in force. Ex-Senator Wagner, a Tammany man, was elected president of the board, and ex-Mayor Howell, of Brooklyn, vice president.

The Trial of Elliott.

COLUMBUS, O., June 9.—In the Elliott trial two more witnesses testified that Elliott had threatened prior to the shooting that in case Osborne ever published anything derogatory to his wife and family he would kill both. Their testimony was unshaken by rigid cross examination. Elliott's family were present for the first time, and his wife and five children occupied seats near the prisoner and his attorneys.

Their Lives Threatened by Detectives.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., June 9.—Master Workman Wise and Secretary Parker, active leaders in the late coke strike, declare that threats have recently been made against their lives by Pinkerton detectives. Parker says he was deliberately shot at Saturday night near Wheeler. The two labor leaders are in possession of positive proof of hiring officers to investigate the matter.

Acker to Leave Politics.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., June 9.—Assemblyman Milo M. Acker will not seek re-election this fall. Mr. Acker says he is not a candidate for any political office hereafter, and in future will devote himself to his law business. He says positively he has no designs on Senator Fassett's seat as has been stated.

FOR EIGHTY-FIVE YEARS.

That Is the Maximum Penalty for Bardsley.

JOHN WANAMAKER'S STATEMENT.

He Was Only a Depositor in the Keystone Bank and Not an Officer—His Dealings with President Marsh and the Late John C. Lucas.

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—If ex-Treasurer "Honest John" Bardsley, of this city, gets what many people think would be his just deserts, he will pass the remainder of his life behind prison bars. He has just been indicted by the grand jury upon seventeen counts.

Eighty-five Years in Jail.

If he should be convicted upon each count, which seems quite probable, and should suffer the maximum penalty, "Honest John" would have just eighty-five years in prison for his alleged misdeeds.

The indictments charge the prisoner with misappropriating $20,000 of city money and embezzling over $400,000 of state funds. The district attorney has abandoned the charge of official perjury, as it is now believed that Bardsley never took the oath of office. The only oath he appears to have taken is the one attached to his bond to the state.

The Postmaster General's Testimony.

The charges against the Keystone bank's affairs Postmaster General Wanamaker was the chief witness, and a big crowd of prominent business men listened attentively to the tale, which he presented in writing before the cross-examination.

Mr. Wanamaker said he had never been an officer of the Keystone bank. But was simply a depositor. Although his confidence in the bank was shaken at the time of the run, he continued to make deposits, and in the December previous to the failure placed $1,350,000 there.

Never Knew of Irregularities.

"I never knew," said Mr. Wanamaker, "of any irregularities in the Keystone bank until after the run, when Mr. Lucas' indebtedness was made known to the directors, and it was said that his estate intended to refund to the bank, which I was informed it had means to do. I was told by Mr. Marsh that he feared some of the stock I held as collateral was not properly issued.

"I had no knowledge that the bank was going to close when it did. All discounts granted to my firm or myself were made in the customary manner. If the directors were ignorant of the fact we were not aware of their ignorance.

He Wanted $50,000.

"On one occasion Mr. Marsh called on us, saying that he wanted $50,000 of our paper, not for the Keystone bank, but for county banks. We gave it to him. For some time we permitted the bank to turn over the proceeds, and finally got them by piecemeal. Before this paper was paid we learned it was in the Keystone, and we had an intimation that it had been secured from us under some pressure for use at the clearing house.

His Connection with Lucas.

"I never had any person, directly or indirectly, to go to the secretary of the treasury or the controller for the receivership of the Keystone bank, or to any one else, nor did I ask any one to endeavor to influence the appointment, remotely or otherwise. I never had a business transaction with Mr. Bardsley, individually or as city treasurer, or with any one representing him in either capacity." Then came the most important part of Mr. Wanamaker's statement about his connections with Lucas' dead president. Here is what Mr. Wanamaker said:

"During 1887, upon the belief that Mr. Lucas was a rich man, I told him of my desire to assist in preserving the independence of the Reading railroad, and that I thought the purchase of certain holdings of the stock would be profitable and useful, and invited him to join me in such a purchase. The agreement between us was verbal, and to the effect that Lucas was to personally advance any sums of money as I called for them and deposit the same to my personal account in the Keystone. In accordance with that agreement I drew checks to the amount of $1,000 against the money which I believed was deposited by him.

He Irregularly Issued Stock.

"Upon several occasions, when I notified Lucas that under our agreement money was needed, he brought me stock of the Keystone bank in one lump for the money, as it was not convenient for him to furnish cash at the time. As a result, when he died I had in my possession 250 shares of the bank's stock. After his death I found that he had not made the deposits to my credits as he agreed and that my account stood overdrawn. I immediately made the amount good by drawing it with commercial paper received in my business, which was all duly paid.

"Lucas therefore did not furnish a penny for the purchase of the Reading stock I hold, and all I had for his share in the operation was the certificates of stock of the Keystone left with me as collateral. No intimation was ever given that the stock was irregularly issued until Marsh, shortly after the run on the bank in December, called it in question and desired to have the stock returned to the bank. This I declined to do because I had not obtained it from the bank, and because I did not believe the stock was overissued.

"Finally I found the stock was overissued, and I returned it to the Lucas estate. In brief, I was a depositor, but not an endorser. I did not know the bank would fail, nor did I delay or touch in any way the appointment of a receiver. I am absolutely ignorant of any transaction with Bardsley within or without the bank. Instead of the bank losing a penny by me I have only been its profitable customer."

His Dealings with Marsh.

In regard to his dealings with Marsh, Mr. Wanamaker said: "I never had any business operations with Mr. Marsh individually or with any firm or corporation with which he was connected, except the Keystone bank. I knew him but slightly until after the failure of the bank and death, when he became the active manager of the bank, and had most to do with settling the Lucas affairs. For the last two years and a half I have left my mercantile business almost wholly to my partner. Occasionally Mr. Marsh would call on me.

"Last autumn he claimed that the bank had stretched itself to help his customers and that he wanted help and we paid off all our discounts as they fell due. Later on the run came and he gradually lost by the withdrawals, not only his discounts, but all but one or two of his directors. He used to come to me and try my firm, saying that he had no one to go to. He assured me everything was right, proclaiming he did the clearing house. After the bank took from the Lucas estate the John C. Lucas building and seashore property, he endeavored to get me to buy one or other or both these properties. He pressed me to loan my paper for use at the clearing house to recover other collaterals pledged there, all of which I declined. His chief argument was that if the bank did not get on the stock of the bank that I held as collateral would be worthless. He stated that if it proved that any of the stock that I retained was overissued, he believed that he could get stock from others and make it right.

"I guessed he meant the stock held by the Lucas estate. I did not care for the stock, but wanted the Lucas estate to settle with me and take it, and therefore declined to buy the real estate.

The Interview with Marsh.

"About 8 o'clock the night preceding the day the bank closed Mr. Marsh called on me in Washington to say that he had been to the controller and had informed him of his doubt about the stock and asked me if I could in any way help the bank. I said no, and the interview closed in rather rude terms. I had no communication with a living being between that time and the closing of the bank."

Mr. Wanamaker said he did not know that his brother had entered bail for Mr. Marsh until he saw the statement in the press. He had never considered, directly or indirectly, the question of getting bail for Marsh and had never had anything to do with it.

He esteemed Mr. Drew very highly, but had never spoken to him concerning his (Wanamaker's) account at the Keystone bank after the failure. Before he began his reading Mr. Wanamaker expressed hope that the committee would ask him any questions they desired. The reading and subsequent questioning occupied an hour, during which time Mr. Wanamaker remained standing. When he had finished many persons stepped forward and shook his hand.

Bank Examiner Drew "Roasted."

Bank Examiner Drew was subjected to another "roasting" by the committee. The only new thing that came out in Mr. Drew's testimony was that there was no evidence of the indebtedness of the Lucas estate beyond the $800,000 confessed by Marsh, early in the bank troubles. Had the confession not been made it would be impossible to have ascertained it from the books.

Marsh afterward confessed that the indebtedness amounted to $900,000, but this is a fact the bank examiner and the receiver have not ascertained it from the books. Mr. Drew agrees with the controller that the first official report of the Lucas indebtedness was made under date of Jan. 23, but he declares that he sent frequent, if not daily, unofficial reports to the controller.

The National Authorities Act.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—After a long conference between the president, Secretary Foster and Controller of Currency Lacey on the financial condition of Philadelphia and the action of the national banks brought out by the investigation by the city council Secretary Foster gave to the press the following statement:

"I have received the letter of Mayor Stuart, of Philadelphia, addressed to the president, Controller of the Currency Lacey will furnish all the correspondence and a statement of the reasons governing his action relating to the Keystone National bank. The further examination of the affairs of the bank will be conducted as requested, subject to the approval of the United States district attorney at Philadelphia.

"If additional information is desired as to the action of the controller, it is probable that he will, subject to the opinion of the district attorney, appear before the council committee.

"In short, the national authorities are desirous of furnishing the fullest possible information, and will give all the facts connected with the Keystone National bank affair so far as they have any knowledge."

HE HID SEVEN HUNDRED LETTERS.

Guttenburg's Sole Mail Carrier Objected to Delivering Them.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Valentine Samerel, aged sixty two years, the only letter carrier there is in Guttenburg, N. J., has been arrested, charged with embezzling and secreting the mail. Guttenburg is one of the three places in New Jersey in which the old penny is required. Consequently Samerel was entitled to two cents for every piece of mail delivered. Complaint has been made to the postoffice authorities of Guttenburg that mail addressed to that place, when inspector was sent on to investigate. After a short search he found under the carpet of the Dutch Reformed church, of which Samerel is Sunday school superintendent and sexton, a mass of mail matter directed to Guttenburg residents.

All told there were 700 pieces of mail matter, some of it being a year old. It is though Samerel allowed the matter to accumulate because the remuneration was not always sufficient to induce him to trudge around and deliver it. None of the letters found was opened and robbery, therefore, could not have been the motive. Samerel was held in $1,000 bail.

To Erect a Big Pulp Mill.

SUPERIOR BRIDGE, N. Y., June 9.—Steps are being taken by a number of capitalists in the west to build here the largest pulp and paper manufacturing establishment in the world. General Sooy Smith, of Chicago, whose big woods lands examined acres of land from the Niagara Tunnel company. The spruce wood will be brought from Michigan by water.

Quay's Conference with Harrison.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, has had conference with the president. He strongly urged the appointment of Second Controller Gilkerson, of the treasury department, to the court of claims. Judge Gilkerson, it is understood that he was advised as to whether there would soon be a vacancy in the position of second controller. Collector Martin, of Philadelphia, who accompanied Senator Quay, handed his resignation to the president as collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia.

Dr. Hayward Not Guilty.

MEDIA, Pa., June 9.—The sealed verdict in the case of Dr. Henderson Hayward, charged with bribery as the Republican congressional primary election a year ago, was read in the morning. It finds that Dr. Hayward is not guilty. The jury were out twenty-six hours before they reached a decision. The case was the outgrowth of the bested Robinson-Johnson congressional contest of last year.

CALLED DOWN BY CLARKE

Plain Talk to the Prince of Wales.

THE INGRATITUDE OF ROYALTY.

The Attorney Said Gordon Cumming Sacrificed Himself to Save Wales from Disgrace and Then the Prince Condemned Him Without a Hearing.

LONDON, June 9.—Almost the sole topic of conversation is the attack of Sir Edward Clarke upon the Prince of Wales. Sympathy is not altogether with Sir Edward, for the prince is personally popular. On the other hand, there is a strong and growing feeling that Gordon Cumming is the victim of a conspiracy which has had another motive besides the preservation of honor at cards, and that the Wilsons have rather sought than avoided the notoriety attendant upon the trial. The evidence of their plebeian antecedents as compared with the family record of Gordon Cumming has caused a feeling against them in that aristocratic society in which they have been attempting to hold their own, and the general opinion in the clubs and lobbies is that whatever the outcome of the trial the Wilsons will never again shine in high society.

The Prince May Save Them.

The Prince of Wales is evidently determined to save them if he can, and he has caused young Wilson to be elected to the Marlborough, which is the prince's private club. This, however, does not mean an open sesame for the young man to club society in London, for the prince has found before now that London clubs will not tolerate his dictation, and that is one reason why he started the Marlborough, where he could reign supreme in the company of the lads whom he sometimes chooses for associates.

How Will It End?

The outcome of the trial is a subject of wide speculation. The jurors are mostly London tradesmen. A verdict satisfactory to the prince would be to the personal interest of any one of them, for there is nothing a London tradesman loves so much as to put the royal or princely arms on his bags and his boxes. Cumming, therefore, has powerful influence against him apart from the evidence. On the other hand, the natural English sympathy for the under one in the fight is with him, and jurymen are not as subservient as some years ago.

He Scored the Prince.

In the course of his address to the jury Sir Edward Clarke gave the prince quite a scoring. He went on to say that there was nothing in the charges that could not be explained by Sir William's system of play. The Prince of Wales had condemned an intimate friend without a hearing. Lord Justice Swift, who was admitted to the bar in 1819 and went into extensive practice at Lyme. He served in the state house of representatives through ten sessions, in three of which he was speaker of the house, and in the upper house three sessions, in two of which he was lieutenant governor and president of the senate.

In 1851 he represented this country at the court of Austria at a time when the Austrians were much irritated against our nation on account of our reception of Kossuth. Mr. McCurdy's assistance to the Scotch missionaries who were driven out of Hungary was the subject of commendation in the British parliament. He was Yale's oldest graduate.

JUDGE M'CURDY'S DEATH.

A Well Known Figure in Connecticut Passes Away.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 9.—Judge Charles Johnson McCurdy died at his home in Lyme yesterday, aged ninety-six. He was descended on his mother's side from Ursula Wolcott, whose husband, father, brother, uncle, nephew and son were all governors of Connecticut. The deceased graduated with high honors from Yale college in 1817, studied law with Chief Justice Swift, was admitted to the bar in 1819 and went into extensive practice at Lyme. He served in the state house of representatives through ten sessions, in three of which he was speaker of the house, and in the upper house three sessions, in two of which he was lieutenant governor and president of the senate.

SOCIETY ON DECK.

The Brave and Fair at Kentucky's Races.

BLUEGRASS BEAUTIES ALL THERE

The Purses Won at the Kentucky Association's Meetings Are Made by Miss Lily Robinson — Senator Blackburn's Pretty Daughters Are Familiar Figures at Lexington.

When there is a great racing event in Kentucky the best known society people in the state are present in force. The bright eyes of the Bluegrass beauties glisten as full young women. Her rare good looks and perfect athletic form show no gain, saying, and have given her a widespread renown. She has ripply hair of sunny brown that "does" itself most charmingly; about her shapely hand and irresistibly at-tractive features.

Among the Bluegrass belles who are frequently to be seen at the Lexington race course, on the grounds of the Phoenix club house, are the two Misses Blackburn, the attractive daughters of Senator J. C.S. Blackburn, and their sister, Mrs. Lieutenant Hall. Their distinguished father, usually one of the judges, generally accompanies these ladies, and adds much to the prestige and gentility of the occasion.

The Misses Blackburn are typical Bluegrass girls in their charm of manner and their inherent love of horses. They are as thoroughly "an fait" in equine lore as in the social trick of speech which gained them such a belledom.

Miss Louise Maguire is a Bluegrass beauty who is sometimes seen at the races, and whose very presence seems to shed a radiance, so dazzling is her fairness. She has the features of a Greek cameo and hair of palest gold. She is a "lily maid" in all truth, tall and slender, with a willowy grace of movement.

General James F. Robinson, president of the Kentucky association, and the best known turfman in the state, is the son of the late Governor Robinson, one of Kentucky's most eminent potentates. He himself was brigadier general in the civil wa the favorites forge to the front, and then their hands swell the thunder of applause that greets the winner. Sturdy war scarred generals and colonels and majors by the dozen throng the course, and fight their battles over between the events. The purses which are awarded the owners of the winning horses in all the races of the spring meetings of the Kentucky association are invariably made by the skillful fingers of Miss Lily Robinson, the oldest daughter of General James F. Robinson, president of the Kentucky association, and one of the most prominent men in the state.

SPORT IN A CANOE.

Some Feat Wonderful Achievements and Interesting Future Events.

Unquestionably the most stirring event of his sport to the enthusiastic canoeist is a cruise. Rumored in his day shall, when his every nerve and muscle is strained to the reach of his hand, and his appurtenantly disproportionate sail spread like the wing of a great bird, he travels in the short of peril far beyond what seem to be the outermost limits of reasonable safety. Hardly a season passes but some adventurous man explores waterways and coasts in a canoe that a steamboat would not dare to the map makers. Such a trip was that of Julius Chambers when he paddled and sailed to the very fountain head of the great Missouri.

Such another was the one that Poultney Bigelow described a year ago, in which he braved preposterous dangers for the very love of adventure. Scores of others might be mentioned on which canoeists have sailed and paddled along the forbidding coast of Labrador, or up through rivers where a steamboat could never go.

But these events are commonly individual ventures. Ordinarily the canoeist goes alone. There are, however, aside from these cruises, events in which the public is more likely to be interested. Races and regattas have a sporting interest even for people who lack the enterprise or the enthusiasm to embark in canoes themselves. Few prettier sights are to be seen on the water than a cluster of the fairylike craft contesting for speed, measured as they are by the most skillful of sailors.

The first one of these events announced for the season now opening is a "sail competition," so called, which will occur on the afternoon of June 6, at Bay Ridge, off the Brooklyn Canoe club house. It is open to members of the New York, Brooklyn, Knickerbocker, Ianthe and Arlington clubs. Mr. W. P. Stephens will be the judge. It is not a race, but a competition in all "round efficiency." Sailing, and points are to be counted on hoisting, lowering and furling sail; sailing with fixed centerboard and no rudder; beauty of design, neat, seamanlike finish, and the like. It is expected that there will be numerous entries, and that the contest will be a very interesting one.

Following this competition the Ianthe Canoe club, of Woodside, N. J., announces their annual regatta for June 16. It will occur on the Passaic river, in front of their club house, and will consist of eight events, paddling, sailing, "tandems" and "club fours," with an "upset race" making up the programme. The races will all be contested under the rules of the American Canoe association.

The next event of the season will occur on June 20. It is to be a regatta in Gravesend bay, under the auspices of the Marine and Field club and the Manhattan Athletic club. The headquarters will be at the club house of the former club. It will probably be the most important meeting of '91 in New York waters, and many entries have been made already.

Among those who will participate in the sailing races are H. Lansing Quick, Yonkers C. C., canoe Uno; T. S. Dubois, Yonkers C. C., canoe Peta; C. B. Vaux, Yonkers C. C., canoe Bonnie; Dudley D. Gessler, Knickerbocker C. C., canoe Dawn; F. C. Moore, Knickerbocker C. C., canoe Rose; George P. Douglass, Ianthe C. C., canoe Passaic; William Wintringham, B. C. C., canoe Seabright; W. W. Howard and Christopher Stellin, N. Y. C. C., tandem paddling races the following crews will participate: Quick and Simpson, Yonkers C. C., canoe Uno; D. D. and T. A. Gessler, Knickerbocker and L. N. U. U., canoe Dawn; Douglass and Spicer, Ianthe C. C., canoe Passaic; Dudley and Howard, Knickerbocker C. C., canoe Rose; Collins Brothers, Bayonne C. C., canoe Wraith.

Another competition which is expected, although it has not yet been announced, is Mr. Ford Jones, the present holder of the American Canoe association trophy.

In this competition it may be noted that Mr. Jones, to the surprise of the canoeing fraternity, has determined to sell the Canuck, the famous little craft in which he has won so many victories. It is presumed that the Canuck will be retired, for he announced early in the spring that he would sail the Canuck this year, but what the new boat is has not yet been made public.

As a matter of course there will be many more regattas and races to be announced later in the season, and no doubt arrangements for them are already under way. Most of the clubs will hold their own regattas, and a grand contest, in which the different divisions of the American Canoe association will be pitted one against the other, may be expected later on.

Grand Jumper E. B. Bloss.

Harvard men are apt to become enthusiastic when the name of E. B. Bloss of '94 is mentioned. Bloss is a new man at the university, but he is already one of the prominent members of Captain Moen's aggregation of athletes. His specialty is the running broad jump, and since he became a wearer of the crimson and blue has cleared 21 ft. 10 in., and gives promise of doing much better work. He is also a wonderful performer in the running hop, step and jump, and will come within half an inch of covering 49 feet—a world's record. Bloss is a graduate of Phillip's Exeter academy. At Berkeley Oval, May 30, Bloss will be pitted against E. S. Ramadell, of Princeton, in the broad jump. He will have to hustle, as Ramadell has several times cleared 22 ft. 6 in.

BASEBALL BREVITIES.

The Bostonians are still paying fifty cents to see an Association game. Boston is the only place on the circuit that pays more than a quarter.

The path of a favorite of the diamond is not wholly studded with thorns. "King" Kelly has had a hard time fighting the League, but when he was presented with a handsome horse and a wagonette at Boston the other day he must have been impressed with the idea that baseball was not a bad business after all.

Waller Wallace, a well known baseball writer of San Francisco, is dead.

"Deacon" Jim White is one of the oldest players in the business. He is forty-four and still puts up a good article in the baseball line.

The salary limit of the New England league is $1,500 per month, but few of the clubs reach it.

The Lebanon (Pa.) team, of the Eastern association, has been playing good ball this season. Lebanon is the smallest town in the circuit, but she knows a thing or two about the national game.

If I Were You, My Dear.

I would not be afraid to look after fine frocks or importunate men.

I wouldn't forget to sew the braid around the bottom of my skirt or the bottom of my shoes.

I wouldn't conclude that every man who said something pleasant to me had fallen in love with me.

I would feel that I was at ill treated personage because, though I could play pleasantly, my friends didn't count me a modern Mozart.

I would not, when I could only have one frock, choose a conspicuous one that would mark me as the girl in the red plaid.

I would not, when I was tired and nervous, give snappy, ill natured replies to questions asked me by those who really cared for me.

I would not get in the habit of speaking in a familiar way of the men I know; when you make them Tom, Dick or Harry they are apt to consider you as Kate, Nell or Molly.

I would not permit any girl friend to complain to me of her mother; it is like listening to blasphemy.

I would not when I brush the dust off my hat forget the cobwebs of distrust and suspicion in my brain.

I would not tell my private affairs to my most intimate girl friend, nor would I ask her impertinent questions.

I would not write silly letters to young men or permit them to be familiar with me.

I would not grow weary in well doing. Instead, I would keep on encouraging myself by trying to live up to my ideal of a woman, and the very fact of my trying so hard would make me achieve that which I wished.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Study of Sanitation.

We should have a teacher of sanitary living and dietetics in every school in this country.

The family doctor can do much to enlighten the general darkness by insisting upon the value of sanitary living as a means of preserving the health. The success of the earlier practitioners of homœopathy was largely attributable to their insistence of reasonable attention to the details of the body. When it does not occur to the physician to give explicit orders about sanitary observances, the nurse or mother should do him for them, and should supplement them by studying all the sound authorities in her reach.

As a matter of fact many diseases proceed from disturbance of the nutritive functions, and the doctor's prescription of drugs is secondary in his purpose of helping nature. Hufeland says that the gastric treatment of disease, which endeavors to reach the evil through the digestive organs, is incidental to the earliest practice of medicine, and, surviving all changes of theory and practice, the intestinal canal still remains the battle ground where the issue of the gravest disorders is decided.

That many of the remedies are to be found within the range of ordinary food is but natural when we consider how many medicines are of vegetable origin. Most of the "old women's herbs and simples" still hold high place in the modern pharmacopœia, and conversely some of our every day foods have poisonous properties; for instance, our pleasant, familiar nutmeg, wherewith we spice our custards and hot toddies, is a virulent poison, an entire globe being capable of killing a person if taken at once.—Juliet Corson in Harper's Bazar.

Plenty of Sleep for Women.

It is a known fact among physicians, nurses and those opportunity has been in the restoration of health, that the average number of women among the middle and upper classes who retire early is alarmingly small. The term "alarmingly" is used advisedly, because the growing trend, as they to long hours, is often chosen Nature out of her just dues and compels her to retaliate in a manner that often threatens not only health but life, sometimes. Many a mother or woman so constituted but that the wear and tear of daily life commences to a great extent their vitality, which can only be restored by means of perfect repose.

Especially are long, unbroken hours of rest necessary for wives and mothers, all of whom are giving of their strength unreservedly and gradually into physical inertura save that which is derived from sleep. The growing tendency of the age toward physical culture training is not well sustained in the idea bound so unusually kept by many of the most enthusiastic advocates of that movement. Those who earnestly desire to use the most effective means at hand for the preservation of health and beauty should not fail to keep early hours. —Jennese-Miller Magazine.

Dust That Is Harmless.

Not long ago somebody experimented with dust gathered from various places to search for microbes. The dust from a city street, that gathered from the sweeping of a hospital ward, some taken from a street car at the end of a trip—these accumulations and more were examined with startling results. What struck terror to the heart of the house mother was the statement in connection with all this investigation that a rug could not be shaken, a curtain dusted out or a carpet brushed in her domain without raising a cloud of organisms more or less injurious to the family health. The innocent pastime of parlor dancing was inveighed against as treading out disease germs, and the final sweeping assertion made that it was impossible to make a carpet clean in a hygienic sense.

The London Lancet, however, comes to the rescue. That authority pronounces carpet microbes not to be feared. The air of a well-aired, well lighted house is not on sweeping day the poison laden atmosphere which is depicted. Dust is found in carpets and microbes are found in dust, but all dust is not so impregnated, and it is safe to assume that most dust found in carpets is harmless.

Ascending Mont Blanc.

The first woman who made the ascent of Mont Blanc was a young French mademoiselle of St.-Marie Paradis by name—who accomplished the feat in 1809. A few years since, Miss Stratton, a brave English girl, made the ascent in mid winter. She is said to have frozen two fingers on her way up, and she fell in love with her guide and married him when she reached the foot of the mountain.—New York Ledger.

Admirable Work.

Miss Tucker, otherwise A. L. O. E. (A Lady of England), and one of the most popular of the English religious writers, is now actively engaged in mission work in a city in Northern India. She is described as a charming old lady, living in a pretty little cottage, and spending the largest part of her days in visiting, praying and singing with the women of the Zenanas.—Current Literature.

Lucy Larcom, the authoress, is superstitious in that she believes it a bad omen to speak of her private literary work lest even her most insistent friends. "If I did," she says, "I should never go on with it."

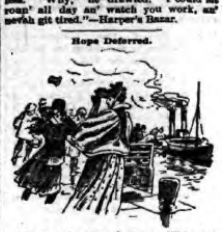
Great Capacity for Rest.

He was almost twelve years old and very black. He was hired to work in the garden by the day, but the moles and frogs in the ground, the birds in the trees, the bees and butterflies in the flowers, and the passing stream of acquaintances, offered so many diversions that work lagged.

His mistress watched him in despair. "Jeems," she pleaded, "why don't you do your work? It weare me out having to sit here to watch you."

He looked up, his vivacious face expressionless. "Why," he drawled, "I could sit roun' all day an' watch you work, an' nevah git tired."—Harper's Bazar.

Hope Deferred.



Auntie—Oh! Where's Fido? We've left him behind.

Elsie—We must telegraph.

Auntie—We'll telegraph when we get on board.—Judy.

A Really New Story.

The biggest story of the season comes from Lincolnton. Mr. W. T. Murray, who is a merchant of that place, says that while he was a soldier in Virginia he came across a farmer who had just housed a crib of popcorn, and pretty soon after the hands had left the crib it caught fire and every grain of the corn popped, and very soon the whole plantation was covered with the white corn. A mule about 25 years old, which was in a barn near by, saw the ground covered with white corn, and though the thermometer registered 90 degs. in the shade, the mule froze to death, thinking that it was a terrible heavy snow. —Atlanta Constitution.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

AN ORGAN RECITAL

IN THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH LAST EVENING.

Dr. S. N. Penfield of New York, Assisted by Mrs. Doty, and Messrs. Dempsey and Mac Clymont, Entertain.

An appreciative audience attended the organ concert given in the First Baptist church last evening, by Mr. S. N. Penfield, (Musical Doctor), organist of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York.

Mr. Penfield was assisted by Mrs. Emma Watson-Doty, soprano; Mr. John C. Dempsey, baritone; and Mr. William Earl Mac-Clymont, organist First Baptist church.

The organ is a two manual 20-stop instrument which cost $5000, and was put in a year ago last march. It is similar to the one in the First Presbyterian church.

Mr. MacClymont has been the organist since last November and has been for two years Dr. Penfield's pupil.

Both showed great skill last evening in the manipulation of the instrument evoking frequent and hearty applause, which was well merited.

Mrs. Watson-Doty and Mr. Dempsey also came in for a generous share of applause.

The programme below was strictly followed:

PART FIRST.

Toccata—F Major.....Bach
Dr. Penfield.
Overture, "La Minnette de Portici,"...Auber
Mr. MacClymont.
"O, God Have Mercy," (from "St. Paul,").....Mendelssohn
Mr. Dempsey.

Dr. Penfield.
Aria, "Hear Ye, Israel," ("Elijah").....Mendelssohn
Mrs. Watson-Doty.
a. Gavotte from "Mignon,".....Thomas
b. Polonaise Militaire.....Chopin
Mr. MacClymont.

PART SECOND.

Song, "Where the Lindens Bloom,".....Buck
Mrs. Watson-Doty.
a. Scherzo from Symphony No. 4.....Widor
b. Andante from Symphony "La Surprise."
c. Marche Triomphale.....Haydn
Dr. Penfield.
"Remember Me, O Lord,".....Farmer
Mr. Dempsey.
Fugue—D Major.....Bach
Mr. MacClymont.
Aria, "Come Unto Him," ("Messiah").....Handel
Mrs. Watson-Doty.
Overture, "William Tell".....Rossini
Dr. Penfield.

Kicked By a Horse.

At about seven o'clock last evening Mr Samuel Hedden of Duer street, North Plainfield, met with a painful accident. He went into Segsine's livery stable for the purpose of leading up a horse, when the animal kicked and both of its hind feet struck him full in the breast, knocking him down and rendering him unconscious. Dr. Long was summoned and after a careful examination he found that although no bones were broken, Mr. Hedden's injuries, were of such a painful nature that he will be confined to the house for several days. The horse is said to be from New Brunswick.

Keep a Stiff Upper Lip.

The most perilous hour of a person's life is when he is tempted to despond. The man who loses his courage, loses all.

There is no more hope of him than of a dead man—It matters not how poor he may be, how much deserted by friends, how much lost to the world—if he only keeps his courage, holds up his head, and with unconquerable will determines to be and to do what becomes a man, all will be well. It is nothing outside that kills; it is what's within that makes or not makes.—New Brunswick Home News.

Two Dogs Shot.

This morning two valuable dogs belonging to Mr. William A. Schorb were playing about the house, when suddenly one of them began snapping and in other ways showed signs of the rabies. Before Mrs. Schorb could interfere, the mad animal succeeded in biting its companion. She showed assistance and the two dogs were eventually ejected from the building and were shortly afterwards killed. Mr. Schorb valued the animals at $25 each.

The Annual Meeting.

To-morrow evening at eight o'clock the annual celebration of the organization of the Ladies' Aid Society of the German Church will be held in the Sunday school room of the church. Reports will be read and an entertainment with music will follow. Refreshments will also be served.

The members of the Society and the members and friends of the church are cordially invited to be present.

Injured by the Cars.

A young man named Abram G. Nelson, a resident of New Market, jumped off of a West bound train at New Market last evening and badly injured his right wrist. He was also painfully cut about the face and head. Young Nelson is employed in the jewelry store of Mr. Caleb Dickinson on Park avenue.

Newly Elected Officers.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held last evening.

President—John Whiting.
Vice President—Percy Dayton.
Secretary—Samuel G. Carrie.
Treasurer—Carl F. Fender.

F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. When about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV.

BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS

CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANT BUSINESS DISCUSSED AND ACTED UPON.

The Question of County Roads—Statements Made by the Mayor and Comptroller.—The City Hospital Asks for Further Relief.—The Same Granted.—Important Report of the Committee on Appropriations.—Naming Committees, Etc.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met Friday afternoon in regular session, Director Hubbard in the chair, and entire Board present.

The committee recently appointed to confer with the Board of Freeholders of Middlesex country in regard to the application for dock privileges presented by W. C. Squire of Rahway, reported that the committee had met and granted the necessary license.

Mayor Rankin and Comptroller Carlton, members of the committee recently appointed by Council to confer with the Board in regard to having the Board adopt Newark avenue to the city line as a county road, were given an opportunity to present their petition.

Mayor Rankin briefly stated the object of the committee in presenting itself before the Board. He drew the Board's attention to the fact that about a year ago he was one of the committee who appeared before that body to urge upon it the wisdom of adopting Westfield avenue as a county road, and he felt certain that not one member had since regretted his action in following the suggestion.

Newark avenue, he said, was even a still more important thoroughfare, and in his opinion it should be under the direct charge of the county. The property owners along the avenue would not pay for its being repaved, they having already paid for it being put in first-class condition, and the city under the existing circumstances could not afford to do so. The road had been examined by experts and it was their opinion that it could be put in perfect condition as a county road for at least $5,000.

Comptroller Carlton said that the Mayor had covered the ground very fully. The foundation stone on the road was in good condition and with the top being removed and six or eight inches of ballast placed on it the road would be as good a one as Rahway avenue or any other road in the county. It was something less than two hundred feet of being a mile in length, and in making the necessary repairs no sewer or water pipe would be encountered.

Director Hubbard assured the committee that the Board would give full consideration to the proposition made.

A petition was presented by a number of residents of Cranford township petitioning the Board to cause an iron bridge to be constructed over the Rahway river at the foot of Eastman street.

A communication from the managers and the medical and surgical staff on the Elizabeth General Hospital was read, calling the attention of the board to the great expense under which it was being carried on, and petitioning that, under the bill recently enacted by the Legislature, which gives the Board authority to allow hospitals $2,500 per year toward their maintenance, that the Hospital in this city did not receive the full amount.

The Board by resolution, allowed the Hospital $600 additional per year to what it formerly received, making $1,000 in all.

The Committee on Appropriations presented the following report and resolutions, which was received and adopted:

The Committee on Appropriations, after careful consideration, probable needs of the various departments of the county government, providing for the payment of $30,000 bond debt maturing during the year and making ample provisions for the interest and sinking fund charge now falling due on county road and freeholders (1890) bonds, are of the opinion that with a continuance of the same economical and businesslike administration of county affairs that for several years has characterized the action of the Board, and, notwithstanding the very large increase in certain departments called for and made necessary by recent enactments of the Legislature, the county requirements can and will be properly and satisfactorily administered on the same appropriations as last year. They would therefore respectfully report and recommend that the sum of $175,000 be appropriated for the current year.

Your committee would also recommend that the additional sum of $25,000 be appropriated for the completion, improvement and construction of county roads and bridges, that said amount be raised by special tax for improvement of county roads and bridges under and according to the provisions of the County Road act of 1889.

And your committee would further recommend that the amounts above named be certified to the County Board of Assessors and placed in the tax levy for 1891, as per following resolution:

Resolved by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, That the sum of two hundred thousand dollars be raised by tax for the use of said county, for the year 1891-1892, to be appropriated together with fifteen thousand and twenty-five dollars of the assets of the county.

Adopted.

Director Hubbard named the standing committees for the ensuing year as follows:

Publication—Thompson, Kyte, Trahon.
Discharged prisoners—Roll, Kyte, Bender.
Settle with Collector—Roll, Little, Russell.
Audit Accounts—West, Thompson, Doty.
Lunacy—Pierson, Roll, Briant.
Public Grounds and Buildings—Howard, Pierson, Doty.
Jail Inspector—Vanderbeek, West, Jones.
Stationery—Littell, Vanderbeek, Briant.
Settle with Sheriff—Kyte, Thompson, Sullivan.
Miscellaneous Accounts and Agreements—Kyte, Roll, Jones.
Legal Questions—Vanderbeek, Roll, Halliday.
Elizabeth Drawbridges—Littell, Bender, Halliday.
Rahway Drawbridges—Howard, Thompson, Sullivan.
County Engineer F. A. Denham reported that the county roads through Springfield and Fanwood townships were completed according to plans and specifications. The report was received.

By resolution of Freeholder Russell the Freie Presse was designated as one of the papers to print the minutes of the Board.

The bridge tenders throughout the county who served during the past year were reappointed for the ensuing year, at the same compensation.

A large number of bills were then read and ordered paid, after which the Board went into executive session for the purpose of considering the proposition to adopt Newark avenue as a county road.

PERSONAL.

Mr. James Galligan, the ball player, returned to his home in Flemington yesterday from a short visit to friends in this city.

Mr. Harry Thorn formerly of this city is now located at the Hotel Ampersand, lower Saranac Lake, in the Adirondack mountains.

"What will Mrs. Grundy Say!" will be the subject of the Rev. C. B. Mitchell's address before the Epworth League at Cranford to-morrow.

The Rev. Robert Clark, the pastor of the Unitarian Church in this city, is attending the Unitarian Conference which is now in session at Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher (Miss Ella Laing) arrived in this city last evening from Denver, Col., and are visiting at the home of the bride's mother on West Fourth street.

Mr. Isaac M. Foskett and Miss Mary Wiley, both of this city, were married last evening at the parsonage of the Seventh Day Baptist church by the Rev. A. H. Lewis, the pastor of the church.

Mr. Richard Haven of this city last evening rode his bicycle from Richmond street to Westfield, a distance of five miles, in fourteen and one-half minutes. Mr. Haven says the roads are in excellent condition for riding.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew D. Mellick celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their home on Broadway Monday. Both of them are of revolutionary stock, their families being prominent in the early history of New Jersey. Their oldest son, Andrew Mellick, Jr., has been the historian of the New Jersey Historical Society for many years. Mrs. Mellick's maiden name was Miss Elizabeth D. Ayres and she lived in New Brunswick. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. C. Cruikshank, now of Little Falls, N. J. He is Mrs. Mellick's brother-in-law and attended the golden wedding of Monday's anniversary. Mr. Mellick retired from business many years ago and lives in a very pretty house just under the range of Short Hills.

A Terrible Scare.

The following has been going the rounds of our exchanges:

Michael Moynihan, one of the oldest engineers on the Central Railroad, who runs one of the Blue Line lightning expresses that wing across New Jersey on their way to Washington, is just recovering from the biggest scare of his life.

Two or three nights ago his train was flying over the rails at a terrific speed, with the Greenbrook water tanks just at the rear and a straight track to Bound Brook ahead. Suddenly there loomed up on the track two red lights. "The rear of a freight," flashed through the engineer's brain. He reversed his engines and deluged the rails with sand, but the train glided on with frightful momentum. Moynihan closed his eyes in prayer and waited for the awful crash. But the train slowed up and the collision did not happen. As the engine reached the crossing of the highway Moynihan heard a whistle, and saw two men frightedly mount their wheels and speed away in the darkness.

"It was a horrible joke," said Moynihan. "The dreadful suspense of that moment was agonizing. My heart seemed to stop beating. Then I got home my wife screamed at the sight of my hair, which had been turned entirely white. Those wheelmen will have to find out who flashed their bicycle lanterns before the train in such cruel fun. The horror of that night's work was such a funny matter for them. Of course such unmanly silly fellows among bicyclers hereabouts are very rare.

Cigarette Hearts Not Very Useful.

[From the San Francisco Chronicle.]

An autopsy on the body of young Potter, who was drowned in the bay on Monday, developed the fact that he forfeited his life to the cigarette habit. It was found that he had a very pronounced case of "cigarette heart." The smoke causes the valves of that organ to harden, and extra effort of any kind results in the death of the victim.

A Runaway on Front Street.

A horse belonging to a farmer named Beldon ran away on Front street shortly after ten o'clock this morning. Before the driver succeeded in stopping the frightened animal, the wagon to which it was attached collided with another vehicle and wrecked one of the wheels.

A DARING YOUNG FORGER.

He Victimizes Two Firms to the Extent of $1,500.

Charles F. Harris, an Atlantic City barber, was arrested at Pleasantville yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock by Constable Benlar on a telegraphic order from Chief of Police Eldridge of Atlantic City, charged with passing forged checks on Bell & Scott, house-furnishers, and Steelman Bros., clothiers. He gave Bell & Scott a check for $1,900 for a carpet bill of $1,127, receiving $713 in change. The check was on the First National Bank of Atlantic City, drawn to the order of Ryan and signed by him. It was indorsed by Charles F. Harris and dated June 10. The carpet he ordered sent to the Mansion House. Giving the number of two different rooms at Steelman Bros. he purchased a suit of clothes, giving in exchange another forged check for $28, from which he received $8 in change. In some way he found out that the police were on his track. So hiring a hack to drive him about two miles out on the meadow towards Plainfield, where he gave the authorities the slip, and walked into Pleasantville, where Constable Benlar was waiting for him. Chief Eldridge, of Atlantic City, arrived soon after and took him in charge. On being searched $27 in paper and silver currency was found with a receipted bill from Bell & Scott for the carpet. He was taken to Atlantic City and locked up in the City Hall.

It is the impression of the Atlantic City authorities that they have captured an old offender, although he as apparently a new hand at drawing up checks, judging from the style of the one he gave Bell & Scott. Harris is a young man about twenty-two years of age. He claims Trenton as his home.

To Much "Bawl."

Twenty years ago the energetic Professor Schwarz was conducting a musical society in a New Jersey city. They were studying Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and had reached the chorus, "Hear us, Baal; hear, mighty God."

The men's voices were booming out solemnly, when the conductor cried out: "No! No! de dreadful vowel! Don't say 'B-a-l-e,' soften a leetle—give de more musical sound, 'Bal.'"

Whereupon the chorus took up the strain again, "Hear us Bawl—Hear us Bawl," and they quickly realized the peculiar fitness of the sentiment and broke down in laughter, to the great amazement of the little German, who never saw the joke, but who reluctantly consented to the old pronunciation.—Youth's Companion.

Teaching Children to Save Their Pennies.

According to reports published in many of the newspapers in this and other States the saving bank system is being introduced into a large majority of the public schools, and wherever practiced it is meeting with success. The money is placed to the credit of the children and in a short time the boy or girl has a bank account, although it is not of very great proportions. The idea is certainly praiseworthy because it teaches the children principles of economy independent of making presents of them. The prime motive in sending children to school is to fit them for duties to active life, one the very first of which is to practice economy.

Cheap Light and Fuel.

One part of the city of Chicago is enveloped in soot and smoke, while another portion is enjoying immunity to a great extent from this evil. It is because of a new and cheap gas, which its promoters claim will revolutionize the heating methods of the present day.

A number of prominent business men have formed a company and really seem to be bringing into practical use some of the cheap gas inventions of which the community has heard so often. The material and process of manufacture of this gas are not stated. The main fact in which the public is interested is that this new gas is supplied to the Hyde park part of Chicago at fifty cents a thousand feet, the rest of the city, meanwhile, paying twice as much, and in some cases more than twice as much.

The new gas is not only an illuminant, but also serves the purposes of heating and cooking. Both the fuel and the illuminating fluid are supplied at the same rate—fifty cents per thousand cubic feet. The gas is changed from fuel to lighting fluid by means of an incandescent attachment called a "comb." Both the fuel and the light are said to be first class. At these rates gas is cheaper than kerosene, and if this illuminant does all that it is declared to do, here will be the solution of the problem of heat and light in cities and towns. Who will bear the nuisance of coal dust and soot when he can get a clean, economical gas that will give him both heat and light? There is a fund call in other cities and towns for this new fluid. Old gas companies might profitably change to the new kind. They would be benefactors of their race if they could atone swoop clear away coal and ash carts from Arcady.

The strangest part of the Chicago story is that the makers of the new gas asked permission of the city authorities to light all Chicago at the same rate, or even more cheaply, and although the gas is of first class quality permission was refused. The ways of city councils are like those of Providence in one respect, and one only—they are past finding out.

Scared to Death.

Nicholas Gaulrapp was a young German who came to this country a year ago. He could not speak English. He fell in love with a little girl from his native land and visited her frequently. The family who worked for owned a bad tempered black dog. The creature bit Nicholas one day, tearing the back of his hand till blood flowed.

He went to the corner saloon to have the wound dressed. The frau who kept the place said to him: "Ach. Nick, I wouldn't have that for a million dollars You'll get crazy and die, sure." A doctor dressed the hurt afterward, and told Nicholas there was nothing to be afraid of. The dog was not mad. But Nick dropped into the saloon for a glass of beer occasionally. Every time he did so the frau, her daughters, her customers and her neighbors inquired about that dog bite, and told Nicholas he was going to take hydrophobia and die.

The thing worked on his mind. By and by he got nervous and restless, and his family began to look at him queerly. This helped his nervous state of mind amazingly. Soon he was sure he had a pain. Neighbors and friends sympathized still more, and prophesied yet more direfully. Suddenly one morning Nick began to bark and snap and foam at the mouth, which a real hydrophobic was never yet known to do. Then it was all up with him. Several doctors were summoned, and they consulted over his case, but none of them could find a trace of hydrophobia about him. Nevertheless the young man died. He thought he died of hydrophobia, and the sympathizing neighbors thought so too. But the fact is he died of fright, pure and simple, hysterical scare, and nothing else.

Moral—Keep your head on.

It has doubtless occurred more than once to persons who see the swarms of Italians in the streets of our large cities to wonder how many are left at home, and whether such a stream of emigration has made any appreciable difference in the population of Italy. We now learn that in the first four months of this year 30,695 Italians passed Gibraltar on their way to this country, and the American consul at Naples reports that in that vicinity whole neighborhoods are almost depopulated of men; only women being left to till the soil. The emigration wave toward the United States has reached a veritable exodus in south Italy.

Perhaps how conservient American women will cease to decorate their hats with the corpses of the birds which the Almighty gave us to make the world beautiful and modest as well as to destroy the insect pests that eat up our food. The Princess of Wales has given orders that hereafter no millinery need be submitted to either herself or her daughters' for inspection if birds are used as trimming For this ruling all humane persons must thank the gentle and sensible princess.

HE CHEATS AT BACCARAT

That Is the Brand Gordon Cumming Bears.

THE DEFENDANTS GET A VERDICT.

The Unhappy Plaintiff Will Doubtless Be Cashiered from the Army, Expelled from the Clubs He Belongs To and Doomed to a Life of Disgrace.

LONDON, June 10.—The jury in the baccarat trial gave a verdict for the defendants in the libel suit of Sir William Gordon Cumming against Wilson and others. The jury was fifteen minutes in reaching its conclusion.

The Prince of Wales was not in court, having gone to the Ascot races. Sir Gordon Cumming was greeted with a cheer. On the opening of the court General Owen Williams, one of the defendants, attempted to protest against Sir Edward Clarke's attack upon him Monday, but Lord Coleridge silenced him.

The lord chief justice then began his charge, which was favorable to the defendants. He said that if the jury found that the defendants had spoken well about Sir William Gordon Cumming had spoken the truth they should render a verdict in the defendants' favor.

If, however, the jury believed the statements of the defendants to be wholly untrue, and that the plaintiff did not commit the acts ascribed to him, the verdict must be for Sir William.

The Evidence Alone to Be Considered.

His lordship reminded the jury that they their minds steadily upon the evidence. The extraneous matter which had been brought into the arguments of counsel must be dismissed from the minds of the jury in the consideration of the facts. At this apparent allusion to the remarks of Sir Edward Clarke concerning the Prince of Wales there were many significant exchanges of glances in the courtroom. The lord chief justice emphatically protested against the publication which had been made by counsel, that there was more in the case than was allowed to appear upon the surface. The jury must not allow themselves to be influenced by such remarks.

There was never any more in a case than appeared in evidence. That was the province of courts of law, to bring out the facts and only the facts, and to procure a verdict thereon according to their merits. The jury were debarred by their solemn oaths from dealing with things beneath the surface, if such things existed.

A Strong Point Against Him.

The chief justice then touched upon the position of the prince in this affair, and the desire for secrecy in regard to the scandal. Was it not natural that, with monarchical institutions, such as ours, should have existed? It must be remembered that such incidents, with the exaggeration that might arise, were nowadays brought before a hard judging world—not before the loyal and subservient world of the Tudors—and whose sense and judgment had to be considered. Surely it was not a thing to be said against a man under these circumstances that he was anxious to keep a scandal quiet.

While admitting the prima facie improbability of one in Sir William Gordon Cumming's position and of his wealth cheating at cards, yet the lord chief justice made it a strong point against Sir William that he had failed to confront his accusers. The court was unable to find in the evidence any contradiction of the statement that Sir William had been told of Mr. Lycett Green's desire to be confronted by him. The point was evidently a telling one for the jury.

For the Defendants.

At the conclusion of the lord chief justice's address the jury retired. The suspense was great in the parties returned to their seats. After the clerk had polled the jury the lord chief justice said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"Yes," almost whispered the foreman, standing up and bowing toward Lord Coleridge.

"Is it for the plaintiff or for the defendants?" asked the lord chief justice.

"For the defendants," answered the foreman in a low voice.

There was a tremendous stir, the court rapping vainly for order. Both applause and hisses were heard, but the former predominated.

Sir William Unmoved.

Sir William received the verdict against him without any show of feeling. He was cheered as he went away. George Lewis and accompanying Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Lycett Green from the court when, on reaching the center of the lobby, hissing and hooting began and he was lost into a roar.

Lewis passed the ladies into another court, and the crowd gathered around the door. Lewis, having waited some eight or ten minutes for a chance to effect a peaceful exit, made arrangements for the ladies to pass over the judge's bench and out of the building by the judge's stairway. A juror interviewed said there was no doubt from the first moment the jury entered the private room how the verdict would go. As each juryman was asked whether he was for the plaintiff or the defendants, the reply was unhesitatingly given, "For the defendants."

One of the jury, who sympathized with the plaintiff, was struck with the unanimity which prevailed, and although he would have liked to have found for the plaintiff, he would not conscientiously do so in face of the evidence.

General Sympathy for Cumming.

In face of the verdict it may seem curious that general sympathy is expressed for Sir William Gordon Cumming, yet such is the fact. He left court in company with Lord Middleton, his brother in-law. It is believed Cumming will kill himself. Nobody thinks he will remain in England. The effect of the verdict on military circles is that Sir William Gordon Cumming will be struck off the list of the Scots Fusilier Guards, will doubtless be cashiered from the army, and expelled from the Marlborough club, the Guards club, the Turf club, and all the other social organizations to which he may belong.

Cumming to Marry Today.

It is said that Gordon Cumming will be married to the daughter of Captain Commodore Garner, of New York, today. He is quoted as authority for the statement. Before the baccarat scandal was heard of it was generally known in the heads of both families that Cumming and Miss Garner were going to marry each other. When Cumming became convinced that a public exposure of the Tranby Croft affair was inevitable, he went to Miss Garner, told her all about it and offered to release her from her engagement.

She refused to believe the charges against her lover and said she did not want to be released. Cumming insisted, urging upon his fiancee that he might be able to convince the world of his innocence, but Miss Garner was obdurate. She loved Cumming, she said. She believed in his innocence, no matter what the verdict might be. If he broke off the engagement he would not be honored and trusted. At last all this pother ends in a wedding and honeymoon to Scotland, followed by a visit to New York in the autumn.

Cheered Enthusiastically.

Many people were curious to know what kind of a reception the Prince of Wales would get from the public upon his first appearance before the baccarat libel. After his week at the baccarat trial. Bets were made that the prince would be received very coldly. Those who did so lost their money, for the royal party was cheered enthusiastically by the thousands assembled between Windsor and Ascot.

Some people were malicious enough to say that a great deal, a very great deal, of this enthusiasm was due to the fact that the much beloved wife of the Prince of Wales was by his side.

"Poor Devil," Said the Prince.

The Prince of Wales received a telegram at 3:50 p. m. informing him of the verdict against Cumming. He muttered, "Poor devil," and walked quickly to the dock. Even this slight show of feeling for the loss of a close friend was in grateful contrast to the heartless levity of the rest of the noble crowd.

PATRICK GLEASON'S STATEMENT.

He Attacks Members of the Irish National League's Municipal Council.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The president of the land and labor league and a member of the council of the Irish National league of this city makes the following statement:

TO THE PUBLIC—In view of the turbulent scenes enacted under the name of the Municipal council, for which I disclaim all responsibility, at the meeting held on Saturday last, the regular council in this city was organized in July, 1889, to continue for one year. At the expiration of that time—June 10, 1890—it was found there was not one branch actively existing in this city, and as a result there were no duly elected delegates to form the new council. By consent the officers and delegates of the council of 1889 agreed to hold over to Jan. 1, 1891, in view of a possible dissolution of parliament or any other cause that might furnish opportunity for reviving the league. This opportunity not having occurred the council lapsed Jan. 1, 1891.

The present so called Municipal council is simply an assemblage of individuals without any representative capacity. Through the absence of the conservative, thoughtful men who would be delegates were the league a living reality, the majority of those attending meetings of the so called council are of the radical, extreme type, and they, of course, call themselves. The interest at present evinced by those men does not come from a desire to serve the constitutional movement, but they hope they may be able to wield whatever remains of its machinery for the purpose of "boss" With them the national movement is secondary to the personal fortunes of Mr. Parnell. They control the individual with the case of which he was the once honored leader. Happily the hopes of Ireland are not dependent upon them, but will be worked out by men with larger conceptions of the national life. PATRICK GLEASON.

NEW YORK, June 9, 1891.

Murderer Coco Pleaded Guilty.

CAMDEN, N. J., June 10.—Philippe Dominico Coco, the Italian murderer, took the breath from Prosecutor Jenkins, in the Camden county court, by pleading guilty to an indictment for murder and throwing himself on the mercy of Judge Garrison. Coco killed his sister-in-law, Miss Giovanni Dianoor, at Cedar Brook, Winslow township, last March. He started from Philadelphia, it is alleged, with the express purpose of killing his wife, who had refused to live with him. Miss Dianoor interfered and stepped between him and his wife with an ax, whereupon he struck her a blow in the neck with a stiletto that caused her death in less than two minutes. Mr. Wartman, who was appointed counsel for Coco, said the recent lynchings in New Orleans had so influenced public sentiment that it would be exceedingly hazardous for his client to trust to judgment of a jury of civilians. He therefore chose rather to trust the unbiased and fair decision of a learned judge. He would plead guilty, leaving it for the court to hear the evidence, so as to fix the grade of guilt.

Harvard Will Get $70,000.

BOSTON, June 10.—As the result of the settlement of a protracted lawsuit, Harvard college will receive over $70,000. The late Nathaniel V. Bailey, trustee under the will of John Hancock, plaintiff, and the defendants are Washington Hancock, Franklin Hancock and members of the Hancock family. The suit has been taken out of the question as to the validity of proceedings for the foreclosure of certain mortgages given on valuable property in Chicago by Mr. Bailey, deceased. The case came up on the report of the master, by the terms of which and the agreement between Wilson and Mrs. Parents go to the petitioner and one-third of the property and the rents to Charles L. Hancock, or, as he is deceased, to his representatives. The petitioner gets about $300,000.

Think He Was Shanahan.

NORWALK, Conn., June 10.—The man who was arrested here on suspicion of being one of three masked men who broke into the residence of Jerrick Kearney on Plymouth avenue and who was discharged for lack of evidence is now believed to be none other than James Shanahan, the notorious thief who escaped on Saturday last from Deputy Sheriff Burke, of New York, who was taking him to Sing Sing. Officers here believe the fact that they are positive that the man is no other than Shanahan. Efforts are now being made to recapture him.

Colonel Meredith Exonerated.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The treasury committee which has been investigating the charges preferred by the Knights of Labor against Colonel Meredith, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, for using inferior material, has completed its report and submitted it to Secretary Foster today. The report fully exonerates Mr. Meredith and alleges that there was a conspiracy to get him out of office, or else allow the bureau of engraving and printing to be run by the Knights of Labor.

The Car Builders' Exhibit.

CAPE MAY, N. J., June 10.—Mayor Edmunds opened the convention of the car builders. President John Kirby made an address outlining the work of the convention. In view of national legislation much interest has been aroused concerning the habits of car and engine couplers. Some ten of these devices are on view. Working models of automatic coupling plants are being multiplied. The exhibit is regarded as the most complete ever given by the association.

THE QUAKER CITY'S LOSS

Putting the Probe Into Philadelphia's Scandal.

JOHN BARDSLEY PLEADED GUILTY.

He Makes No Defense to the Charges Brought Against Him—His Business Methods Shown Up Before the Investigating Committee of the Council.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—The Citizens Municipal association's executive committee have forwarded to the councils committee the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That we press upon city councils and its finance committee the importance of continuing the most thorough and searching investigation into every infraction of law and breach of honest management on the part of banks or other financial institutions or individuals in connection with the city treasury shall be fully made known, to the end that not only such criminals be punished and the defalcations brought to punishment, but that the banks and other financial institutions whose business is conducted in a honest and safe methods and in accordance with law may be relieved from unjust suspicion and that confidence restored which is so essential to business prosperity and the general welfare.

The Controller's Evidence Wanted.

Resolved, That we approve of the action of city controller in requesting the United States United States to cause a thorough investigation to be made into the action of the treasury department in reference to the affairs of the Keystone National bank, and in the further request that the controller of the currency be instructed to appear before the committee of councils appointed to investigate the said bank; and

Whereas, It appears that a very large sum of money belonging to the sinking fund of the city, amounting at this time to nearly $800,000, is now, and has been for a long period, on deposit in one of the banks without yielding any revenue to the city. Now, therefore,

The Sinking Fund Draw Interest.

Resolved, That the city council, through its finance and other committees, be respectfully requested to make a thorough investigation into the circumstances of this fund to ascertain the occasion for the deposit of so large a sum in a single bank, and to report to this body the propriety of so investing the same as to yield an income to the city. We would also recommend that interest should be paid by the banks upon all deposits of city or state money.

Elling Denies the Allegation.

At the opening of the session of the Bardsley investigating committee Select Councilman Elling took occasion to reply to a published statement purporting to have been made in an interview by the private secretary of Attorney General Wanamaker. After quoting the words ascribed to Marshall Cushing, the private secretary, Mr. Elling said: "The statement that I have a personal grudge against Mr. Wanamaker or ever insulted him is false. In 1886 Mr. Wanamaker was interested in an elevated railroad bill which I opposed, because I believed it my duty to do so. In 1887 I was again asked to become a candidate for select council, and a petition was numerously signed asking me to accept the nomination. Mr. Wanamaker was at the time a resident of the ward, and the paper was, I am informed, submitted to him, but was not signed by him. I never asked him to sign it; never requested anybody to ask him to sign it."

Bardsley's Business Methods.

Mark H. Davis, the treasurer of Bardsley's Bradford Mills company, testified that Bardsley for the past three years had received all the money of the company. He turned over to him as treasurer in 1889 a total of $151,481 and in 1890 a total of $256,440. For the first four months of 1891 a total of $84,460. He also received in stocks $163,368.88, making a total in three years of $605,717.88. This money was deposited to the account of Mr. Wartman, who was appointed counsel for Cocco, said the recent lynchings in New Orleans had so influenced public sentiment that it would be exceedingly hazardous for his client to trust to judgment of a jury of civilians. He therefore chose rather to trust the unbiased and fair decision of a learned judge. He would plead guilty, leaving it for the court to hear the evidence, so as to fix the grade of guilt.

He Owned Most of the Stock.

Regarding the judgment executed in favor of the Dobsons, Mr. Davis said that it was made on May 21, before directors of the Bradford Mills company. Bardsley informed them that he wished to make it to the extent of his interest in the company in favor of the Dobsons against any loss they might suffer from being upon his bond. Davis admitted that Bardsley owned nearly all of the 400 shares of the company's stock, and the rest was only held by the directors and the officers to enable them to comply with the law.

An Odd Sort of President.

Henry C. Dobson, the private secretary, who was elected president of the Bradford mills after Bardsley had resigned, in order that the judgment might be executed, testified that he had never owned a share of the company's stock. He acted under Bardsley's instructions and claimed to know very little about the affairs of his employer. James Dobson, when called upon to testify, was accompanied by his counsel, Richard P. White, who refused to allow him to answer any question relating to the Bradford mills or the judgment which had been executed in his and his brother's favor by Bardsley. The committee will apply to the courts for a rule to compel the Dobsons to answer.

They Deceived Examiner Drew.

Charles Lawrence, who was the assistant cashier and bookkeeper of the Keystone bank, and who is under $20,000 bail, was also called to testify. His counsel said Mr. Lawrence would answer all questions which would not criminate himself. Of Bardsley's relations with the bank he knew very little besides the fact that he had three accounts. He knew nothing of any overdrafts of Mark and never heard of Bardsley's clearing house due bills for $200,000 until he read it in the papers. He said that both he and Marsh used every effort to deceive Bank Examiner Drew and Mr. Drew. A demand will be made upon Controller of the Currency Lacey for an order to compel Receiver Yardley to allow the committee the use of books of the Keystone bank. At the last visit of the committee to Receiver Yardley he declined to give them a transcript of Bardsley's account on the ground that there were several discrepancies in the account of the state funds that must first be settled.

Bardsley Pleaded Guilty.

When Bardsley was arraigned to answer to the seventeen indictments against him he pleaded guilty to each charge with tears in his eyes. A hearing will be held in two weeks.

Frank Brenton, treasurer of the defunct Milward-Cliff Cracker company, which was wrecked by paper floated through the Spring Garden National bank, has fled to avoid arrest upon a charge of conspiracy made by T. Broome Belfield, one of the directors of the company. President Kennedy and Director Young, of the bank, are named as the co-conspirators.

JUNE'S COMMENCEMENT DAYS.

Closing Scenes at West Point and Other Institutions.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 10.—Over 3,000 people ranged themselves along the parade plains at this place in the afternoon for the purpose of witnessing a skirmish drill by 300 young men who hope some day to command the smallest but the most disciplined army in the world. The drill was the grandest military spectacle of the season, and for the hour that the troops were advancing, retreating, rallying on the colors not far from 10,000 cartridges were expended. While an incessant firing was kept up from first to last, when the roll call was made as the forces marched into the barracks there was not a single man missing, wounded or killed. After the board of visitors had been shown how a skilled commander would deploy skirmishers the troops were given an hour of rest, during which time they received the congratulations of their ladies fair, who avail themselves of every opportunity afforded of saying something to make the boys feel proud.

Then the evening parade followed with military pyrotechnics later. Last night occurred the complimentary hop at the hotel tendered by the officers of the post to the class of '91.

At 10 o'clock this morning there was a heavy artillery drill at the seacoast battery. The battery consisted of six pieces and was fired on a range 2,100 yards in length. The guns consisted of two 15-inch smooth bore, one carrying a shell 330 pounds in weight, with a charge of 100 pounds, requiring a charge of forty pounds of powder; three 8-inch rifle (converted) requiring a charge of twenty-five pounds of powder; the seventy-five-ton gun firing 1,000 pounds each and a 13-inch mortar, throwing a shell of 216 pounds with nine pounds of powder.

Commencement at Vassar.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 10.—The city is full of strangers in attendance at the commencement exercises at Vassar college. Yesterday was class day and the customary exercises of the day were in charge of the class of '91. Miss Julia M. Ober, of Brattleboro, Vt., was class orator; Miss Julia M. Sampkins, of San Leandro, Cal., historian; Miss Ida M. Bennett, of Poughkeepsie, class prophet, and Miss Nellie Haight, of Poughkeepsie, spade orator. Last night the graduation class gave a promenade concert. The commencement exercises take place today.

At Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 10.—The 144th annual commencement exercises of Princeton college were continued yesterday with the reading of theses in Chemical Hall by the graduating class of the School of Science. The alumni dinner was held in the afternoon. In the evening the sophomores gave a ball in honor of the graduating class. At the annual meeting of the board of trustees Edward T. Green, judge of the United States court of New Jersey, was elected a trustee of the college.

CAMDEN'S MURDER MYSTERY.

Miss Blanche Humphreys Drowned by Two Men.

CAMDEN, N. J., June 10.—Facts which point to murder have been brought into the possession of the Camden police authorities and are being investigated under the supervision of Chief Dodd. Shortly after midnight Mrs. Dr. Cadmus, a young woman, living at 926 Beach street, Coopers Point, close to the Delaware river, heard two agonizing screams from a woman. On looking out of the window she saw a young girl of stout build struggling in the grasp of two men. "For God's sake, don't, don't, for God's sake," cried the young woman. A second later there was a splash in the Delaware, and the two men ran away and were soon lost to sight.

To the authorities Mrs. Cadmus, a young woman, who, from papers found on her person, is supposed to be Miss Blanche Humphreys, of this city, was found floating in the Delaware, near Kaighn & Matthew's shipyard, Coopers Point, and the police think they are on the track of a tragedy.

To Blow Up Tons of Rock.

NEW YORK, June 10.—A novel event is to occur at South Bethlehem, N. Y., next Tuesday, when a blast of tremendous proportions will be fired. About 60,000 tons of rock—an entire mountain ledge—is to be blown away by tons of dynamite, directed by the Edison Electric company. P. Callahan, the owner of the extensive limestone quarry where the blast is to be, has arranged that the explosion shall take place in the afternoon upon the arrival of the West Shore special train, which will be run to the bluffs in time for the event. A special train will leave New York at 11 a. m., reaching South Bethlehem at 2:30 p. m.

Lutheran Choose Officers.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 10.—The Western district of the Missouri synod of the Lutheran church concluded its conference in this city, and elected officers, as follows: President, Rev. Wm. Schmidt, Roseville, N. J.; president, Pastor Walker, York, Pa.; secretary, Pastor Pechtold, Allegany, N. Y.; treasurer, Charles Spillman, Baltimore. The next meeting is announced to meet in four years at such place as the president shall designate. On that occasion Pastor Heim, of Pittsburg, will reintroduce his topic, "Regeneration," and lead the discussion upon it through the session.

The Winona Paper Mills Sold.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 10.—The Winona Paper mills at Holyoke were sold at auction for $234,000, or just the amount of the mortgage held by the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance company and the Holyoke Water Power company. The purchaser is Moses Newton, of Holyoke, president of the Holyoke company and treasurer of the Chemical Paper company, both of that city. Mr. Newton will organize a new company which will put the mills into operation. The creditors of the Winona company are in no way benefited by this sale.

Sunstroke Not an Accident.

KANSAS CITY, June 10.—Judge Phillips, of the United States circuit court, has decided an interesting point in a suit on an accident policy. William Dorsey died a year ago from the effects of a sunstroke, was at the time carrying an accident policy. The suit brought on the policy by the beneficiary was decided by Judge Phillips. He sustained the demurrer of the defendant on the ground that a sunstroke is not an accident, but a disease of the brain arising from natural and known causes.

One Year for Hughes.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 10.—Master Workman James Hughes, of the United Clothing Cutters, Trimmers and Tailors of North America, Local Assembly No. 231, Knights of Labor, was sentenced to one year in state prison for extortion. He is thirty-seven years old, a widower, childless and a resident of Gardiner.

Worse Still.

Jagway—Was that you I saw driving around in a carriage the other day? And yet you cannot afford to pay me the five dollars you owe me.

Traverse—That's nothing. You ought to see the bill I owe the livery stable.—Harper's Bazar.

A Slave to Duty.

Strawber—Has your suit come over from England yet?

Singerly—Oh, yes. It is in the custom house.

Strawber—Then I should think you would get it out.

Singerly—I would. But when the roll was made as the forces marched into the barracks there was not a single man missing, wounded or killed. After the board of visitors had been shown how a skilled commander would deploy skirmishers the troops were given an hour of rest, during which time they received the congratulations of their ladies fair, who avail themselves of every opportunity afforded of saying something to make the boys feel proud.

ARABIAN PRAYER.

"O Lord, be kind to the sick and poor; then to the rich and healthy, and she hungry do not send them."

The healthy do not need Castine Blood Cure, but those who are suffering from rheumatism, gross boils, carbuncles, ulcers, and the thousand ills of scrofula and blood disorders, should in the kindness of Providence, help them bear their troubles, and Castine Blood Cure to cure their diseases.

ATTACKED BY ITALIANS.

A Little American Girl Disfigured for Life.

STONED BY A MOB IN THE STREET.

Further Particulars of the Demonstration Against W. W. Jacques, of Newton, Mass.—"Americans! Let Us Lynch Them!" Was the Cry of the Mob.

BOSTON, June 10.—The recent attack on Mr. William W. Jacques, of Newton, Mass., at Florence, Italy, by a mob of Italians, was a more serious affair than was shown by the meager details cabled to this country. Mr. Jacques has written to The Herald an account of the incident, in which he says:

Jacques Tells His Story.

"While driving along the Viale Principe Amedo, one of the most respectable residence streets of Florence, a mob of several hundred men suddenly rushed out of a side street in front of our carriage.

"I told the coachman to turn and drive back, when we were surprised to see a similar mob pouring out of a side street behind us. We were instantly surrounded by the mob, every individual of which seemed to have his hands full of the large and rough stones used here for repairing the streets. 'Americans! Let us lynch them.' (This I am told by my driver.) 'Death to the rich,' etc. The mob then began pelting our carriage with stones. Fortunately we had a good, strong sun umbrella spread over our heads.

Pelted with Stones.

"I made my little girl get down under my arm and sheltered our heads with the umbrella as best I could. I was struck on the shoulder, the side, the leg, and on the head (a good American derby saved that). Then the umbrella was demolished and a stone struck my little girl two inches below the left temple. The wound was deep and the blood soon saturated her clothing and my own, and, curiously, ran into my basket and stained my passport, signed by James G. Blaine, requesting foreigners to allow me and my family to pass safely, etc.

Disfigured for Life.

"Meanwhile our coachman had forced his way through the crowd. He wheeled into a side street and drove rapidly to our hotel, followed for some distance by the mob. On arriving at our hotel my little girl was carried to her room, and an English physician staying in the house took immediate charge of her. He said it was an exceedingly narrow escape from death. Now, one month later, that the wound has nearly healed, we can see that it will leave a scar that will disfigure her face for life.

"In the afternoon I drove to the American consulate and reported the matter, and was assured that every action would be taken by the Italian authorities to arrest and punish the offenders. I have since learned that many arrests were made, and as there were many witnesses no delay of conviction and punishment will follow. Several prominent Italian residents of Florence also called on me and expressed regrets, and assured me that the mob was largely made up of ruffians from other cities.

Tried to Hush It Up.

"Whether the Italian government punishes these offenders remains to be seen. They made every effort to hush up the matter, even going so far as to open and read my letters, in which I attempted to communicate with my friends in America, and later the telegrams from my friends to me. This seems to me a striking disregard of the respect our government contained in my passport."

Syracuse Was Selected.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The executive committee of the New York State League of Republican Clubs selected Syracuse as the place in which to hold the next convention, and decided upon Aug. 5 as the date. Treasurer George Kenneth sent in his resignation, and Colonel De Puyster, of Dutchess, was selected in his place. The following committee on finances was also chosen: President McAlpin, Secretary Hedges, Treasurer De Puyster and John S. Smith. Colonel Clarkson's plan of organizing clubs throughout the state was presented by A. B. Humphrey, secretary of the National Republican league, and was approved. On Aug. 20 volunteer organizers will leave this city and will visit all the towns along the Central railroad. Their first stop will be at Poughkeepsie.

Eight Children Injured.

NEW YORK, June 10.—An explosion of powder occurred in the yard in the rear of the house 238 East Forty-fifth street, where a number of children were playing, burning the following named severely: Thomas and Hugh Maguire, aged eight and seven respectively; John and Martin O'Connell, aged five and eight; Daniel Burns, aged fourteen; Jacob Levy, aged eleven, and Morris, Harry and Gussie Walters, aged fourteen, eleven and seven years respectively. The explosion was of a coil of blasting fuse, with some loose powder at the end, which Jacob Levy, aged eleven years, stole from a contractor's supplies. He lighted the fuse while his companions looked on. One child, Harry Walters, will probably lose his sight.

A Brave Life Saver Murdered.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 10.—Peter E. Johnson, the Gay Head Indian who saved many lives at the City of Columbus disaster, was murdered yesterday on Naz Island, in the Acushnet river, by an unknown man. Fishermen who rowed the murderer from the island to the mainland and then returned discovered the body of Johnson and reported the matter to the police. Johnson, George Fletcher and the unknown man left this city in Johnson's boat. All three had been drinking. Fletcher, who was in the boat with Johnson and the supposed murderer, has not been seen, and in all probability was killed also and thrown overboard.

The Lepers Have the Grip.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—The steamer Australia, from Honolulu, brings news that the grip is epidemic in the islands and that in the leper settlement nine-tenths of the lepers are down with it. Water is very scarce in the country, and when the Australia left the reservoirs were nearly empty. If no rain has fallen since a water famine must now prevail.

She Bit on a Cartridge.

MOUNT HORAB, N. J., June 10.—Mrs. Priscilla Randolph, of Mount Horab, took home with her a box of candy which she had purchased in Washington. She was eating some, when her teeth struck a hard substance and there was an explosion, damaging her face severely. A small cartridge was in the sweet stuff. Blood poisoning is feared.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

The latest trust is a carbon candle trust.

The treasury department has designated Charlotte, N. Y., a quarantine station for the entry of cattle, sheep and swine from Canada.

William Kennedy, who was serving a five years' sentence in Auburn prison for burglary, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell with a rope made from his undershirt. Kennedy was twenty-six years old, and was sent from Onondaga county.

Governor Pattison has approved both the wholesale and retail liquor license bills passed in the recent session of the Pennsylvania legislature.

Harry Edwards, the actor, is dead.

There are rumors of irregularities in the accounts of Sing Sing prison. Warden Brown and ex-Warden Brush both deny the stories.

Another man was horribly mangled by a mad dog in New York, and there were several cases of similar attacks in other cities.

At Saratoga the motion for a reargument of the Jugiro murder case was declined by the court of appeals.

Medium Mary E. Williams, of New York, has outdone Diss Debar by securing for $3 a $25,000 brownstone house of Mrs. Kate Anderson at No. 327 West 57th street. Spirits of Mrs. Anderson's relatives appeared at Mrs. William's seances and told Mrs. Anderson that she ought to give the medium the house. Mrs. Anderson did so.

Henry Le Grand Cannon and Miss Elizabeth Thompson, two well known society people of New York, were married June 9.

At San Francisco officers of the United States warships Omaha and Swatara are charged with smuggling silks, etc., from China and Japan. One officer is said to have sold $600 worth.

The Appropriations of the Next Congress.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Representative Forney, of Alabama, who was a member of the appropriations committee in the last congress, is now in Washington, and in an interview on the matter of appropriations by the next congress intimates that heavy reductions will be made as compared with those of the last house. Mr. Forney believes the annual appropriations can be cut down at least $75,000,000 or $100,000,000, making the total about $625,000,000. When asked where the reductions would likely be made, he replied: "There is a permanent appropriation of $47,000,000 for buying bonds that can be cut off. Then the $15,000,000 paid out for refunding the direct tax will not have to be repeated. We can save $5,000,000 by not erecting unnecessary public buildings. We can log off a number of useless offices, and, of course, there will be no census appropriation. I am in favor of spending a few millions less in the navy, and also of less extravagance in the matter of fortifications. There will be a determination to confine the river and harbor bill to the most important and necessary items."

The Excise Reform Association.

ALBANY, June 10.—The Excise Reform Association of the State of New York has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The incorporators state their objects as being to promote the passage of more stringent excise laws; the establishment of an excise system which shall impose just and adequate restraints and regulations upon the liquor traffic; to secure the enforcement of existing laws and to oppose all efforts to render existing excise laws less restrictive. Among the incorporators are Dorman B. Eaton, R. F. Watson, Henry Mottet, John R. Prine, John Jay Chapman, William H. Hornblower, Henry A. Oakley, William G. Wilson, Clarence H. Conger, L. B. Bange and William H. Welling.

Dynamite in France.

PARIS, June 10.—A dynamite cartridge was exploded in the morning in front of the police station at Clichy. The station and adjoining buildings were considerably damaged. The outrage is supposed to have been committed by anarchists in revenge for the activity of the police in suppressing their May Day demonstration.

The Barings' Liabilities.

LONDON, June 10.—The balance sheet of the liquidators of the Barings show that house to be liable for £7,000,000, with assets of £5,750,000.

The Weather.

Slightly warmer and generally fair.

WHICH WILL WIN?

Famous Flyers That May Capture the Suburban.

BIG STAKES FOR GREAT HORSES.

Tenny Is the Favorite, but Firenzi, Tournament, Prince Royal, Tea Tray, Banquet, Potomac, Tenino and Raceland Are Not Without Their Friends.

The Suburban is the most interesting race of the year to the people of America, and on June 16, if the weather is good, at least 20,000 people will watch the turf monarchs run. New York's Four Hundred will be well represented, famous men and women from every walk in life will throng the course, and the boothlack and the millionaire will rub shoulders in the betting ring and mingle their shouts as the flyers come under the wire. The race comes off at Sheepshead Bay, L. I.; the distance is 1¼ miles; value, $10,000—$7,000 to first, $2,000 to second, $1,000 to third. As the time draws nearer the absorbing question in racing circles is "Which will win?"

Judging from the result of the Brooklyn Handicap there is but one answer if the best horse wins, and that answer is "Tenny." With Salvator out of the way, the "little sawyback" is easily the king of running horses on the American turf. But there are several contingencies upon which Tenny's chances depend. He may sulk; that foot which recently gave a great many people with plunging aspirations more experience and less money may break down, and Pulsifer may keep him in the stable when the day comes. Conceding, for the sake of speculation, that Tenny may not win, let us look at the other prominent candidates. According to recent odds, the mare Firenzi is first choice after Tenny. She carries a light weight, and on a good track would make the field hustle. She holds the world's record for 1½ miles—2:33. Firenzi, too, is one of three formidable cracks that Tenny did not meet in the Brooklyn Handicap. She is reported to be in fine condition, and even with the 126 pounds up will bear watching. Tournament is another hot favorite Tenny has not met this year. He carries 108 pounds, and is considered one of the best 4-year-olds on the turf, as his recent purchase for $20,500 by Foxhall Keene indicates. A third mount vaunted flyer from the west is Tenino. He, too, did not run in the Brooklyn, as he was said to be out of condition. Unless he improves greatly he will not be a dangerous horse to handle. He holds the world's record for 1¼ miles—1:52½. Three other horses that took second, third and fourth in the Brooklyn—Prince Royal, Tea Tray and Banquet—are well up among the small list of Suburban favorites. The fact that Prince Royal is to carry five more pounds than he did in the Brooklyn should make Tea Tray a much more formidable opponent.

Prince Royal is by Kingfisher—Princess, and was bred by August Belmont. He is 6 years old. As a 4-year-old he ran second to Erlo in the Brooklyn, and was purchased by Phil Dwyer at the Belmont sale for $5,600. Prince Royal holds the world's record for 1 1-16 miles—1:46½.

Tea Tray, another 6-year-old, is by Rayon d'Or—Ella T. He has been owned by W. L. Scott and Dwyer Bros., but at present belongs to William Lakeland. Tea Tray has a temper, and is somewhat unreliable, but Lakeland has been very successful with him. Banquet is Tea Tray's full brother, and runs under Mike Dwyer's colors. Banquet defeated Tournament as a 3-year old, and broke the running record for 1¼ miles, covering the distance in 2:03¾, and thus eclipsing Salvator's 4-year-old record for that distance—2:05. Banquet is now a 4-year-old, and carries two more pounds than he did when he broke the record.

BANQUET.

In passing from the list of probable winners I will conclude by mentioning two others, Raceland and Potomac. Raceland won the suburban in 1889, and is consequently to be respected. Potomac is a mystery. He belongs to Mike Dwyer, and only brought $25,000 at the Belmont sale. He was the champion 2-year-old of 1890, and will make a strong bid for a race.

The Suburban winners have been the following named: General Monroe, 1884, twenty starters; Pontiac, 1885, fifteen starters; Troubadour, 1886, twenty starters; Eurus, 1887, twenty starters; Elkwood, 1888, seventeen starters; Raceland, 1889, nine starters; Salvator, 1890, nine starters.

But the winner for 1891? Well, I would say that a safe guess would be Tenny or some other horse. EARLE H. EATON.

The Lebanon (Pa.) club of the Eastern association is backed by William C. Freeman, who lives near Lebanon, and is said to be worth in the neighborhood of $10,000,000. Some baseball managers would need it all if they remained in the business, but Mr. Freeman does not belong to that class.

How to Restore Gilt Frames.

Rubbing with a sponge moistened in turpentine brightens the frame almost equal to new.

How the Clerk of the Weather Works.

The United States signal service bases its reports not only on barometric phenomena, but on telegraphic reports of simultaneous observations at stations in every section of the country; of the humidity, clouds, character of the ocean swell, rain or snowfall, direction, force and velocity of the winds, etc. From these reports, which are taken three times a day, the central office at Washington prepares a series of charts showing the meteorological conditions of the country in detail. Armed with this charted material, and taught by long experience how to reckon the probable course of the weather, the signal officer calculates the probabilities for all sections for the next twenty-four or forty-eight hours. These probabilities or weather bulletins are wired to all the stations and published in the daily press. The percentage of verification of the weather bureau's predictions has risen as high as 85 per cent.

How to Keep Flies from Horses.

Bruise a bunch of smart-weed until the juice exudes, and then rub the animal with the bruised weed, paying especial attention to the legs, necks and ears. This will keep flies and other insects off the horse for twenty-four hours, when the process should be repeated. A strong infusion of the weed can be made by boiling it several minutes in water. When cold it can be applied with a sponge or brush.

How to Petrify Wood.

Mix equal quantities of powdered yem salt, rock alum, chalk and pebbles and white vinegar. After the ebullition ceases throw in the wood, which will become petrified after soaking four or five days.

How to Treat Poisonous Bites.

Here are directions for dealing with a poisonous bite of any kind on the hand or foot or limb near either: Put a ligature above it to prevent a return flow of blood, then scrape the wound or otherwise keep it open so that the blood will flow freely. This prevents the veins from carrying the poison into the system, and at the same time the free flow of blood tends to wash the poison out. It is a general rule that the more freely a wound bleeds the less danger there is of poison being absorbed.

To determine the number of any congress in this century add 13 to the year in which the congress first convened and divide by 2—the quotient will be the number of the congress. Thus the last congress ended in '89, adding 13 gives 102, half of which gives 51, the last being the Fifty-first congress. Conversely, to find the year in which any numbered congress convened, double the number of the congress and deduct 13. Thus of the Fifteenth congress 15 multiplied by 13 minus 13 equals 17, and the Fifteenth congress met in 1817.

How to Clean Gloves.

Wash them in a little benzine, rubbing and squeezing them until clean. If much soiled use a fresh supply of benzine. Hang up in the air to dry.

How to Alloy Various Metals.

Copper and tin make bath metal; copper and zinc, bell metal; tin and copper, bronze; tin, antimony, copper and bismuth, britannia ware; tin and copper, common metal; copper and zinc, Dutch gold; copper, nickel, zinc and a little iron, German silver; gold and copper, standard gold; tin and copper, gun metal; copper and zinc, mosaic gold; tin and lead, pewter; lead and a little arsenic, sheet metal; silver and copper, standard silver; tin and lead, solder; lead and antimony, type metal; copper and arsenic, white copper.

How to Purify a Sick Chamber.

The British parliament awarded a London physician $25,000 for the discovery of the following: Put half an ounce of sulphuric acid in a crucible glass or china cup and warm it over a lamp, or in heated sand, adding a little nitre to it from time to time. This produces nitrous acid vapor. Several of these vessels must be placed in the sick chamber and in the neighboring apartments and passages at a distance of twenty feet from each other.

How to Exterminate Red Ants.

Set a plate well covered with lard where the insects abound. They are very fond of lard, preferring it to sugar. Place a few sticks around the plate for the ants to climb up. After catching the ants in this way turn the plate bottom up over the fire, when they will fall in with the melting lard. Repeat until the pests disappear.

How to Destroy Insects in the Ear.

Pour a teaspoonful of warm olive or camphorated oil into the ear and retain it there till morning by means of a piece of cotton wool. Wash out with warm water and mild soap.

How Fast a Person Grows.

The mean length of boys at birth is 18½ inches and of girls 18¼ inches. Growth is most rapid immediately after birth, and diminishes continually until about five years of age. From then until sixteen years the annual growth is 2 to 2½ inches during the next year 1½ inches, and dur'ng the next two years 1 inch only. The mean height of man is 5 feet 4 inches. A man is taller in the morning than at night by half an inch.

LEANDER RICHARDSON.

One of the Men Who Prove That the American Dramatist Does Exist.

The cry that "there are no American dramatists" is getting to be extensively wearisome. There are American dramatists, and like nearly everything else that is American they are good, and worthy of your consideration.

Among them Leander Richardson shines brightly. At first he merely twinkled; soon he shone, and presently he will be a great big light. He would be already if he had devoted the time he has given to making adaptations from the works of foreigners to writing original plays for us to admire—which he is perfectly capable of doing.

But his adaptations have been so full of merit that we can forgive him. For instance, the American version of "Olivette," that charming light opera which sprang into instant favor, was from his pen. He also adapted "Held and Hand," "The Snake Charmer," "Anselma," "Divorcons," "Expiation" and "The Nominee." The last named play was the one in which Nat Goodwin kept on in New York more than seventy-five nights this season, and out of it both the actor and the writer have already made comfortable fortunes. But Mr. Richardson's original plays "The Millionaire," in which Daniel Sully is now touring the country, is perhaps best known; but Johnstone Bennett's new play "A Business Woman," which he wrote with Clay M. Greene as collaborator, promises big things, and will doubtless keep its promises.

These alone are good sized incidents to have occurred in the career of a man only thirty-five years old; but they are by no means all of Leander Richardson's achievements. His working life began in the office of the Chicago Inter-Ocean in 1872. Afterward he became European correspondent of the Boston Herald and other papers. He was the most popular Yankee writer that ever went to Ireland. High and low alike he made his friends, and that fact illustrates a phase of his character. Richardson could go in evening dress into a gathering of workingmen and in five minutes convince them that he was one of them and had on a blue jumper. Or he could change an actual blue jumper into a theoretical swallowtail in the same length of time among a crowd of swells.

His work in Chicago and Europe only covers a small part of his newspaper experience, however. He was for a time at various times done staff duty on the New York Tribune, the Springfield Republican, the Rocky Mountain News and the Hartford Courant. One branch of his literary labors upon which he does not look back with unalloyed satisfaction, but which brought him in considerable cash, was a year passed as blood-and-thunder serial writer for one of the flash weeklies. He has written five books of unquestioned merit, "The Dark City" and "Lord Dunmeresy," and his third novel, "As Ye Sow," is now running in his weekly newspaper, The Dramatic News. This novel, by the way, is the largest dramatic publication in America, and Richardson edits all of it, and owns half of it.

Personally Leander Richardson is a mighty good friend and a splendid enemy. There is probably no more accomplished hater and critic than he, when occasion requires, in the city of New York. He seldom goes to the theater; he smokes constantly; he is an epicure, and can cook dishes fit for his own fastidious palate. As a host he is perfect. His big three story house commands the fresh breezes and splendid views of Central park, and is always open to his friends.

He made the best possible selection of a father when he came into the world, for he chose no less a man than Albert Richardson, who was between 1860 and 1870 probably as well known a newspaper correspondent as the United States could boast of. When the war began Albert Richardson went to the front for the New York Tribune, and distinguished himself by the graphic descriptions of exciting battles with which his pen flagellated, scintillated, as well as by his own daring exploits in the search for news. An attempt on his part to run the blockade at Vicksburg resulted in capture and a year and a half's imprisonment in Confederate strongholds. Finally he outwitted his guards. He afterward wrote a book, which reached an enormous sale, under the title, "The Field, the Dungeon and the Escape." Another famous volume from his pen is "Beyond the Mississippi." EDWARD MARSHALL.

IN THE WHEELING WORLD.

The Riverside Wheelmen, of New York, who have for a long time been homeless, have at last secured an abiding place on One Hundred and Fourth street near the Boulevard. Owners of property, as usual, objected to the location of a club, so that it became necessary to purchase outright. One of the wealthy club members came to the rescue and is now the club's landlord.

F. E. Spooner, of Chicago, is down with typhoid fever as a partial result of over training.

Harry Hall's attempt to break the Irvington-Milburn twenty-five mile road record would very probably have succeeded had he not broken his front fork when only 7¾ miles from the finish. Riding well within himself, unassisted by pacemakers, and bothered by gusts of wind and vehicles, he covered five miles in 17m. 44s., ten in 35m. 33s., fifteen in 54m. 20s. and 17¾ miles in 1h. 2m. 20s., so that he had twenty-six minutes and nine seconds in which to cover 7¼ miles. In his fresh condition it should have been easy of accomplishment.

Willie Windle's best mile was done in 2m. 23 3-5s. instead of 2m. 20s., as has been stated. This time was recorded at Peoria, Ill., Sept. 15, last year, and was made when riding for a record.

P. P. Kilkelly, one of the fast Irish riders, is training again this year after a couple of years of inactivity. He is a strong rider, and like our Murphy, has a fad of going to meets when, according to the quality of his conpeers, he is able to change mounts and secure every event on the programme. HE GOT MAD.

The Old Father Thought He Meant Suicide, but He Was Wrong.

There was a man walking up and down Prospect park at Niagara Falls, with his hands behind his back and his head down, and an old fellow from near Syracuse wasn't to be blamed so much for imagining that suicide was contemplated. He had on double wool of rather fine texture, acted just that way before leaping into the terrible current above the falls. He waited a couple of times for a performance to come off, and as there appeared to be a hitch somewhere he approached the stranger and said:

"Stranger, I don't want to meddle with your business; I never do with anybody's, but if—if"——

"Well," sharply asked the other.

"I've only got about forty minutes afore I take the train. If you've fully made up your mind to do it, and nothing on earth will prevent"——

"Are you addressing me, sir?" demanded the stranger.

"Yes, of course; there hain't nobody else around, is there? If you see it, and tell the folks all about it. Don't want to hurry you, you know, but if a man wants to go, and will go, and praying won't save him, he might as well go one time as another."

"You infernal old milkweed, but I'll knock the top of your head off if you don't clear out," shouted the man as he made as if to pull off his coat.

"Gosh-all-fishhooks! but don't flare up that way!" gasped the farmer as he retreated. "What's happened to make you mad? I hain't said nor dun nothing as I knows on."

"Go—clear out—skip!"

"Hold on—I'll go—don't foller me up! Lands alive! but he come within an ace o' hoppin' right on to me! Got reg'lar mad in a minit, and that without the least bit o' cause! Wocsh! Clus call for me, tho' I'd a fit the hardest I could. Suicide and be hanged to him—I'm goin' hum!"—New York Sun.

The Reverses of Time.

"Yes, I suppose so."

JOHN TUCKER'S TRIAL.

THE SINGER COMPANY'S EX-PAYMASTER BEFORE THE COURT.

The Charges of Embezzlement Detailed to a Jury.—The Evidence the Same as in Police Court.

Yesterday morning in the Union County Court of General Quarter Sessions the trial of John Tucker, the ex-paymaster's assistant in the cabinet department of the Singer Works, began. There was not a large attendance, but a number of the defendant's friends, including three young ladies, were attentive listeners to the proceedings.

The defendant, dressed in a neat suit of dark blue, sat by one side of his counsel, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees.

The state challenged Juror Patrick O'Neill, and the defendant Edward S. Woodruff.

In opening the case Prosecutor Marsh said of the cases moved this term none was more important than this. It was important to the State and to the defendant.

On the one hand the indictment was sought for by one of the largest industrial institutions in the city, and was against one who for a long time had been a trusted official of the company. The circumstances were such that the superintendent and other officers who were charged with the administration of the business of the corporation felt it their duty to the State and the company to begin the prosecution of the defendant.

The charge was embezzlement and the State would show that the defendant on several different occasions took sums of which were prior to January 1st, added to the pay roll certain amount of work which he claimed had been performed by two employes of the names of Kunz and Schilling, and for these amounts he obtained from the paymaster a sum of money in excess of the amount due these persons, and by altering the pay book of the employes to what they had actually earned embezzled the excess.

The first witness sworn was superintendent Leibbeus B. Miller, who detailed the methods of the company in the payment of the employes, and testified to several instances in which the defendant is alleged to have made the excess charges and altered the time books. The last witness was Detective Reed, who testified to in the police court at the examination of Tucker.

During his examination Mr. Miller testified from the books of the company in which the alleged discrepancies in accounts occur.

Supt. Miller testified that there were two pay envelopes found on Tucker the day of his arrest. They were in Tucker's handwriting, one was for Shilling, amount $6, and one for Kunz, amount $9. These amounts were what the men were entitled to but did not correspond with the amounts Tucker had entered in the pay roll book.

David B. Reed, the head of the pay department, was next examined, and testified to the methods of keeping the record of the time and work of employes. On the date of January 10th, the work book of Schilling called for 230 pieces at $1.35, and the pay roll book entry was for 470 pieces at $1.35. On the same date Kunz's work book called for 360 pieces at 45 cents, and the pay roll book entry in Tucker's handwriting 1200 at 45 cents. On January 24th, discrepancies of a like character, and an erasure and change of figures in Tucker's handwriting appeared in the account of Kunz. A discrepancy in Schilling's account was also shown by the witness.

Reed then detailed the other discrepancies charged by the company.

A Runaway Team.

At about six o'clock this morning a team of horses ran away on West Front street. When in front of Mr. Charles Smith's saloon the wagon to which they were attached collided with a hitching post and snapped it off short. The team were then within a few feet of the large show window, and had it not been for the timely arrival of Mr. Jeremiah Rowe they would have undoubtedly smashed it.

Mr. Rowe caught the animals and prevented them from doing any further damage.

A Mad Dog.

Saturday afternoon a mad dog was roaming around the Borough of North Plainfield in the vicinity of Greenbrook road. The animal snapped at every object it saw.

Mr. Charles Sutterlin, a son of Mr. G. Sutterlin espied the rabid canine and procured a shot gun and attempted to shoot it, but failed. As it escaped it would be wise for the residents of that vicinity to keep a watch on their dogs for the time being.

A Painful Accident.

Delia Voehl of Somerset street, North Plainfield, met with a painful accident this afternoon. She was engaged sewing lace curtains, when a needle in some unaccountable way penetrated one of her knees and broke off. Drs. Adams and Rushmore were summoned and they succeeded in extracting the broken piece of steel.

F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. When about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV]

A YOUTHFUL DESPERADO.

Draws a Pistol, Scatters a Crowd, and Shoots a Young Compahion.

Just before one o'clock to-day while a party of boys were together on Westfield avenue near Morrisave., Elizabeth, young William Hines, aged 16 years, a brother to Hattie Hines, joined them. While talking he suddenly drew a revolver from his pocket. He pointed the weapon at the crowd and exclaimed, "Look out, I'll shoot." The boys took to their heels and scampered off. As they ran Hines followed a few feet still aiming the pistol at them. A sharp crack was heard and then little Nicholas Morrisey, living on Morris avenue and bowling pin boy at the E. A. C. alleys, was seen to fall and heard calling "I am shot." He was picked up and it was found that a bullet had entered his left arm over the wrist, the wound being an ugly one, and bleeding profusely. The boy, accompanied by his brother, was taken to Dr. Mraving's office. He being out, the boy was taken to his home. Whether Hines knew the revolver was loaded or not is not known.

This is to Be a Great Year for Baby Emigration.—The Snakes in Delirium Tremens by One Who Has Seen Them

HUMANITY'S HOME.

[From the New York Sun.]

A Boston physician of repute has staked his professional reputation on the issue of a prediction that is of momentous interest to the human race. He says that we have entered upon a year that will break the record for immigration; immigration not especially to lands where plenty awaits the coming of a larger population from over crowded regions of the earth, but to every inhabited part of the globe from the unseen shores of eternity. In short, he says that this is going to be the greatest baby year in the history of this joyous old planet.

This Boston herald of glad tidings does not say on what he bases his remarkable prediction; whether on figures dug out of Scriptural chronology, on indications got from a reading of the stars, or on calculations made from data to which he has early and exceptional access; but he grounds it with a boldness that has almost the force of an authoritative announcement. Let us hope that the figures, the stars, or the something, have given him a straight tip; that the boom of the human race is at hand, for this is a case of the more the merrier.

Let them come, these little immigrants from heaven! Every rule for the restriction of immigration shall be suspended in their case. They are helpless, but they all have relatives in the places they are bound for. They have no generally visible means of support, but they have an unerring instinct that will enable them to get there all the same. According to the theology of John Calvin and Jonathan Edwards some of them have such bad antecedents that they were marked for damnation long before they set out on these earthly adventures, but we won't believe it. They all have within them the germ and potency of good achievements, and during the years of their helplessness and dependence they are unspeakable.

Everybody will hope that the Boston savant has misplaced no decimal point or made an slip-up in his calculations, whatever their nature. Humanity, where civilization rules, is always prepared for a boom of this sort. Let it come! We repeat it, sir, let it come! Bring on all abouid remember, now as ever, that God helps them that help themselves.

SNAKES THAT ARE NOT SNAKES AT ALL.

To the Editor of the New York Times:

The cause of persons whose nerves are excited by protracted and excessive use of stimulants frequently see objects appearing before them is not due wholly to the imagination. In fact, the latter only operates to induce a belief that what is seen is alive and hideous. The eyeball is covered by a network of veins, ordinarily so small that they do not introduce themselves visibly in the path of light that enters the sight, but in the course of some diseases these veins are frequently congested and swollen to sufficient to become visible, and when this happens the effect generally is to appear as if there were an object of considerable size at a distance from the eye.

Of course, this vein is generally long, thin, and sinuous in shape, and the figure seen is frequently startlingly like a snake. That they seem to live is due to the fact that they are often seen in perfect line with the direct front of sight. They are either to the side, up or down. If the eyeball is moved, as is discovered, the victim naturally turns his eyes toward the effect, and the "snake" moves away. The victim follows, and thus a continuous and realistic motion is got. Now, if the eye be returned to the front again quickly it will see another snake, which if watched will glide away in the same manner. The writer of this is afflicted by malarial diseases, and after his eyes are thus congested many green snakes and clouds pass within his vision, which if he were in a state of nervous collapse, might easily be mistaken for those seen by those suffering from delirium tremens.

Trotting Events.

On the tracks of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue yesterday an interesting exhibition of trotting took place, the results of which were as follows:

Nathan Bobbins' "Doctor," John Osborn's "Marcsanier," and A. D. Thompson's "Mary". "Doctor" won the first heat in 2.56½ and "Marcsanier" the second in 2.55.

J. H. Fosher's, "Frank H.", A. D. Thompson's, "John" and John Hayes' "Andy" started in the second race. "Frank H." won the first heat in 2.50½ and "John" the second in 2.50.

John Osborn's "Colonel" and J. H. Fosher's "Missouri Boy", started in the second race. "Colonel" won the first heat in 2.56½ and the "Missouri Boy" the second in 2.48½.

There will also be interesting trotting matches next Saturday afternoon.

To Build a Church.

Messrs. Benjamin Hand, chairman, and A. J. Stewart, treasurer of the Board of Trustees of the First Church of Christ, today completed the purchase of a lot 75x180 of Mrs. Daniel Berry.

The purchase is known as the "Brook Lot," and is situated on Grove street adjoining the brook.

Plans have been drawn, and the erection of a handsome, cosy, church will be commenced as soon as possible.

A Grand Success.

The Lawn Party given on the lawn surrounding the rectory of All Saints' church at Scotch Plains last evening was largely attended and was a success in every particular. During the evening refreshments were served. Prof. Guttman's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion.

A Small Fire.

At about eight o'clock last evening a small fire occurred in the residence of Mr. Demarest on Park avenue above Eighth street. The flames were extinguished with a few buckets of water before much damage was done.

THEY MAY READ THE NEWS.

Jurors Need Not be Ignoramuses, Says Judge Magie.

Judge Magie's substantial opinion, read before the Supreme court, to the effect that jurors may read the news, form opinions and otherwise act as intelligent citizens without being thereby disqualified to act as jurors, has furnished occasion for much favorable comment by the press throughout the State. In New York State, more than in New Jersey, intelligence has been made a disqualification; and men who knew, from reading, anything about a case to be tried, were incontinently challenged at the jury box. This policy was simply offering a premium for fools, and it succeeded in bringing the modern jury system into disrepute. A man who has a mind was not wanted, and a man with an opinion of his own was held to be dangerous. But while this policy was reflected somewhat in some New Jersey trials, it never found lodgment in the higher courts, and Judge Magie's words have utterly obliterated it from the courts of this State. A reasonable man—and such men are the very ones most needed in the jury box—must have opinions are subject to change when sufficient evidence is presented to him. When such a man goes to the jury box, his mind is not a blank, but it is in a condition of intelligent receptivity and he hears, digests and renders a verdict according to the evidence. It is a happy circumstance that the view which many lawyers insist upon,—mainly lawyers who are conducting the defence—that jurors must be ignoramuses, has been swept aside by Judge Magie's vigorous words. They were needed and they were timely. The policy of the courts and of the lawyers should be to get men of full intellect upon juries, and not to keep such men out of the jury box.—Elizabeth Journal.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William Pierson of Liberty street is convalescent from his recent illness.

Miss Minnie Martin of Bound Brook is visiting her sister Mrs. F. H. Smith of this city.

Mr. J. A. Sangston, formerly of this city but now of New York, spent yesterday with friends here.

Mrs. A. M. Ross and family of New York are now occupying the residence of Mr. L. Heyniger on Union avehue, which they have leased for the Summer.

By the will of the late Dr. Abram Coles of Scotch Plains he bequeaths his entire estate to his son, Dr. J. A. Coles, and his daughter, Emilie S. Coles. They are their own executors.

Six past masters of Jerusalem Lodge were present at the reception tendered to District Deputy Grand Master Anthony Schoder of the 5th masonic districts by Anchor Lodge, F. & A. M., Tuesday evening. The above speaks well for Jerusalem.

Mr. R. V. Salms, the contractor, is completing two $4,000 Queen Anne residences for ex-Councilman E. B. Clarke, who has had his beautiful grounds graded and laid out into a new street to be known as Clarke Terrace, and it is with the dwellings is quite picturesque. Clarke Terrace begins on West Front street, between Plainfield and Grant avenues, and extends southeast to the railroad. Mr. Clarke and family will occupy one of the residences referred to. They are temporarily boarding at the Seminary until the dwelling is completed, which will be about July 1st.

—The Alerts of Elizabeth and the Westfield base ball team will play a game of ball Saturday afternoon at Elizabeth.

Resenting Hyper-Criticism.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In the account of the Baptist organ concert, in your daily contemporary, an injustice was done Dr. Penfield. While it is true he is more at home on a larger instrument, good musicians who were present, do not agree with the criticisms referred to, but on the contrary consider the pieces he played as well rendered.

MUSICIAN.

The Board of Freeholders.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at the bridge near the Blazing mills on Thursday and decided to repair the bridge, which will cost about $125.

On Saturday a committee met at the bridge near S. E. Garretson's. Some time ago a horse belonging to George D. Totten fell through this bridge and received injuries for which Totten presented a bill to the board.

The board met in regular session yesterday at the Court House, Somerville. All the members were present.

A complaint was received from M. H. Johnson that the amount paid for the burial of the poor was insufficient to remunerate him. He presented a bill of $6 for reimbursement of amount paid by him to Somerville Cemetery Association for two recent burials. The bill was passed on the condition that after the Director should consult counsel, and if found correct, it would then be paid.

The Finance Committee reported in writing, which was received.

The committee on Collector's accounts reported that they audited that officer's accounts for the past year, and a vote of thanks was tendered to the Collector for the careful manner in which he kept his accounts, and for his faithful performance of duty.

Mr. Stuats reported that the contract for building the Washington avenue bridge near Dunellen had been awarded to William A. Voorhees for $297.50, to be completed by July 30.

The committee to examine claim of George D. Totton reported adversely. The board concurred in the report.

The Collect was authorized to borrow on an amount not to exceed $10,000 for county purposes in anticipation of taxes.

Adjourned to meet at Apgar's Hotel, Peapack, June 13.

Westfield for Borough Government.

The citizens of Westfield met in mass-meeting Tuesday evening to take definite action in regard to borough government. S. W. Reese was the chairman and Jas. C. Lambert Secretary. A majority of the Special Committee on the borough question reported in favor of a borough and recommended that an election be held. C. B. Ripley, LL. D., and Joseph R. Connolly, a member of the Town Committee, made the minority report which set forth that Westfield was getting along well enough under the present form of government. The citizens voted by a large majority to hold an election and E. J. Whitehead, C. F. Oxley and T. D. Bunnell were appointed a committee to draft a petition for a borough and to get the necessary 10 per cent. of the tax-payers living within the proposed borough limits to sign a petition for an election. The matter of borough government is also earnestly discussed in Cranford and Roselle and if Westfield elects to have the borough, Cranford and Roselle will no doubt adopt that form of government.

Strawberries and Ice Cream.

The members of the congregation of St. Joseph's Catholic Church held a strawberry and ice cream festival in the Seeger and Turner Hall, on Somerset street, last evening. The affair was largely attended and was a success in every way. It will continue this evening. The following ladies had charge of the tables:

Refreshment table.—Miss Margaret Daly, assisted by Mrs. Shotwell, Mrs. John McCann, Mrs. O'Reilly, Miss Halpin and the Misses Conley.

Lemonade booth.—Mrs. Charles Farley and Mrs. Wilkins.

Flower booth.—Miss M. E. Daly, Miss Kittie Cooley, Miss Maggie Cashen, Miss Julia Shay and Miss Mary Fahey.

The soda water table was in charge of Messrs. Richard McCollough, John Daly and Sam Cahey.

Dancing was a feature of the evening, and was heartily enjoyed by all present.

Mount Bethel.

[From The News Correspondent.]

Contractor John Cooper, Jr., is doing a good job on Stiles' Hill, and has the thanks of all who pass over it.

Mr. John C. Bethhold has the finest six-acres of corn around here.

There will be a prayer meeting at the Back Road School House next Tuesday evening, at 8 p. m. All are invited to come.

Mr. John Cooper has the best piece of clover-ground in this vicinity.

Mr. A. V. Jimerson, of Plainfield, has bought the Dan. Cory farm at South Sterling. The consideration was $1,250.

ROVER.

—At the session of the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias, three years ago, a resolution was adopted setting apart the third Tuesday in June each year as Pythian decoration day, when the graves of the departed members of the order are to be decorated.

The Aviator.

"It will change the whole world in six months." This was what a Russian officer said to Mr. Hiram S. Maxim, of the gun manufacturing house of Maxim & Nordenfeldt. The reason the Russian officer said this was that Mr. Maxim has invented a flying machine that Mr. Maxim believes will fly. He has invented many other things that performed successfully the work that he expected them to do, and, having been thus accurate and level headed heretofore in his plans, Mr. Maxim sees no reason to doubt himself in this.

The machine is planned differently from anything hitherto tried in air navigation. The Maxim machine is called the aviator, from a name coined by the French. It was nothing of the balloon structure about it. It follows rather the idea of a kite—that is to say, of a plane surface held against the wind. Mr. Maxim has made use also of the observations of Professor R. A. Proctor, who studied for a long time the flight of a turkey buzzard in Florida—its motionless poising and floating on air and its slow sailing in majestic circles hour after hour without pause or weariness. The aviator says that his experiments have been made on the aeroplane system—to propel a plane set at an angle so as to ride upon the air as fast as the air yields and so to maintain a comparatively level course.

He has been experimenting for two years at a country place which he leased in England, although he himself is a Connecticut man. The large kite or plane in his machine is 110 feet long and 40 feet wide. Attached to this are other smaller planes, making the surface to catch the wind in all 5,000 feet. The kites are composed of steel tubing covered with silk. In the air the aviator will look, its inventor says, like a great sheet of silk with a little platform under it. The platform carries the passengers and the propelling machinery. The weight of the whole structure when completed and equipped with water and fuel will be over 5,000 pounds. The engines will develop 300 horse power. The thing will run by steam; which is to be generated from petroleum fuel. The petroleum is first turned into gas and the gas is burned to make the steam.

If the machine works as expected it will travel 100 miles an hour, and its inventor says that if it might be made to carry fuel enough to drive it across the ocean. But the great use Mr. Maxim expects for his flyer, if it goes at all, is that it will be a terrible engine of war. Fully equipped and loaded with a cargo of dynamite this monstrous bird fiend will sail through the air dropping death and destruction as it passes. Say, for instance, our friends the nihilists and anarchists had one of the machines in readiness. Sailing in England, a lump of dynamite would be dropped near Westminster and parliament house, and all that part of London would be ripped up in half a minute. Then sailing across Europe the messieurs anarchists would drop another chunk upon the palace of the German kaiser, and Emperor Billy would never say again that there was only one will in Germany and that was his. He would never say that or anything else. Once more sailing serenely on, this dark winged bird would turn northward and eastward and deal out another earthquake in Russia, and hardly a fragment would be left of the Romanoff or his palaces.

It is this aspect of the Maxim invention that is most stupendous. Its success is possible. Almost anything is possible in these times. If this is successful it will make useless all the great guns, all the stupendous fortifications and all the huge ironclad ships of war that the brain of man has yet devised. In short, it will do away with war altogether. This was why the Russian said it would change the whole world in six months.

A sight for gods and men was the Prince of Wales, heir to the throne of England, appearing on the stand in a gambling scandal lawsuit, in which it was testified that at the little game which raised the scandal his royal highness was the banker and held the money. Even a prince, it was testified, thought that over $1,100 in two evenings' play by one man was rather steep winnings. Great Britain has stood a good many things from her Georges and their descendants; and it is possible she can stand a gambling king. But after all there is something to be commended in the way the prince obeyed his summons like a little man and came into court to give his evidence as the poorest, commonest subject of Great Britain would have had to do. It was the unalloyed way to get out of a bad scrape, and Englishmen will think none the worse of him for this, however they may look at his gambling habit.

If always to court and never to wed is the height of felicity, then that couple who were married in Berlin the other day after an engagement of fifty years must have had a good time for half a century. We tender them our congratulations.

THE PREMIER'S FUNERAL

All Canada Mourns for Sir John Macdonald.

THE DEAD STATESMAN'S ESTATE

His Widow Will Probably Receive About $100,000—It Was His Request That Kingston Should Be His Last Resting Place—The Remains at That City.

KINGSTON, Ont., June 11.—The special train bearing the remains of the late Sir John Macdonald arrived here shortly before 9 o'clock last night. Accompanying the remains were the privy councilors and a few other gentlemen and the press representatives. The remains were borne to the city hall, where in the public hall they were placed on a catafalque trimmed with heavy folds of cashmere and with ostrich feathers on the four corners. The city hall is magnificently draped. The city is in heavy mourning, all the buildings being draped in black.

A Day of Mourning.

All the stations and engines of the Canadian Pacific road from the Atlantic to the Pacific are draped in mourning in every city and town throughout the dominion. Minute guns will be fired during the progress of the funeral procession at Ottawa, and where there were field battery or garrison guns five-minute guns were fired. Tuesday was a day of mourning in Montreal. The corporation of the city and the commercial exchange were closed.

Sir Joe's Will.

OTTAWA, June 11.—Sir John Macdonald's will will not be probated until after the funeral. It was drawn up some years ago by Hon. Mr. Abbott, and is understood to provide that the late Kingston should be his last resting place. The estate, though not large, will probably realize $100,000. The widow says that his experiments have been made on the aeroplane system—to propel a plane set at an angle so as to ride upon the air as fast as the air yields and so to maintain a comparatively level course.

He has been experimenting for two years at a country place which he leased in England, although he himself is a Connecticut man. LACEY WILL NOT GO.

But He Will Prepare a Statement for Philadelphia's Address.

NEW YORK, June 11.—A special to the Evening Post from Washington says it has been decided that the controller of the currency shall not leave Washington in response to the demand of the Philadelphia committee engaged in investigating the Keystone bank scandal, although his wishes in the matter have been overruled. Mr. Lacey will prepare a statement for the committee, setting forth the entire history of the failure so far as it is known to him, and citing from the original documents in his possession to show the reasons for the course he took.

The reason why this course is taken, as stated by one spokesman for the administration, is that the correspondence and memoranda concerning the Keystone bank are mixed with correspondence about other banks in such a manner that if they were spread before the committee and published in the newspapers there would be revealed a good many communications intended to be confidential, and wholly unrelated to the case.

The precedent of throwing open to the public the miscellaneous hints, suggestions, suspicions and information furnished by a confidential agent to his chief would, it is argued, be even more pernicious than in the case of committing a controller to go hither and thither about the country in response to summonses from every local committee who chose to issue one.

Bardsley's Assignee Sees.

PHILADELPHIA, June 11.—Edward W. Magill, assignee of John Bardsley, has entered five suits against alleged debtors of Mr. Bardsley, to recover indebtedness of the defendants to the assigned estate. The most important is brought against the Keystone National bank, to recover $945,000, the total amount of fourteen due bills held by Mr. Bardsley's estate as evidences of indebtedness against the bank, and which it is believed represent state funds deposited in the bank.

ONE JURY BRIBER CONVICTED.

McCrystal Is the Victim, but Detective O'Malley May Escape.

NEW ORLEANS, June 11.—The jury in the case of McCrystal, the jury briber who was mixed up in the Hennessy case, promptly pronounced McCrystal guilty. Tales Juror Mc Cabe testified positively that McCrystal had offered him $500 if he would work for a mistrial or acquittal if he got on the Hennessy jury. McCrystal is being tried again today upon another charge of bribery in connection with John Cooney, another of O'Malley's men.

Detective O'Malley's case was also called, but when McCrystal's confession to the district attorney was offered as testimony the judge promptly ruled against its admissibility. The ruling saves O'Malley, and the district attorney's office state he is connecting him directly with the bribery cases.

Charles Granger, another of the alleged Hennessy jury bribers, was tried for trying to bribe Alphonse Lebaire. The jury could not agree, and a mistrial was entered.

The President's Appointments.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—The president has made the following appointments: Leonard W. Colby, of Nebraska, to be assistant attorney general (as provided by the act of March 3, 1891); Walter C. Reed, of Iowa, to be chief justice of the court of private land claims; Wilbur F. Stone, of Colorado; Henry C. Sluss, of Kansas; Thomas J. Mackey, of North Carolina, and William W. Murray, of Tennessee, to be associate justices of the court of private land claims; Matthew G. Reynolds, of Missouri, to be attorney of the United States for the court of private land claims. Fuller and Stone are Democrats, and the terms which these appointments is made will expire in December, 1895. Each judge will receive a salary of $6,000 a year and expenses. Mr. Reynolds will receive $5,000 a year and expenses.

The President May Attend.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—A delegation consisting of ninety-five southern gentlemen, headed by Senator Ransom, waited upon the president in the morning and invited him to attend the Southern exposition at Raleigh in October. The president said he greatly appreciated the evident cordiality of the invitation and if he could so arrange public business at the time of the opening of the exposition he would gladly accept it. The delegation then presented the president with a book made of southern pine, inside of which were samples of North Carolina's productions of cotton, leaf tobacco and mica, and on which was inscribed the formal invitation to the president and cabinet.

Printers and the World's Fair.

BOSTON, June 11.—At the third day's session of the International Typographical union the finance committee reported the books of the treasurer correct. A communication as to differences between Scranton printers and the union in that city was referred to the executive officers. A proposition providing for an industrial exhibit on the part of the printers at the World's fair was overwhelmingly defeated. Resolutions were adopted favoring government control of telegraphs. The printers enjoyed a trip down the bay as the guests of Boston's mayor.

McSloy and Dismon Guilty.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 11.—The jury in the case against John McSloy, Mike Dismon and twenty-eight other strikers for conspiracy and riot at the Frick company's Leisenring No. 1 works found McSloy and Dismon guilty and acquitted the rest. The case of conspiracy, riot, etc., against John H. Hughes and others was then taken up. The operators seem to have other cases well worked up against the leaders in the strike.

Diplomats Off for Chicago.

WASHINGTON, June 11.—A party of a dozen diplomats left Washington this morning for Chicago, from this the site selected for the World's fair and to meet the fair commission, so they can advise their respective governments upon the prospects of the exhibition. The state department has them in charge.

Sawtelle After a New Trial.

CONCORD, N. H., June 11.—A motion for a new trial of the case of Isaac H. Sawtelle, now awaiting execution for the murder of his brother, Hiram, will be made by his counsel, on the ground of newly discovered evidence. The application will be considered at the September term of court.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—ADV

A PRINCE'S PUNISHMENT

Wales Scored by England's Press and People.

GORDON CUMMING'S CONSOLATION.

Wedded the Day After His Name Was Dragged in the Dust—His Wife Was Miss Garner, a Beautiful Young Woman of New York.

LONDON, June 11.—The marriage of Sir William Gordon Cumming to Miss Garner, of New York, created the greatest sensation here, and has immensely helped Cumming in the popular estimation. Opinion is now much more favorable to the baronet than after the verdict, and Sir William and his bride were heartily cheered as they took the train for Scotland. The marriage is a fortunate one for Cumming, to whom the trial has been a great expense. His estates were already mortgaged, though producing sufficient for a reasonable income, but the trial would have reduced him to the greatest straits financially but for the fortunate dowration of his bride. Miss Garner is described as a lovely girl both in person and in character. She has been living in London about ten years. She is the eldest daughter of the late William Garner, who with his wife, was drowned in July, 1878, in the disaster to the steamer Pacific, the Mohawk. Miss Garner is worth about $1,000,000. Since the opening of the baccarat scandal case in court Sir Gordon Cumming has denied that he and Miss Garner were to be married, but on the statement made Friday last Miss Garner had herself obtained the necessary official authority, and that the wedding would be solemnized at once.

The Royal Set Alarmed.

Contrary to anticipation there has been no move as yet in the guards of the Turf club to act on the case. In the Marlborough it is said preliminary action has been taken, but even there it is possible Cumming may escape without expulsion, as there is said to be a feeling among the Prince of Wales' set that it will not do to push Cumming too hard.

The Prince of Wales Arraigned.

Never in history, at least since the Cromwell period, has the royal house of England been subjected to such general criticism and condemnation in the person of the heir to the throne. The leading newspapers, irrespective of party, in London and the provinces are united in arraigning the Prince of Wales for the low example he has given the public, and startling suggestions are given currency that the prince's kind of royalty is not suited to the age and to the people. The Nonconformists everywhere are aroused, and next Sunday will undoubtedly witness some of the pithiest utterances of the century from the pulpit of Britain.

The Wilsons May Sue for Libel.

The Wilsons are greatly stirred up over the article in The Chronicle, handling them and the prince without gloves, and they are said to be even considering a libel suit. The trial of such a suit would be more interesting than the baccarat case. The following is the editorial sensation in The Chronicle is said to be Massingham, who was formerly a writer on The Star, and removed from that paper, under the ownership, on account of his advanced opinions. Those who thought they had got rid of him when they secured his dismissal from The Star now find that they only put him in a wider and more important field. The Wilsons have kept very quiet since the verdict, and Mrs. Wilson is said to have been thoroughly disgusted by the hissing she received as she left the court room.

Want Wales to Stop Gambling.

In the Baptist conference at Hastings yesterday the following was passed regretting that the future king of England had ever indulged in gambling.

The Baptist conference at Todmordgh has sent a memorial to Sir Francis Knollys, secretary to the Prince of Wales, praying the prince, in view of the misery and ruin caused to the country by the prevalence of gambling, to decline in future to practice or countenance it.

It Costs Cumming $5,000.

Sir William Gordon Cumming has resigned from all his clubs. The costs taxed against him are £5,000.

Walter Outshoots Gus Zimm-rman.

ST. LOUIS, June 11.—The National Sharpshooters' association resumed shooting at the rifle ranges. Among the winners in the Key target of 200 yards for second gold watches were: M. Grau, Chicago; Dr. Merkle, Chicago; H. Piepenbunck, Joliet; P. A. Schmidt, Joliet; Al Robertson, Kansas City; Dubuque Herr, Regensutter, Davenport; H. H. Hoehn, Monroe, Wis.; O. B. Schmidt, Davenport. On the "man" target B. Walter, of New York, won first money, $60, by getting 98 out of a possible 100 points. Gus Zimmerman, New York, the famous crack shot, was second, with 92 points. On the turn target Emil Bloch, Davenport, Ia., won first money, $100, with 245 out of a possible 300.

How the Hilletts Killed Osborn.

COLUMBUS, O., June 11.—At the Elliott trial, John Lonnis, a butcher, and J. N. Branajean, a fruit dealer, who were within ten feet of the participants in the murder of Osborn, were the first witnesses to swear that both W. J. and Patrick Elliott fired before Osborn drew his revolver. Branajean testified that he would not swear he had been shot did Osborn draw his gun and fire at Bill Elliott. Witness further testified positively to seeing Bill Elliott fire over the shoulder of a woman, behind whom he dodged.

Yale Students Punished.

NEW HAVEN, June 11.—Yale students concerned in the recent torpedo incident at Barnum's circus recently have been ordered by the faculty to obtain signatures to a petition which is also ordered that fifty-nine marks be placed against them at the beginning of next term. As sixty marks in the suspension limits, the young men will have to keep very straight in order to avoid that punishment.

Rewarded by the President.

LONDON, June 11.—The president of the United States has caused to be presented a gold watch and medal to the captain and gold watches and chains to the first and third officers of the Allen Shaw for rescuing the schooner Electric Light.

Students Held for Trial.

BOSTON, June 11.—Twenty-five students, members of the Zeta Psi club, were held in $400 bail for trial on a charge of maintaining a liquor nuisance at their club room. They were released on their own recognizance.

FAREWELL TO SCHOOL LIFE.

Columbia Boys Graduated—Commencement at Other Institutions.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Amid a shower of flowers and the waving of handkerchiefs from many a fair one, 321 Columbia boys stepped upon the stage at Music hall last evening and received from President Seth Low a bit of parchment. One hundred and eighty-five received certificates making them physicians and surgeons, sixty-three were added to the army of lawyers, fifty-eight given the title bachelor of arts, thirty mining engineers; forty, master of arts, and nine more proudly heard themselves proclaimed doctors of philosophy.

Class Day Exercises at Peekskill.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., June 11.—The class day exercises of the Peekskill Military academy were held last evening at the armory of the academy, at Peekskill. The annual address was delivered by Elisha K. Camp. This morning the boys listened to an address by General James W. Husted.

Princeton's 141 Graduates.

PRINCETON, N. J., June 11.—The 144th annual commencement of Princeton college were held yesterday, and Princeton added to the roll of her alumni 141 more men.

The Lucky Men at West Point.

WEST POINT, N. Y., June 11.—At a dress parade last night the standing of the graduating class was published. It has been a neck and neck race between Crosby and Carter, but at last Crosby has won. The standing is as follows:

Crosby, S.; Sewell, Echols, McIsaacs, Morrow, Barney, Lyon, Hamilton, E.; Murphy, White, Fuller, Scharer, Furlong, Livermore, Corcoran, Fleming, Winans, Johnston, W.; Gowen, Wilcox, Hoyt, Bertsch, Bush, Donovan, Lindsley, E.; Bennett, Crabbs, Glasgow, Armstrong, Jarvis, Heavey, Rhine, C. D.; Mitchell, Hamilton, R. S.; Upton, Smith, H. A.; Clark, H. C.; Saffarano, Pierce, Wahl, Jackson, Dunworth, Ogden, Mims, J. L.; Smith, G. R.; Carter, Whitman, Cramley, Lafitte, Bradley, Settle, Switzer, Williams, R. O.; Guyer, Crane, Chapman, Royden, Jenks, Drew, Ely, H., and Barley.

Bright Vassar Girls.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 11.—The chapel at Vassar college was crowded with students and visitors at 10:30 o'clock, it being commencement. Eight essays were delivered by the bright young ladies—Miss Annie Applegate, Miss Caroline E. Furness, Miss Martha Edith Rickert, Miss Rosa Mary Kavana, Miss Carrie Monell Mitchell, Miss Margaret Flag Washburn, Miss Florence Halliday and Miss Elvia Estelle Vickray.

Thirty Girls Leave Packer Institute.

BROOKLYN, June 11.—Thirty pretty women in classic gowns and ready to do battle with the intellectual world were graduated from the Packer institute, Brooklyn's most exclusive seminary, last night. All of Brooklyn's Four Hundred that are not in Europe were present. The exercises were held in the chapel of the institute.

SIX MINISTERS PUT OUT.

Exciting Scenes at the Reformed Presbyterian Synod at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, June 11.—The six young Reformed Presbyterian ministers on trial for defending the privilege of voting at civil elections have been expelled by the synod. The early part of the morning session of the synod was occupied in discussing the resolutions introduced by Dr. Joseph Cooper McCracken. When the Rev. Mr. Smith, of Baltimore, rose to speak he stated that he would vote for the resolutions offered by the Covenanter church. "I am going to resign my pastorate next Sabbath and leave the church," he said.

The remark created a great sensation. There was a strong desire to applaud Mr. Smith's declaration, and it was with difficulty that the Liberalists kept their feelings within the bounds of order. The Conservatives, however, were victorious by a vote of 99 to 37.

The Rev. J. R. J. Milligan here arose and said: "I want to enter my appeal from the decision of this court and appeal to the judgment of a higher court, from which there is no appeal. I now bid all my brethren in the Covenanter church farewell."

The Rev. John Teaz, a missionary stationed in India, also arose and requested the synod to give him a letter of dismission, saying that he could no longer conscientiously remain in the church.

The Rev. J. F. Carson, of Brooklyn, announced his withdrawal from the Covenanter church. The Rev. W. L. C. Jackson and the Rev. W. H. Reed followed in a similar strain.

When recess was announced the friends of the young ministers rushed to them, and a general handshaking followed. The Rev. Dr. Sommerville said that the immediate result of this action of the Pittsburg Presbytery, indorsed by the synod, will be a stampede from the Reformed Presbyterian church.

The charges against the suspended ministers were scandal, libel and following dissenters in declaring it to be law of the right of franchise at a meeting in the east end of this city. Their names are E. M. Milligan, J. R. J. Milligan, W. H. Reed, W. L. C. Jackson and O. B. Milligan. R. B. Barnett, a student, charged with heresy, has not been tried.

Emmett Denounces Parnell.

NEW YORK, June 11.—Thomas Addis Emmett, president of the National Federation of America, has issued an address to the friends of Ireland in America. The home for Ireland is which he says that for months past every effort has been paralyzed through the acts of one man—Parnell—who has dragged the chaste name of Ireland into the gutter. The necessity for assisting the evicted tenants was deeply impressed upon the Irish race and a noble effort was made to effect the purpose. Mr. Parnell was fully pledged to carry out this object, but he has betrayed his trust, Emmett says, and sets out many reasons why responsible for the sufferings of the evicted tenants so far as they might have been mitigated by the use of the Paris fund, in the application of which he has refused to act with the other custodian. Emmett says the friends of Ireland cannot stand by inactive and expect the Liberal party of England to bear the brunt of the coming battles. Money is needed and needed quickly.

Wolcott Says Blaine Will Run.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, who is in the city on business, said: "Mr. Blaine must be a candidate in 1892, for we are going to enter him in a very warm race for the presidency, and he will succeed. He has to do what an immense number of friends he has who demand his nomination."

Editor Penrose Murdered.

BUTTE, Mont., June 11.—W. J. Penrose, editor of The Mining Journal and member of the legislature, was murdered in his home in the suburbs of Butte last night through the temple by the assassin. Belle Browning has been arrested on suspicion.

A Lull in Business.

"Hard luck, eh!" said the deputy sheriff as he tacked a notice on the door of the Tomcod restaurant, up on Market street. "Did they boycott you?"

"It wasn't that," gloomily responded the proprietor, who was making out a list of indestructible pies for the assignees. "It was the fearful want of education among the lower classes that did me up."

Right then arrived the city hall man, pocketing a handful of five-centers.

"Well, about a month ago I came across a fat old loafer who weighed about 300 pounds—looked like a bundle of hay on legs—so I hired him as a walking advertisement and had him float around town carrying a sign lettered:

I LUNCH AT THE TOMCOD.

"Great idea that! Well?"

"Well, it worked fine, and then I struck another bum—weighed about eighty-five—regular living skeleton. So I hired him, too, and had a sign painted:

I DON'T LUNCH AT THE TOMCOD.

"I see. Big scheme."

"So it was. The scheme was all right, but pretty soon business got to be terribly bad; couldn't understand it until one day I came across the sandwich man down on Kearney street. It seems that neither of the old fogies could read."

"But what did that?"

"They had changed signs. See?"—San Francisco Examiner.

Rhody's Kisses.

Rhody Cassidy, begorra,
Is the darlin'est of preachures,
She's a shuthin' of locution
That'd mortify the praechers,
For she sits at every chappin', mointh,
Whoile she parts of shpache carisses,
And it tickles me to tell it—
Rhody shutthers when she kisses.

Pass me onessmiles, but it's funny
How her darlin' lips 'll quiver
When to sale me protistations
Love's sevire impharts O give 'er,
Thrimblin', thrimblin', palpitatin'
Wid the joy her heart confisses,
That's the way the Rpe of Rhody
Stutther whin she mates me kisses.

Fais! They call it a misfortune
When a person stutthers, do they?
They'd think differint, belave me,
If its charm in kissin' knew they,
For the lingerin', tittivatin'
Of the virge verges of lovers' bisses
Makes me quoite approvve the way that
Rhody stutthers whin she kisses.

IS RAY HAMILTON ALIVE?

A Man Who Saw Him Two Weeks Ago.

HENRY STRONG WILL THUS SWEAR.

He Claims That He Met the Supposed Dead Man in Yellowstone Park and That Hamilton Was Traveling Incognito—Sargent Tells a Different Tale.

NEW YORK, June 11.—While Robert Ray Hamilton's friends and his late partner are going about closing up his affairs and settling his estate, a witness turns up who is willing to swear positively that Mr. Hamilton is not dead unless he has died in the last two weeks. The witness is Henry Strong, formerly of Greene, Chenango county, N. Y. Henderson that two weeks ago he met Robert Ray Hamilton face to face in the Yellowstone park region. He is certain it was Mr. Hamilton. He recognized him at once by his face and his voice.

What He Thinks He Knows.

Mr. Strong came to New York two days ago and said nothing to anybody about his meeting Mr. Hamilton or his double until he read in yesterday's papers of the arrival of Partner Sargent and his slightly confused statements. Finding, as he says, that the death story was being persisted in and Mr. Sargent was telling about finding the body and burying it, he concluded to tell what he knew, or thought he knew, about the matter.

Not Known as Hamilton.

"I have been in California for the last year or two," he said, "and started home three weeks ago by way of the Northern Pacific. At Yankton I stopped off and took the stage route into the Yellowstone park to see what it was like.

"There are no towns in the park, you know—only scattered hotels for tourists. At one of these hotels—I have forgotten the name of it—two weeks ago tomorrow morning I saw Mr. Hamilton. He was apparently traveling through the park as I was and had not been long at the hotel. He was alone, so far as I could judge. I did not speak to him because I found out that he was not known there as Robert Ray Hamilton, and I thought that if he wanted to remain unknown it was none of my business. I saw him going about and heard him talking to other people.

How He Knew Ray.

"I could have recognized him by his voice if I hadn't seen his face at all. I knew that it was Mr. Hamilton the minute I observed him. The people around the hotel did not know where he came from or where he was going. I stayed there only a short time, and had no chance to find out more about his movements. He didn't let on to me in the direction that he went. He looked very well and was well dressed, but like a traveler and not like a resident. I never had any personal acquaintance with him, but I knew his face and voice very well. I was in Albany during the winter of 1889, when Mr. Hamilton was serving his last term in the assembly, and I went often to the legislature.

"I was particularly interested in Mr. Hamilton, because he was the only Republican from New York city, and I am a Republican myself, and because he was a bright young man. I saw a great deal of him in Albany and frequently heard him speak.

Willing to Swear to It.

"When I was in California I read different stories about his being dead and being alive, and I am willing to testify on the witness stand that I saw him alive two weeks ago."

Mr. Strong looks like an honest farmer and talks like a man who knows what he is about, but he is a little out of range in his geography, anyway. The Northern Pacific railroad does not run through Yankton, and a man who would set out to travel by stage from Yankton to Yellowstone Park would have about 700 miles of remarkably hard wheeling before him.

Sargent Tells a Different Tale.

John S. Sargent, the ranch partner of Robert Ray Hamilton, who has come here from his ranch at Marymere, Wyo., to prove to friends of Manager Hamilton that his son is really dead, told the story yesterday of Mr. Hamilton's death and the finding of his body in Snake river. The story is substantially as it has been published before.

Sargent says: "There is no question at all that the body found was that of Hamilton. I recognized it myself, and the things that were found on it were proof conclusive. He had probably been in the water a week or more. His watch had run down, stopped at 9:30. We buried him at sunrise on Sept. 4 at my ranch. I did not make the news of his death known until he had been buried because I was so busy."

Grand Central Trotting Circuit's Dates.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 11.—The stewards of the Grand Central Trotting circuit met at the office of the Rochester Driving Park association shortly before noon. The following cities were represented: Pittsburg, J. A. McCracken; Cleveland, William Edwards; W. H. Fanz; S. W. Short; Buffalo, C. J. Hamlin, E. S. Hawley; Rochester, G. W. Archer, A. Collins; Hartford, T. O. King; Springfield, H. G. Robinson; Philadelphia, J. A. Wenderoth. Meetings will be held as follows the coming season: Pittsburg, July 14 to 17 inclusive; Cleveland, July 21 to 31 inclusive; Buffalo, Aug. 4 to 7 inclusive; Rochester, Aug. 11 to 14 inclusive; Springfield, Aug. 18 to 21 inclusive; Hartford, Aug. 25 to 28 inclusive; Philadelphia, Sept. 1 to 4 inclusive.

The Iowa Prohibitionists.

DES MOINES, June 11.—The state convention of the Prohibition party nominated a complete ticket. Governor, Isaac T. Gibson; lieutenant governor, J. G. Little; supreme court judge, D. B. Taurney; superintendent of schools, Mrs. T. M. Dunham; railroad commissioner, C. S. Hart. The platform declares for the suppression of the liquor traffic; for the equality of gold, silver and paper money; for the Australian ballot; for women suffrage, and for a commission appointed by the legislature with power to remove municipal officers in cities where the prohibitory law is not enforced and to appoint a constabulary that will close up the saloons.

Seven Soldier Lynchers Indicted.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., June 11.—The grand jury which investigated the lynching of A. J. Hunt by United States soldiers on April 25 have indicted seven enlisted men in the Fourth United States cavalry, although the jury were satisfied that there were a number of others equally guilty. This belief was not supported by sufficient evidence to indict. It is recommended that the troops at Walla Walla be exchanged to some other fort in view of the present feeling against them.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. Where none need were done, I found as often as necessary. WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson
Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired my lawn mowers for our future satisfaction. HEAD GARDENER, Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.
My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have done good work in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for Mayor Cooley.
There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand it thoroughly.
HENRY HAHN, Landscape gardener.
Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener
They made as good a job of our mower as any two hands, as ice house and about 100 square feet of cattle sheds, at West Albany, N. Y., were burned. Loss, $50,000. The property was all owned by the Central Transportation company.
Lester L. Bristol, the demented superintendent of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, who wandered away Saturday from his home in Jersey City, taking his four young boys with him, has been found at Sparkhill, N. Y. They were on a fishing trip.

A WOMAN OF THE WORLD.

A Man Describes to a Woman the Virtues of the True Woman as She Is.

A woman said to a man the other day, "Mrs. White is a woman of the world to her finger tips;" and the man said: "Thank goodness, she is. I wish we had a few more like her."

And then he added: "Do you know anything of the virtues of a woman of the world—that is, the true woman of the world? She is the woman who makes life perfectly smooth and delightful. She does not say disagreeable things. She makes her likes felt, and her dislikes are so well concealed that her enemies are ignorant, when they get a blow, as to where it comes from. Don't imagine by this that I mean that she is the woman who does the cat act, and is given to smiling and grinning at everybody.

"Oh, no, she has too much sense for that. She has the art of making people appear at their best, and she knows how to be agreeable alike to old and young. Her husband respects her; her children love her; her servants fear her, and consequently they obey her oglers. "If she finds it necessary to mark either a man or a woman as detrimental, she can usually give a reason for it, as she does not go out of her way to make enemies.

"She would not forgive bad manners in a genius, for she very properly concludes that a genius has no more right to be bad mannered than a more ordinary man. She regrets that genius and gentleman are not always synonymous, but until they are she doesn't desire the acquaintance of the genius. She is an earnest believer in the bond of marriage, and thinks it is quite as unnecessary to uphold it as it is to refuse to discuss scandalish regard to a failure in it.

"She does not ask that people shall love, but she does insist that she shall have respect. She is not one of the women who make their husbands unhappy, for she is not inquisitive. She can answer forgive bad morals than bad manners, and she ignores many things because it is not good form for her to see them, cowering in this way with a mantle of charity the half conceived offenses of her friends.

"The man married to a woman of the world has a much happier life than does the one married to the ingenue; she is disappointed because he isn't her ideal, and he is made wretched because of the tears and moans that pervade the household. If I had a son I should prefer he would marry a woman of the world—remember, I am using the phrase in its best and truest sense—and had I to choose a husband for my daughter it should be a man who had known other women, who had seen their faults and trade virtues, and who knew how to take a young and innocent girl by the hand and lead her carefully and considerately into the state of matrimony until she herself became the monarch thereof."

And the woman to whom this little sermon was preached began to think that after all there were different kinds of women of the world.—New York Sun.

Gifts to Wore Out and Tired Women.

How I wish I could gather together all the pale faced little women who are forever hemming away at one iron dentical little seam so much in fashion, all the tired out housekeepers, trudging away at the sewing machine, all the little seamstress like so many dairy sheep on a treadle, and flash them out into a good time of their own choosing.

For some of them the "good time" would be an outing in the country where Lazarus is once more hearing the voice of his Lord at the door and is ready, and preparing to come forth in May time resurrection of leaf and blossom and fern; for some it would be a season ticket to the opera; for some a full purse to expend on bargains, and for others it would be a chance to slip away somewhere and rest. Do you know when I get quite too awfully rich to know what to do with all my coppers, I am going to establish a charity in contradistinction to your bread and butter, free soup and flannel petticoat affairs. There are too many of that sort already.

The "Lord bless you, my good woman" take this dollar and support yourself and seven children" style of the average charities are plentiful enough. What we want are remembrances of joy for those who know no joy. Good times for those who have forgotten how to be glad. To flash a bit of sparkle into tired lives, as God sends singing birds into dark forests. When ever I found a rich woman describing a band of "Glory McQuirks" to see a play, or a jolly gentleman presenting Tiny Tim with a velocipede and a ride on a merry-go-round as well as a Christmas turkey and copper toed shoes.—Teresa H. Dean in Chicago Herald.

The Real Tragedies of Life.

The real tragedies of life are often to be found where we should perhaps least expect them. They are going on before us in the lives of many a wife and mother in our American cities today, who, between her duties to her husband, her children, her church and the calls of society, which she often must not slight because of her husband's position, present or aspired to, is being killed before our eyes, and sometimes at the same time by the incompetent domestic service which makes housekeeping and the creation of a comfortable home almost an impossibility.

One such woman I saw die in New York only a few years ago at thirty-nine, literally killed by the brave effort to do all her duty, and duty she saw "lying about around us every day," with brave smiles on their faces. You may see them by hundreds in the streets and at her own receptions in any American city if you have been initiated into the band, and know the passwords and the grip. If you do not, you will think that they are brilliant and beautiful women, and involuntarily bow the head before them for their goodness and their womanliness, but you will not know that you are rendering homage to martyrs as truly as if you saw them led into the Coliseum as playthings for a Numidian lion, and the lion really to account of their religion.—Anna C. Brackett in Harper's.

A Word to the Girls.

Girls, don't keep young men waiting when they call to see you while you primp and powder and fix your hair and prepare. It is not good form. The thing to do is to walk right in as if you weren't in the least bit of a flutter, and just as if you were part and parcel of the establishment. I used to think papa was horrid when my mother would say to him, "Go and see Jessie's Livy in the dining room, closing the silver." That was one of my duty days. I used to hate duty days, but I made up my mind that I would be a heroine and that awful swell, Ragy Forsythe, in, and told him he could help, but that he should count the spoons to see that none were missing, and he did it. When I was ladies, Ragy said that if he had his way two spoons would soon be missing, and he showed me my face in the concave and the menace reflection of the spoons, and gracious! how funny I looked; but it was ever so much more amusing than sitting in state in the parlor twiddling about the weather.

Then another thing papa said—he has some good points, that papa of mine—he thought a girl ought to show as much respect for her own family as for the strangers within the gates. That's his exact language, and there are no curl papers allowed at our table, nor slipshod dress either. So if Dolph runs in to ask me to drive in the afternoon I can see him without going up stairs and keeping him waiting until he is out of all patience. I know a girl who lost her best beau in that way. He left word that he would return next year, when he hoped that she would be ready, and then —he forgot to return.—Detroit Free Press.

How to Make Summer Ironing Easy.

Ironing at best is hard work and hot work, and yet with the exercise of a little judicious planning and purpose to make it as easy as possible even this work can be done with a degree of comfort undreamed of by many a housemother, who gets blind and faint over her ironing table. There is an oil stove whose crucial top has places for three irons at once. It costs $2.50 and burns half a gallon of oil in ten hours. It takes up only about a square foot of space, and can be set on a bare table without danger of fire. It is wise, though, to put a bit of tin or sheet iron under it. Establish your table in the nicest place possible, between door and window of a hall room if you can. Set the little stove just outside where the heat will not strike you. Put a thick rug or carpet under your feet, and wear loose, low shoes—not slippers.

It is not necessary to stand throughout the ironing, though. You may sit on a high stool and do the small pieces without the least trouble. Have the clothes basket within reach of your left hand, the clothes horse of your left, and you need not move, save to change irons. Keep three or four holders, and as one gets hot lay it aside and take a fresh one. And do not persuade yourself that good housewifery will be outraged if you iron plain towels, sheets, napkins and so on in double fold. If they are clean and sweet and decently smooth, the utmost letter of summer law is fulfilled.

Trifles, all, no doubt, but it is the sum of unconsidered trifles that makes the weariness of living.—New York Evening Sun.

How to Choose a Bonnet.

The woman who has a becoming bonnet has either learned just how to buy it, or else she was lucky enough to go to a milliner who preferred to sell her customers the bonnets that suited them. Here are some suggestions as to how to buy a bonnet. Never purchase your bonnet after merely glancing at yourself in a small mirror. When only your head is seen it may be pretty, becoming and picturesque, but you must be wise enough to think of the ensemble. So stand in front of a large glass that displays your figure and then choose.

The large hat that, when you only saw your head, seemed so becoming now looks like an extinguisher on you, for it dwarfs your already small size, brings out in a flashy way the size of your figure. Stand and make you look as if you had a grenadier on your feet. You happen to be tall and plump and a little bit June like, and you put on a tiny turban; now look at yourself. Everything seems right but your face, and the very top of a beautiful piece of work is by your bad choice made insignificant looking.

You have more than anything else requires to be like you, to suit you soul and body, and in arranging your ribbons and flowers and feathers, just remember that if they overshadow your face they are by no means ive, otherwise how could Shakespeare refer to them as "delicate, fine hats, and most courteous feathers?"—New York Sun.

Olive Oil in the Nursery.

A physician of reputation calls the attention of mothers to the use of olive oil in the nursery. He says: "In a large proportion of the diseases of infancy and childhood it will be found of the greatest value. It is especially useful in all forms of bronchial disease, whether acute or chronic. It relieves the congestion of the mucous lining of the air passages, maintains an equable temperature, affords a soothing demulcent and it is without doubt highly nutritious. Prof. Von Gisle of the General Hospital, Munich, taught me in 1873 the value of this oil in all forms of chest troubles. It is better and safer than jackets of Indian meal or any of the common applications found in the nursery.

"The oil should be gently warmed. Then the patient's chest should be bathed profusely with it. Afterward a strip of clean, old and soft shirting, large enough to envelop the whole chest and thoroughly saturated with the oil, should be carefully applied. Over this a larger piece of dry cotton must be firmly but not too tightly adjusted. Inunctions will be found excellent in all cases where artificial nutrition is sought for."

Women and Exercise.

Dr. Morell Mackenzie says of exercise for women: "I need not dwell on the necessity of exercise for women further than to say that competent authorities look upon it as the best safeguard against certain diseases peculiar to their sex, the enormous prevalence of which at the present day is no doubt in great measure due to the physical indolence which many of them have been taught to consider rather as a grace than as a defect—I had almost said a vice. I may here say that I think it a mistake for women to aim directly at the development of muscle.

"The Venus of Milo, not the half masculine Amazon, must always be the type of physical perfection for them. Their exercise should, therefore, be chiefly hygienic rather than athletic. A great French anatomist, Cruveilhier, was impolite enough to say that whatever women might learn to do, they never could succeed in running gracefully. Candor compels me to say that I think the indictment true, but that, and throwing the cricket ball, are about the only things which they cannot do with twice the grace and nearly all the strength of man."

The Homely but Useful Girl.

The "useful" girl is not noticeable in any way. Everybody makes use of her and everybody likes her. She has no enemies and no admirers. She is very much used and men speak highly of her when she is brought to their attention in some way, but they never think about her voluntarily. They appreciate her highly when she helps them out of a corner and thank her cordially, and then forget her until they need her again. She is not apt to marry, for men do not care for her style. She is generally dressed neatly and well, but she is not handsome, and she can sew, get a dinner if need be, amuse children, assist in getting up entertainments for other people to participate in, and she is the mainstay of her family. She can't play and sings a little—enough to rock a child asleep or to help out a chorus. She is like the genus "everlasting," or old fashioned flowers. She "grows" well, and not beautiful, yet indispensable in a garden.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Paper Hanger.

"When I go to a house to do a job," said a paper hanger the other day, "I find that, although the lady of the house knew the exact hour that I was to be there, the pictures hang on the wall, in some cases large mirrors standing at the side of the room, and generally nothing out of the way, so that I can commence work. Then follows from one to five hours of moving. Everything is taken down in a hurry. Furniture is moved out and brackets taken down. By the time all this is accomplished the housekeeper begins to complain that she is tired out.

"It would be all well enough if she really was, but as she is continually suggesting and explaining how you should do your work, telling you what the last man did and explaining in detail her own methods, it is evident that she is not tired out as much as she says. If people who employ paper hangers would get ready for them before they come and then leave them to do their work alone they would save much trouble and expense."—Exchange.

Beauty and Business Ability Combined

Mrs. Edward Allen is known in most parts of Florida as "the only real down-and-get" native woman of the state. For many years this lady, who, by the way, is a strikingly beautiful brunette of stately carriage, was the mainstay of her former husband, Captain Williams, in the management of the pencil mills at Crystal River. At his death, three years ago, she assisted her son-in-law, Mr. Jefferies, and now that the mills are under the immediate control of the Dixon company she retains the responsibility of the store, and the large powers of controlling business, as merchant, shrewd cedar buyer, hotel keeper, orange grower, farmer, town site boomer and in statesmanship, also, where in her neighborhood, extending throughout the counties of Hernando, Citrus and Marion) with womanly grace the sobriquet of "Queen Mary."—Cor. Florida Times-Union.

What a Woman Should Weigh.

A woman whose height is

Ft.	In.	Should Weigh Pounds	Ft.	In.	Should Weigh Pounds
5	0	113	5	5	120
5	1	116	5	6	123
5	2	119	5	7	126
5	3	122	5	8	129
5	4	125	5	9	132

This table is for women between twenty and forty-five years of age. After that they become heavier, and should gradually weigh but little less than a man in proportion to her height. The bust of a perfectly formed woman should measure ten inches more than her waist. If the waist is laced in smaller than this, the abdomen is pressed down and the bosom up, causing both to billow out to an unnatural size and compressing the vital too much for either health or beauty.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Tribute to American Women.

An English writer says that "there is nestled in the mailbags of the English lord who imports the American product to wed, not alone because of her money and beauty, but because a fair American can make her home all things to all men, and she brings to society something more than the thin beauty, more refreshing than a gold mine—tact. That is the key to the social fairyland, without which no one never gets inside. They want to win our women friends, with our enemies, in our ambitions, our amusements, in our public gatherings, in our intimate relations, in talk, or in silence, we want it badly."

Earthenware in Cooking.

The flavor of food baked or boiled in earthenware is said by those who have made the experiment to be far superior to that of vegetable or animal food cooked in the same way in iron vessels, for the reason that iron is a conductor of heat, while earthenware is a non-conductor; consequently, food cooked in the latter is rarely ever burned, the degree of heat not varying perceptibly during the process of cooking, thus preserving the flavor of what is cooked, as well as uniformity throughout the substance of the meat, vegetables or grains, until the process of cooking is completed. So earthenware takes the premium, as it deserves to, and those who have found out how much better they can do their cooking in these vessels than in ironware, give pots and kettles a cold shoulder often.—Exchange.

Jane Stevens, whose pictures are on exhibition at the Royal Institute of Painters, spent the best years of her life as a clerk in one of the departments at Washington, and now, without a lesson in drawing, without assistance or encouragement from artists, her natural genius, expressing ideas in bold, original and unconventional work, has won international honor.

The Huddersfield (England) Guardians five years ago gave relief to a man to the extent of $250. Since his death his daughter, who earns about eight shillings weekly as a charwoman, by denying herself all luxuries, has repaid the money, in order to maintain the honest independence of the family.

One of the richest women in San Francisco is Mrs. James C. Flood, the widow of the noted mining man and banker. She possesses the greater part of her time with her daughter in her country residence at Menlo Park, and the big house on "Nob Hill" remains closed through two-thirds of the year.

A farm of 300 acres in Ohio is owned and managed by Miss Antoinette Knaggs, a young woman who has received a college education. Her farming is done more from books than from experience, but she is making a successful it.

Mrs. Felix Moscheles, wife of the celebrated English painter, is a most beautiful woman, remarkable especially for her hair, which is like threads of spun gold and seems to keep the sunlight in it even on the darkest days.

"Four things are required of a woman," say the Chinese, "that virtue may dwell in her heart, that modesty shine on her forehead, that gentleness flow from her lips, and that work employ her hands."

The Edith Kingdon who is now Mrs. George Gould is prettier, rosier and more bewitchingly attractive than ever, and is the chief charm in the palatial home she adorns.

NEW COIFFURES.

Graceful Styles in Hair Dressing Illustrated and Described.

Fig. 1 in the cut represents a style of coiffure especially adapted to the present style of millinery. With the hair arranged here depicted French shapes in hats and bonnets will be found to fit comfortably, and, more than this, prove becoming to the wearer.

STYLISH HAIR DRESSING.

A graceful style is shown at Fig. 2. This is a pleasing change from the somewhat universal Greek mode of hair dressing, which has been fashionable for some time. It is arranged in a loose fringe or frizzed front, with wavy hair rippling over the top of the head and a catogan at the back.

Fig. 3 is an improved Greek coiffure, the new feature existing just to the back part of the neck, following the tendency of fashion for the present season. The shape, being narrow, is neat and effective.

Fashions in Jewelry.

Elsie Bee tells in the Jewelers' Circular that:

Finger rings are as popular as ever.

Tennis bat brooches are very seasonable.

Diamond half hoop rings continue to find favor.

A new brooch imitates in gold a little shoe, the rosette of which is formed of pearls.

Debutantes who have pearls to wear are fortunate, the gems being both appropriate and becoming.

A couple of spurs, formed of pearls and connected by a gold crop, look well at the neck of a riding bodice.

A new brooch likely to please very young ladies consists of a riding whip thrust through a gold heart shaped padlock.

The whip bracelet, as the name indicates, represents a flexible whip, held in circular form by the thumb, which is wound around it several times.

—Delinquent Tax Collector Nash yesterday arrested a young man named Callahan for non-payment of taxes. The young man, it is said, acted in a very disorderly manner when placed under arrest.

—Yesterday the Hebrews throughout the world kept the Feast of Pentecost—"Shebuoth"—or, as it is likewise called, the "Feast of the First Fruits." It continues for a week, and when its ceremonial is duly observed has many points of interest even to those who are not Hebrews.

—"Closing studies in the book of numbers," will be the subject of the Bible normal class, of the Young People's League, conducted by Charles B. Brown. The class will meet as usual in the First Baptist church from seven to eight o'clock this evening, and any of the young people of the city will be welcome, either as visitors or members.

—The June meeting of the Raritan Ministerial Association, has been postponed from the third to the fourth Monday of the month, the 29d inst. On that date the association is to be favored with a paper by Rev. E. T. Corwin, D. D., of New Brunswick, upon "The Peculiar Significance of events in Exodus 23:34, in modifying the Constitution of the Israelitish Theocracy."

PERSONAL.

Mr. B. Blauvelt of New York is visiting friends in this city.

Mr. Charles Woodland of Somerset street is summering at Long Branch.

Miss Annie Sperling of Blackwell's Mills, Somerset county, is visiting friends in this city.

Mr. Isaac Scribner, of Greenbrook road is spending a few days at Elmer, Salem county, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Brock of Wisconsin are visiting Mrs. Kersting of Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

Messrs. James E. Starkins and George W. Betts, Jr., of Brooklyn are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Robert Philpott, of 22 Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. Lemuel Serrell, of West Front street, is now visiting in Atlanta, Georgia. Mr. Serrell is on a combined business and pleasure trip. He will be gone about three weeks.

Councilman Newton B. Smalley intends to resign from the Borough Council this evening, because he finds that it later feres with his business too much. Mr. Smalley has been a conscientious, hard-working official, and his proposed retirement will be a matter of regret to a large circle of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay of West Front street celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage last evening. At the same time their nephew, Mr. Walter Lindsay and Miss Mary Killeen were united in marriage. Music was a feature of the occasion. A very pleasant evening was spent. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Williams, Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Trenton; Mr. Murray, Newburgh; Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Brooklyn; Mrs. Small, Mr. Boyland, Mrs. Cashman, Mr. and Mrs. Wood, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Mehlenbeck, Raritan, and many others from this city.

INJURED BY THE CARS.

A German Who Fell From a Train, Found Under a Tree.

Yesterday afternoon at about half-past twelve a young man, with his face bandaged, was noticed walking along West Second street in the vicinity of Madison avenue. His clothing was torn and he was a pitiable sight to look at.

At about half-past two o'clock as Policemen Fredrickson and Giese were riding along Richmond street a woman hailed them and informed them that a man who apparently badly injured was lying under a tree near the railroad bank.

The officers tied their horse and went to investigate. They found the young man, whose face and hands were a mass of cuts and bruises. His clothing was badly torn, and he was bleeding profusely.

He was a German and apparently a tramp. He informed Policeman Giese that he had fallen from a freight train on which he was stealing a ride. He said he did not know the name of the place where he had fell off but judged that he had walked about three miles in the condition he was found. He said he was so weak from loss of blood that he had laid down there to die.

The officers assisted him into the wagon and took him to the station house. Captain Grant was notified and he, later, took the unfortunate young man to the Muhlenberg Hospital.

A Moonshiner Unearthed.

For some time the police here have been aware that some one was conducting an illicit liquor saloon near Netherwood, but every effort to get a trace of the place proved futile. Yesterday Lynch succeeded, quite by accident, last deep in the woods on Netherwood Heights, Felix Sterpon had a fully equipped saloon. It was in such an unfrequented spot that no one, unless he had previously received the tip, would ever suspect the existence of a bar there. Besides selling liquor without a license Sterpon, it is alleged, carried on quite an extensive moonshining establishment, concocting most of the liquor which he sold. Captain Grant and Policeman Giese made the arrest at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Sterpon was a foreman for Mr. Michael Uhdal, the contractor. When arraigned before City Judge Codington he pleaded not guilty and gave bonds for his appearance for trial. Mr. Uhdal became his bondsman.

Disorderly Characters.

A reporter of THE NEWS witnessed an amusing incident on Somerset street at about ten o'clock last evening. Two men, one of whom is named Kenny, were under the influence of "fire water."

They had quarrelled, and a fistic encounter ensued in consequence. One of the disputants stationed himself in the alley alongside of French's mill, and the other in the alley-way in the rear of Charles Smith's saloon. One party dared the other to come on his side and fight, and this opponent did likewise. It was a case of what the small boy would call: "One is afraid and the other dare not."

The language which passed between the two was anything but pleasant for sensitive ears. Policeman finally appeared on the scene and the dispute ended.

Went Mad in Jail.

Ellen Fitzpatrick, of this city, became a raving maniac in the jail at Elizabeth Wednesday night and terrified the other prisoners in the female department by her actions. She stripped herself stark naked in her cell, tore up her clothing and howled like an Indian. Warden Dodd and his assistants had all they could do to maintain discipline and put her in a straight jacket. None of the female prisoners dared to approach the crazy woman. During the past week she had displayed symptoms of mental derangement and last Saturday she was sent to the jail for a month's stay. She is forty five years of age and unmarried.

No Cause for Action.

The case of Joseph S. Cutter vs. A. Wolff, came up for trial before Justice Nodyne yesterday afternoon. Some time ago an Indian image which Mr. Wolff had in front of his store fell and smashed one of Mr. Cutter's show windows, which he valued at $75. He brought suit to recover that amount. After hearing the testimony the jury rendered a verdict of "no cause for action."

The Festival Concluded.

The strawberry and ice cream festival which has been in progress in the Baenger and Turner Hall, on Somerset street, for the past two evenings, was concluded last evening. The affair was well attended, and was a great success both financially and otherwise. It was given under the auspices of St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

A Pleasing Entertainment.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church gave one of their pleasing entertainments in the parlors of the church last evening at eight o'clock. A large audience was present and thoroughly enjoyed the programme which had been arranged. It consisted of music, recitations, singing and dialogues.

Experience Teaches Wisdom.

There was a man in our town,
And he was none too wise;
He jumped on every man who said,
"You ought to advertise."

But when he saw his trade was gone,
With all his might and main,
He jumped into a column ad.,
And got it back again.

Women to Wear Trousers Before 1892.—Pertinent Remarks on the Probable Tax Rate for Union County.

[From the New York Tribune.]

THE COMING TROUSERS.

Justly or unjustly women have long been the victims of a suspicion on the part of men of being a secret desire to adopt the masculine trousers as a part of their costume. Perhaps the suspicion has been unjust; certainly one thing in favor of this view of it is that they have never adopted trousers, a distinguishing characteristic of the sex being that it it usually does what it has a desire to do. On the other hand, woman has taken up every other article of man's dress except trousers and made it more or less her own, so may it not be only natural that she should long for trousers as well? Besides, there are few men who have not heard vague, undefined rumors that more than one woman, in the utmost privacy of her chamber, while the masculine portion of the household has been absent downtown, has made more or less successful experiments with the trousers of her brother or her husband. These furtive trials, when conducted with intelligence and a right understanding of the nature and limitations of trousers, have usually, we believe, been satisfactory to the women making them. When conducted with intelligence, having in mind the case of a lady prominently identified with the obtaining of the rights of her sex who once came out in a newspaper article strongly attacking trousers on the ground, mainly, that the lady, while experimenting with a pair of trousers belong to her pastor, surreptitiously furnished her by the good man's wife, became confused in regard to their lines of construction and put on them on wrong side before, her savage newspaper article following as a matter of course.

But we are drifting wild of what we started to say. The Tribune has already mentioned the fact that business women, typewriters, salesgirls, cashiers, and so forth, will begin wearing trousers on the first of next June. This has been settled by the Executive Board of the Women's National Council and it is said that many of the young ladies have even now begun to select materials and speculate as to patterns. An idea instantly occurs to any one who has studied the subject. It is this: We have just shown that all women in their secret hearts (except the unfortunate lady spoken of in the preceding paragraph, who was a victim of a misconception and who could no doubt be set right) that all women, we repeat, in secret cherish a high regard for trousers. This being so, and it being settled that business women will certainly adopt trousers in less than a year, will it follow that all women will shortly be wearing trousers? It seems to us not clear. The business women of the country are, we take it, the brainest, prettiest and most progressive of their sex, and it would be only natural that the other women should follow them in the matter of dress. In the case of men we find a certain distinction between the dress of the business man and, let us say, that of the clergyman, the college professor or the newspaper man, all wear trousers. We suspect that by a year from the first of August, or by October 1, 1892, at the outside, trousers will be universally worn by the women of the country.

When we spoke the other day of the impending change in business women's dress we were somewhat bewildered by the suddenness of it and perhaps did not grow so enthusiastic over it as we should have done. Further reflection on the subject has made us think better of it and we trust that we are now as heartily in favor of the change as it is possible for us to be. Indeed, so favorably are we impressed with the idea that did the change rest with us we should be inclined to decree that it take place immediately instead of waiting a twelvemonth. But the year will at least give the unfortunate lady of whom we have spoken an opportunity to place herself right, after which, we doubt not she will withdraw her mistaken opposition and also come out in favor of trousers.

There are reasons for believing that the tax rate for the coming fiscal year will not be greater than it was last year; and other reasons for hoping that it may even be slightly less.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders have already done their part, and have done it well. Being still under Republican control it has continued the economic policy of the past few years, and while added expenses has still managed to keep the appropriation down to the figure of last year. This is the county that he $61,000 of matured bonds to pay, as against $26,000 last year. This year there will be $54,000 matured in the county bonds and other bonds to pay—about the same as last year. This year the law judges' salary bill will have to be met, which is some $1,300 or over; and the new court interpreter's $600 will also have to be paid; both utterly unnecessary expenses.

Besides these extras, there are two bridges of considerable size that must be built in Plainfield, over Greenbrook, and the cost will be no small item of expenditure.

But the board has, notwithstanding all these additional expenses, kept the appropriation at the same figures as last year, $125,000 for actual county expenses and $25,000 for finishing up the county roads.—Elizabeth Journal.

THE LAWYERS HAVE THE REST.

The will of George Hutchins, who died in Hamilton, N. J., six years ago, has just got through the Court of Chancery after a bitter contest. Hutchins' estate was worth $17,000 when he died. He bequeathed $5,000 to his widow and $12,000 to Henry George for the dissemination of single tax literature. There is now at the close of the contest, $614 left to be divided. The lawyers have the rest. Of the $614 Henry George gets $313 and the widow $296.

Base Ball.

Will the Crescents be "in it"? Three weeks ago the Star-Athletics were beaten by the Crescents, after an 11-inning struggle, by the close score of 4 to 3. Last Saturday, from the start to the finish, the West Ends easily defeated the Star-Athletics by 12 to 4. If that is any evidence of the relative strength of the two teams, next Saturday (June 13) nine Crescent scalps will dangle from the belts of the West End warriors.

But who can tell until the game is over? Ball is a funny game—never won nor lost until the last man is out—and perhaps next Monday, when I am sitting here with tears in my eyes, trying to tell you why we did not win the game, you will all feel sore enough to echo my sentiments gladly. Yes: base ball is a funny game. But do not get downhearted; be hopeful. With the team we now have, and playing the game they did against the Stars, we are sure winners, and victory will surely perch on the West End standard before another moon. Let the playing be earnest, and not in vain. I verily believe that to the coolest team next Saturday goes the victory. We have not the Acmes to buck against then. We have a team A plus pounds of backers, bound to see fair play and to cheer their men. Noise will abound, and if it can win a game we are beaten out of sight. Take the first Yale-Princeton game. Noise, and nothing else, won that game when Princeton had it well in hand, and the same thing may happen to us. But, as I said before, the Crescents have a strong team and are and have been out for blood since the season opened. There is Jones, whom The Sun says is the best all-round ball player outside of the professional ranks. Perhaps Freddy may get a surprise party when he plays here this time. He lost the first game here last year, and, as young blood is easily heated, he may do so again. Follow is all women but of no mean degree. He twirled the ball for the Hackett-Carharts last season, and he has been pitching wonderful ball all this year. The batsmen, McIndoe, Lufberry and Lee—you all know what they have done and can do. McIntosh is the man who would have won the game, had not Carby interfered, last year; and Joe Lufberry and Lee are always sure hitters. Martin is the lightning shortstop (as formed in Plainfield), and can handle the hottest-hit liners with impunity. Martin's only fault is that he cannot hit the ball. The three out-fielders, Gregg, Simmen and Bonner, are ball players, every one of them, and can be relied on to only do their work in the field but to make a hit if necessity demands. So, you can see, the Crescents have a very strong team, and you stand to win or lose your money. This is certain: those who would have won the game, had not Carby interfered, last year; and Joe Lufberry and Lee are always sure hitters. ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

In his prize essay on the needs of the farmer, Abner L. Frazer tells us that one of the worst evils of the time is the amassing of large bodies of land in few hands, which is contrary to the policy and spirit of our free institutions.

As if the heresy trials were not enough in church circles at present, the good old state of Connecticut is edified by the spectacle of two Congregational pillars of the church fighting to the bitter end a war about which shall have the "Amen pew."

Senator Cullom has given particular attention to questions arising between the United States and Canada. He says the only final settlement of these questions is the union of Canada with the United States. At present the Canadian Pacific railway is competing with American roads in away ruinous to the latter. Our roads are under the workings of the interstate commerce law, and bound by it. The Canadian road, however, has made connections over our roads in such a way that it runs its cars boldly into nearly all our large cities now, and these are loaded with freight that skips around the American routes and evades the law. American roads demand that the Canadian Pacific shall either come under the provisions of the interstate commerce law, or pay a special tax on each car or be ruled out of the country. One of the most injurious ways in which our home roads have been affected has been in the matter of oriental goods from Japan to British Columbia, instead of to San Francisco. There, after being stamped by the United States consul, without breaking bulk, these goods have been permitted to be shipped over the Canadian Pacific directly to their destination. It is this consular sealing at Canadian ports that Mr. Blaine has been so solicitous to break up.

Misrepresenting Representatives.

The honorable lower house of the legislature of Florida, in full conclave assembled, and with a solemn sense of offended dignity fitting to the occasion, passed the following resolution concerning that naughty and low down class of community, newspaper correspondents:

Resolved, That whenever it shall be represented upon this floor by any member that he has been misrepresented, misquoted, untruly criticised or that his motives have been impugned by his duty questioned or his motives impugned by any newspaper to whose representatives or correspondents he has not furnished the facilities of this floor, and who may have availed themselves of the same, such representatives or correspondents shall be excluded from the hall of this house, and excluded therefrom until the house takes proper action in the premises.

Served them right too! Any bad newspaper man representing a newspaper, who shall be represented on the floor of the Florida house of representatives to have misrepresented, misquoted or untruly criticised the integrity of any representative in the performance of his duty, on proper representation of the same ought to be ejected from the hall of that house and excluded therefrom without more. Whenever any newspaper impugns the motive of a member in the performance of his duty, let such representatives be kicked out in the twinkling of an eye; no matter if it takes the whole state of Florida to put this newspaper out, or even if it strips the classic hall of reporters altogether. One solitary newspaper man ought to be allowed to hold the fort, however, just one, for he may learn the proper use of the English language.

Orient and Occident.

At the last meeting of the Western Unitarian conference, held in Chicago this month, the committee on educating women for the ministry was continued and exhorted to work diligently. The conference declared there was great need of such educated women in the Unitarian ministry, and the committee was requested earnestly to lay the matter before the different churches in the organization, that all might have knowledge of this need. It thus seems there are two denominations besides Quakers and Friends who welcome women preachers, and those are the Universalist and Unitarian. Women who believe themselves called to preach can be ordained in these two churches, therefore. It will be strange if some of them do not leave the other connections and join themselves to these.

But meanwhile, while American Unitarians are earnestly exhorting educated and eloquent women to become ministers, observe what those fine old Unitarians, the Brahmins of India are doing in regard to this same woman question. Pandit Sivanath Shastri lectured in Rajahmundry, shortly before the Chicago Unitarian conference passed its resolutions, and devoted much space to the sex. He declared that women were the Sahibs in the Hindoo throat—"We cannot get them up or swallow them." If this business of female education was not stopped he would not be responsible for the consequences. He used the time worn do-you-want-your-daughter-to-marry-a-nigger argument with admirable effect as follows:

Only think of it! Three hundred years hence, to a lady meeting like this, you will not find men alone like today, but half of the assembly will be females. You will then find your wife sit as the same table with you. Are the prospects for that?

Looking Backward Over the War.

Mr. John C. Ropes, writing in Scribner's, thinks the time has now come when the American people can begin to look critically back over the war. He himself does this to some extent in his paper entitled, "The War as We See It Now." One grand lesson it teaches is, in his judgment, shown in the splendid exhibition it gives of the pluck and perseverance of the Anglo-Saxon race as displayed both north and south. "The war thus becomes psychologically interesting as an exhibition of the Anglo-Saxon race on trial, and on a grand theater."

As to the conduct of the war by the Union there can be no doubt, says Mr. Ropes, that an enormous amount of money was unnecessarily spent, a great many men were needlessly sacrificed and a great deal of time was uselessly consumed. President Lincoln, the Illinois lawyer, had to learn the whole theory and art of war. Here the south had the advantage, for Jefferson Davis was educated at West Point, had seen much actual fighting and had likewise been secretary of war. But this again makes a drawback, for it made the head of the Confederacy interfere constantly in military matters and exercise his own personal preferences in appointments. Military knowledge therefore increased in the north much more than in the south.

Politics interfered constantly and ruinously in the military appointments Lincoln felt himself obliged to make, and the lack of a sound military judgment at Washington for the first three years protracted the struggle by expending our efforts in useless or ill considered plans. On both sides the generals were better strategists away from battle than they were actual tacticians off the field in a fight. They could manage an army better than a battle. A brilliant exception to this criticism Mr. Ropes considers to be Gen. Thomas' planning and fighting of the battle of Nashville.

Again it was not till toward the close of the war our generals learned that the best use to which cavalry can be put is the making of reconnaissances and gaining information, and otherwise operating in conjunction with the main army. In the light through which we now look we find that cavalry raids, however brilliant, were practically almost useless. Moreover very grave mistakes were made in the management of the northern army by the formation of new regiments instead of filling up the veteran ranks. For this reason the northern army in the east was never so efficient as in the autumn of 1863. After Gettysburg, too, the weakened southern army never recovered its strength.

A Lost White Colony.

Rev. Dr. George Patterson has been making some researches among early records and finds to a certainty that the northeast coast of this country was colonized by Portuguese before even Captain John Smith settled Jamestown in 1607. Concepcion bay and the Bay of Fundy were discovered and named by these adventurous navigators. About the year 1500 the Portuguese, who cared more for adding to their wealth than to the world's geographical knowledge, established regular fishing ports in Newfoundland, and from these points vast quantities of fish were sent to the Azores and Portugal. Hundreds of vessels were engaged in this trade, which flourished for eighty years, till Portugal became subject to Spain in 1680.

The Portuguese explored the New England coast and that of Labrador. A permanent attempt at settlement was made on Cape Breton. On the southern shore of that island, at St. Peter's, are still the remains of a very old fort, older than French tradition or history make record of, and this, it is reasonably certain, is the ruin of the buildings erected by the Portuguese early in the Sixteenth century. They afterward abandoned the settlement because the place was too cold for their gropical blood. At least that is the tradition, for there is not much else than tradition as to the exact locality of the settlement. But in 1598 Frenchmen beginning a settlement on Sable island found there cattle and swine, the descendants of live stock left by the Portuguese more than sixty years before.

So that undoubtedly it was the Portuguese who first attempted to settle the northeast shore of America.

The system of anthropometric measurements ought to be closely followed up in all colleges. It would be of great interest now, for instance, to know the average size of the cranium evident of the present day as compared with him of the time of Cotton Mather. It would also be of much interest to know how the student of the west compares in size with the youth of the east. Useful information could be drawn from facts showing whether or not the fad for physical culture has in any way increased the muscular power of the youth of today. By all means we ought to have anthropometric measurements both of the college boys and girls.

Pass him along. If you meet anywhere a man who has only one leg, begging money enough to get him a cork leg that costs eighty dollars, just tell him you read the papers and that he has been working that racket several years. In Maine alone he collected $800. If he bought legs with all the money he has collected he would now be a regular thousand legged worm.

"Hurry is of the devil," says an old Arabian proverb.

FOSTER SUSPENDS DREW

The Bank Examiner Is Confident of Vindication.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S LETTER.

He Informs Mayor Stuart, of Philadelphia, of Controller Leary's Plans, and Says Government Officials Are All Anxious to Help Unravel the Tangle.

PHILADELPHIA, June 12.—The two latest developments of interest in the Philadelphia financial muddle are the suspension of Bank Examiner Drew by Secretary Foster and President Harrison's letter to Mayor Stuart concerning the desired evidence of Controller of the Currency Leary. The president's letter is as follows:

The President's Letter.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10th, 1891.

To Hon. Edwin S. Stuart, Mayor, Philadelphia:

DEAR SIR—I am in receipt of your letter of June 9th, and in reply thereto beg to say the controller of the currency is, under the law, in immediate, and in a large sense, independent control of all matters pertaining to national banks. Everything relating to the examination of such bank, to the appointment of receivers and to the winding up of insolvent banks is under his direction. An examination of the relation of his office to the Keystone National Bank will, I doubt not, show all that has been done by the treasury department.

The secretary of the treasury was absent when your letter was received, but upon his return this morning I conferred with him and the controller, and as a result of that conference the controller stated that he would prepare at once a full statement of his entire action in connection with the Keystone National bank of Philadelphia, and would submit this report without delay to the secretary of the treasury. He will transmit a copy to you.

All Anxious to Co-operate.

Your request that a committee of the council or its expert accountants be allowed to examine the books, papers, loans, documents and records of the bank has been referred to the controller, with the suggestion that under advice of the district attorney the receiver permit an examination by a proper representative of the creditors into all matters and accounts, and particularly of accounts where frauds or irregularities are charged, with such reservations of confidence as the interest of the creditors of the bank or the ends of public justice make necessary. I am sure you will find every officer of the government having any relation or duty connected with this matter desirous to cooperate with the creditors of the bank in all measures calculated to protect their interests and to hold to proper accountability every person having guilty complicity with the failure. Very truly yours, BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Mayor Stuart replied, expressing his appreciation and thanks for the courtesy of his prompt action. "Your letter will be placed before city councils at their next meeting, Thursday, 11th inst., at 8. p. m."

Mayor Stuart to Secretary Foster.

Upon receipt of the president's letter Mayor Stuart telegraphed Secresary of the Treasury Foster the following: "The president, replying to my communication relating to city council action concerning the Keystone National bank, informs me that you will forward copy of statement of controller of currency as soon as possible. I very much desire this statement. This day afternoon by 3 o'clock that I may transmit it, together with the president's letter, to city councils in session then, and not before until the following week. It will be a great accommodation if this request can possibly be granted."

Secretary Foster's reply: "The correspondence is voluminous, and we may not be able to complete copies by the time you name."

Examiner Drew's Suspension.

The announcement of Mr. Drew's suspension was not exactly a surprise to the authorities and others who have been interested in the Keystone and Spring Garden bank complications. This was not due to any particular knowledge affecting Mr. Drew's integrity, but grows out of the open disagreement between Mr. Drew and Controller Lacey, respecting the former's reports to the treasury on the condition of the Keystone bank before it was closed.

District Attorney Reed backed of the suspension while trying a case. He said he was very sorry for Mr. Drew. Receiver Yardley said that such a move was quite unusual in a case where there was such a diversion of views between an officer of the government and his subordinate.

What Drew Says.

On being shown the dispatch from Washington announcing his suspension, Bank Examiner Drew stated that some days ago the controller wrote him desiring a conference on the situation in Philadelphia, and suggesting the propriety of his not resuming his regular work until such conference was held; and that Wednesday he received a telegram from the controller stating that he would fix an early time for the conference. Mr. Drew added that he had previously informed the department a full investigation into his official conduct, feeling confident that it will result in his complete vindication.

Too Many Indictments to Try.

In the new court house today Assistant District Attorney Kinsey called the attention of the jury to a bill of indictment charging John Bardsley with embezzlement as a public officer. Mr. Kinsey said: "In view of the fact that Mr. Bardsley has pleaded guilty upon seventeen bills of indictment, upon which a maximum punishment of fifty or sixty years could be imposed, it would be useless to take up the time of the court in trying the remaining indictments against him. I propose to submit this bill without evidence and dispose of it." The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty."

Mr. Ather Bardsley's Assets.

In the United States circuit court a bill was filed by Robert H. Yardley, receiver of the Keystone National bank, and Edward H. Magill, assignee, asking that a injunction be granted restraining Bardsley and Magill from disposing of four promissory notes of H. H. Yard amounting to $250,000, with 2,000 shares of the capital stock of the Spring Lake Beach Improvement company and 2,200 shares of the capital stock of the Sea Girt Land Improvement company. Yardley alleges that as receiver of the Keystone he is entitled to have the notes and stock for the benefit of the bank and its creditors.

They Want Bardsley's House.

The city will attempt to restrain Bardsley and his wife from disposing of Bardsley's residence in Germantown. The city alleges that Bardsley paid for the property with city money.

A Sensational Rumor.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The World declares that on the Saturday night before Marsh's flight a mysterious "conference" of politicians was called and Marsh and Lawrence were offered $200,000 each to fly.

EUROPE'S CRY FOR CHEAPER CORN.

A Debate in the German Diet Shows That Bismarck Is Not Forgotten.

BERLIN, June 12.—The day's debate in the lower house of the diet over the corn duties showed that Bismarck has not been forgotten by the Germans. Herr Rickert made a motion that the government should submit to the house the material on which Chancellor Von Caprivi based his recent speech on the grain duties. This motion was opposed by the chancellor, who declared that the government was convinced there was no difference existing from the present grain duties, but because of the present agitation the government had consulted a number of private parties. Consequently these reports could not be submitted to the house.

Herr Rickert replied in a sensational speech, in which he said that it would be necessary to recall the man who alone was able to direct the government." Herr Rickert charged the government with endeavoring to "silence those who were defending the interests of the millions against the minority." He also openly expressed his doubt of the truth of the government reports about grain. The available stocks were small and prices would advance. Potatoes had already replaced bread as the food of the people and they were also offered at an exorbitant price. His party would not rest until the grain duties were abolished. Herr Rickert's bold reference to Prince Bismarck and the necessity for his return to power caused more excitement than has any other event of the present session of the diet.

Bread is advancing everywhere, and in the manufacturing districts especially the scarcity is beginning to have a severe effect. The Berlin authorities are overwhelmed with applications for relief. In several instances poor families have been found in an actually starving condition. Chancellor Caprivi's argument that a suspension of duties would do no injury to the benefit of consumers of bread, but only to the profit of the purchasers of corn, is scouted everywhere by the bakers as utterly without foundation.

Owing to the debate in the diet corn has risen further in price.

Italy Wants Lower Duties.

ROME, June 12.—A proposition will be made by the Extreme Left party in the chamber of deputies that the government shall in the near future reduce the grain duties from five to three lire.

The Protestant Association's Officers.

Luzon B. Morris' Replication.

NEW HAVEN, June 12.—The replication of Judge Luzon B. Morris to the reply of Governor Bulkeley in the quo warranto suit has been filed in the supreme court. The replication of Dr. Alsop to Lieutenant Governor Merwin's reply, except that the name of Bulkeley is substituted for that of Merwin is the same as the latter answers. The replication is a general denial of all the allegations of fact made by Governor Bulkeley appertaining to the election returns and denies the right of the general assembly to go behind the returns.

To Kidnap the Queen.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—According to advices received from Honolulu there is talk of another insurrection there. Rush and Wilcox, the leaders of the late revolution, are said to be at the head of the present movement. The queen is making a circuit of the islands in a small steam yacht, and the conspirators have it reported to be to meet the queen in a tug and hold her until she signs a modification of the constitution by which the natives are to be accorded more power.

Osborne & Cheesman's Creditors.

NEW HAVEN, June 12.—The creditors of the Osborne & Cheesman company met in Ansonia to consider an offer of $138,000 made for the merchandise supplies and book accounts of the concern, with the privilege of renting the mills and machinery at $4,000 per year, with option of purchase. The creditors voted to recommend the acceptance of the offer by the court. If this arrangement is made the estate will pay about fifty cents on the dollar.

Appointed by Governor Russell.

BOSTON, June 12.—The vacancy on the supreme court bench, caused by the death of Judge Allen, was filled by Governor Russell Thursday, who nominated Judge James M. Barker, of the superior court, for the place. Judge Barker is a Republican. The governor also nominated the following commissioners of rapid transit: Osborne Howes, of Brookline; Chester W. Kingsley, of Cambridge, and John Quincy Adams, of Quincy.

Forsker and McKinley to Testify.

COLUMBUS, O., June 12.—The testimony in the Elliott trial showing that the defendant and his brother fired the first three shots on the night that Dr. Osborne murder is accumulating. The defense has issued subpoenas for about 100 witnesses, among whom are ex-Governor Foraker, Major McKinley, ex-Lieutenant Governor Warwick and others prominent ip the political world.

The American Signing Western Players.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 12.—The American association agents now in this city have succeeded in getting Dolan, pitcher, and Shugart, shortstop, of the Minneapolis team, and Vickery, pitcher, and Grim, catcher, of the Milwaukee team, to sign with the Baltimore Association team. The western magnates will make a determined legal fight against the move.

Cured by Koch's Lymph.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—Mrs. Kate Fisher, aged thirty-seven years, wife of Charles Fisher, of Pittsburg, has just returned from Philadelphia, where for eight weeks she has been under treatment for consumption. Both of her lungs were badly diseased. Mrs. Fisher was given in all fifteen injections of Koch's lymph and returned cured.

Shot His Wife and Himself.

NEW YORK, June 12.—Joseph Pentlan, aged thirty-two years, a West Indian negro, fatally shot his wife Kate, aged twenty-four, in the right temple in their apartments at 164 West Twenty-sixth street and immediately afterward shot himself. Jealousy caused the shooting.

HIS BRIDE OSTRACISED.

Gordon Cumming's Wife Disowned by Her Family.

THE UNION STRONGLY OPPOSED.

No Member of the Garner Household Attended Her Wedding—What Will New York Society Do When the Newly Mated Pair Arrive in the Metropolis?

NEW YORK, June 12.—The Herald announces that it has been requested by a member of the Garner family, whose action has the approval of the whole family connection to print the following statement: "Several papers have by mistake stated that one of Miss Florence Garner's (now Lady Gordon Cumming) sisters was present at her marriage. The eldest, Mme. la Marquise de Breteuil is at present in New York with her husband. The youngest, Miss Edith Garner, is at Vienna with her aunt, Mrs. Lawrence. The family wish to rectify this mistake, and also to state that no one of Miss Garner's relations was present at her marriage. It is needless to add that, being of age, she took this step against the wishes of her entire family."

It Means Social Ostracism.

The meaning of this more than startling announcement is not generally known. And it it is evident that absolute social ostracism is the penalty which the young wife must pay—nothing less. It is a social pronunciamento from which there is no appeal. The leaders of New York's Four Hundred have decreed that Cumming should not have allowed Miss Garner to unite her fate with his.

Should She Have Married Him?

"Should she have married him?" is answered in a thousand different ways. But all unite in admiration of Miss Garner's splendid courage. Some of them are most loud in denouncing the marriage as ill considered, applaud her heroism.

Outside of the pale of the social world, which is not known that she loved the man, and that no mere verdict of a court of law could lessen her love, and that she married him, she is a heroine. She is the "brave American girl" who had the courage to follow the dictates of her heart in spite of the jury of Lord Coleridge's court and the fiat of the Prince of Wales, whose utterances have the force of an ukase in the world in which she has lived for the last ten years.

All the World Loves a Lover.

Whether the stand that the Garner family have taken is one which will find unanimous favor with society on this side of the water, where the orphan girl's pluck in clinging to her lover has been generally approved, is a question. It is doubtful if such a decision would have been reached had the affair been left entirely in the hands of the girl lived. It was just like his daughter to have thrown public opinion, criticism and conventionals to the winds and to cast her lot with the lover who was stronger because he was in dire distress and disgrace.

"All the world loves a lover," and there will be many people in society who will declare: "Why should Lady Gordon Cumming be ostracised by her own kin because she clings firmly to her idol, however shattered he may be by the cold decree of a court?"

It Would Like to Please Wales.

New York society is fickle in the extreme, and it would like greatly to exactly what the Prince of Wales' set does, and as the Garner connections here have already taken their cue from that quarter it seems possible that the Gordon Cummings must be refused recognition.

On the other hand, the very boldness and independence of the girl's step will win her friends who might not have them if have made. The French brother-in-law, M. le Marquis de Breteuil, who married Miss Leita Garner in Pau last winter, is generally credited with being the responsible for the decision of Miss Garner's family. The marquis is said to be the warmest and most intimate personal friend the Prince of Wales has on the continent.

Dawson a Friend, Indeed.

One light spot in the dark horizon which is lowering over Sir Gordon Cumming's is the fact that ever since his own unpleasantness the Prince of Wales does not seem to meet with undivided support. Major John Wesley Dawson, who acted as best man to Sir William, has been for some time on unofficial member of his royal highness' military staff, but when it became known that the prince's friendships, the one formed in shooting parties and royal junketing tours, the other in many a hot fight on the long and bloody march from Kerti to Khartoum, Major Dawson and Gordon Cumming stood shoulder to shoulder in many a hotly attacked screbs, Dawson chose for the it is thought friend and so he went to the altar with him and the borough House will know "Jack" Dawson no more.

It was a feather in Gordon Cumming's cap, and it will make many who are wavering believe in his integrity.

Cumming's Home Going.

LONDON, June 12.—The municipal authorities of Forres, in the vicinity of Sir William Gordon Cumming's seat, Altayre, have decided to extended a festive welcome to Sir William on Saturday on the occasion of his return home with his bride. Cumming said today: "Sir Edward Clarke fully expressed my sentiments, I believe that the gross partiality of the judge was answerable for the result."

The Prince of Wales Jeered.

At the Ascot races yesterday an unfavorable demonstration against the Prince was made. As the prince was driving up with a party of his noble friends the crowd in the vicinity, composed mostly of well dressed persons, lost its temper and in a rougher element, hooted and jeered his royal highness.

Some cried out, "Have you brought your consort with you?" Others indulged in more offensive thrusts.

The aristocratic group around the prince, though apparently astonished and startled, managed to make a counter demonstration of a rather weak sort in support of the prince, who was himself pale with anger and cast furious glances at his insulters.

This is believed to be the first time that a disrespectful demonstration has ever been made against the Prince of Wales by a crowd bearing any claim to respectability.

The outspoken newspaper press comments upon the part the Prince of Wales played in the baccarat scandal contiantes to be the sensation of the day in England and elsewhere.

HIS ALLEGED MIRACLES.

Remarkable Cures of Father Mollinger Near Pittsburg.

THOUSANDS FLOCK TO SEE HIM.

How Money Was Extorted from Patients Without the Priest's Knowledge—It Is Said That He Has Been Called to Rome.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—The truly remarkable cures of all ailments that flesh is heir to effected by the Rev. Father Mollinger at the shrine of St. Anthony, on Troy hill, Allegheny, are again attracting attention throughout the country. Over 1,000 invalids from various parts of the country have arrived in this city since Monday and they are coming by every train. Several of the number, whose ailments were apparently beyond all human power to relieve, have already been restored to health or greatly relieved. Father Mollinger was obliged to move from the sacristy of the little church to the more commodious school building adjoining. At one time over 2,000 patients were awaiting their turn.

To Test the Priest's Power.

Tomorrow is St. Anthony's day and preparations are in progress for the accommodation of the thousands who will be present on the day in which the priest's power to heal is said to be extraordinarily great, because Anthony is said to be the saint from whom he derives that power.

Yesterday two blind boys—born blind, aged thirteen and sixteen years, led by their mother and sister—sons of Mr. Culbertson, a wealthy farmer near Halifax, N. S., arrived from the Norton Blind asylum at Halifax. Last evening a large number of individuals, residents of Nashville, Tenn., arrived, accompanied by their friends, and bastened to Troy hill. The scenes in and about the church are remarkable, and at least some of the cures effected are little short of miraculous.

Money Extorted from Patients.

It has been learned that Adolph Hepp, Father Mollinger's amanuensis and interpreter, together with his brothers, Frank and John, and Jacob Hock, have for several days been extorting money from the afflicted, representing that they had great influence with the priest. One of the Hepp brothers is said that by this plan they secured several hundred dollars a week. Father Mollinger makes no charge whatever for his services. His attention has been directed to the scandal caused by the actions of these young men and it will be stopped and the participants made to suffer.

Called to Rome.

It is stated this evening that Father Mollinger has been summoned to Rome by the pope. He leaves on Monday next. The purpose of the special call is not known, but knowledge of his going has created consternation in the city of his labors.

Some of the Cured Ones.

The following are a few of the people who are said to have been cured by the priest:

Patrick O'Donnell is from Lehigh, Pa., and has been blind in one eye for four years. He is now able to see dimly out of the afflicted eye, and has been three days on Troy hill.

Frank Cook, of Collier, Pa., has been troubled with palsy. He has spent one week at Troy hill and is able to hold a glass quite steadily in one hand.

Mrs. Frances Heinz, from Waterloo, N. Y., who was afflicted with a complaint which deprived her lower limbs, arrived on Troy hill last Saturday. It was not until Monday she was cornered performing the religious course which Father Mollinger prescribes for Roman Catholics. She had to be carried from her chair to a seat in church. Last evening she arose and left the two men into the office, where the priest gives each person a hearing. After taking the blessing she was able to walk. She had tried all the best physicians in the vicinity of Waterloo, but they could do her no good. The celebrations and services on the Feast of St. Anthony will begin with mass at 6 o'clock. The grand high mass will be sung at 10 o'clock by Rev. Father Oster, provincial of the Order of the Holy Ghost. Rev. Father Murphy, president of the Holy Ghost college, will deliver the English sermon. At the conclusion of this mass Father Mollinger will bestow the blessing of St. Anthony on those in the church, and afterward outside to those who will not be able to gain admittance. The relic of St. Anthony will be inclosed in a costly vessel of gold, made especially for the purpose.

A Memory of the Great Fight.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The suit of the Nashville lawyers, A. J. Caldwell and W. B. Washington, against Charlie Johnston, the sporting man and backer of John L. Sullivan, for $500 alleged to be due for their services in obtaining the release of Sullivan and Johnston when they were arrested in that city while returning from the Sullivan-Kilrain fight in Mississippi, was decided in the supreme court of Brooklyn in favor of defendant. Johnston's defense was that he never employed the lawyers.

A Mysterious Murder.

WINNIPEG, Man., June 12.—A mysterious tragedy has just been unearthed near Marquette station. James Tajdell went away from home, leaving his sister-in-law and a young Englishman together. He returned home and found the rooms of his house covered with blood. Search being made, the body of his sister-in-law was found in a well, the woman having been first shot to death. The young Englishman, who is missing, is believed to be the murderer.

The Elks Expelled Reilly.

COLUMBUS, O., June 12.—At a special meeting of the Elks Charles Reilly, the baseball player, who jumped his contract with the Columbus club, was expelled from membership. Reilly telegraphed Mayor Karb saying that he would rather be expelled by Columbus than forfeit his membership in the lodge. The reply he got was the notice of his expulsion.

One Hundred Miles of Desolation.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 12.—Forest fires are still raging in the northern part of this province and over 100 miles of country has been desolated. Half a dozen settlements have been destroyed and more are threatened. Near Fredericton the country for ten miles is in a blaze and farmhouses and fences have been burned. Only heavy rains can stop the destruction.

To Dispute Murphy's Record.

NEW HAVEN, June 12.—The record of 2:26 4-5 made at the bicycle races here last Monday by W. F. Murphy is liable to be disputed. Since the races the track has been surveyed and found to be two feet short of a mile.

CLOSING DAYS AT THE COLLEGES.

Vice Chancellor McCracken Succeeds Dr. John Hall.

NEW YORK, June 12.—The commencement exercises of the University of the City of New York were held in the Metropolitan Opera house last night, and the announcement was made that Vice Chancellor McCracken had been elected to the chancellorship made vacant by the retirement of Dr. John Hall.

Theological Graduates.

ANDOVER, Mass., June 12.—The senior class of the Andover Theological seminary held its graduating exercises Thursday. There were twelve graduates. One of them goes to Germany on the seminary fellowship, where he will study for two years, another has accepted the professorship of English language and literature of an Iowa college, two will prosecute home missionary work in the west, and seven have either accepted or are considering the acceptance of pastorates. The other graduate will probably go either to the south or to Africa in the capacity of teacher or pastor among the negroes. During the summer a large number of the undergraduates will engage in home missionary work.

At Johns Hopkins.

BALTIMORE, June 12.—The conferring of degrees and the exercises incident upon the close of the fifteenth academic year of the Johns Hopkins university took place in the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal church.

A JERSEY CITY AMAZON.

Although Indisposed She Whipped Three Jersey City Policemen.

JERSEY CITY, June 12.—Catherine Newkirk, who weighs over 200 pounds and resides at Bergen and Communipaw avenues, Jersey City, was committed for trial in Jersey City for assaulting policemen. She badly whipped three of Jersey City's finest. Her son, Garret Newkirk, a young hoodlum, pleaded guilty to assault of $0.50. Hayes procured a warrant and Detective Holtic went to Newkirk's mother's house to execute it.

Mrs. Newkirk seized Holtic by the throat, threw him away from the door leading to the stairs, and warned her son, who escaped. Holtic got a warrant for Mrs. Newkirk's arrest, and Policemen O'Rourke and Ready were sent to serve it. Mrs. Newkirk blacked O'Rourke's eye and Ready only escaped a drubbing with his own club at her hands by hiding in the kitchen.

Captain McKaig, of the Fourth precinct, took three other officers to the house where Dr. Wilkinson, one of Jersey City's most prominent physicians, declared she was too ill to be locked up. Captain McKaig, however, said that any woman who could whip three policemen was well enough to be arrested, and ordered his men to take her away.

TO FIGHT FOR FREE COINAGE.

Senator Stewart Thinks the Next Congress Will Defy an Executive Veto.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The meeting of the free silver coinage executive committee will be held at New York on June 18. They will continue their work for the promotion of free coinage. Senator Stewart said today that he was confident a free coinage bill could be passed through the next congress over the president's veto. "Of course," he said, "there can be no doubt about the two-thirds vote for free coinage in the house, and in the senate it has been shown that there is a majority. If all the Democrats in the senate will vote to pass the bill over the president's veto there will be no trouble about the matter."

The Republican votes in the senate that Mr. Stewart counts on are 2 from California, 1 from Oregon, 2 from Washington, 2 from Idaho, 2 from Montana, 2 from Nevada, 2 from Colorado, 1 from Wyoming, 2 from South Dakota, 1 from North Dakota, 2 from Kansas, 2 from Nebraska, and 1 from Pennsylvania. Cullom, Stockbridge and Davis he regards as doubtful. The votes counted as sure would give free coinage 40 votes if the Democrats voted solidly for free coinage. To these he includes Senator McPherson. Mr Stewart regards as doubtful are Gray, McPherson and Vilas.

Sherman's Letter to Johnston.

NEW YORK, June 12.—At a meeting of the Union League club last night Chauncey M. Depew read as an original letter of General Sherman, which Charles S. Eddy, of Roanoke, Va., sent to the club with the request that it be framed and hung below the portrait of the general of the club. Mr. Eddy said he received the letter from General Sherman in the presence of General Grant, with instructions to forward it through General Kirkpatrick, who was at the front. The letter is dated Raleigh, N. C., April 23, 1865, and is as follows:

To General Johnston, commander Confederate armies:

I have replies from Washington to my communication of April 18. I am instructed to limit my operations to your immediate command and not to attempt civic regulation. I therefore demand the surrender of your army on the same terms as were given to General Lee at Appomatox April 9, purely and simply.

W. T. SHERMAN.

The Ohio Prohibitionists.

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 12.—The State Prohibition convention assembled at 9 a. m. G. F. Macklin was made chairman. The platform makes the usual statement in reference to the suppression of the liquor traffic, to woman suffrage, pensions, Sabbath observance, emigration, civil service, etc. The following ticket was nominated: For governor, J. J. Ahlenhurst, of Stark; lieutenant governor, W. J. Kirkendall, of Jackson; supreme court judge, Lewis I. Firke, of Perry; attorney general, W. H. Matthews, of Hamilton.

A Double Murderer Hanged.

BALTIMORE, June 12.—William Blaney, who was hanged here today for the murder of his grandmother, Mrs. Sarah Blaney, and his aunt, Miss Caroline M. Blaney, in their house four years old, and was the son of James M. Blaney. The crime was committed on the night of Friday, May 2, 1890, and the bodies were discovered the next morning by the father of the murderer. Robbery was the motive.

Car Builders Choose Officers.

CAPE MAY, June 12.—The convention of Car Builders elected the following officers: President, John Kirby, Cleveland, O.; vice presidents, E. W. Grieves, of Baltimore, Md.; John S. Lentz, of Packerton, Pa.; F. A. Bissell, of Buffalo, N. Y.; secretary, John W. Cloud, Chicago, Ills.; treasurer, G. W. Demarest, Baltimore, Md.

No Soap Trust Probable.

BOSTON, June 12.—The National and New England Soap Makers' convention was held here. All the leading soapmaking firms in New England, New York and Pennsylvania were represented. The principal object of the convention was to form a trust, but the New England manufacturers did not take kindly to the scheme.

WM. MADDEN, head gardener for J. T. Clawson.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired one of my lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
WM. MCCANN,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson

My experience has shown that Messrs Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
THOMAS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mowers.
HENRY HESS, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years sharpened and repaired my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of your mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence McJ.ers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

A PICTURESQUE FIGHT.

ALMOST ANOTHER GETTYSBURG THAT CAME ONE YEAR EARLIER.

Malvern Hill, on James River, Where McClellan Defended His March to a New Base, Proved a Slaughter Pen to the Confederates.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Asociation. Book rights reserved.]

BITTER disappointment for the Confederates over the result of the battle of Malvern Hill, on James river, July 1, 1862, was most natural under the circumstances. As things looked to them for a day or two before the collision on that field they held strong hopes of a decisive victory over McClellan's moving army so soon as it could be brought to bay, and when they learned, on the morning of the 30th of June and morning of July 1, that it had come to a stand with its back to the river, and saw their own forces united, the prize seemed already within their grasp. When, however, the southern generals reached the scene after their hurried night march and learned what "Little Mac" had been about on Malvern Hill during the preceding twenty-four hours, while a portion of his troops had fully occupied their attention elsewhere, they shook their heads dubiously. They saw sights to appall them, and though their brave soldiers were equal to most desperate efforts, even to charging up long, exposed slopes where the Union artillery could comb the ground with canister, the first presentiment was the correct one. McClellan couldn't be ousted from his position by direct attack, even if their term of thousands should be sacrificed to the last man. The first description of Malvern Hill was carried to the Confederate commander, Robert E. Lee, by Gen. D. H. Hill, and in giving in his information the latter observed, "If Gen. McClellan is there in force we had better let him alone."

Gen. Longstreet was present, and said laughingly to Hill, "Don't get scared now that we have got him whipped."

Lee apparently sympathized with Longstreet's view, for he ordered an attack, and Hill's division bore the brunt of it.

By singular good fortune I saw the whole Union armament on Malvern Hill as it appeared from the enemy's lines about an hour before the ball opened, and I remember distinctly two thoughts uppermost in my mind. One was that I would be happy to get inside of our lines on that hill as soon as possible, and the other that the Confederates would find the place a slaughter pen should they attempt the same feat.

Our division had been in the rear guard the previous day, June 30, defending the crossing at White Oak Swamp, and had held on until midnight. Between 2 a. m. and daylight on the 1st we had marched toward the James river on parallel routes with Lee's troops, and we climbed up the sloping grades on to Malvern Hill just ahead of the enemy, so that the preparations made to receive them were complete for our inspection. For a mile before we reached the front line at the Quaker church exposed spot. In the road, and, so far as we could see, in the adjoining fields, was covered by our cannon. The line was a semicircle, resting on James river on either side and in a strong swell on the center, and every commanding knoll was crowned with cannon, and could only be approached by the Confederate armies by fields of open slopes, where the range of our rifles and artillery would be unobstructed.

The most exposed positions were occupied by Morell's and Martindale's divisions of Fitz John Porter's Fifth corps and by Couch's division of Keyes' Fourth corps. Porter's corps had made a desperate fight at Mechanicsville and Gaines' Mill, June 26 and 27, the opening of the "Seven Days'" battles, but had been spared during the subsequent engagements to be fresh on this the closing day of the series. Couch's division was fresh, but all the other troops of our army had seen hard work marching and fighting night and day for a week. Couch's division occupied the right of the line, and in front of it the ground was cut up by numerous deep ravines a quarter of a mile distant. The right rested upon a stream called Western Run and could not be easily turned.

Porter's two divisions occupied Crew's Hill on the extreme left of McClellan's line. The positions taken by both Porter and Couch had been selected on the 30th by Porter, whom the commanding general had appointed to lead in the last day of battle as he had done on the field of June 26 and 27, before Richmond. McClellan examined the positions shortly before the Confederates opened the attack, and approved of them, and as fast as the remaining troops—the corps of Sumner, Franklin and Heintzelman—reached the field they were placed in reserve. By 10 o'clock the hill had the appearance of a vast amphitheater lined from pit to crest with rows of cannon, interspersed with battalion after battalion of men, whose bayonets glistened in the bright summer sun.

Lee gave the honor of leading the attack to the brigade of Gen. Lewis A. Armistead, whose soldier career was ended in Pickett's wild charge at Gettysburg a year later. Armistead's was to be the first of nine brigades of "Prince" Magruder's command that would assault Porter's division on the left at Crew's Hill. Simultaneously Gen. D. H. Hill's division of five brigades was to assault Couch's position on the direct front, while Whiting's division, of Stonewall Jackson's corps, would make a flank attack on Couch's right.

The whole movement was to be preceded by a vigorous cannonading by the Confederate batteries, and when this had shattered the Union line, Armistead then, when Magruder's entire command on the right, Hill in the center and Whiting on the left, were to dash forward to the assault. But when the batteries attempted to do the work assigned them it was found that the Union artillery was not nearly a fine military spectacle, but as army alert for the hottest work of war.

The first Confederate battery that attempted to play the first part on the programme was knocked to pieces in a few minutes. In order to reach near enough to our lines to do execution, the rebel artillery had to advance along some of the narrow lanes or roads that threaded the slopes and ravines on Lee's front. These passed, as I before stated, were commanded by our cannon, and as soon as the head of a Confederate battery appeared it would be knocked to pieces. Two batteries that attempted to get into position in front of Armistead were quickly disabled, and a third lost 4 men and 3 horses before getting its guns in place, and in two hours' firing lost 11 men and 17 horses and had to retire. Armistead drove away our sharpshooters and pickets on his front, and vainly attempted to get up batteries to clear the road for his infantry advance.

Meanwhile Hill had similar experience with his artillery. The first battery that showed itself on his front was knocked to pieces in two minutes, and others coming up singly shared the same fate. About 5 o'clock, however, he heard shouting over on the line of Magruder, and presuming it to be a signal ordered an advance. The Alabama brigade, led for the first time by Col. (afterward general) John B. Gordon, pushed on to within 300 yards of our lines, and lost over 400 men out of 1,000 in one charge. The Third Alabama lost 200 out of 354. Six color bearers were shot down in this regiment, and the seventh carried off only a portion of the staff, the flag being literally shot to pieces. It was impossible for men to live in the face of the fire that greeted these men. Our soldiers delivered their shots with coolness and precision at short range, and after the front line exhausted its ammunition reserves were put in. Although the Army of the Potomac had fought and marched day and night for a week, the last half on short allowance of rations, there was no lack of ardor for this, the closing fight.

The orders to our infantry were to stand and await the enemy, but they could hardly be restrained from advancing when the Confederates fell back from each bloody repulse. In one such a rush from Palmer's Union brigade upon Garland's brigade of Hill, the colors of the Fourteenth North Carolina were captured by the Thirty-sixth New York.

On the other flank at Crew's Hill the result was the same. After vain efforts for hours to get his batteries to work, Magruder, in desperation, ordered a charge on the opposing batteries. Armistead, with his troops already well in advance of the whole Confederate army, gayly swung his cap in the air and dashed forward, followed soon by the brigades of Wright and Wilcox.

Wright's brigade, 1,300 strong, its leader with his cap poised on his glittering blade, pressed on past the flank of Couch's line, up Crew's Hill, and, wheeling, reached the foot of the bluff under the batteries. Here they met the Fourteenth New York volunteers and were swept away as chaff before the wind. With a remnant of only 300 Wright hung on under the muzzles of Porter's cannon until dark. Semmes' brigade advanced through the fields between Wright and Armistead and mingled his dead with those of our own line around the buildings of the Crew farm. Armistead's men charged six times upon the deadly batteries through storms of bullets, canister and grape. One of his regiments, the Thirty-eighth Virginia, lost its color sergeant and 2 corporals killed, and 3 corporals severely wounded, as each in turn seized the falling colors. Finally the lieutenant colonel seized the staff and was wounded, and a captain who next took them was soon hit by three balls. The colonel next seized the staff, but it was knocked from his hand and shattered, and the flag was caught by the remaining color corporal and carried through the fight, flying from a bayonet. So gallantly were the Confederates in their dash upon the batteries that not a gun was captured.

On this field, also, Confederate daring had its match. Col. Carter's Thirty-fourth and Eighty-third Pennsylvania, two regiments that afterward scaled the steeps of Little Round Top at Gettysburg, also held it gloriously to the triumph of our cause. The Eighty-third had lost 61 killed at Gaines' Mill, June 27, and now suffered a further loss of 30 killed. The Forty-fourth and Eighty-third charged together on the advancing enemy and captured a regimental flag. The Forty-fourth had four color bearers shot, and the fifth, though twice severely wounded, refused to give up the staff until he could do so to the colonel who had intrusted it to him. Another soldier of this regiment was absent during a part of the fight on special duty, and when the command was relieved after emptying its cartridge boxes, he refused to be relieved because he had a few shots left. In the ranks of the Sixty-ninth Irish regiment he fought on until his empty box exploded three times in succession in his rear.

The world reads volumes about the glorious achievements of the Army of the Potomac in after years, but the story of those battles of 1862 show that it was during these days that the bolt was forged that shattered the grand armament of the Confederacy in 1864-5. Malvern Hill was fought on our side by empty stomachs, many of the men having had no food for twenty-four to thirty-six hours, and then only hard bread and water. Fortunately their wants were relieved next day when the supply transports ordered into James river by McClellan on June 18, in anticipation of the battle, arrived, and loaded with stores into the laps of the heroic soldiery.

The Confederate loss at Malvern Hill was about 6,000 killed and wounded. This swelled their casualty list during the "Seven Days" to 19,000 against the Union loss of about 9,000.

Lee was fairly outwitted by his boyish opponent, for he should have known that McClellan was heading for James river and seized Malvern Hill ahead of him. As it turned out, the Army of the Potomac, Army of the Potomac a new lease, with gunboat co-operation and free water communication with the north.

Clearing a Bride by Lot.

A wedding is announced for this spring between two well known young people of Des Moines. There is an interesting story connected with the event, and it would be unfair to call names.

Four years ago the prospective bride, then quite young, was receiving the attention of three gentlemen. They, too, were young, little more than boys, and just entering upon the different lines of work which they had adopted for life.

Two of them indeed were still students. Matters ran along without much change with the four for some time. They each understood the situation. Nothing in the girl's manner indicated any preference. The three boys were the best of friends, although the situation was such as to strain their relations a little.

Finally the three met one day by accident. In some way the young lady's name was brought up, and after some deliberation it was decided to match pennies to see who should withdraw from the contest. It was stipulated that the winner should be in honor bound to devote himself exclusively to the young lady in the future and to win her if possible. The losers from that moment were to withdraw from the race completely. The losers were further pledged to act as guardian brothers to the young lady and see that the winner carried on no flirtations with other girls.

The contracts were carried out to the letter, and the girl was never told why two of her admirers so suddenly retired.

And so, after these years, she is at last to become the wife of him whom luck favored in a game of chance. Both are still young, and the gentleman is prospering in his business.

Of the losers in the contest, one adopted a trade and is married. The other entered upon a professional career. He is unmarried, and his name would be recognized, were it mentioned, all over the western city.—Des Moines Leader.

Men Charged with Effeminacy.

What sort of namby-pamby Miss Nancys are young men fast coming to be! As a little fraction not long ago the majority of men, both married and single, talked in effeminate voices, using their inflections and accent precisely as women do. You hear this effeminate voice everywhere; you don't wonder much at it when you consider the spindle shanked, narrow chested source from which it comes. The tastes also of the modern young man are toward the effeminate. So many young bachelors are keeping house by themselves, and they can tell you all about it, from the price one should pay for tea to the proper width of a tablecloth hem. But this is not the worst.

I was paying a visit one afternoon, and on being ushered into the reception room I saw the young man of the house, a boy of nineteen, sitting by the window busily engaged in doing drawn work! He had his embroidery frames and was deftly working the tweeds of an intricate spider's web pattern in and out with seeming satisfaction. He spread out his work for my inspection—it was a sideboard cover—and patted it, smoothed it and held it up in various lights, precisely as a girl might have done. Though I should have enjoyed taking him by the coat collar and gently dropping him in a clear, cold pool of water, I repressed my disgust and admired his skill.—New York Cor. Chicago Herald.

The White House Festerizer.

The success which met Senator Vilas's request when he started to break into the White House shuttled those charged with preventing the approach of intruders there. A force of picked police officers, under command of a sergeant, are on duty at the White House at all hours. They are fifteen in number, and are on duty in squads of five each. Two men are stationed inside of the house, while the other three are supposed to patrol the grounds. A high iron picket fence surrounds the grounds.

Besides the officers that patrol the grounds the White House has two dogs which generally can be found prowling around. Yet on the night in question the young man scaled the high fence, stopped to remove some of his surplus clothing, evaded the three officers and the dogs, and was on the rear porch of the White House and had broken one of the windows before those inside had any intimation of his approach. His escape showed the demoralization of the officers in the grounds, and as a consequence they were relieved and three others detailed for that duty by the superintendent of police.—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

Italy's Condition for War.

Italy's area is 114,410 square miles, and its population about 29,000,000. Its standing army consists of about 269,000 men, and on leave of absence there are 587,000 men who are technically considered to belong to the permanent army. Then there is the militia of various orders amounting to nearly 2,000,000 more men, who could be called into service in case of invasion. Italy's king is Umberto I.

Its assumed superiority in navy would hardly avail in a conflict on this side of the Atlantic, which is where the war would be if any should occur with us. The lack in coaling capacity and seagoing qualities would keep most of Italy's fighting ships at home in any such war. There is no danger that Italy or any other European nation could obtain a lodgment in the United States.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Two Dromios.

Some confusion has been caused by the fact that there are two ships now in port bearing the same name, Edward O'Brien. One of the ships has been docked for over a month, undergoing extensive repairs, while the other has been shifted half a dozen times in the same period. Both are owned by the same man and were built by the same firm. The owner, Edward O'Brien, of Thomaston, Me., refuses to change either name, because, as he says, he wants his vessels to be different from others.—San Francisco Alta.

Day and Evening Gowns.

The two gowns illustrated in the accompanying cut show fashion's latest tendencies in day and evening attire. There is but little to say concerning the day dress. It is simplicity itself, ladylike costume of dark blue cloth outlined with narrow gold braid. The bodice has a turnover edge, but no superfluous trimming. It would show off a symmetrical figure to great advantage. The skirt is ornamented with a deep hem, headed by a line of gold, and is arranged in fanlike plaits at the back. Such a gown would be smart enough for church and quiet enough for the street.

The evening dress is of Japanese silk, ornamented with a flchu of transparent soft stuff edged with lace. The neck is modestly low in a V back and front, and the elbow sleeves are finished off very daintily with ruffles of lace. Two lace frills decorate the skirt, and flowers at the top make the waist look small, and are universally becoming to slight figures.

Tennis Costumes.

The favorite colors are cream, light blue, pink and mauve. Stripe patterns will be worn more than checks this summer. The cream colored stuffs are streaked with bright lines of green, pink, blue or gold. A pretty material in pale pink had narrow stripes of white silk, and a beautiful fabric in ivory white, made expressly for a costume who wanted something exclusive, was patterned at intervals of about an inch and a half with three lines of green. Tennis rackets and balls in blue or red on a light ground look rather smart. For short, loose fitting jackets there are smooth surfaced cloths in pretty colors, patterned with small spots in a contrasting shade. Elaborate tennis costumes are usually made of delaine or foulard.

Shoes and Stockings.

The smartest shoes for wearing with outdoor attire are of seal brown leather. They harmonize with any color, and are not so conspicuous as Russia leather. For shoes, however, a shade of coze skin in medium shades of tan and brown. The newest evening shoes are in black brocaded satin, and are ornamented with small paste buckles.

Stockings of fine lisle thread or silk are seen embroidered in floral designs; others are covered with a dice pattern. Stockings in a soft shade of Russia leather, with open work fronts, look pretty worn with shoes made of that material. It would be impossible to say which are the favorite colors for evening wear. The newest of silk stockings are as transparent as the finest gauze.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED SESSION HELD LAST EVENING.

Mr. Smalley Resigns.—Mr. Robert P. Currie Elected in His Stead. The Lighting Question.—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in adjourned session last evening. Mayor Place and Councilmen Hegeman, Hummer, Needham and Sebring responded to roll call. Councilman Buckle came in late. Councilman Smalley was absent.

The clerk read a communication from N. B. Smalley whereby he tendered his resignation to take effect immediately.

Mr. Hegeman said although it comes suddenly and it is with regret that we part with our associate, he undoubtedly has a motive in tendering his resignation, and I therefore move that it be accepted.

Mr. Needham seconded the motion and it prevailed.

The claim of Peter Seeder for $5 was read and referred to the Auditing Committee.

Collector Spencer's report in reference to monies received for liquor licenses was as follows: Eugene Hoester, $150; G. Sutterlein, $150; Frank Linke, $225. On motion the report was received and ordered filed.

The clerk's report showing that $112.50 had been collected during the past month was read, received and ordered filed.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hegeman to the effect that the Committee on Streets be instructed to borrow $500 for use only on Somerset street was unanimously adopted.

The electric light bill which was presented at the last meeting and referred back for correction again came up for consideration.

Councilman Sebring explained that it was no fault of the company, as some malicious person had cut one of the guy lines on Willow avenue; the company had a lineman out for three days, but he could not discover the cause of the trouble. The company then employed an expert who discovered it and remedied the defect in short order.

The mayor and clerk were authorized to negotiate a loan of $1,000 for borough purposes.

A resolution authorized the furnishing of the lock-up and also the wiring and lighting of the building by electricity prevailed.

A resolution by Mr. Needham prevailed that the furnishing of the lock-up and court room should not exceed $35.

Mr. Sebring offered a resolution to the effect that a warrant be drawn for $50 to pay the interest on the Fire Department bonds which would become due July 1st. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution which prevailed to the effect that Mr. Robert T. Currie be elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. N. B. Smalley.

The bill of the Edison Electric Light Company for 1050 lamps of crushed stone from Mr. A. L. Smalley and further authorized to employ Samuel Moore to cart it.

Mr. Needham said that he was constantly reminded of poor lighting by the gas used in the Council chamber, for it was continually jumping and he thought it would be wise to provide for another system of lighting. He moved that the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps be instructed to advertise for bids for electric lighting.

The Committee were instructed to receive bids and contract with the lowest bidder for wiring the place.

J. M. Low & Co. applied for a franchise to establish a system of Water Works and Sewerage in the Borough.

Mr. Hegeman moved that it be referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps, without reading.

On motion of Mr. Hegeman the Council went into executive session, and the reporters retired.

A PLEASANT LAWN PARTY.

The W. C. T. U. Kitchen Garden Girls Have a Pleasant Holiday.

Yesterday afternoon was one full of enjoyment for "The Kitchen Garden" girls of the W. C. T. U.

Dressed in their neat uniforms, with bright, smiling faces, the class, which numbers twenty-one, presented a very attractive appearance as it marched two abreast down Central avenue to "The Wisteria," where a "Strawberry Tea" was given them.

Games were played on the lawn, where refreshments in abundance were served and the little maidens not only had a good time themselves but made the hearts of older people happy by their merry-making.

The following girls took part:

Grace Jackson.	Annie Myers.
Milla Pierson.	Kittie Larew.
Laura Orleman.	Ellie Brown.
Lizzie Stephens.	Bertha Jones.
Minnie Flanagan.	Mamie Teller.
Annie Wiegman.	Bessie Wals.
Florence Taylor.	Mary Brown.
Maggie Parker.	Katie Meyers.
Mamie Porter.	Lucy Cooper.
Minnie Parker.	Mamie Bell.
Sadie Rockafellow.	Carrie Hoffman.
Mamie Orleman.	Dellie Davies.

These comprise the grade which will soon graduate into a higher, the "Cooking Class."

A Small Fire.

A small fire in the three story frame building at No. 55 West Front street called out the fire department at about nine o'clock last evening. The alarm was sounded from Box 12 at the corner of Front and Somerset streets. The flames were extinguished, however, before much damage resulted. The fire was caused by the explosion of a lamp.

MRS. GABLE LOSING HOPE.

Is Offering Furniture to Pay Her Runaway Husband's Debts.

Before John Gable went away with Mrs. Avery he borrowed $50 from Justice Nash giving him a chattel mortgage on the furniture which belonged to his wife, excepting two chairs which his wife said he owned.

Mr. Nash had two warrants issued for the arrest of Gable for obtaining money under false pretenses. Mr. Nash's claim with interest amounted to $57.50.

The warrants were published in shocker paper the same day they were issued, with comments to the effect that Gable would soon be behind the bars.

The premature publication of the warrants and indiscreet comments resulted in scaring Gable so that he had time to escape.

Then Justice Nash saw Mrs. Gable to get his money from her. She in her distress did not know what to do, as her husband had left her with several small children to support without any money.

To avoid any trouble however she concluded to allow her furniture to be sold to pay the mortgage. She saw Mr. Gillies, the auctioneer, who advised her in a fatherly way not to sell it and deprive herself and her children of a home. She is very deaf, and did not seem to clearly understand him, and did not realize that she was not responsible for the debt, but concluded that it would be better to try and raise the money in some other way and save her home as he suggested.

She went for father and laid her troubles before him. He is a poor old man. He it was who came to this office finally to ask if there was not some way that his daughter could be helped out of her misfortunes, and burst into tears while telling the story of her wrongs, as he realized how helpless he was to help her, as published at the time.

Some one advanced him $57.50 for her, and this she paid over to Justice Nash to release the mortgage, presuming in her ignorance of the law that the Justice could take it.

Now she has decided to repay her father's debt for her, to sell her furniture.

Mr. Gillies has refused to accept any compensation. The following is the advertisement:

Auction sale of furniture on Tuesday, June 16th, at No. 47 Cottage place, at 2 o'clock p. m.; Price and Brussels carpets, parlor suit, lounge, bedroom sets, crib, pictures, carpet, shades, stove, and various other articles will be sold for cash.

MRS. JOHN B. GABLE.

Of course THE NEWS would be glad to Be the medium to forward any contributions to help this greatly wronged wife out of her present misfortune, and would be glad to see her home saved for herself and equally innocent children, for it is an extremely pitiable case throughout.

—Committeemen of the Y. M. C. A. will meet this afternoon and evening at the residence of Mr. C. T. Hissam, 208 Central avenue. Athletic sports will begin at 3 p. m. and supper will be served at 6.30 o'clock. Any one who may be unable to be present in the afternoon are urged to be present at supper and for the conference in the evening.

A Runaway on Front Street.

A horse attached to a delivery wagon left standing on West Front street became frightened and ran away. When in front of Rand's store the wagon to which it was attached collided with an electric light pole. The force of the collision caused the horse to leave the wagon. The animal was caught on the side-walk a few feet distant. Broken harness was the only damage that resulted.

Where are the Summer Suits?

The police are complaining, and justly too, that they are compelled to still wear their Winter clothing. They think that Council should, as heretofore, provide for their comfort during the Summer as well as the Winter. It is probably an oversight, but it should be attended to as soon as possible as the officers, who protect the city should not be neglected.

Tramps Raided.

Policemen Giese and Fredrickson yesterday raided a number of tramps who had stationed themselves near Nethermood. They have been annoying the residents by their unlawful acts, among other things stealing chickens.

THE CENTURY RUN.

ALMOST FIVE HUNDRED BICYCLISTS IN LINE.

A Splendid Army of Wheelmen Start for Philadelphia, but Little Over a Corporal's Guard Are Likely to Get There on Their Wheels.—They Make a Fine Appearance and Take Fifteen Minutes to Go by a Given Point.

This morning the following telegram was sent by Mr. Frank L. C. Martin captain of the Plainfield Bicycle club from Newark, to Dr. J. H. Cooley, ex-president of the P. B. C.: It was sent at 6:34 o'clock and was intended to inform Mr. Cooley how many guests the club should prepare for:

Dr. J. H. Cooley, care Plainfield Bicycle Club.
About four hundred and fifty in line.
FRANK L. C. MARTIN, Captain.

The telegram arrived about five minutes after the rear guard of the army of wheelmen, had disappeared along West Front street.

The Plainfield boys were alert however, and in anticipation of a crowd had 120 quarts of milk at the club house. It did not prove half enough, however, for the long line of thirsty and dusty riders.

When they started again, numerous counts were made, by various persons. The result in numbers varied from 461 to 500.

It took just fifteen minutes for this whooping, whistling, jolly army of bicyclists on their noiseless steeds to pass a given point.

While the good roads last the main body of bicyclists will hold out. Tough roads will sift out the poorer wheelmen by ten and twenties. The poor roads will be reached near Somerville.

THE FRENCH COMEDY.

In the Scribner and Newton Schools.

The main class room of Misses Scribner's and Newton's school on La Grande avenue, was well filled yesterday afternoon at four o'clock with the parents and friends of the pupils, who were interested in French. The entertainment was given by the pupils, the comedy being under the direction of Prof. Viroux and the Indian clubs and fencing exercises under the direction of Miss Martin.

The opening comedy was called "Recreation de Perdue," and was given by three young ladies, who were supposed to be taking their recess but continually disagreeing. The return bell was sounded before they decided what they wanted to play. Nothing but French was spoken. This was followed by an Indian club exercise.

The next comedy represented Prof. Viroux as an English lord, who had come to this country to meet some American heiresses, one of whom he hoped to be able to marry. So as to make a more favorable impression he thought he would speak French only. The young ladies upon learning of his intention played a trick on him, and the numerous mistakes which he made especially when he became indignant at their trick, were very amusing.

To his surprise he learned that these young ladies could speak better French than he, and also that he was not quite smart enough to get ahead of an American.

The fencing exercise which was given next, was very pretty and showed that a great amount of practising had been done by the young girls, so as to perfect themselves in the various movements.

The entertainment then closed by a very comical monologue by Prof. Viroux.

Each part was well rendered and did great credit to both the teachers and pupils.

CONTESTING JOB MALE'S WILL.

He Was Unconscious When His Hand Was Guided For His Signature.

The contest over the will of the late Job Male, ex-Mayor of Plainfield, was begun yesterday in Newark before Master in Chancery Herbert W. Knight. Mr. Male was reputed worth over half a million of dollars at his death. He made a number of bequests to public institutions. About a score of his relatives want to break the will on the ground that he was not in his right mind when it was made and that he never signed it.

The story that Dr. George W. Endicott, of Plainfield, told about the circumstances attending the making of the will was as follows:

"I was in Mr. Male's house the night he died. I was called by Dr. Thomas S. Davis for a consultation. He sent for Lawyer Craig A. Marsh and said Mr. Male wished to make a will. Mr. Marsh took notes while Mr. Male gave his instructions. He ordered that the Park avenue house and the Schoonmaker property on Second street and brick-a-brac be given to the Plainfield Public Library. Mary Ann Gleason was to get $10,000. Job Male, Jr., was to have his own residence and the grounds, and the house and lot at No. 133 Broadway were to be sold. He wanted to give his brother's children equal shares. He named Job Male, Jr., John W. Harrison and George W. Fenno as his executors, and he asked those present to act as witnesses to his signature. In half an hour Mr. Marsh had the will ready for signing. A pen was placed in Mr. Male's hand, but he was too weak to use it. Mr. Marsh guided Mr. Male's hand across the page and signed his name. Then Mr. Marsh asked if he acknowledged that as his signature. There was no answer. We tried to arouse him, but did not succeed, and he died within thirty minutes. Mr. Marsh said the signature was not valid, and he drew up a statement of the circumstances, which all present signed."

"Did anyone make suggestions to Mr. Male while he was giving instructions about the bequests?" the witness was asked.

"Mr. Marsh made suggestions. He was prompted occasionally."

"Do you think Mr. Male was in a fit condition to dispose of his property at the time he gave directions?"

"I certainly do. He was conscious and of sound mind up to within a few minutes of the time when he was asked to sign his name," replied Dr. Endicott.

Mr. Male had two brothers and three half brothers and their children number about thirty.

Ex-Chancellor Runyon, R. V. Lindabury, Charles A. Reed, Charles Endicott, W. R. Sullivan and Foster Voorhees represented the contestants, while ex-Governor Bedle and Craig A. Marsh are retained to uphold the will.

TWENTY DAYS TO RECUPERATE.

Mrs. Harris Will Spend It in the Union County Jail.

Some time ago Mrs. Simeon Harris accepted $500 from her husband, agreeing thereby to sever all matrimonial relations and forever bar her right of dower. It is said that she signed an agreement, drawn up by a lawyer, to that effect.

Mrs. Harris is a native of the neighborhood of eighty-five years of age. While his wife was less than thirty-five.

After she accepted the money nothing was heard of her for several months. About two months ago she again arrived in Plainfield. In the meantime her husband had leased the house he formerly occupied and entered into an agreement with a relative who resides near Washingtonville. Mr. James Totten is the lessee of the property.

Mrs. Harris employed Mr. Frank S. Runyon one of the United States express messengers, to convey her personal effects, consisting of a trunk, a sewing machine and a valise to her old home. The messenger took the baggage there, but the occupant of the house refused to receive it. The messenger, however, deposited it in the front yard and departed.

Mrs. Totten carried it outside the fence and left it along on the street all night. The next morning Mrs. Harris engaged another expressman and had her baggage carted back to the station, but the same afternoon she employed another man and had her baggage hauled. It at last was again deposited in the front yard of Mr. Totten's residence.

It did not remain there, however, when Mrs. Harris arrived she discovered that it had been thrown in the gutter. She was very indignant and expressed herself in no complimentary terms.

After again having her belongings carried to the depot and departed and nothing was heard of her until Thursday, when she chronicled her arrival by getting her former home and blaspheming the occupants. She repeated the offence in the evening and threatened to smash every window in the place. Policemen Giese and Kiely were summoned and Recorder City Judge Covington sent her to the county jail for twenty days.

PERSONAL.

Miss Florence Titsworth, of Madison avenue, is spending a few weeks with friends at Peekskill, N. Y.

Mr. Wm. Mowatt of this city embarked on the steamer "Glasgow" this morning for Europe. Mr. Mowatt will spend four months sightseeing in England, Ireland and Scotland.

Mr. William Pierson, although unfortunately crippled, is as jolly a personage as one would wish to meet on the streets of the city. Mr. Pierson's only fault is that he is a Democratic fanatic, and, of course, a staunch supporter of the Crescents. To-day he hired a carriage and went to witness the game at Somerville. In order to chronicle his arrival he has had a sign lettered which reads as follows: "Blood, Blood, Blood. Gore, Gore Gore." If the Crescents loose the game he will have nothing to say. If they win he has another sign that will take Somerville by storm.

F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. Wines about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV.

Contractor Brewer Missing.

Bert J. Brewer, a contractor and builder living on High street, Somerville, has been unaccountably absent since last Monday night. He is known to his friends that he has gone to stay. He left his wife and two children. Mr. Brewer told his wife that he was going and going to Elizabeth, and that is the last she has seen of him. Several of his creditors have put in claims and confessed to get possession of his property. Sallentine & Van Fleet, the carriage builders, have sold him a surrey, but they had a chattel mortgage on it and took it away. Grocer E. Bonnell has a bill of $60 against Brewer, and attached his property. Mr. Brewer's father-in-law, Mayor Major, is said to be a loser. William Bergen, a brother-in-law, is also one of the creditors.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS, PLAINFIELD, N. J., SATURDAY, JUNE 13, 1891.

THE EVENING NEWS

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

It is a discouraging comment on the negro's supposed capacity for civilization, if it is true, that the Hayrians will have nothing to do with Minister Frederick Douglass, and that the negotiations for the Mole St. Nicholas are at a standstill on that account. How can other races have faith in the negro when he has none in himself?

"A heap of ashes and a pair of handcuffs." That is what remains from the latest of the Louisiana lynchings. The horror of the thing is such that one would rather not speak of it. Europe and America will now conclude that Louisiana is about the best part of this whole world to let alone and stay away from. Can the state afford this reputation? We put it as a plain matter of business, not of sentiment.

"Off with his head!" said the Chinese government when one of its diplomatic corps had been found swindling and defrauding tradespeople in Paris, and banking on the fact that he was an official representative of his country, and so poor Tcheng-Ki-Tong suffered the extreme penalty because he did not pay his debts. And yet we call the Chinese a half civilized nation! Suppose all the high officials among western nations who do not pay their debts had to have their heads cut off! What a brisk examination business the civil service commissions would have on their hands!

Hand Him Down to Fame.

England has hardly yet recovered its breath from the shock it received at the audacity of the common juryman who stood up in his box and said in plain English to the Prince of Wales, "Are the jury to understand that you were banking on these two occasions and saw nothing of the alleged malpractices?" We read thereupon that Albert Edward "glowered." At first he did not reply, then changed his mind apparently, and answered quite good naturedly. His well known good temper came to his rescue just in time.

But that honest juryman must be immortalized. We must know all about him—good, honest Briton that he is. Sir Edward Clarke had handled the royal witness with gloves. Even rip roaring Sir Charles Russell had on this occasion roared as gentlyas a sucking dove. But that juryman redeemed the British nation from the toadyism of the hour. He is the nerviest man in all Europe. We want his name, his antecedents, his history. He ought to come to America and lecture. He could gather in more gold than Stanley did. He will be unique in story as the man who stood up in his place in the jury box and cross questioned the heir to the throne of the British empire. In eastern countries his head would have been off in less than twenty-four hours. In western countries he has simply made his enduring fame.

The Presbyterian Theology.

Those who are so settled in their religious beliefs on the one hand, and those who have no belief at all on the other, can have little idea of the fierce conflicts that tear the breasts of many noble and devout Presbyterians at this time. Only those can understand who have in spite of themselves been dragged step by step through terrible mental contests in changing their religious views. There is no mental conflict so fierce and terrible as this. There is no dissension so heated and bitter, none that engenders such fury of rage and hate as those that grow out of creed differences. Witness the Spanish inquisition, the thirty years' war in Europe, the expulsion of the Moors from Spain, the war on the Jews in Russia at the present day.

It is not strange, therefore, that anguish, strife and heart burning such as have never been known before in the peaceful Presbyterian fold have grown out of the expulsion of Dr. Briggs from his chair as Biblical professor in Union Theological seminary. For the first time the general assembly has exercised its veto power.

Already this terrible strife has resulted in the death of two of the ablest men in the church. Dr. Vandyke died soon after his appointment to a professorship in the Union Theological seminary from which Dr. Briggs had been dismissed. Speaking in the general assembly of his death, Dr. Richard Hall said with solemnity: "I believe Dr. Vandyke has gone out of the excitement of this hour. God only knows who more may go that carry it upon their heart as he carried it."

The utterance was a fatal prophecy. The same day, a few hours later, Judge Breckinridge dropped dead in the assembly itself, just after finishing his speech against Dr. Briggs. He was able to close his speech with the words: "I have discharged my duty faithfully. I ask you to excuse me from further"— He staggered, sank to the floor, and in a few moments this able jurist and conscientious Presbyterian was dead. He too had "gone out of the excitement of this hour." And there seems to be no abatement of the excitement. Others too may go before it is settled.

The New Weather Bureau.

On the first of next July the weather bureau of the United States government will be taken out of the hands of the signal service corps of the army and handed over with all its belongings to the agricultural department. This transfer has long been discussed throughout the country, but was finally determined on by act of the last congress.

Considerable change will be made of such character as would naturally follow a transfer from military to agricultural hands. The scope will be enlarged. The signal service bureau has so far confined its work to recording atmospheric phenomena and making predictions about the weather, which happened to hit, or otherwise, as the case might be. The agricultural bureau will undertake to make a complete American meteorology. The recorded data will be classified and conclusions drawn from them which will form the basis of the future American weather science. One of the most interesting branches of inquiry will be the relation of weather to disease in its various shapes. One disease which seemed to have a decided relation to weather was the grip. During stormy weather the epidemic raged most; with the appearance of settled, clear, dry weather it abated.

One obstacle that has stood in the way of an American weather science is the size of the country. To all appearances a certain kind of weather will be approaching from one point of the compass. The signal service predicts that certain meteorological conditions will prevail in a given stretch of country on a given day. Behold! up sweeps a storm from the southeast and all the weather wisdom of the bureau is put to shame. Europeans have settled it in their own minds that Americans are very ignorant and backward in meteorology, knowing nothing of our variable conditions and sudden changes here. An official of the agricultural department rather wishes it were possible to give the average European meteorologist a taste of an American blizzard or tornado just once, so as to enlighten his understanding.

Save the Country.

While from all the older parts of the country come the story of abandoned farms, of pleasant homesteads falling into decay and ruin, there comes from many parts also the call for farm labor. Agriculturists offer anywhere from fourteen to twenty-five dollars a month for laborers, with board included, yet in some parts of the country it will be difficult to get harvesters enough to save the crops. This on the one hand. On the other, go into this city of over a million of the large cities and walk in one of the small parks. Looking at the benches in these little parks you will read a whole book in one glance. The benches are lined with men out of employment. The haggard, run-to-seed, forlorn, discouraged look on the countenances of the men who haunt those benches takes away all the pleasure the ordinary citizen can derive from a morning in the fresh air.

The men are willing to get out of employment, looking for work, thus caught and stranded, starving in the streets of the city. There are three-quarters of a million of these unemployed men in the United States day in and day out. Now we want a new crusade. We want a movement inaugurated from the city back to the country. The abandoned farms must be reclaimed and put to raising the things that city people want. New agricultural, dairy and live stock methods must be found to take the place of the old ways that will no longer work. The farmer must fight and free himself from the rings that fix the price of his products. He must, moreover, study to make farm life more attractive to the "hand" who sleeps up garret and lunches off cold bacon and buttermilk. The old way will no longer do. Find the new and better one.

It is considered one of the strongest signs of progress that in our time and among English speaking peoples young men and maidens are allowed to make their own choice as to whom they will marry, and are not bossed as their kind were in the old patriarchal times when the fathers of a race selected the wives for their sons and none dared rebel. But the sons of the Prince of Wales are even worse off than boys were in old patriarchal times. Not only do they have no choice as to whom they shall marry, but their father himself has nothing to say. The prince is said to object very strongly to his sons being forced to marry German princesses, according to the traditional usage of the British royal family. But all his objections will go for naught, and his queen mother, Victoria herself, assisted by her grandson, the emperor of Germany, will probably soon settle whom the sons of Albert Edward shall wed, and how and when and where as well. American boys ought to be glad their grandmothers cannot boss them around in the matter of matrimony.

A prominent American financier says that now when we are shipping so much gold to Europe, and the nations there find how interdependent countries are on one another at the present day, it would be a good time to make another effort to secure international bimetallism.

"Fifty-six per cent. of all the college students in this country at present are women, and nearly two-thirds of our colleges are co-educational. At these rates the women of the United States promise to be better educated than the men.

TREASURYMEN ACCUSED

Did Controller Lacey Know All About the Bank?

EXAMINER JONES SAYS HE DID.

The Witness Testifies That Lacey Visited the Bank in February and Knew All That Drew Had Learned—Another Shortage of $400,000 Added to Bardsley's Steal.

PHILADELPHIA, June 13.—There was some very startling evidence produced before the Bardsley investigating committee, and prominent United States officials' names were brought into the case in a manner entirely unexpected to the majority of the committee. Assistant Bank Examiner Jones, who is very close to Bank Examiner Drew, was on the stand, and gave the committee information regarding Controller of the Currency Lacey's knowledge of the affairs of the Keystone National bank that has hitherto been kept carefully guarded. This was that on the 13th day of last February Controller Lacey was in this city and personally visited the Keystone bank building and was shown the books and given a full insight into its condition as known at that time by Bank Examiner Drew.

Still Another Sensation.

Another sensation was the statement made by General Louis Wagner, the executor of public works. This statement connected the name of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton with the attempt to make Nelson F. Evans, director of the Spring Garden National bank, receiver of the broken Keystone bank. Assistant Examiner Jones, when called to the stand, told when and how the Keystone had been examined. The discrepancy in the ledger of the Keystone was first discovered by him on Jan. 9, 1891, but not by any information furnished by Examiner Drew.

But Lawrence Kept at Work.

After the discovery nothing, he said, was done to stop the Keystone from attending to its usual duties except to see that he made no more false entries. On Feb. 2, he said, he, by orders of the examiner, took official charge of the books of the defunct bank after the bank examiner took charge of the bank deposits were received. From Feb. 5 to March 20 he did not know what was done about discounts, but did know that depositors were allowed to check out their deposits if they saw fit. After the committee had asked all the questions they wished Assistant Bank Examiner Jones said:

Lacey Was Well Posted.

"There is another thing which I wish to state. Upon Feb. 13 Controller Lacey was in this city. There was a reception held at the Hotel Lafayette which he attended. After it was over Bank Examiner Drew brought Controller Lacey over to the Keystone bank, and I showed him the books and explained to him the condition of affairs as we then knew them to exist. I explained the padding of the New York Banking exchange accounts, and I informed him of the false bills which had been found. The difference found in the ledger and the stock and bond accounts for which the Lucas estate was held responsible at that time was thoroughly explained to him. Controller Lacey understood at that time all about the Lucas defalcation, which at that time was understood to be $210,000. These facts were considered, and Controller Lacey called the Sea Girt and Spring Lake property worth $700,000 instead of $500,000."

It Caused a Sensation.

This statement of Mr. Jones caused a great sensation, as Controller Lacey's visit to the bank had been kept a close secret, and Bank Examiner Drew has never, under the severe cross-examination he has been subjected to, allowed himself to give the slightest intimation of it. Mr. Jones also stated that as an expert he did not believe it was possible to tell by the books of the Keystone bank how much of the deficit in the Keystone bank occurred before John C. Lucas' death and how much had occurred since.

General Louis Wagner's Testimony.

Ex-Director of Public Works Louis Wagner, who was asked to become president of the Keystone bank at the time it was proposed to reorganize it, testified that his attention was first called to the matter upon his asking City Treasurer Bardsley to mention him for the receivership. The day after his conversation with Bardsley, which was on April 2, he received a letter from Examiner Drew asking him to call at the bank, and upon doing so Mr. Drew asked him how he would like to be made president. He considered the matter for ten days, and then declined. He said that he was told the capital had all been sunk, but that Controller Lacey was willing to allow $200,000 for the good will of the bank and $200,000 would be subscribed. At that time they showed bills receivable for $800,000 and $200,000 more for about the same amount. The bills receivable which he examined he considered worth about sixty cents on the dollar, and the Sea Girt property at a valuation of $500,000. He was informed, he learned was worth about fifty cents on the dollar. Mr. Drew told him of the overissue of stock, but said that it had been called in. At that time he considered it would take a million dollars to reorganize the bank.

General Wagner, in concluding his testimony, said: "I was satisfied at the time that something was wrong, but neither Bardsley nor Young would tell me what it was. I told Mr. Drew the matter arose through his asking City Treasurer Bardsley to mention him for the receivership. The day after his conversation with Bardsley, which was on April 2, I received a letter from Examiner Drew asking him to call at the bank, and upon doing so Mr. Drew asked him how he would like to be made president. I considered the matter for ten days, and then declined. He said that he was told the capital had all been sunk, but that Controller Lacey was willing to allow $200,000 for the good will of the bank and $200,000 would be subscribed. At that time they showed bills receivable for $800,000 and $200,000 more for about the same amount. The bills receivable which he examined he considered worth about sixty cents on the dollar, and the Sea Girt property at a valuation of $500,000. He was informed, he learned was worth about fifty cents on the dollar. Mr. Drew told him of the overissue of stock, but said that it had been called in. At that time he considered it would take a million dollars to reorganize the bank.

Another Big Shortage of Bardsley.

Several other witnesses were examined, including Samuel B. Rowley, the president of the Hero Fruit Glass Jar company, and the father-in-law of Cashier Kennedy, of the Spring Garden bank. The committee tried to elicit from him the admission that some of Bardsley's money went into the concern, but was unsuccessful. Before the committee adjourned to go into executive session Mayor Stuart's private secretary, Louis Bettler, arrived with a message to the members of the committee. It contained the report of the experts who are now investigating the accounts of John Bardsley and created another sensation. The experts reported that they have discovered overissues of City Treasurer Bardsley and that it amounted to $400,000.

This is in addition to all sums hitherto reported. The missing $400,000 is money which it was first said had gone over to John Bardsley as city treasurer as the share of Philadelphia school fund to be applied to educational purposes. The experts report that the money was paid over to Bardsley, but that it was never turned over to the city.

This is a loss to the city which, added to the loss money locked up in the two broken banks, will aggregate a total loss to the city of $1,000,000 and to the state of $1,250,000—in all $2,250,000 so far found.

A Victory for Pattison.

The supreme court has decided that Wright, not Oellers, is entitled to succeed Bardsley as city treasurer of Philadelphia. This is a victory for Governor Pattison.

What Drew Says.

Bank Examiner Drew was seen in regard to the statement attributed to him by General Wagner that Assistant Secretary Nettleton was a large borrower of the Spring Garden bank. Mr. Drew at first said that the statement was absolutely false, but finally qualified this denial by saying that he had no recollection of having said anything on the subject. He was then asked if it was true that General Nettleton was a borrower at the bank. He said that he could not answer that question, as he was not permitted to do so.

Nettleton Answers the Insinuation.

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The attention of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton was called to a statement made before the Bardsley investigating committee by General Wagner to the effect that Bank Examiner Drew had told him that General Nettleton was a borrower at the Spring Garden National bank, and that he had warmly recommended his intimate friend, Nelson F. Evans, as a suitable person for director of the Keystone National bank. General Nettleton said he had known Mr. Evans intimately for twenty years. He had mentioned Mr. Evans' name to Mr. Drew with a view to his being a capable and suitable person to be appointed receiver of the Keystone bank, but when he did so the Spring Garden bank not only had not failed, but no one had the least suspicion or doubt as to its solvency. Hence there can be nothing in the charge that he recommended Mr. Evans' appointment because he had himself borrowed money from the Spring Garden bank.

An Arrest at Trenton.

TRENTON, June 13.—H. H. Yard, a speculator, who has been wanted in Philadelphia to explain the relation of City Treasurer Bardsley to the late Keystone bank of Philadelphia, has been arrested here. The warrant was brought up from Philadelphia and the affidavit was made by Taylor Evans, one of the examining accountants that have been at work on the books. Yard is charged with conspiring to cheat and defraud the city of Philadelphia out of $200,000. Yard waived a hearing and was released on $10,000 bail pending the arrival of a requisition from the governor of Pennsylvania.

EXPELLED FROM THE ARMY.

Sir William Gordon Cumming Compelled to Walk the Plank.

LONDON, June 13.—The Official Gazette under date of June 12 announces that the name of Sir William Gordon Cumming has been erased from the list of officers in the army, as her majesty has no further connection with his services.

The English newspapers are filled with gossip on the subject of the baccarat scandal. There is a notable absence of criticism of the prince of Wales. Established church, which presents a marked contrast in this respect to the Nonconformists, every one of whom is outspoken in denunciation. Mr. Gladstone has made a personal appeal to at least one prominent Liberal to keep the party aloof as a party from hostile action toward the prince. Mr. Gladstone and the Prince of Wales have long been excellent friends, and they are well known to agree on certain political questions, regarding which the queen is known to entertain very different sentiments. The prince is said to have given Mr. Gladstone to understand at a recent dinner that he appreciated his loyal condolence, and to a certain extent his esteem. At this trying moment Mr. Gladstone shows his faith in the prince and his loyalty to the monarchy by restraining the Liberal party from organized antagonism to the heir to the throne. The radicals will, therefore, have to carry on the assault.

In Berlin, the conduct of the prince is the one topic in army circles, and the opinion universally expressed is that he erred disgracefully in his treatment of Sir Cumming case. The influence of the kaiser, however, is sufficient to prevent any severe criticism of his uncle, especially at a time when the kaiser is about to visit England.

Canada Mourns the Disgrace.

TORONTO, June 13.—Rev. Dr. Douglass, of Montreal, visited the Toronto Methodist conference yesterday. In the course of a fervid address Dr. Douglass said: "England's noble, self sacrificing queen mourns today over the ghastly specter of George IV rising from beneath the shadow of our great throne and the very heir of the proudest empire the world has ever witnessed bowing to the degradation of gambling. The awful spectacle of the heir to the throne publicly acknowledging his complicity in the transaction will do more to weaken the throne than anything which has happened in years." The Rev. Dr. Potts, of Toronto, said: "Often I have burned with indignation at the degradation heaped upon members of our royal family by irresponsible American newspaper correspondents, but the day has come when we must all bow our heads in shame for what has been established in the courts of the land."

Chinese Attack Christian Missions.

LONDON, June 13.—Dispatches from Shanghai announce that fresh attacks are continually being made upon the Christian missions in the interior. In one case troops sent by the Chinese government to quell the disturbance joined the rioters. At Takatang, where the lady missionaries fled for safety, serious rioting occurred. The ladies have arrived at Kiu-Kiang, a treaty port on the Yang-tse-Kiang river. Reports have also been received which represent great excitement as prevailing among the inhabitants about Lake Poyang, province of Kiang-Se, where several missions have been burned.

A Juvenile Murderer.

SOMERVILLE, Me., June 13.—Charles R. Hisler, aged 15, threw a knife with full force at Selden C. Hisler, during a boyish quarrel, and inflicted injuries which caused Selden's death in a few minutes. Charles was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. The victim was half uncle to his assailant.

CONSPIRACY IS CHARGED

An Alleged Plot in the Stewart Will Case.

A SYNDICATE AT WORK ON SHARES.

Henry Hilton Makes Strong Charges Against Attorneys Benjamin F. Butler and William H. Scner—The Defendant in the Case Is Said to Be on Both Sides.

NEW YORK, June 13.—A startling story was developed in the United States circuit court in connection with the never ending Stewart will case. Ex-Judge Horace Russell, counsel for Henry Hilton, made a startling revelation in the case of Sarah Branagh against William P. Smith, Mrs. A. T. Stewart's former coachman. It was for an order permitting Charles J. Clinch and Henry Hilton, as executors of the will of the late Cornelia H. Stewart, to intervene in the action, and requiring them to be made parties defendant thereto on the following grounds:

A Charge of Conspiracy.

That they are interested in the subject of the action, and that the same is promoted and maintained not in the interest of justice or to establish legal rights, but by a corrupt collusion and conspiracy to defeat and beat Henry Hilton in an action to which he is not a party with the purpose and object of inducing him to buy his peace against such defamations and libels, and for the purpose of casting an apparent cloud upon the title of property devised to Cornelia M. Stewart, deceased, by her husband in his will; and on the ground that it is believed that the defendant William P. Smith, to further defend against the action or against the appeal from the judgment therein, is in fact but also he is in corrupt collusion and conspiracy with the plaintiff's attorney and counsel, and with other persons to promote and maintain the action against himself.

Sold Himself to a Syndicate.

In other words, the counsel for the ex executors claim that the defendant, William F. Smith, is engaged in a pretended litigation, and has virtually sold himself to a syndicate which is back of the claimants and whose purpose is to get possession of the Stewart estate. General B. F. Butler is counsel for the plaintiff, but he made no appearance until late in the afternoon after the order had therefore granted by default. When General Butler and William H. Secor went to court later and found that the case had already been disposed of they said they were glad Hilton and Clinch were hereafter to be made defendants to any suits that were brought.

What General Butler Says.

General Butler expressed the hope that he would live long enough to see the end of the Stewart will case, but he thought that improbable. He denied that he had been retained by the executors in the matter of his fees. The papers also charge that Smith asked ex-Judge Russell to defend the case for him, but when he appointed conference Smith refused to meet them. He was constantly in company with the plaintiff's attorney, William H. Secor, while Judge Russell was not present, and also in constant companionship of the alleged Scotch and Irish heirs who were interested in the action against him. The contention, therefore, is that Smith, as a genuine heir to the extent of $50,000, by allowing himself to be beaten by one of claimants, would enable the "syndicate" to get control of the millions of the Stewart art will by threats of similar suits that they will buy their peace at a high figure.

The Greek Author's Story.

Ex-Judge Russell tells of an interview which took place between himself and Demetrius T. Timayenis, the Greek author. Timayenis went to his office last December and told him of "Judge Hilton's great conspiracy going on against the Stewart estate. I had desk room in the office of William H. Secor, and have seen Scudder and Bigelow in there, and once Ben Butler. They're plotting all the time. They have old Smith, too. I heard them say Smith would have 50 per cent. of what they got out of it, and I saw them give him a roll of bills on account—$800, I think." Timayenis promised to make affidavit to what he knew of Judge Hilton's doings, but when he called for the affidavit he found it had been asked to take shares in the "syndicate."

Shares in the Syndicate.

An affidavit made by Jacob Dreicer, of 118 East Sixty-fourth street, declares that he was asked to go into the syndicate to break Stewart's will. "Norman W. Brougham, a Boston lawyer, was treasurer, and Judge Hilton and Ben Butler, Secor and Benjamin Butler 10 per cent. of the proceeds," he declares. According to the affidavits, shares in the syndicate were to be sold at $750, and those who buy were likely to make $60,000 on each share.

LIGHTNING'S DEADLY WORK.

Three Persons Killed by a Bolt at Hammonton, N. J.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Lightning did some terrible work in this vicinity yesterday afternoon, and caused the death of several persons. At Hammonton, N. J., a fierce electrical storm broke, and although it raged only a short time considerable damage was done to property.

Daniel Cross and two of his children were struck dead near their home in that place by lightning. The child caught refuge under a tree. Cross leaves a widow and three children.

Over Port Richmond, which is in the interior of Staten Island, there was a cloudburst. For half an hour the rain fell in torrents and the roads and streets were submerged. It raised but little in other part of Staten Island at the same time.

The Family Were Stunned.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 13.—There was a heavy rainstorm here last evening and many of the streets were overflowed. The summer cottage of Dr. Davis Skinner, of Brooklyn, on Seventh avenue, was struck by a bolt of lightning and the family stunned. The houses of A. T. Lake and A. J. Stegbortner were also damaged by lightning.

Elliott Hid Behind a Woman.

COLUMBUS, O., June 13.—Blanch Wilson, the young woman over whose shoulder and from behind whom W. J. Elliott is alleged to have fired the shots at Osborn, was put on the stand in the murder trial to tell the story of her thrilling experience. She said the defendant shot over her shoulder into the crowd. Two hackmen testified that Elliott fired the first shot.

HE STOLE $572,000.

The Big Defalcation of a Life Insurance Company's Agent.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Julio Menbacher, who with Joaquin Sanchez conducted the West Indian and Spanish American branches of the business of the New York Life Insurance company, has stolen from the company out of about $572,000, which he used in speculation in Wall street.

This money was misappropriated from funds in the possession of Messrs. Sanchez & Menbacher, who were the general agents of the company, so far as the Spanish and South American business was concerned. Immense sums of money passed through the hands of these men. In a single year it was an ordinary thing for them to receive for the company $2,000,000 in premiums. Sanchez & Menbacher have built up a magnificent business, and both were regarded by the company as thoroughly reliable men. Menbacher has fled.

Sir Ambrose Objected in Vain.

NEW YORK, June 13.—Among the arrivals by the White Line steamship Gentlemen were Sir Ambrose Shea, governor of the Bahamas, Lady Shea and their daughter. When the baggage of the distinguished passengers was placed on the dock the customs officers proceeded to examine it, just as they would the baggage of an ordinary passenger. The governor protested against the examination, saying that he was a subject of the queen, occupied a high position in the British government, and that his baggage ought to be passed without examination. The baggage was examined just the same. He comes on a pleasure trip.

John McSloy's Sentence.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 13.—John McSloy who held the position of worthy foreman in the Knights of Labor in this district and was a leader in the late great coke strike, was sentenced here for conspiracy and rioting on the Leisenring works of the H. C. Frick Coke company during the strike to two years in the workhouse.

Two Children Burned.

FOSTORIA, O., June 13.—Fire was discovered in a barn in the rear of the residence of William Hunt, a farmer of John Glascow, and before assistance arrived the two children of the first named gentleman were burned to death. The children were playing with matches.

SHE STRUCK A FINBACK.

The Actæa's Collision with an Enormous Whale.

SHE RIPPED HIM UP THE BACK.

Three of the Great Leviathans Bore Down Upon the Big Pilothoat as if to Attack Her, and One of Them Struck Her with His Tail.

NEW YORK, June 13.—While running eight knots an hour, 250 miles east of Sandy Hook, the New York pilothoat Actæa ran down an enormous finback whale. A great gash was cut in its back by the pilothoat's sharp bow. After striking the Actæa a blow with one of its flukes that fairly made her tremble the whale disappeared. The water all around the boat was bloody. The whale's dead body was seen in the gulf stream last Wednesday from the deck of the Anchor line steamship Caledonia, which reached her pier yesterday.

The Caledonia was in charge of Pilot Keely, who was on the Actæa at the time she struck the whale. He related his experience to Pilot Harry, the owner of the Actæa, and the latter yesterday repeated the story.

He Saw the Whales Coming.

The Actæa, which is one of the largest and fleetest of the New York pilotboats, was, until last March, the schooner yacht Actæa, of Boston. Puffy half an hour before the Actæa struck the finback the man at the wheel saw the huge finback. There were two smaller whales with him, and the trio were traveling at the rate of about ten miles an hour in exactly the opposite direction to that of the pilotboat.

Fearing that if the three whales together struck the boat the result would be serious the wheelman altered the Actæa's course slightly so as to avoid them. He remembered how the pilotboat Alexander M. Lawrence, No. 4, struck a whale two years ago and the boat was fairly lifted out of the water, dropping back again so suddenly that her topmasts went overboard.

The Whales Tacked, Too.

What was the surprise of the Actæa's wheelman, however, after changing the boat's course to discover that the trio of whales had also changed their course so as to meet the boat? The wheelman does not think that the whales had any intention of attacking the boat, but as he told Pilot Keely they probably thought the Actæa some strange kind of fish and they wanted to examine her out of curiosity.

At any rate the whales showed no intention of avoiding the pilotboat. On they rushed, plowing through the choppy sea, occasionally disappearing, but never deviating from the course they had taken when the pilotboat's course was changed. They were bound to meet the Actæa.

She Cut Him Deep.

Just before the whales reached the boat two of them dove and went under the Actæa. The third whale—one of the largest of the finback species—attempted to follow his companions, but he was just a second too late.

The pilotboat's sharp cutwater cut into the back of the whale, and as the finback passed under the stem of the boat the gash was made larger. As the wounded finback finally cleared the boat one of his flukes struck the Actæa on the bluff of the bow. It was a glancing blow, but enough for the whale in his death agony, and the boat was shaken as if she had suddenly struck a rock. The dishes in the pantry tumbled out of their racks and all hands rushed on deck. They were in time to see the whale lashing the water into foam in his death flurry. The Actæa, uninjured, went on its course.

Quarreling Over the Fair.

CHICAGO, June 13.—The World's fair directors will not keep their hands off the foreign end of the exposition, and the national board of control is in a retaliatory mood. The latter body is inclined to reject the foreign commissioners, and is now plastic in its opinion that promoter Handy's place is at home instead of in Europe. At the directors' meeting the appointment of Melville E. Stone as chief of the department of foreign affairs fell through on a tie vote, and Stone at once wrote a letter of withdrawal. The director general's nomination of Walter S. Maxwell as chief of the horticultural department was rejected after a quarrelsome debate, and General M. P. Chipman, of California, was appointed.

The Yale Football Association.

NEW HAVEN, June 13.—The following officers were elected at a meeting of the Yale Football association last night: President, H. H. Wright, Jr., '92; vice president, Frank Barbour, '92; treasurer, A. Lambert, '93; secretary, J. Roby, '93. The gross receipts for the season were $19,282. A gift of $6,000 was made to the new gymnasium and $4,000 for a new building at the Yale field.

Treasurer Moody's Shortage.

GREENFIELD, Mass., June 13.—C. Mason Moody, who has been treasurer of Franklin county for fifteen years, has confessed to having used $16,100 belonging to the county in his private business. His relatives and friends have turned over to his bondsmen sufficient property to secure the county against loss.

Mrs. Crary Gets a Divorce.

BROOKLYN, June 13.—The jury in the divorce suit of Mrs. William F. Crary, daughter of ex-Mayor Howell, of this city, against her husband, decided in the plaintiff's favor. The jury found that Crary had been criminally intimate with his wife's cousin, Miss Wilhelmina Tunstall.

IS SIR JOHN THE MAN?

Belief That Thompson Will Be Called to Succeed Macdonald Today.

OTTAWA, June 13.—Everything indicates that Sir John Thompson, minister of justice in the late ministry, will succeed Sir John Macdonald as premier of Canada. Although the Conservative members are divided in their allegiance, Lord Stanley's choice will not result in any party trouble. Politicians believe that Lord Stanley will have no choice between Sir John Thompson, the Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, a member of the late cabinet, without portfolio, and Sir Charles Tupper.

SIR JOHN THOMPSON.

The latter's political antagonism to the Grand Trunk railway in the recent election campaign and, is, therefore, not regarded as eligible as Sir John Thompson, or Mr. Abbott. On the other hand, Mr. Abbott meets with disfavor in many quarters for his supposed connection with the Canadian Pacific railway.

Under ordinary circumstances Sir John Thompson would be the unanimous choice but for his religion, which gives a slight advantage to Abbott, who regard the spectacle of a Roman Catholic directing affairs of the British empire. It is believed the question will be decided today.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

The rabbis of New York have inaugurated a strong movement for the better observance of the Hebrew day of rest.

Balmaseda's warships shelled the port of Tocopilla, held by the Chilian insurgents, landed a force of men, pillaged the town and carried away all the money they could get.

Sixty-four cadets of the West Point military academy graduated.

A daring highway robber who attacked Miss Jennie Lessburger in Madison avenue, New York, in broad daylight, was captured after a exciting chase.

The Pennsylvania railroad has named the new fast train to Chicago, which began running last Sunday, the "Columbia express," in honor of the World's fair.

The Printers Hissed Atkinson.

BOSTON, June 13.—At the session of the International Typographical union Hon. Edward Atkinson addressed the convention. He warned his hearers that no man should be deprived of his liberty to work as long as he pleased and at whatever wages he pleased without regard to organization. His remarks met with the disapproval of the delegates generally and he was several times hissed.

She Starved Herself to Death.

ASHLAND, Pa., June 13.—Mrs. Daniel Smith, aged sixty, died at her home in Mabel Barry township after a fast of nearly eight weeks. On April 16 her only daughter died, since which time Mrs. Smith has refused to take nourishment of any kind. Excessive grief probably unsettled her mind.

Said Goodby and Shot Himself.

SARATOGA, June 13.—Sherman M. Hoysinger, a hardware merchant of Round Lake, bade his wife goodby, went into a potato field at the rear of the house, served another soldier to his wife, and turning around shot himself dead. The cause is unknown.

Samoans Again Excited.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 13.—The steamer Mariposa, which arrived yesterday, brings advices from Sydney stating that there is considerable dissatisfaction there over the workings of the Berlin treaty, and the natives wish to unseat Malietoa and place Mataafa on the throne.

The Woman's National Alliance.

Senator Peffer at Carlisle.

CARLISLE, Pa., June 13.—Senator Peffer, of Kansas, has arrived in town on a visit to the home of his childhood. He has not been here before in many years. The senator is accompanied by his wife and daughter.

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS' LIBRARY.

Poetical Works Played a Conspicuous Part in This Queen's Collection.

Mary Queen of Scots is probably the only English sixteenth century woman of note who was noted for her love of fine books—and she was less English than French. Mr. Julian Sharman, who lately written, and Mr. Elliot Stock published, an elaborate monograph on the library of this unfortunate queen. Mr. Sharman sums up the early literary influences which were at work in Mary's early life with much tact and wisdom. She was—as our author justly asserted up to a point—when poetry was the serious business of the hour. The rival claims were those of Marot and Ronsard.

Of the greater models Petrarch was the more studied and admired; while so pone-tillous were the canons of literary judgment that it was considered a point of high majesty to countenance Daniel who, in an unguarded mood, had portrayed Hugh Capet as a damned soul and the son of a butcher of Paris. Mary's library was probably the most considerable that was at the time in existence north of the Tweed.

At Edinburgh castle there were, in 1578, 180 books, and at Holyrood palace, in 1566, there were ninety. Poetical works play a conspicuous part, but the witty stories of "Bocas" and the grave "Consolation" of "Boece" perhaps acted upon one another. Books of Hours there were in plenty. But the most interesting volume of all is an oppositionist's Latin Hours, now in Rouen, in which there are very many autograph inscriptions, including English nobility, such as Walsingham, Shrewsbury, Sussex, Nottingham, Essex, Lennox, Bacon and Lady Arabella Stuart.

It also contains some poetry by the queen herself, besides, in her own handwriting, two inscriptions. A ma Marie, R." and "Ce livre est a moi, Marie, Royne, 1554." This book—than which we know of none with so many tragic associations—was packed up in Paris by a gentleman who was attached to the Russian embassy. The prison companion of an unfortunate queen of great beauty and unquestionable intellectual abilities, what great stories might be founded upon this unique book!

Mother Goose.

Mother Goose was no myth, as is commonly supposed, but an actual personage, a Mrs. Goose, who resided in Boston at the beginning of the eighteenth century. One of her daughters was married to a printer named Thomas Fleet. The old lady had an endless stock of old rhymes and jingles in her memory, with which she was wont to delight her grandchildren and all the other little folks of the neighborhood.

Mr. Fleet took it to the idea that it might be worth while to collect these ancient ditties and put them in permanent form for the use of future generations. He therefore brought out a book, of which the earliest edition now known bears the following title: "Songs for the Nursery; or, Mother Goose's Melodies for Children. Printed by T. Fleet, at his printing house, Pudding lane, Boston, 1719. Price, 2 coppers." There is little doubt that this was the first edition at the work, since the old records of Boston give the date of the marriage of Thomas Fleet and Elizabeth Goose as 1715, says the Inter-Ocean.

Four Leaved Clover.

This plant derived its significance from the fact that its four leaves are arranged in the form of a cross. Merely this comparative rarity and its very abnormality (if I may so express it) made it seem noteworthy or remarkable. If a person shall wear a bit of this plant he can defend the possessor of evil spirits. It also brings a good fortune.

With a four leaved clover, a double leaved ash and a green tipped acorn (rush).
You may go before the queen's daughter without asking her leave.

A two leaved clover enables a maid to see her future lover. The four leaved grass (true love, one berry, herb paris, or leopard's bane) is another mystical cross leaved plant concerning which much might be said. The quaint St. Andrew's cross (Asteryem crux-Andreæ) is a very interesting plant of our own country, with crucifix flowers. Strangely enough, it appears to have no folk lore attached to it.

The Curfew Bell.

For many a century there has been rung in the ancient city of Sandwich, the old Cinque port of Kent, the curfew bell, which marked at one period so distinctive a feature of English life. The Church of St. Peter has maintained this custom up to the present day, but some fortune now threatens to extinguish this honored relic of past ages. A Sandwich paper says that rebellions are somewhat strained between the rector and the vicar of St. Peter's, and as the fund from which the latter was paid is now claimed by the churchwarden the sexton is consequently in the dilemma of having a time honored office without any salary. At the Easter vestry his re-election was mooted, and he thought it very unfair, naturally, too, that he should have to work for nothing. He inquired if in the event of his giving up the office the rector would have power to prevent him from carrying out his duties as ringer of the curfew bell, but no one could inform him.

Coudoring the Snail.

The snail is found everywhere, 3,823 species being known, serving in France as an important item of diet and in this country an attractive inhabitant of the fernery. Some of the large tropical snails form nests of leaves, their eggs being as large as a pigeon's. In the winter some of the snails hibernate, or lie dormant until warm weather. A snail of the Philippine Islands has a faculty of throwing off its tail when seized. This is also true of a West Indian variety—stenophus. Africa produces the largest, the shell of the agate snail being eight inches across, but Washington territory, and possibly northern California, produces an albino—a pure white snail, known as helix fidelis, that is perhaps the most striking.

Count Moltke and the Ladies.

A pretty little story was told of Count Moltke and a deputation of ladies who came to congratulate him on his ninetieth birthday. He had received them very amicably, and talked to them for some time in his quiet, pleasant way, when, referring to all the good wishes that had been showered upon him, he said, "I am almost sorry, on noticing all this affection, that I am not a young man again." "How old would you like to be, then?" one of the ladies. "Well," replied the nonagenarian, smiling, "if I could only be eighty once more."

EARTH STARS.

Curious Plants Common in Dry Places in Parts of Australia, Europe and Asia.

Few plants are more curious than certain species of the genus Geaster, or earth star, which are common in dry places throughout the greater part of North America, Europe and Asia.

THE EARTH STAR IN DRY WEATHER.

Since the earth stars are leafless and destitute of the green coloring matter of foliage they belong to the great group of fungi, which includes mushrooms, puffballs, molds and innumerable microscopic forms. All plants from which the coloring matter is absent depend for their nutriment upon a supply of organic material, and it is therefore a puzzle at first sight to know how the island loving earth stars can obtain such food in the localities they frequent.

What we see above ground, however, is not the whole of the plant, but only the fruit, which is developed from a mass of delicate subterranean fibers constituting the plant's vegetative apparatus. By carefully scraping away the earth at the base of a young Geaster these fine white threads may be discovered ramifying in all directions. We must assume that decaying pieces of roots from neighboring grass plants and shrubs, along with the remains of dead leaves and animal debris which become buried in the sand, supply all the food necessary.

The first sign of the fruit is an egg shaped nodule of compact hyphæ. In a comparatively short time this enlarges to the size of a robin's egg, and then is developed a thick outer wall inclosing rather soft contents. In the process of ripening the pulpy interior becomes transformed into an immense number of exceedingly minute spores, each of which may give rise to a new plant like the parent.

The essential difference between the earth stars and the true puff balls is in regard to the rind of the ripe fruit. In the puff balls this is comparatively thin, and consists of an outer and an inner layer, which remain permanently united. The rind of the earth stars comprises likewise an outer and an inner division, but the former—which is comparatively thick—splits into segments, and these ultimately separate from the delicate inner rind, exposing what looks like a little puff ball.

During a period of dryness the earth star is contracted into a ball (Fig. 1), and is blown about over the sand. As soon as the rains bring enough moisture for the germination of its spores, the plant becomes anchored by the expansion of its protecting arms. At the same time this exposes the thin walled spore case and uncovers the mouth, so that every gust of wind will carry away hundreds of its tiny offspring. Some of these are now sure to find a resting place where there is food enough and enough for them to thrive and grow into a mass of hyphæ.

Points on Lubrication.

A heavy bearing at low speed requires a heavy lubricant if it be applied slowly; but if it be applied fast a light, greasy oil will do the work well. In the former case a heavy mineral oil will not fail to do the work as well as any other oil, and at one-third less cost, because other oils of the same body and viscosity would be too sticky to work economically.

A heavy bearing at high speed requires an oil especially viscous, of very high fire test, and a gravity which permits of its spreading quickly into the smallest crevices, while its lubricating qualities are such as will keep bearing cool. A light bearing at low speed needs the lightest possible oil which will do the work. A light bearing of high speed is best lubricated by an oil of high gravity and high fire test, one that will not evaporate, and is entirely free from any acidity either in its manufacture or in the process of refining. The slightest gummy property in an oil of this sort renders it the most expensive article that can be used. The viscosity of an oil of this sort should be in proportion to the work required of it.—Kahne.

A New Arc Lamp.

The Industrial World calls attention to a new arc lamp which has been invented by a Pittsburg man, and which, it is said, has decided advantages over all other lamps. Instead of the carbons being made pencil shaped they are made in the form of wheels, which are placed at right angles to each other. One wheel is larger than the other, and by an automatic arrangement with the lamp they are kept constantly revolving. It is said that the lamp is cheaper and simpler than the old style lamps, while its endurance is greater, the claim being made that the lamp will burn continuously for 500 hours without a renewal of the carbons.

Welding Railroad Rails.

One of the most important uses to which electric welding machines are put, says Science, is welding railroad rails. Owing to the difficulty of maintaining rails in crowded and paved city streets it is an advantage to have the rails as long as possible, thereby reducing the number of joints to be cared for, and during the past a company in Johnstown, N. Y., has been successfully experimenting in electrically welding rails up to 110 pounds per yard. As a result of careful tests it is claimed that a saving of 34 per cent. is effected.

A New Chemical.

The champion word thus far coined, looking at it longitudinally or horizontally, is doubtless quinolineparamethenylbenenylmonoisonitrosoacetone chloride. Most lexicographers will be afraid to tackle it in its entirety. Nicknames should be allowable in chemical and pharmaceutical nomenclature for such mastodonic monstrosities, says Popular Science News.

ALCOHOL AND DIGESTION.

Experiments Showing That Alcohol May Hasten the Digestive Process.

A physician has recently made some experiments on himself, from which, according to The Medical and Surgical Reporter, further knowledge of the effect of alcohol on digestion is obtained, which contrasts strongly with the teetotal lecturer's experiments showing how digestion in a glass vessel is retarded by alcohol. Dr. Eichenberg found that a small dose of strong alcohol—e. g., brandy—shortens the time that food in general, whether animal or vegetable, or a mixture, remains in the stomach by more than half an hour. A similar but not quite so marked an effect is produced by a dose of diluted hydrochloric acid or mustard. Pepper and condurango diminish the time the food remains in the stomach by about a quarter of an hour. Beer and an infusion of rhubarb had no effect.

Relative Strength of Men and Women.

By means of a specially devised instrument a French scientist has carried out some experiments for determining how the average strength of the two sexes compares. The palm of the hand is placed on the instrument, and then the greatest downward pressure which the individual can give is exercised upon it, and the force thus produced is recorded by the usual clockwork device. Fifty robust men, and the same number of healthy women, both belonging to the middle class in society, with ages varying from twenty-five to forty-five years, were tested in this way by the Paris scientist.

The strongest man of the company was able to produce with his right hand a pressure equivalent to eighty-five kilograms (a kilogram is rather more than two pounds), and the weakest to forty kilograms, the average being fifty-six kilograms.

One curious result was arrived at; the short men were all very nearly as strong as the tall men, the average difference between equal groups of two sizes being only three kilograms.

The force of the strongest women of the fifty who were selected amounted to only forty-four kilograms, and that of the weakest to sixteen kilograms, while the average was thirty-three kilograms.

Wrinkles.

Wrinkles are unnecessary, says an authority who finds the secret for preventing them in "widely opened childlike eyes." The act of opening widely the upper lid draws the skin about the lower part of the eye taut and smooth.

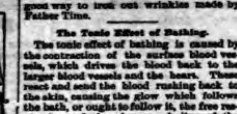
A golden rule to prevent wrinkles: Be not easily nettled; neither be cast down; emulate the sister of charity and be always placid.

Keeping the temples and muscles about the eyes well bathed with almond meal and olive oil, taking care to rub crosswise of the wrinkles, is perhaps the best "slow but sure" remedy in existence.

A silken handkerchief bound together about the brow and temple is an old and good way to iron out wrinkles made by Father Time.

The Toxic Effect of Bathing.

The toxic effect of bathing is caused by the contraction of the surface blood vessels, which drives the blood back to the larger blood vessels and the heart. These react and send the blood rushing back to the skin, causing the glow which follows the bath, or ought to follow it, the free perspiration and the vigorous feeling of the muscular system. The bath should always be followed by friction with the hand or a towel. The amount of toweling with which it should be taken depends entirely on circumstances. It should be often enough to keep the pores open and the skin active, but ought to follow in close order the breathing, and if it is clogged the lungs must do the work, and they will be overburdened. As a rule the more rapidly a bath is taken the better will be its effects.



SOCIAL CUSTOMS.

Useful Points for People in Search of Culture and Polish.

The following, from answers given to correspondents in Harper's Bazar, cover just such points as many people are interested in:

While the use of "for" or "to" before the name addressed upon an envelope is not "distinctly bad form," it is certainly unnecessary, and lessens the elegant appearance of a more simple form of address. It is certainly not nice form to offer the left hand to an acquaintance while the right is of possible use.

The receipt of the card from your summer acquaintance leaves you precisely as if she had given you the card in exchange for yours last summer. If you desire to continue the acquaintance, and are the younger woman, call upon her; if not, wait for her to call upon you.

Of all things be simple, quiet and natural in your manner; cultivate a soft toned voice, and do not gesticulate; speak good English before you attempt French; the latter is an accomplishment, the former a necessity.

An afternoon tea is the most informal of entertainments. You may serve your tea in a special room or all about, as you find most convenient. Serve small napkins with the tea.

A young girl is not supposed to do any entertaining in her own name, unless possibly an informal affair where only other young girls are invited.

Never ask a man twice to call upon you. If he does not accept your first invitation take it for granted that he does not care to do so.

It is better form to ask for a card for your guest, although you may take her to a tea without that formality.

On a reception day or at a tea you should leave your cards in the card tray in the hall on your departure.

A lady should rise to greet a gentlemar or to bid him farewell in her own house.

The proposal to correspond should come from the gentleman.

No call is necessary in acknowledgment of an afternoon tea.

A card left or sent to a tea discharges the obligation.

Strawberry Pudding Sauce.

This is an excellent sauce for a bread pudding: Beat together one large tablespoonful of butter and three-quarters of a cupful of white sugar till it creams. Then add gradually fresh strawberries, mashing them and beating all well together till the sauce is well flavored and a nice pink color.

Ornamental Lamp Shade.

"I change my shade rather often just for the sake of variety," said the owner of a charming shade, "and I like it, too, as I always feel as if I were dressing a doll. The children call it 'Lady Betty,' and I assure you it is quite a character."

The great variety to be found in the pretty, fanciful things dignified with the name of lamp shades enables milady to indulge readily in such a whim.

ORCHID SHADE.

There are square shades and dome shaped shades, shades shirred or plaited, plain shades with bottom ruches and high collars, and shades elaborately lace trimmed. Above all there are the flower shades, of which our cut shows a handsome example in the orchid shade. The plaited covering of these flower shades is made of silk in various colors—red, pale green, yellow, etc., a deep fringe of lace being attached to the rim. The tiger lily, or orchid, which forms the characteristic outside ornament, is made of velvet, delicately tinted and painted, and produces a delightful effect when the lamp is lighted.

One Thing and Another.

Drop a little oil on the creaking door hinge.

Lamp wicks soaked in vinegar for a day or so before placing in the lamps will give a clearer flame.

When lamp burners become clogged boil them in soda water.

To prevent icing for cake from cracking when cut add a tablespoonful of cream to each unbeaten egg; stir all up together, then add sugar until as stiff as can be stirred.

To feed an orange to a sick person cut it in half, crosswise; then, with a spoon, take out the fleshy part, containing the juice, rejecting the seeds.

In putting away winter clothing for the season label all packages on the outside, and keep a handy memorandum book with the contents of each trunk, drawer or chest specified. It will save time and vexation.

By rubbing with a piece of flannel dipped in whiting, the brown discolorations may be removed from cups and porcelain pudding dishes in which custards, tapioca, rice, etc., have been baked.

Don't be economical with your English. Brevity may be the soul of wit, but too many abbreviations are a bore. Send your golden wedding friend a basket of roses; have the bowl gilded and tied with a white ribbon, upon which paint in gold the dates of the wedding and the anniversary.

ON THEIR DEFENSE.

THE SHOCKING STORY OF CRUELTY BY STATE WITNESSES.

Jenny Wiley Tells the Story of Her Life and Claims to Have Tenderly Cared for Pearl Beckman.

The Union county court room was thronged all Saturday afternoon by curious people eager to hear every word of testimony of the trial of Samuel Beckman and Jenny Wiley, formerly of this city. It was a mixed audience of whites and blacks, only a few of the latter seemingly having sympathy for the prisoner.

Most of yesterday was taken up with the State's story, and the testimony of some of the witnesses was a shocking tale of cruelty, especially the narrative of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lewis, colored people who lived near the house occupied by Beckman. They gave the same straight forward testimony that so impressed the hearers at the coroner's inquest, and were not shaken by the rigid cross examinations of the defendant's counsel.

The first witness after the noon adjournment was Mrs. Mary Little, a young colored woman, sister of Beckman. She testified that when Beckman's wife died little Pearl was left in her care and in July last was taken from her by Beckman. The child was then apparently healthy. She saw Pearl again in the Fall, when she claimed that Jenny Wiley had whipped her for not learning her lessons. The next she saw Pearl was at the funeral.

On the cross-examination Mrs. Little testified that she went to Beckman's house in Union, and ate dinner there with Beckman, Jenny and Pearl. Beckman and Pearl was given the same food the others had.

Mrs. Lewis was then examined and testified in detail to the cruelties she alleged she witnessed. Pearl was active and well when Beckman brought her to the house, and until September was treated well. Then the cruelties began, and Mrs. Lewis testified to seeing both Beckman and Wiley frequently beat her, using the leather strap at times, sometimes a switch and often a piece of kindling wood. She would eagerly grab at bits of bread and eat ravenously. Jenny told her that Beckman told her to punish her by starving her.

Joseph Lewis, the husband, related similar stories of the cruelty of the couple. He said he saw Beckman once beat the child for twenty minutes using the strap. The child fell insensible. He said that on the evening of Dec. 15, when he was killing a hog near the house, he saw Jenny Wiley kick Pearl out of the door and off the stoop. He complained to Chief Tenney of the cruelty of the couple and was told to go to a justice in Union township. He neglected to do so until it was too late.

Oliver Little, a youth 19 years of age, brother-in-law of Lewis, corroborated the story of Jenny Wiley kicking Pearl off the stoop.

About half-past three o'clock the State closed, and Mr. Lindsey opened the defense by briefly outlining their case. He said that the medical testimony already showed that Pearl did not die from the effects of beatings. The defense would be a denial, especially of the stories of the Lewises.

Jenny Wiley would not tell how she came to be at the Beckman house. While her living with a colored man was unpopular and repelling to the finer sensibilities of some, he was satisfied that after she had told her story the sympathies of the jurors would go out to her.

Jenny Wiley was then called to the stand. She exhibited some nervousness, but except when speaking of the facts of the child's death she showed no emotions of remorse. For a moment, as she tried to describe the last moments of Pearl's life, tears came to her eyes and she stopped in the story which she was telling with great rapidity.

She said she was 21 years of age. She ran away from her home six years ago and married her music teacher, a Mr. Russell. Her parents took her back twice but she ran away each time, and finally they gave her up, and she had not seen them since. She was in jail three months as a disorderly person, pleading guilty before a lawyer told her to. When released she had no place to go. She met Beckman, who engaged her to take care of his wife. She was with Mrs. Beckman when she died, and remained with Beckman as his housekeeper. They lived a while on Grier avenue. She then told, at great length, how she had cared for Pearl, and denied any ill treatment. She said she frequently chastised the child, but with her hand only. Pearl was sickly always. She thought she had consumption. She was unclean, and she whipped her for it. Her stomach was coupled, and she had eruptions on her like measles. The wound over the eye was caused by a fall while the child was playing. She struck her head on a tub. Pearl on going to bed at night, always said her prayers kneeling with her head in witness' lap.

The witness denied all the statements of the witnesses Lewis and Banks.

It was half-past four when her direct testimony was concluded, and the court adjourned until Monday.

A Fire at Westfield.

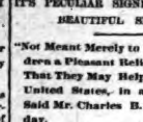
The Troy Steam Laundry at Westfield was destroyed by fire at about four o'clock yesterday morning. The building was a frame structure. The loss will not exceed $2,000. It is partially covered by insurance. The fire started in the drying room.

—Beginning to-night the hardware stores of Mr. A. M. Griffen and J. P. Laire & Co., will close at seven o'clock.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

ITS PECULIAR SIGNIFICANCE AND BEAUTIFUL SERVICE.

"Not Meant Merely to Give the Children a Pleasant Religious Day, But That They May Help, all Over the United States, in a Great Work" Said Mr. Charles B. Mitchell, Sunday.



CHILDREN'S Day has always been observed at the Methodist church by a special service, flowers, music, recitations and speeches.

Hardly one person in fifty perhaps knew the real significance of the day—certainly the children did not—before it was explained during Sunday morning service, by the pastor, Rev. Charles B. Mitchell.

Children's Day is really Educational Fund Day.

"It is the one day of the year, when all the pennies given by the children, and the larger amounts received from the congregations, in all the churches and Sunday schools of the Methodists in the United States, are set aside to be used, carefully and conscientiously, to help forward the education of boys and girls. Three thousand two hundred poor, but earnest boys and girls have in the past few years thus been enabled to receive a thorough college education. All that is needed is their pastors' recommendation. When those benefitted have been two years graduates the money is expected to be repaid. It is then restored to the fund and re-loaned.

By this repaying the young man or woman do not have a feeling of dependence."

The Methodist church Sunday was filled with the Sunday-school scholars, their parents and friends.

The pulpit was beautified with floral decorations, and was occupied by the pastor, the Rev. Charles B. Mitchell, the Sunday-school superintendent, Mr. James B. Jackson and the superintendent of the Monroe avenue chapel, a branch of the present church, Mr. Walter McGee.

A programme of exceptional interest had been prepared.

It consisted of responsive reading, songs, recitations and short speeches.

The Misses Mabel Jenkins and Rita Pond and Masters George E. Hyde and Roland Horne, each recited in a pleasing manner, a short appropriate selection.

Messrs. Jackson and McGee made short addresses to the children. They were followed by the pastor, who explained the "why" of Children's Day and the help the children could give.

A collection was then taken.

A hymn, and the benediction by the pastor closed the service.

Children's Day was appropriately observed in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church. The decorations consisted of flowers and plants which were very neatly arranged. The programme was as follows:

Organ, "Offertoire in C Minor".....Batiste
Doxology and Lord's Prayer.
Psalm 100.....Responsive
Hymn—"Hark, Hark, My Soul".....Choir
Ten Commandments and Psalm XXIII.
Unison
Hymn—"Holy, Holy, Holy."

A BAD FALL.

A Fractured Skull, Resulting From an Unsafe Stoop.

A peculiar accident happened on West Front Saturday evening. Lawrence Sheline in company with a young woman was seated on a portico in the rear of the residence of Mrs. Taylor. The porch was built directly over a sub-cellar.

Suddenly and without warning the stoop and the two persons were participated into the cellar way.

In falling young Sheline struck his head against the stone steps and fractured his skull.

He was unconscious when picked up. Dr. Endicott was summoned and after hastily dressing the wounds the young man was removed to his home on Pearl street, North Plainfield.

He remained unconscious all of Saturday evening, but to-day he is much better and the physician has strong hopes of his recovery.

New Stone Station for Westfield.

[Special to the Union County Standard.]

New York, June 13, 1891—Plans for an elegant stone station for Westfield have been completed and bids for construction are being received by the architects from contractors. It is to be much larger than the present structure. Bergen Point is also to have a handsome new stone station.

Overcome by the Heat.

Eugene Brennan, a carpenter employed on a house in the course of construction at Washingtonville, was overcome by the heat Saturday afternoon and almost fell from the top of the building where he was at work at the time.

A LIFE SENTENCE.

AN AGED THIEF WILL LIKELY END HIS DAYS IN PRISON.

John Tucker's Sentence Postponed for One Week.—Other Matters in Special Sessions Saturday.

It was expected that John Tucker, who was convicted of embezzlement on complaint of the Singer Manufacturing Company, would be sentenced Saturday morning, in the Union County Court, and there was an increased attendence at the court of special sessions.

Tucker was present, accompanied by his bondsman, Mr. Charles Ulrich, who has been his constant friend through all of his trouble. There were also other friends, and others who attended wholly through curiosity.

When court convened, Prosecutor Marsh moved for the sentence of Tucker, stating that Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, counsel for the prisoner, desired a postponement of the judgment, to which the State had no objection.

Mr. Voorhees made the request, and the court granted a postponement of the sentence until Saturday of next week. It is said Mr. Voorhees is considering making an application for a new trial.

Alexander Williams, a colored man, who had been indicted for the larceny of a horse and carriage, was arraigned. Through the advise of his counsel, he had pleaded guilty to one count in the indictment charging him with embezzlement. Technically he seemed to be guilty of that offense.

Prosecutor Marsh stated that he had learned from the complaining witness that Williams had, two or three weeks before the alleged theft, been giving the authority to sell the horse and wagon. He took them from a public stable and sold them in Newark, returning to Newark and making no concealment of what he had done.

Mr. Clarence Ward, counsel for Williams, corrobrated what had been said of him, and said he had a good reputation in Rahway.

Judge said from the statements made by counsel it was clear that the prisoner was not guilty of larceny, and therefore suspended sentence. Williams had been in the county jail for four months.

Joseph Connors, a boy convicted of the larceny of chickens, was sentenced to the county jail for three months.

Harry Wilson, the tramp who stole the bridle from J. C. Ogden's stable, was next sentenced to the county jail for six months. He said he was never convicted of a crime before, and that he was under the influence of drink at the time.

PRACTICALLY A LIFE SENTENCE.

Louis Wahl and Otis Arnold, the men arrested for the numerous chicken thefts in Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties, were next arranged. Wahl is an old man, and the police say has been a thief all his life. He was once before in State prison and was once arrested for a similar crime to that charged against him Saturday by Warden Dodd when he was chief of the Plainfield police.

Arnold is a young man who was led into the crimes by Wahl. Much sympathy has been aroused for him. He was married a month before his arrest, and his young wife knew nothing of his crimes until then. Her grief is said to be very pitiable. Both men pleaded guilty to four charges of larceny. Arnold could scarcely speak or stand so great is his remorse.

In passing sentence on Wahl Judge McCormick commented upon his criminal course in a scathing manner. On the first indictment the sentence was to six years in the state prison, and on the second five years to begin at the expiration of the first term, making fifteen years. On the other indictments the sentence was five years each, the terms to run concurrent with the first. Wahl is nearly sixty years of age, and the sentence is practically for life.

In the case of young Arnold, the judge said the court had concluded to be very lenient, believing that he had been induced to commit crime by his companion. He is sentenced to the county jail for six months.

The genial and popular secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, Mr. J. Harry Maunigo, was most agreeably surprised Saturday evening by being presented with a safety bicycle. A number of his friends, appreciating his need of a labor saver in the pedestrian line, quietly started a subscription and enjoyed his evident surprise and delight when the result of the subscription was presented.

BASE BALL.

THE LOCAL CLUB PLAYED A SOMERVILLE CLUB SATURDAY.

The Crescents Meet Their Usual Defeat from the West Ends.—A Disappointed Crowd of Plainfielders

Five or six hundred Plainfielders went to Somerville Saturday to witness what they thought would be one of the best games of ball that they had seen this season.

Before the game started the Plainfielders were jubilant. They had confidence in the team and many bets were offered that were not taken. "If we can only beat them on their own grounds," said one base ball "fanatic." The West Ends were not saying a word, they, as the manager termed it, were out for "blood."

Promptly at 3.30 o'clock the umpire, whose name is Fass, called the game. The Crescents took the field. The excitement was intense. The Plainfield contingent cheered, but alas! the management had secured a new pitcher. His name is Taylor. The West End team had heard of him. He was discussed in club house on the previous evening. It was rumored that if a man succeeded in reaching first base he would have no trouble in getting to third. It proved to be a fact, his delivery was too slow, consequently the West Ends made three runs in the first inning. The Plainfielders waited with baited breath. "Three of our best batters are to come up," remarked one 'crank.' "Wait until McIndoe hits the ball," said another.

Martin and Luffberry went to the bat and were retired. "Mac" followed. "Over the fence," "Mac" yelled a "crank." Harkins pitched and "Mac" struck, but unfortunately the bat broke, consequently the ball only went as far as second base. Farrell stopped it and "Mac" was thrown out at first.

The second inning, up to the ninth, were repetitions of the first, then it was left for McIndoe to make a run. Hamnill followed, thus scoring two for the Crescents, but the black-board registered goose eggs for the West Ends.

The umpire was very unsatisfactory. His decisions were very bad. It looked as though he was going to give the game to the West Ends at all hazards. There was no necessity for it. The Crescents were beaten and that was all there is to it. One of the Plainfielders said: "We are playing against ten men instead of nine, and the umpire is the best man on the team."

In the sixth inning Hamnill was put in the box, and had he pitched the whole game the result would undoubtedly have been different.

In the fifth inning, Kennedy, the catcher for the West Ends, was disabled by being struck with a fowl tip. It was at first thought that his collar-bone was fractured, but he pluckily continued catching the game. Well, the Crescents were defeated and the Plainfield people will be compelled to await another chance, which will occur July 18th.

CORRESPONDENCE.

(In this column expressions of opinion from readers of THE NEWS are cordially welcomed, even if contrary to the views of the editor. Writers are requested to be as brief and direct as possible, however, and must always accompany their names not necessarily for publication.)

Wants More Irish In It.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The humiliating defeat of the Crescent as the result of the first of the series of six games with the West Ends is sufficient evidence that the players are not in form to-day, are not ball players of the proper mould.

The management of the Crescents is of a peculiar set. Their aim is to keep from the score cards the names of any that have a "mellean" sound, and this is much as say other reasons accounts for their defeat, wherever they meet a team of what can be termed ball players. It is with these facts before me that I take the liberty of administering a rebuke for their ignorance. As well as to offer a little as advice on the principles of base ball management.

Base ball is the national game. It is a game that is a satisfaction to people of almost every temperament. It is therefore, the duty of the club of a cosmopolitan populace. By looking over the scores in the daily papers we find the names indicating that their owners are born of Irish parents, or are Irish themselves.

For instance in last Friday's game the New Yorks had Tiernan, Ewing, Connor and Whitney. The Phillies had Wilmot, Carroll and others. The Cincinnati Latham, McPhee, Marr, Riley and Slattery, and on through a long list showing that experienced managers consider them indispensable to a strong team.

The managements of the Crescents seem to think different. As before stated they have studiously avoided with one or two exceptions any engagement of any whose name may designate them Irish-American.

Not so with the West Ends their players are properly sandwiched; they are Irish-Yankee, a national game in such a country as this.

It is such unfairness, and such a belligerant spirit, that causes so much feeling against the Crescent management. The no-Irish policy is not popular. It certainly isn't successful. These thoughts are suggested to an Irish-American who attends the national game on the Crescent grounds, and pays his admission fee which they freely take without questioning his ancestors. He looks at a miserable game, frauded with humiliations, and wonders how long this is going to last. AN IRISH-AMERICAN.

No Doubt.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Would it not be well for the Y. M. C. A. to buy the Hotel next place on its ground that they can have a very superior property and dispose of enough of it to make all they require cost them nothing.

A CITIZEN.

AN ENTERPRISING FOREMAN.

In a Shanty in the Woods he Sells His Men a Peculiar Liquor.

Since early in the Spring a gang of workmen in the employ of contractor Mitchell have been engaged in grading a large tract of unimproved land on Netherwood Heights, cutting down and grading the property into building lots, the particulars were given in THE NEWS some time ago. They are located in close proximity to the fashionable part of Netherwood Heights. Greatly to the disgust of the residents of that part of Plainfield, the Italians built huts of stone and logs and mud in the woods where they herded promiscuously. During the past few months however, the respectable citizens have another cause of complaint in the disorderly actions of the laborers.

An investigation revealed that some one was furnishing liquor to the men during working hours. There was no saloon, saloon or farm within two miles excepting the one at Hotel Netherwood. Policeman Lynch, in roaming the woods to one side of the road, came suddenly upon a little shanty in which was a well equipped bar. A little watching disclosed the fact that the proprietor was Felix Starpon, Uhal's foreman.

Starpon was arrested Thursday afternoon by Policeman Chadwick and was taken before City Judge Codington. He entered a plea of not guilty. Michael Uhal, Thomas Hamnill, Policeman, and he was released to resume his work.

The liquor, which with the bar property, was confiscated, is a queer tasting decoction, very intoxicating. It is said to be a cheap grade of liquor. It is alleged that Starpon manufactured the stuff himself, and the police are now looking for his still. A wholesale liquor dealer said it could not be bought anywhere, and that it must have been made in some quiet out of the way place.

20¢ IN AT THE FINISH.

The Most Successful "Century Run" Ever Held.

A number of weary and sun-burned wheelmen alighted from the Philadelphia train at Commodore Vaux evening. They were the survivors of the Philadelphia Century run. Chairman Fuller of the Brooklyn Club says the run was the most successful ever held. Four hundred and fifty wheelmen, including seventy ladies, left Newark early Saturday morning. The roads to Plainfield were in perfect condition. From Plainfield to Somerville, and on to Trenton the roads were covered with dust, from two inches to a foot deep. The first detachment of the run reached Philadelphia at 7.30 o'clock. F. Silvers of the Quaker City Wheelmen was the first man in. Graham of Brooklyn, Dalton of Pittsburgh, Hendry of Philadelphia all met with slight accidents.

Fully one hundred members of Philadelphia had the greatest number of men in finish. Out of the 450 starters 260 men rode in Philadelphia. Mr. Dalton said a number of other ladies rode the full distance.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

There is one comfort the literary people of the United States can take to themselves. Nobody in England now living can write short stories equal to those of the Yankee girl Mary Wilkins.

A magazine writer has discovered an extraordinary book of medicinal recipes of 300 years ago. The prescriptions include the strangest and most disgusting preparations that ignorance and superstition could devise in the darkest ages of civilization. One of these remarkable doses has for an ingredient "a pack of earth-worms ripped up and salted," another is compound partly of "cat's claws burned to a powder." The name of one of the remedies is "clamable hum." Profoundly ridiculous all this, yet, for the life of him, one cannot dismiss the suggestion somehow that 300 years from now our sovereign remedies and drug prescriptions may seem as absurd and loathsome as these now do to us.

Rapid Transit in New York.

The plan finally chosen for rapid transit from one end of New York to the other will undoubtedly serve to give suggestions for other cities whose streets are so crowded that travel through them is a perpetual grievance and a risk to life and limb besides. The rapid transit commission in New York labored faithfully and conscientiously for months over the matter, and finally decided that a deep tunnel was the only solution.

The tunnel must be so deep below the surface as not to interfere with either sewers, cellars, gas mains or electric light and telegraph wires. In the thickly settled parts of the city this would mean a tunnel from twenty to sixty feet under ground, but with the improved machinery for boring by hydraulic pressure the digging of the tunnel will be not so serious a matter as it might appear.

The tunnel recommended will be twenty miles long, to extend from Yonkers to the Battery, trains making the distance forty-five minutes. To afford needed facility for both express and way trains there would necessarily be either a two story tunnel with double tracks one above the other, or a single tunnel wide enough to allow four tracks to be laid. The estimated cost is $40,000,000. Passengers will enter and be discharged through elevators. One of the requirements is that the motor power shall be produced by some agency that will not require combustion, be it electricity or something else. In devising this model our great American inventors will have opportunity to make both money and glory. Where practicable the tunnel will run under the blocks instead of under streets. One such tunnel as this will carry a million passengers a day, and that much carrying capacity is already required in New York.

Ingalls the Moses.

"Ingalls the Sybil," "Ingalls as Cassandra," is what the papers have been calling the eloquent Kansas ex-senator since his letter in which were these words: "The campaign of 1892 will be waged upon economic and practical questions, not upon memories and emotions. The Republicanism of the future must be just itself to the changed conditions of American life or it will perish."

Mr. Ingalls is certainly right in one respect. The economic questions of the day are those which are here and now pressing with terrific squeezing force upon many members of all the parties. The crops are more promising than they have been in years in most parts of the country, yet this seems no cheer to at least per cent. of the voters of America, those who constitute the rural population. Prices will be forced down for them so low, and freights will be put so high that they will not get returns from their labor sufficient to more than keep soul and body together, they say. In California particularly the fruit crop is surpassingly rich and varied. "But we who grow it get nothing for it. Already the railroad magnanimators are inquiring how much freight the California fruit crop will carry. They pile on as all they dare, just so as to keep the farmer's mouth shut, and so that we may not stop raising fruit altogether, in despair. They squeeze us into the earth." On the other hand, not many railroads are paying large dividends just now.

Irrespective of party, can the brilliant and far seeing Kansan find any remedy for this state of things? It is something which concerns all the people of the United States, irrespective of political affiliations. Why should not Mr. Ingalls be the Moses to lead our agricultural population to prosperity and content? There certainly is a solution to the questions that distress them. No evil ever yet existed for which there was not a remedy. The man or the party who shall find the adjustment of this agricultural difficulty, so that both farmers and those who transport and deliver their product shall have prosperity and justice, that man or that party will have lease of power for a generation. But this is plain: The farmers certainly have grievances, and these must be met and remedied by somebody.

DROWNED IN THE RIVER

Sixty People Killed in a Switzerland Horror.

THE PULPIT ASSAILS THE PRINCE.

The Dissenting Ministers Denounce His Gambling Proclivities, and Every Day the Storm of Indignation Grows Greater Throughout the United Kingdom.

BERLIN, June 15.—Another railway horror has been added to the long list. This time the scene of the calamity is laid in Switzerland and the loss of life is estimated at at least sixty. A railway bridge across the Meggchen, a small affluent of the Rhine, at Stein, in the canton of Basel, not far from Germany, gave way Sunday under the weight of an excursion train crowded with throngs of people who were on their way to a musical fete.

At Least Sixty Killed.

Two engines and the first car with all its passengers first plunged into the river, while cars remained suspended over the stream. All the inmates were killed and every compound partly set afire. The wood of one of the remedies is "clamable hum." Profoundly ridiculous all this, yet, for the life of him, one cannot dismiss the suggestion somehow that 300 years from now our sovereign remedies and drug prescriptions may seem as absurd and loathsome as these now do to us.

Injured.

Many people were crushed in the wrecked cars that hung suspended over the stream. Many others plunged down into the abyss. A conservative estimate of the injured places the number at a hundred.

The fearful calamity has caused a terrible shock in the interior of South Germany. Rescuers hastened to the scene, and the injured were taken care of.

The Prince Attacked from the Pulpit.

LONDON, June 15.—The allusions to the scandalous conduct of the Prince of Wales Sunday by Nonconformist preachers left no doubt, if any was entertained, of the attitude of the dissenting clergy on the subject of royalty and baccarat. The manner in which those allusions were received by the congregations showed with emphasis how the people, who are the bone and sinew of England, feel as to the confessed violation of law by the future king. The energy of the police in prosecuting petty gambling by the poor has added strongly to the public feeling, and everywhere among the toiling masses the determination is heard that the law shall be enforced against the gamblers of Tranby Croft.

Will Home Secretary Matthews Act?

Heretofore Home Secretary Matthews has disclaimed all knowledge of the Tranby Croft affair. This he can do no longer, as the evidence in court, including the testimony of the Prince of Wales himself, has removed any ground for ignorance or denial. Instead of being allayed, the sentiment on the subject of the scandal is growing. When it was mentioned in the presence of the labor agitator, Tom Mann, that the Earl of Coventry would be removed from office of Master of the Buckhounds, Mann said:

"If Coventry is unfit to be Master of Hounds because he is a gambler, is the Prince of Wales fit to be master of a kingdom?"

The Aristocracy Disgusted, Too.

This is but an illustration of the general sentiment among all below the rank of the aristocracy, and manifestations of disquiet and disgust prevail, if anything is to be judged from the talk at the clubs. A Scottish writer, calling attention to Sir William Gordon Cumming's gallant army service, declares that his treatment is in a line with the general ingratitude of King and Court to the Scottish soldiers, that, although the Scotch are but a tenth of the total British army, they have always of recent years, as far back as the Indian mutiny, had the honor of leading the van of the fight, as witness Tel-el-Kebir and Majuba Hill, and even the only hero of the Manipur campaign, Lieutenant Douglas Grant, being a Scotchman.

Scotland Stands by Cumming.

The writer thinks that the prince has done much to alienate the Scottish loyalty which his mother had done a great deal to cement. The sympathy for Gordon Cumming in Scotland is very strong, and the Forres reception gave voice to a feeling not confined to the Highlands.

It is given out from the Prince of Wales' set that he has avoided reading the newspapers since the Tranby Croft trial and is in ignorance of all the harsh things said about him and of the hubbub the scandal has caused. This, however, is known to be nonsense. The Prince of Wales is a close reader of the newspapers, foreign and domestic, and what he does not see, his secretary, Sir Francis Knollys, sees for him, faithfully communicating all matters of interest. Besides hundreds of letters have been sent to the prince, some of them admonishing, and others in terms of severe condemnation and all classes, of course, have at least reached his private secretary.

The City of Richmond Aflame.

QUEENSTOWN, June 15.—The steamship Servia, from New York, has just arrived with news of a serious accident to the steamer City of Richmond. At midnight on Thursday the Servia sighted the City of Richmond flying signals of distress. The cargo of the City of Richmond was on fire. The Servia steamed slowly alongside the City of Richmond until Brow Head was sighted.

The Floor Was Hot.

The fire had been discovered at midnight Tuesday when a cabin passenger noticed that the floor of his stateroom was hot. The crew was promptly aroused and smoke was found to be issuing from the floorboard.

The smell indicated that cotton was burning. Steam and water were injected into the hold, and it was supposed that the fire was quenched.

About 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning three burning bales of cotton were found by the steamship Servia, of the steamship Counsellor, of New Orleans, stood by until the Servia came. The City of Richmond then proceeded to Liverpool. Beyond a scare the passengers suffered no loss.

The Captain Fell Dead.

When the steamship Counsellor came alongside the City of Richmond, the captain of the Counsellor dropped dead on the deck, and the chief officer took command and remained by the Richmond. Toward midnight on Thursday night the Servia was seen bearing down and agreed to stay by the Richmond. Both New York steamers then proceeded at full speed, leaving the Counsellor astern. Subsequently the City of Paris was sighted and put off a boat to the scene. The three captains of the Servia, City of Richmond and City of Paris then had a conference, and it was agreed that the City of Paris should proceed and that the Servia should convoy the Richmond.

A BIG ABATTOIR BURNED.

Nearly Half a Million Dollars' Worth of Beef Consumed at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—The main building of the abattoir, west side of the Schuylkill river, opposite Arch street, was completely destroyed by fire Sunday morning, and at 9 o'clock the surrounding buildings had ignited, the firemen devoting their attention to these, abandoning the main structure to its fate. The origin of the fire is somewhat of a mystery. Three alarms were sent in and soon nearly all the engines in the city were at the scene of conflagration. There were several explosions from the ammonia compounds used in the refrigerator building, which keeps the temperature below the freezing point the year round. In this storeroom were 2,000 carcasses of beef, which were entirely consumed.

Charles Hoeck, a curiosity seeker, was hit on the head with a flying timber, and received injuries from which he will probably die. It is understood that the total loss, including machines, building, sheds, refrigerating apparatus and dressed beef, amounts to nearly $500,000. The buildings are said to be fully insured.

THREE LOST THEIR LIVES.

A Fatal Tenement House Fire in New York.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Three persons, members of one family, were burned to death early Sunday morning in a tenement house fire on upper Third avenue. Those who lost their lives were Philip Brady, aged fifty-five; Catharine Brady, his wife, aged forty, and their thirteen-year-old son, Philip Brady, Jr.

The fire broke out at 5:30 in the morning and caught the tenants asleep. The Brady family lived on the fifth floor and from the conditions in which their bodies were found it was evident that they were not awakened until the fire had them surrounded. The bodies were fearfully burned and beyond recognition. Many others of the tenants had narrow escapes. The pecuniary loss to building and contents is about $12,000.

The World's Student Conference.

EAST NORTHFIELD, Mass., June 15.—The World's Student conference held here annually at the invitation of Mr. D. L. Moody, will begin on June 28 and close July 3. The attendance promises to be larger and more representative than ever. The European universities will send fifteen delegates, while the universities of this country will each have a large representation. Among the speakers announced are Mr. Moody; Professor W. P. Harper, president-elect of Chicago university, Professor W. W. Moore, of Union Theological seminary, Virginia; Professor W. G. Moorhead and President J. W. Bastford, of Ohio; Professor R. E. Thompson, of the University of Pennsylvania, and the Rev. John Smith, of Edinburgh. The latter is said to be without a peer in Scotland in reaching students. Professor D. B. Townes will lead the singing as usual.

Is Rudyard Kipling Dying?

NEW YORK, June 15.—Reports published yesterday of the serious illness of Rudyard Kipling, the novelist, are directly at variance with recent trustworthy advices from his family. The letter from his brother Beatty says: "Rudyard is very poorly. He has worked too hard and is exhausted nervously. I shall run down to Brighton with him for a few days." Dr. Kipling does not indict as the dispatch from Pittsburg printed yesterday did, that Kipling was dying of consumption in Italy.

Twelve Pirates Beheaded.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—Advices from Japan state that the twelve Namao pirates were beheaded at Bowloon City on the afternoon of May 11. Each man was warned by the executioner to keep steady when his sword came to descend. The fourth man did not obey the injunction and was struck between the shoulders. He was left suffering until the remainder of the men were beheaded, after which the executioner went back and finished number four.

The Pigeons Broke No Records.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 15.—Birds owned by Joseph Stafford were liberated in the morning from The World building in New York and arrived home about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The birds flew to break the record of 1869—1,476 yards per minute—but failed, their average being 1,100 yards per minute. The conditions for record breaking were unfavorable, however, on account of the heat and head winds.

A Chinaman Cut to Pieces.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—The Chinese consul here has received word from Bridgeport, Cal., that Ah Quong Tia, the Chinaman convicted of the murder of "Pock Face," on being acquitted was taken from the court by Piute Indians and cut to pieces. The consul will bring the matter to the attention of the government at Washington.

Tobacco to Manage Denver.

DENVER, June 15.—The interest in the Denver Baseball club owned by Mr. Van Horne has been purchased by a number of prominent Denver citizens who organized for this purpose. Mr. Van Horne was immediately deposed from the management and George Tebeau, the well known player, was chosen in his stead.

The Brigand Chief Wounded.

VIENNA, June 15.—The brigands who robbed a Turkish train and seized several rich Germans, who were afterward ransomed, have been retreating toward the Black sea. They were recently attacked by Bulgarian gendarmes and it is believed that the brigand chief—Anastasius—was wounded.

Wise's Plot Killed Him.

CANTON, O., June 15.—Charles Henderson, a colored laborer, was instantly killed last night by a blow from the fist, inflicted by Joseph Wise, a saloon keeper, during a quarrel. Wise was arrested, and charged that Henderson made an effort to assault him with a railroad spike wrapped in paper.

Natural Gas in Minnesota.

WARREN, Minn., June 15.—In sinking an artesian well two miles west of this city natural gas was struck at a depth of twenty feet. It comes out with such force that it throws stones thirty feet high. The gas was accidentally ignited and a flame shot up into the air forty feet.

A Life Sentence for Rose.

LANCASTER, —., June 15.—Rose Zolodosky was found guilty of murdering Ella Maley after the jury had been out all night. The convicted woman will be taken to Wampun today, there to serve out her life sentence.

He Wants $20,000 Damages.

DALLAS, June 15.—C. W. Fitzgerald has instituted a suit for $20,000 damages against the Dallas News for libel. An article recently published in the paper charged the plaintiff with theft, hence the suit.

STILL ANOTHER VICTIM.

Schmidt, Too, Belonged to the Bridgeport Suicide Club.

TEN MEN HAVE DIED UP TO DATE.

A History of the Famous Organization That Fairly Rivals the Mythical Organization Conceived by Novelist Robert Louis Stevenson.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 15.—The discovery that Landlord E. F. Schmidt, of Birmingham, who took his life last week, was a member of the famous Bridgeport Suicide club, has again brought that grewsome organization into prominence. The history of this peculiar club dates back some six years. As originally organized its membership was limited to six. Upon their death the club was to become extinct, and it was then understood that there should be any deviation from this plan, but incredible as it may seem, as soon as the existence of the club was known they were besieged with applications for membership, and as the members could not stand the pressure they were obliged to let others in until the original six grew to eighteen. None but the initiated have ever known all the qualifications for membership, for the rejected ones were bound by a fearful oath before they were allowed to even stand in on the examination.

Two Must Go Each Year.

It is one of the rules of the order that at least two of the members shall shuffle off the mortal coil each year by their own hands, but it had never been known to outsiders whether lots are drawn to decide who the sacrifice is to fall upon, or whether the members are sworn at initiation to destroy themselves within a stated time. The latter theory seems the most probable inference from the fact that the important record of the club has always been kept up with fearful regularity, as is attested by the following list of suicides of its members.

The List of Suicides.

First Year—August Heisterhagen, found dead in a cellar with bullet hole in his head and a revolver in his hand; Joseph Kopp, shot himself in bed at Water and Bank streets.

Second Year—George Leavenworth, died in the Bridgeport hospital from poison; William Riedel, cut his throat with a razor in his room on Bank street.

Third Year—John Klenzy, shot himself through the heart with a rifle in the cellar of the saloon on Main street; John Schneider, threw himself in front of a locomotive on Seventh avenue, but said by some to have been an accident.

Fourth Year—John Mattera, hung himself in shop where he worked on Bank street; Wendel Baum, cut his throat with a jackknife while in New York.

Fifth Year—W. H. Maby, sent a bullet into his brain from a revolver; E. F. Schmidt, blew his brains out with a shotgun at his hotel in Birmingham.

By Shooting or Cutting.

This remarkable chronological record is pretty conclusive that two must die a year, and that the year in which the horrible deed must be done is fixed at the option of the victim, who is the high member. It is also pretty well established that certain ritualistic rule of the Suicide club is that the death penalty must be inflicted on one's self in the most painful way by shooting out the brains or cutting the throat. These most excruciating methods of death are considered effeminate to the outset, as it is considered effeminate to die by poison, asphyxiation or other similar methods. It will be noticed from the above list that of the ten members who have paid the awful penalty of membership in the club six have fulfilled the obligation by bullet, one by razor, one by locomotive, one by jackknife, one by hanging and only one by poison.

Poison Is Prohibited.

Although poison is strictly prohibited and future punishment is supposed to follow any member who violates his oath and dies by poison, yet there is just one instance when it is permissible to die by poison

MR. LACEY'S STATEMENT

He Says Drew Did Not Report Correctly.

THE BANK'S TRUE STATE CONCEALED

But Whether This Was Done Intentionally or Carlessly the Controller Does Not Hazard an Opinion—The Examiner Pleaded for Delay in His Early Letters.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The statement prepared by Controller Lacey and sent to Mayor Stuart, of Philadelphia, on the course pursued by him with the Keystone bank of that city has just been made public. The statement includes the letter of Bank Examiner Drew of Jan. 24, notifying him of the $600,000 defalcation of Lucas, the late president of the bank. In this letter Mr. Drew explains how by adroit manipulation of the accounts of the bank, Lucas, with the assistance of Marsh, the former cashier of the bank, abstracted large sums of money from the bank to use in speculations in real estate. Marsh, he reported, was ignorant of the last three transactions, and promised Lucas when the latter was on his deathbed to continue the deception under representations that the money abstracted would soon be returned to the bank from the result of Lucas' enterprises.

Drew Pleaded for Marsh.

Drew also reported that there was no evidence that Marsh had profited by these irregularities. He closed by hoping that no publicity be given to the affair until the bank should be rehabilitated or all efforts to that end were found futile. Accompanying this letter was a preliminary statement of the bank's condition, which left the capital stock of half a million intact and a net surplus of $55,319. Later on—Jan. 27—Mr. Drew in an interview with the controller at Washington stated that in his judgment and in the opinion of the clearing house committee the property conveyed to the bank by the Lucas estate was equal in value to the indebtedness which had been concealed, and that in any event the creditors of the bank were entirely safe; also that to sever Marsh's connection with the bank would excite suspicion, and that Marsh was thoroughly repentent and was actuated by an ardent desire to do all in his power to assist the bank in recovering any sums which had been improperly taken from it.

Why He Did Not Close the Bank.

Mr. Lacey says he did not close the bank for the reason that he had no lawful authority to do so upon the facts submitted, and for the further reason that he was advised by Bank Examiner Drew that the capital of the bank was unimpaired; that the creditors were therefore fully protected and that prompt efforts would be made to replenish the cash by deposits of $300,000 to be made by the leading directors and stockholders, which should place it in funds until its own assets became available. Further and later reports from Drew convinced the controller that the board of directors were slow in putting matters in a satisfactory condition, so on March 7 he levied an assessment of $250,000 upon the shareholders on the promise from a committee of directors of the bank that the assessment would be paid within a week. On March 14 Mr. Drew complained of little active support from the directors on the effort to rehabilitate the bank. This reached the controller on the 16th, and three days later he closed the bank. The bank then remained in charge of the examiner for fifty-one days.

Lacey Answers His Critics.

In answer to criticisms for delay in appointing a receiver, Mr. Lacey says it was not made immediately because it was the duty of the controller to facilitate a resumption of business by the bank. It was important, considering all the business and municipal complications which the failure involved, that plenty of time be given for developments, in order to avoid the appointment of some improper and interested person. No person, he says, can show that any creditor, debtor or stockholder has been damaged to the extent of one dollar by reason of the delay.

"He Is Not to Be Censured."

The controller states that Postmaster General Wanamaker "never directly or indirectly suggested or solicited one day's delay in the affairs of the bank, nor in the appointment of a receiver, except as appears by the telegram hereinafter quoted. In fact, I have met him but once during the present year, and that meeting was on March 21, at the suggestion and in the presence of Hon. A. B. Nettleton, then acting secretary of the treasury. The interview was the day after the Keystone bank was closed, and the failure was fully discussed.

"He substantially confirmed the information I received from Mr. Marsh, and said that he held as a pledge certificates representing about 2,500 shares of stock in the Keystone bank, and that he had declined to surrender them unless the Lucas estate would pay him the amount his due. I urged him to use his influence in aid of the efforts being made to reopen the bank. He promised to look into the matter the same night on his return to Philadelphia, and I telegraphed Mr. Drew to call upon him with a statement of the assets and liabilities of the bank and to facilitate in every way possible his taking an active interest in the affairs of the organization. I failed, however, in my attempt to enlist him in the enterprise, and so ended all communication between us on any subject connected with the bank's affairs, excepting the receipt of the following telegram:

Mr. Wanamaker's Telegram.

POSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., April 2, 1891.

Hon. Edward S. Lacey, Controller:

Mr. Marsh, of the Keystone bank, came down last night to say that it was reported yesterday to the owner of the Keystone bank unless something more definite was done today. I believe nothing would suffer from giving them twenty-four hours longer, at the end of which they may put on paper something more definite to be presented to you. From what he says they are getting along pretty well in securing subscriptions to the new stock. I would recommend the appointment of a receiver be deferred to-day, and that he have an opportunity to state something more definite. JOHN WANAMAKER.

He Blames Examiner Drew.

In concluding the statement Mr. Lacey says, "I deem it my duty to say that, in my opinion, the several reports made by the bank examiner did not reflect the true condition of the bank under consideration. The degree of blame, if any, which properly attaches to Mr. Drew is yet to be ascertained. He is entitled, by reason of his long and hitherto acceptable service, to an impartial investigation and a fair hearing. He has recently been so fully employed, by reason of the failure of the Keystone and Spring Garden national banks, that it has as yet been impracticable to give the matter the consideration its importance demands."

THREE SOUGHT TO END LIFE.

An Epidemic of Suicides in the Vicinity of New York.

NEW YORK, June 15.—There has been an unusual number of suicides and attempts at self destruction in this city and vicinity of late. Sunday three cases were recorded. George D. Green, forty-eight years old, a veteran of the war, hanged himself in Central park. Despondency, caused by poverty, is the supposed cause.

The second case reported was that of a young woman, Alice Griffin, who jumped from the fifth story of a tenement house, receiving fatal injuries. She was insane.

The third case occurred in Brooklyn, where an aged German tailor, Peter Schwartz, took a quantity of paris green. He had become tired of constant bickerings with his wife and determined to end his life. The poison wasn't immediately effective, but the doctors say he will die.

A Notorious Bandit Shot.

TUCSON, A. T., June 15.—Deputy Sheriff Gray has arrived here with the body of the notorious Mexican stage robber Geronimo, and Leon, his accomplice. They had been robbing stages in southern Arizona during the last five years, and officers have been after them continually. Last night Gray and his posse ran them down to the reservation at Penasco. They made a fight and Geronimo fired five and Leon three shots without effect. Geronimo was killed and Leon surrendered. Geronimo robbed the United States mail and stage passengers more than a dozen times and committed many murders. He was captured several times, but always escaped. Leon, his accomplice, up to six months ago was deputy sheriff.

He Gives His Body to the Scalpel.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 13.—Eugene Steyr, aged about thirty, of New York, committed suicide at the West End hotel Saturday night by turning on the gas in his room. His body was found Sunday. A letter in a memorandum book requests that the body be sent to Dr. Schweig of 26 East Twentieth street, New York city, for scientific purposes. A long, rambling letter was also in the book, which stated that he intended to commit suicide at the Garden theater.

He Drank Paris Green.

PATERSON, N. J., June 13.—August Kaden, a farm hand employed at Richfield, had been on a protracted spree, which he ended Sunday by swallowing an ounce of Paris green. In the presence of a number of relatives he filled a dipper with water, into which he emptied the poison and drank the mixture with one gulp. He refused to accept the aid of a physician and died in terrible agony.

Marcus Mayer as a Pugilist.

LONDON, June 13.—Marcus Mayer, the theatrical manager, had a battle with four roughs at the Strand cafe Saturday night. The roughs insulted a barmaid, and Mayer and a friend whipped four of them. Mayer emerged from the fracas with a broken finger and a black eye, but with no stain on his character or his shirt front.

Vesuvius Is Very Active.

NAPLES, June 15.—The eruption of Vesuvius will, it is expected, become one of the greatest of the century.

Something About Three Great Running High Jumpers.

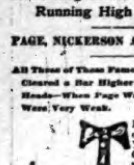
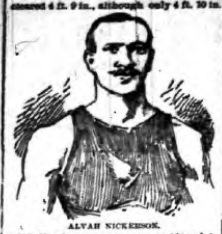
All Three of These Famous Athletes Have Cleared a Bar Higher Than Their Own Heads—When Page Was a Boy His Legs Were Very Weak.



THE gymnasiums of the various Young Men's Christian associations throughout the country have given many famous athletes their early training, but in the specialty of turning out running high jumpers the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. takes the palm. Four of the most prominent exponents of this great sport at present active in American may be said to have been graduated from its gymnasium. First on the list as to merit is Alvah Nickerson, ex-champion running high jumper of America. Then comes Malcolm W. Ford, who does everything well, and who has been champion of the United States and Canada in this line as well as in many others. The third on the list is H. L. Hallock, present champion of America, and the fourth is R. K. Pritchard, each champion of America and twice champion of Canada. Every member of the quartet, Ford excepted, was encouraged and instructed in his initial attempts by Professor James Douglass Andrews of the gymnasium.

W. BYRD PAGE.

Not one of the four has ever equaled the world's record of 6 ft. 4 in., made at Philadelphia Oct. 7, 1885, and still held by that high priest of all running high jumpers, W. B. Page, but for all that their performances have stamped them as remarkable athletes. Page has retired from competition, but his history proves interesting reading. He was born at Philadelphia twenty-five years ago, and, strange to relate, his legs were so weak when he was a boy that he wore braces up as far as his thighs. At twelve years of age he was a delicate boy, but the constant exercise, jumping and bicycling soon began to build him up. At his first jumping contest, in 1883, he cleared 4 ft. 9 in., although only 4 ft. 10 in. tall. His development was rapid, and in 1888, when he had reached his present height of 5 ft. 6½ in., he could clear 5 ft. 8 in. The altitude he could reach had then far remained slightly below his own height, but his jumping powers now began to turn the tables with a vengeance. He did not grow any taller, but he was soon clearing a bar several inches above his head. At Stonebridge, England, in 1886, he broke the world's record by jumping 6 ft. 2¼ in. A year later he made his best jump, which overtopped his head almost 10 inches.



ALVAH NICKERSON.

Alvah Nickerson, the great high jumper of the New York Athletic club, is 6 ft. ¼ in. tall, and his best jump is the same height. He is a fine looking, modest young man of twenty-one, and his 160 pounds of bone, sinew and flesh form a lithe and active figure. Nickerson's first jump of note was last October, when he cleared 5 ft. 9 in. and defeated Pritchard, then champion of America and Canada. About a week later, at the A. A. U. championship, he cleared an inch more and won the championship, which, however, was awarded to H. L. Hallock on a technicality. But the greatest surprise Nickerson ever sprung upon the world of athletics was at Boston, March 28, 1891, when he met and defeated that marvelous indoor high jumper, G. R. Fearing, Jr., of Harvard college. Fearing had vanished every one a short time before by clearing 6 ft. 2¼ in. indoors, but he failed to do it again, or to even equal Nickerson's sky scraper—6 ft. ¼ in. Nickerson's best of outdoor jumps is 5 ft. 11¼ in. Nickerson is a very easy jumper. He takes a short run and goes at the bar as nonchalantly as a school girl jumping the rope.

HENRY L. HALLOCK.

Henry L. Hallock is a finely proportioned young man of twenty-two. He has been jumping about five years and can clear 5 ft. 10½ in. or 6½ inches above his own head. He took second honors at the A. A. U. championships in 1890, but as Nickerson, who got first place, was not a member of any athletic club, Hallock was awarded the championship. Hallock is with the Manhattan team on its European tour.

EARLE F. EATON.

BASEBALL BREVITIES.

Milwaukee is said to be one of the best baseball towns in the west. The cranks there fear that the city council may shut down on the Sunday games.

Sullivan, McDermott and Begy have been released by Rochester, of the Eastern Association.

Young John Ewing has been pitching good ball for New York of late, and the Giants have at last struck their gait and seem once more deserving of their appellation.

Henry Lucas, the once famous magnate who paid $100,000 for his baseball experience, is a frequent visitor at the Chicago games.

Catcher Nagle, of Chicago, who ran away with a Milwaukee girl whose parents were opposed to her marrying into the national game, has been released.

Paul Radford is one of a limited number of players who have nerve enough to refuse to play ball Sundays.

Stivetts, the St. Louis pitcher, is a bad man to face. He handles the ball remarkably well, and the batsmen all dread him.

Louisville, last season's pennant winner in the American association, is very near being a tail ender at the present stage of the game.

Gilliland, of the New Haven team, has done good work in the box this season. He recently equaled Rusie's strike out record of eleven men in a game against Rochester.

WHEELING NOTES.

The annual meet of the Kentucky division, L. A. W., occurs at Louisville June 26 and 27.

On June 27 the Kings County wheelmen will hold their race meet at Brooklyn.

Hagerstown will be the scene July 2, 3 and 4 of the Maryland division, L. A. W.

An interesting tournament will be held at Hartford July 4.

The Illinois division, L. A. W., gives its annual meet at Rockford on July 3 and 4.

The crack riders of California division, L. A. W., will show what they can do at Stockton, July 4.

Albert Glenn, a young bicyclist of Bridgefield, Conn., while making a tour of the Southern states, was held up by a Virginia highwayman and relieved of all his valuables.

R. M. Barwise, winner of the Pullman road race, is a young drug clerk at Chicago. He had a heavy handicap and was looked upon as winner before the race began.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

A writer in the Washington Post has discovered that although some very good plays have been written by Americans, no really good high comedies, except Bronson Howard's "The Henrietta," are of Yankee parentage.

At the recent anniversary of the Actors' Fund of America, in New York, A. M. Palmer suggested the establishment of an asylum for the orphans of actors. In less than an hour $1,800 was subscribed, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal contributing $500. The Actor's Fund has expended for relief, burials and hospital charges, in nine years, $136,814.62, 300 poor actors and actresses having received burial at the hands of the fund.

Edward E. Rice says a fairly good leading man can be had for from $75 to $125 a week, and that good comedians command twice that amount. In reality there are not more than twenty leading men in the United States who make more than $100 a week, but comedians do come high.

Sir Arthur's Greatest Achievement.

Sir Arthur Sullivan has never occupied a grander position than that which he filled on Monday, May 25, as composer and conductor of the first serious opera, English or foreign, that has run a hundred consecutive nights at the same theater. The circumstance was long unprecedented, it was only fitting that the handsome interior of the D'Oyly Carte's Royal English opera in London should be crowded as it was in every part, and that Sir Arthur should be accorded a greeting of exceptional warmth, while further to mark the importance of the occasion, a book containing the story of "Ivanhoe," with illustrations of the principal characters and scenes, was presented to the audience as a souvenir. A fine representation of the opera was given under the composer's skillful direction. Sir Arthur's opera, however, owes much of its success to D'Oyly Carte's netting and management of it.

Gone to Do Europe.

The summer exodus of American actors and actresses to Europe is well under way. Joe Jefferson, Ralf Delmore, Marcus Mayer, Laura Palmer and Ray Douglas, the soubrette who came into a fortune recently, sailed the other day on one ship. The three operatic notables—Isabella Urquhart, Sylvia Gerrish and Marie Halton have been over there for some time. Miss Halton has accepted a professional engagement in London. Marie Tempest, the "Red Hussar," has also sailed. She will return in the fall to head the forces of the New York Casino. Sol Smith Russell, Jean Lackaye and Paul Arthur are among the male voyagers. Mrs. Billy Florence, wife of the famous comedian, has returned to America, and will appear on the stage again by and by with her husband. Aunt Louisa Eldridge has sailed away on a slow steamer, so as to get the benefit of the sea voyage.

Butts for Actors.

It is said that there will soon be erected in New York a big apartment house designed especially to meet the requirements of actors and actresses. There will be rooms for six or seven hundred suites, and they will differ from the ordinary French flat in the omission of the kitchens. A working actress has little time for housework. A light luncheon will be located on the top floor, where it is proposed to serve meals at a very small profit. There are hundreds of professionals who are in New York enough of their time to warrant the establishment of permanent homes there; but as nearness to the theatrical center of the city is necessary, and as rents are the most fearful houses in that part of the city are outrageously high, it has been difficult. We say but the very prosperous are to do so. This building, designed especially to meet their requirements, will find plenty of tenants.

HOW SAVAGES PRODUCE FIRE.

A Plan Practiced by the Dark Skinned Races Who Inhabit New Guinea.

Savages produce fire by rubbing two pieces of wood together, but the methods of doing this are various. Some tribes take two pieces of wood, and, sharpening one of them so a point, insert it in a hole made in the other piece, and twirl it rapidly until sparks fly out, which they catch on tinder, and a fire is thus kindled.

A SAVAGE MAKING A FIRE.

The Papuans or Oceanic negroes, as the dark skinned races are called who inhabit New Guinea, New Caledonia, the Fiji islands and other places in the Pacific ocean, have a method peculiar to themselves. They split a piece of bamboo and, making a notch in the convex surface of one of the pieces, they rub the sharp edge of another piece in it with a motion like sawing. They begin slowly, gradually increasing the speed until it is very rapid, and a hole is formed through the bamboo by the rubbing. The fine powder or sawdust rubbed off ignites with the friction, and the sparks fall through the hole on some dry tinder and brushwood, and a fire is soon obtained.

The First Chew.

Mr. William D. Howells gives the following description of the first chew of tobacco in Harper's Young People:

The boy said it was a peculiar kind of tobacco, and was known as molasses tobacco, because it was so sweet. The boy was himself chewing vigorously on a large quid, and launching the juice from his ripe right and left like a grown person, and my boy took as large a bite as his benefactor bade him. He found it as sweet as he had been told it was, and he acknowledged the aptness of its name of molasses tobacco. It seemed to him a golden opportunity to acquire a noble habit, and he did so. He let the quid rest in his cheek, as he had seen men do, when he was not crushing it between his teeth, and for some moments he joked his plank up and down the canal boat with a sense of triumph that nothing marred.

Suddenly the boat seemed to be going round and round, and the sky wheeled overhead. The sun was dodging about strangely. Drops of sweat burst from the boy's forehead; he let fall his pole and said that he thought he would go home. The fellow who gave him the tobacco began to laugh and the other fellows to mock, but my boy did not mind them. Somehow, he did not know how, he got out of the canal boat and started homeward, but at every step the ground rose as high as his knees before him, and then, when he got his foot high enough and began to put it down, the ground was not there.

He reached his shed, and when he reached home and showed himself, white and haggard, to his frightened mother, he had scarcely strength enough to gasp out a confession of his attempt to retrieve the family honor by learning to chew tobacco. In another moment nature came to his relief, and then he fell into a deep sleep which lasted the whole afternoon, so that it seemed to him the next day when he woke up, glad to find himself alive, if not so very lively.

Perhaps he had swallowed some of the poisonous juice of the tobacco; perhaps it had acted upon his brain without that. His father made no very close inquiry into the facts, and he did not forbid him the use of tobacco. It was not necessary; in that one little experiment he had got enough for a whole lifetime.

Words That Some Good Spellers Miss.

Stand up, ye teachers, now and spell.
Spell pleuralcitocope and knell,
Or take some simple word as chilly,
Or gauger, or the garden lily.
To spell such words as syllogism,
And lachrymose and synchronism,
And Pentateuch and catacrisma,
Apochrypha and celandine,
Lactiferous and cecity,
Sejtme and homocopathy,
Paralysis and chloroform,
Rhinoceros and pachyderm,
Metempsychosis, gladiolus, hasque,
Is certainly no easy task.
Kaleidoscope and Tennessee,
Kamchatka and dispensary,
Diphthong and erysipelas,
And etiquette and nassafras,

Allopathy and rheumatism,
And cataclysm and belsegner,
Twelfth, eighteenth, rendezvous, intrigue,
Thermopylæ, Cordilleras,
Suite, hemorrhage, jalap, Havana,
Cinquefoil, and ipecacuanha,
And Rappahannock and Shenandoah,
And Schuylkill, and a thousand more,
Are words that some good spellers miss
In dictionary lands like this,
Nor need one think himself a scroyle
If some of these his efforts foil.

Woman's Sweetest Hour.

A young girl, attractive though not pretty, bright and witty, well read and well bred, whom I love dearly, asked me the other day what I thought was woman's sweetest hour.

I have since then discovered her reason for asking the question.

She submitted my answer with the preface that she thought it was when, having brought the man of her choice to the point of proposing, she keeps him waiting for moments for her answer, regarding the nature of which she has given no inkling so strong as to make it certain that it will be "Yes."

I am also a young girl, three years her senior. I have not yet experienced that "sweet hour"—not, at least, from a welcome source. Still, I can well understand that to see and feel the anxiety of one's lover, and to know that it is all caused by love for you, should constitute unbounded happiness.

Yet my friend's idea strikes me as somewhat insincere and a trifle cruel. Were I ever called upon to answer the most important question of my life, propounded by the man of my heart, I would find keener joy in unhesitatingly saying "yes" than to feign a doubtfulness I did not feel.

A little beating about the bush at the outset is perhaps proper enough, but when you have assured yourself that you are dealing with an honest man that love you, I think that all parrying and diplomacy had better be supplanted by frankness and sincerity. I think the honorable wooer entitled to as much information as he has imparted to his sweetheart.—New York Herald.

What the Well Bred Woman Does.

Are you a thoroughly well bred woman? If you are there are some little "Thank yous" that you never omit in public and to strangers. You never forget to say "Thank you" to a man.

Who stands aside to let you step into the elevated ahead of him.

Who gives you his place in a line of waiting persons.

Who stays a moment in his hurry to hold a door open for you.

Who steps aside to let you pass on a stairway.

To the policeman who helps you across a street.

To a servant who renders you a personal service.

To a horse car conductor who stops the car carefully exactly where you asked him to.

To the postman who gives you your letters on the street.

To the newsboy who folds your paper neatly and closely for you.—New York Evening Sun.

She Makes Chairs and Things.

A South Atchison woman has a full set of carpenter's tools and she uses them with remarkable skill in making useful and ornamental articles for her home, a full set of chairs being among the productions of her mechanical genius.—Atchison Globe.

Love Without Money.

"George, don't you think it's very wrong to marry for money?"

"Yes, of course; but it's just as wrong to fall in love with one who has none."—Life.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

—Muzzle your dog.

—Sunday was the anniversary of the birth of the American flag.

—This is the season to eschew mad dog and ice water; they both lead to the same jumping-off place.

—The property known as Laing's Hotel is to be sold at public auction to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock.

—The Salvation Army still continues to hold nightly meetings in Reform Hall. They are generally well attended.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The Y. M. C. A. and Crescent League bowling teams will roll a game on the Crescent League alleys this evening.

—The next game of base ball between the Crescents of this city and the West Ends of Somerville will not take place until July 18th.

—The Merits of the Pond Machine Tool Works defeated the Boys' Club team in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon by a score of 20 to 19.

—The Mt. Pleasant Gun Club held its annual "shoot" at Dog Corner yesterday afternoon. A number of sportsmen from this city attended.

—Guests are arriving at the Netherwood Hotel daily and many handsome carriages can be seen on the Plainfield streets every evening.

—The ninth annual reunion of the surviving members of the Eleventh Regiment, New Jersey volunteers, is being held at Phillipsburg to-day.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting in the Sunday school room of the chapel this evening at eight o'clock.

—The statistical authorities show that the percentage of divorces in New Jersey is exceedingly low. But this is to be expected, for that man who is lucky enough to get a Jersey girl never wants to get rid of her!

—After July 1st the banks of Plainfield will close at one o'clock Saturdays. This is better than closing at twelve noon on that day, but the old practice of keeping open until three o'clock was better still for the public.—New Brunswick Home News.

—Women will be interested in the announcement in another column of the opening at 73 Park avenue of a "Women's Exchange and Industrial Union." Their attention and patronage will also be secured, this warm weather, by still another movement in the same advertisement. Read it.

—It would be well for the people to remember that it is much more healthful to drink oat meal water than ice water in the Summer. Put two teaspoonfuls of oat meal into a glass then fill with cold water, not ice water, and when the meal has settled, drink off the water. It will be found both healthful and nutritious.

—"Hot water for cows," is the maxim of the French dairy farmers in the Department of Finisterre. They claim to have proved by experiment that when cows drink hot water they yield one-*third more milk than when they are re*freshed with cold water only. The proportions are said to be half a pail of boiling water to half a pail of cold.

—The Board of Freeholders of Hunterdon county met last week with the Somerset Board at Higgins's Mills, near Three Bridges, to consider the repair or re-building of a bridge at that point, and in which Somerset is jointly interested, and under a new law must assist in keeping in repair. It was decided not to build a new bridge but to repair the old one.

—Trusts are rapidly getting their clutches upon every staple of consumption by the people. The American Tobacco Co. capitalized at $25,000,000, has purchased all the largest tobacco manufactories in the county and is now able to control 98 per cent, of all the smoking tobacco in the country. Thus one buyer will fix the price for the tobacco grower and the tobacco consumer.

—The present road law empowers the Township Committee to keep all brush and weeds along the roads cut, and it is to be hoped the road superintendents will make it a point to have the weeds, briars, etc., cut early in the year and when the sprouts are of a fair size they should cut them out again. There is nothing more unsightly than a lot of weeds along the sides of our roads.

—The Elizabeth Journal exultingly says: Union county can challenge any any other county in the State to show such a record. In two years' time she has built forty miles of oxford road at a cost—including this year's tax levy—of $674,000, pays the interest promptly, meets extra expenses, and yet increases the annual appropriations not one dollar, while the tax rate is deceased. Who says county roads do not pay?

—Professor S. W. Williston, Professor of Geology and Paleontology in the University, at Lawrence, Kan., returned on Tuesday from Gove county, where he has been for two weeks past securing specimens for the natural historic museum. Near Monument Rocks, in the Smoky River Valley, he found the skeleton of a pterodactyl, whose skull measures three feet in length. This specimen is the most complete of any in existence.—Ex.

UNION COUNTY COURT.

Jennie Wiley and Beckman Convicted of Manslaughter.

The case of Samuel Beckman and Jennie Wiley, who are on trial in the Union County Court, was concluded yesterday and after a short deliberation the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

Jennie Wiley on cross-examination stuck to her testimony, and that of Beckman was the same as hers, altogether varying crossly to little Pearl.

Rev. J. S. Ladd admitted, when asked to testify to Beckman's character, that he knew little or nothing about him.

The defence called Dr. Mravlag to bear it out as to its theory of death being the result of tubercular meningitis. The Doctor thought Dr. Miller's statement as to the child's disease wrong, and was not of the opinion that any one once afflicted with that disease—from which recovery was impossible—was likely to break out in sores though he might be scrofulous. He said it was not possible for a six-year-old child, afflicted as Pearl was, with convulsions, could run about afterwards, as she did. The disease generally ran a week or ten days.

Dr. Youngiove denied that he had said the child had died of convulsions of the bowels. He said that might have been the effect of death.

Chief Keron showed that it was perfectly possible to see from a window in the Lewis house right into that of Beckman. Wiley had denied this.

Wm. Dackerman testified to Beckman's previous good character.

The State rested its case at this point and the counsel on each side was allowed twenty minutes to sum up.

At the conclusion of the argument of both defence and prosecution, the judge made a strong charge to the jury.

A Unique Entertainment.

The "Old Maids' Reception" at Vincent chapel proved a very enjoyable affair last evening and was well attended, notwithstanding the hot weather. The thermometer was close to the nineties.

The object of the entertainment was to show in a most agreeable way that unmarried women can do to relieve the distress of the poor and afflicted, and to invite others to join in the good work.

The information was imparted intermingled with music, recitations and dialogues, which made every one merry.

The "Old Maids" were charming young ladies, with powdered hair.

The programme as follows was exceptionally well rendered, reflecting great credit on the entertainers.

Steal Rides at Their Peril.

The employees of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey have been very much annoyed by tramps and young boys stealing rides on freight trains. Within a week several persons have been severely injured by the cars and the officials of the Company are now making a determined effort to break up the practice. Orders have been issued to trainmen along the main line and branches to cause the arrest whenever possible of every offender. Detectives have been detailed to arrest the offenders. An army of tramps boarded a westbound coal train near Westfield Saturday night and when the crew attempted to put them off there was a fracas, in which the trainmen were worsted. The train was slowed up at Fanwood and a signal given to the detectives, but when they appeared the tramps took to the woods.

Dying at the Age of 107 Years.

Mrs. Catharine Hayes died at New Brunswick when at the age of 107 years. She was born in New Brunswick April 16, 1784, and had lived under the rule of every president of the United States. During the later years of her life she was blind, but, her other faculties were bright, and she related stories of her young days. Children of five generations are living though only one of her own children, Captain Matthias Tice, survives. She was married six times, and leaves beside her son nine grandchildren, seventy great-grand-children and six great-great-grand children.

Fourth of July at New Market

Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of New Market have made extensive preparations for the proper observance of the Fourth of July at that place. An interesting programme consisting of athletic sports has been compiled. There will also be a boat race on the lake. In the evening there is to be a grand display of fireworks.

A Small Fire.

At about half-past eight o'clock last evening the railroad bridge at Grant avenue was discovered to be afire. The flames were extinguished with a few buckets of water before much damage resulted. The fire is supposed to have originated from a locomotive spark.

To Parade Here.

At a meeting of the officers of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, at Elizabeth last evening, it was decided to hold the annual parade of the Regiment in this city on September 16th. A big turn-out is anticipated.

PERSONAL.

Mr. George W. Durrian of Edrid, Pa., is visiting Rogers Bros., the popular shoe merchants.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy, the pastor of the Holy Cross Church will sail for Europe Wednesday.

A number of friends were entertained at the residence of Miss Allie Quinn on East Fourth street last evening.

A tea will be given at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hegeman, Jr., on Myrtle avenue this evening from four until seven o'clock.

Mr. Robert E. Spooner of Grove street is slowly recovering from the injuries he received by being thrown from a bicycle while racing a about two weeks ago.

The Messrs. Davidson of New York have leased the residence of Mr. Felix Marx on East Front street for the Summer. They and their families are now occupying it.

We are indebted to Mr. G. Grannatt, formerly of West Fourth street, but now of Denver, Colorado, with a copy of the Colorado Daily Sun. It is an eight page paper and is very newsy.

Mr. John Hamlin, a popular young electrician of this city and Miss Annie Tooker of Roundout, N. Y., were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents at that place on June 6th.

Mrs. Elizabeth Van Voorhis died at her home in North Plainfield on June 12th. Deceased was fifty-five years of age. The funeral will take place from her late residence, No. 10 Grove street, Thursday morning.

The Horrors of Hydrophobia.

The True American says: There seems to be an epidemic of hydrophobia all over the country. There have been a number of fatal cases in this State recently, none more distressing than that of lawyer Bartine of Asbury Park. And now there is a remarkable story which comes from Kansas City to the effect that a farmer and his six sons, nine years ago, skinned a calf affected with the disease. The disease was not developed in them until about two weeks ago. One member of the family died of it on the 5th inst., two others at the same time were ill with it, and it is reported cannot recover, and on Tuesday the father was stricken, and his death at last accounts was momentarily expected. There is no more terrible disease in the calendar from the descriptions given of the agonies of the sufferers, and there appears to be no limit to the time after a person has been inoculated with the virus when he may be considered as out of the reach of the manifestation of the symptoms of the disease. Too much care cannot be exercised by the public authorities, especially in guarding against the dissemination of this disease. Both town and country are swarming with curs that are mad cats, which are the principal mediums of propagating it. In some sections of our State we notice that a systematic effort is being made to destroy all of these animals found running at large. The community would be the better off in more ways than one, if the warfare were made general.

The Annual Picnic.

The annual picnic and strawberry exhibition of the Union county Board of Agriculture is being held in the woods of Ogden Woodruff, one mile North of Elizabeth, to-day from one to six p. m.

Lady members, as usual, brought provisions for the table, also fruit. Members and others took specimens of strawberries, vegetables, grasses, weeds, destructive insects, or new implements for exhibition.

Topics for conversation and remarks, "Enjoyments of former times. 1781," "Old fashion flowers." "The necessary and conservative influence of farming and farmers," "The outlook of farming in Union county."

Committee on Grounds, Ogden Woodruff and James L. Headley; Ice Cream, Dennis Long; Strawberries, James W. Higgins and D. R. Wade; Flowers, Mrs. James Higgins; Speaker, Dennis C. Crane, Noah W. Parcell and Dennis Long; Reception, Mrs. Benjamin W. Tucker, Mrs. Moses O. Winans, Mrs. Ogden Woodruff, Mrs. John O. Magie, Mrs. E. P. Beebe, Mrs. Dennis Long; Table, Misses Mamie Winans, Lillian Long, Lou Woodruff, Emma Arnaudy, Marion Woodruff, Nellie Falconer, Mrs. David Magie and Mrs. Dennis C. Crane.

DERICK LONG, President.
DENNIS C. CRANE, Secretary.

New Jersey Fruit Crop.

There is an abundant crop of cherries in New Jersey this year. Last year the crop was a failure. The supply of New Jersey strawberries was also abundant, and matured early enough to give growers remunerative prices. From present indications the peach crop, which was a total failure last year, will turn out well in quantity as well as in quality. There is also an excellent prospect for a good yield of blackberries, huckleberries and other small fruits so abundantly raised in this State. It is yet too early to make an accurate forecast of the outcome of the cranberry crop, but from present indications there will be at least a fair yield.

Applied for a Receiver.

An application was made yesterday for a receiver for the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company, which runs from Winslow Junction to Sea Isle city, Cape May county. The application was made on behalf of the Johnson Signal Company, of Rahway. The chancellor gave the parties two weeks to take testimony and renew the application.

THE HOTTEST DAY YET.

Some Things Incident to It.—How to Keep Cool.

The heat yesterday was unbearable. It was the hottest day this Summer has so far produced. At three o'clock the thermometer registered 95 degrees in the shade. At least, if the thermometer has registered higher it was when the atmosphere was not so humid as yesterday. The humidity of the atmosphere sometimes reaches the 100 proportion as fifty per cent., or one-half water, and when this is attained, though the ther*mometer may not climb* exceptionally high, we all say the heat is insufferable. The humidity yesterday must have been at least 30 per cent. of the air we breathed, and that was what made everybody so uncomfortable. If there was anyone who had not adjusted his underwear to the season he was commanded to do so yesterday in unmistakable terms. The ladies put on their thin waists and the gentlemen were no more clothing than was absolutely necessary. In spite of all this the perspiration rolled down impatient features in such volumes that handkerchiefs were inadequate, and laundries were those who were supplied with two or three.

Another characteristic of the occasion was the bringing out in full force of the "is-it-hot-enough for you (?) fiends." Nearly everybody a reporter met on his rounds in search of news had the question to ask. He refrained from executing the desire born with each questioning of slaying the interrogator, and merely gave such answers as "Oh, yes: this will do;" or, "It's the coldest day I ever experienced," according to the caliber of the fiend who asked.

In all the worry and wetness there were some people who appeared comfortable, looked cool, and maintained a mental composure. One of these was questioned, and he gave a few hints on how to act in hot weather. He said that one should avoid alcoholic beverages. Much beer or spirits were positively injurious. In the middle of the day one should eat sparingly, and above all, contend against the inclination to worry and fret. A cheerful disposition was one of the best safeguards against injury from hot weather. One of the most important rules was to observe bodily cleanliness and keep on hand a good supply of dry clothing.

Bound Brook's Southern Gate.

The merchants of Bound Brook are greatly exercised over the occasional blocking up of what they call the "Southern Gate," which is the road that runs from Bound Brook across the tracks of the Central and Lehigh Valley Railroads and thus across the river and canal to South Bound Brook. Excellent wagon roads lead into Bound Brook from north, east, south and west, but the approach to the town from the south is often blocked, so the merchants claim, by the railroads. It is said that the Lehigh Valley people are ready to correct matters but that the Central's officials will not co-operate. The merchants have been begging for an end to this for the matter amicably settled on that line. Now they propose to take the matter to the courts unless the railroad officials take steps immediately to give a free course across the tracks.

Boys' Club Notes.

The average attendance for the last week was thirty-two boys per evening, and number of visitors during the week eighteen.

W. H. Conway has been elected a member of the base ball team. The team will play the Young Richmonds next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 on the grounds in North Plainfield. The Unions on Saturday, June 27th.

The rooms will be closed during the months of July and August next on Wednesday evenings, when the Edward's Zouaves drill.

The reading room is a great attraction for the boys now as we have nearly all the prominent papers and magazines on file.

Overcome by the Heat.

Charles Goshen, a laborer, was overcome by the heat while working in a yard on Somerset street yesterday afternoon at about three o'clock. He was carried into the house and after he had partially recovered he was taken to his home. His condition is reported as much improved to-day.

Another man, whose name the reporter was unable to ascertain, is said to have been overcome by the heat on Park avenue yesterday afternoon.

Young Sheline Improving.

The condition of Lawrence Sheline, the young man who was precipitated into a cellar of a house on West Fourth street Saturday evening by the giving away of a stoop, is reported as much improved to-day. It will be remembered that his skull was fractured by the fall, and that he laid in an unconscious condition all of Saturday night and a portion of Sunday.

Will Visit Washington's Camp.

Company B, of Somerville, Capt. Cook, has accepted an invitation to visit Bound Brook on the Fourth of July to participate to the celebration to be held on that day on the historical Washington's camp ground on the mountain back of the town. It is said that this will be the first military organization to visit the camp ground since the days of the Revolution.

F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. When about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV

Class Day at Rutgers.

The class day exercises of Rutgers College were held yesterday afternoon. The programme was arranged thus:

Oration, Samuel C. Mabon, New Brunswick; poem, Patrick A. Ray, Greenwich, N. Y.; history, Edward V. Searles, Burley, N. Y.; presentation of memorial, S. Arthur Johnson, Morristown, N. J.; prophecy, John H. Raven, Brooklyn; address to under graduates, Jaspar H. Hogan, Guilderland Centre, N. Y.; presentation of memorials, Charles W. Hulst, Greenwich, N. Y.; ivy oration, C. D. Vreeland, Little Falls, N. Y.; planting the ivy, William F. Metz, Somerville, N. J.; ivy ode, Harry E. Damer, Paterson; pipe oration, A. W. Hopper, Spring Valley, N. Y.; address to president, Howard A. Reynolds, New Brunswick. Master orator, Joseph C. Castner, New Brunswick.

June 12th, 1842.

When the people in this section of the country arouse on the morning of June 12th, 1842—forty-nine years ago last Friday—they found that a remarkable freeze had occurred during the night, and that their corn, potatoes, fruit and most of the growing vegetables had been frozen to the ground. That year there was no fruit of any kind, of course, though it is said that a farmer over along the Delaware River succeeded in raising a single apple that somehow had escaped the effects of the frost. That was again, however, and our informant thinks there was a fair crop of that cereal. The wheat was not injured any. After this remarkable freeze Winter left these parts, and good Summer weather continued till Fall.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—There were 223 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 228 in the preceding week and 189, 195, 213 and 146 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 5,502 against 6,081 in 1890.

—A Belvidere practical joker baked a cake of his own contrivance a few days ago and sent in to a festival committee to be used at the entertainment that evening. It was labelled "a genuine sponge cake after my grandmother's recipe." The cake cut it and found, alas, that it was a sponge cake, for inside was nothing but small sponges cut up and mixed with the dough. The joker didn't attend the festival that night.

—A new use has been discovered for the English sparrow. A man has recently engaged in selling at 40 cents to the residents of College Point, S. I., some brilliant hued little birds which he called "Australian Warblers," and very choice specimens at that. When the paint began to wash off it was discovered that the "warblers" were merely English sparrows which had been decorated in the highest style of the limner's art.

—The conference of the Union county Christian Endeavor Union will be held in the Second Presbyterian church, at Rahway Friday evening. The local societies are making preparations to give the visiting societies a royal reception, and the exercises promise to be of great interest. Papers will be read by Miss Alice Spangenberg, of this city; Mr. Williams of Rahway, and Miss Middaugh, of Elizabeth. There will also be an address, reports and election of officers.

—The Supreme Court held, in a decision rendered last week, that in the case of Angle vs. Lantz, Collector of Oxford township, Warren county, that a mortgage held by an individual on a church lot and building, is taxable against the holder of the mortgage, notwithstanding the church lot and building are exempt, being used for religious purposes. The court held that such an investment is outside of the exception allowed by law. This decision, of course, will govern all mortgages of that character.

TO PRESERVE THE SEALS

Harrison and Salisbury Have Agreed at Last.

THEIR LATEST CORRESPONDENCE.

Arranging for a Joint Commission to Ascertain What Steps Should Be Taken to Preserve the Valuable Fur Bearers, Both Countries Will Hound the Pirates.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The Behring sea correspondence has just been made public by the department of state. The correspondence begins with a letter from Minister Pauncefote to Secretary Blaine dated May 4, in which Mr. Blaine proposed a closed sealing season. Sir Julian Pauncefote's letter in reply to the proposition of Secretary Blaine follows:

Lord Salisbury's Proposal.

Proposal of her majesty's government for a modus vivendi in the Behring sea during the present fishing season of 1891.

1. The governments of Great Britain and of the United States shall prohibit until May, 1892, the killing of seals in Behring sea or any islands thereof, and will to the best of their power and ability insure that subjects and citizens of the two nations respectively and the vessels flying their respective flags shall observe that prohibition.

2. During the period above specified the United States government shall have the right to kill 7,500 seals.

3. Consuls may at any time be appointed to the islands in Behring sea, and the United States government will grant an exequatur to any such consuls.

4. Unless the consent of Russia be obtained to this convention it shall not come into operation.

The President's Proposed Amendments.

President Harrison then proposed the following changes, under date of June 4, in place of the first and second subdivisions of Salisbury's proposal agreed to:

1. The government of Great Britain shall prohibit until May 1, 1892, the killing of seals in all that part of the Behring sea lying east, southwardly or southeastwardly of the line described in article 1 of the convention between the United States and Russia of date March 30, 1867, and will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectively to insure the observance of this prohibition by the citizens of Great Britain and all vessels flying its flag.

2. The government of the United States shall prohibit until May 1, 1892, the killing of seals in that part of Behring sea above described, and on the shores and islands thereof belonging to the United States (in excess of 7,500 to be taken on the islands); and the government of the United States will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectually to insure the observance of this prohibition by the citizens of the United States and the vessels flying its flag.

These changes are suggested in order that the modus may clearly have the same territorial extent with the pending proposals for arbitration; that the stipulation for a prohibition of seal killing upon the islands of the United States may rest upon its own order, and that the obligation of the two governments to give prompt and vigorous effect to the agreement may be more clearly apparent.

It Did Not Seem Pertinent.

The first paragraph of Lord Salisbury could not see the pertinency of the third subdivision of Salisbury's agreement because, according to the laws of the United States, no consular officer could be discharged upon the islands by any representative of her majesty's government. The president added, however, that he would be pleased to give British agents reasonable facilities of posting themselves concerning facts at the islands for use before the arbitrators.

Salisbury's Impossible Proposal.

Great Britain's fourth proposal, concerning the assent of Russia to the convention, seemed to the president an insuperable difficulty. Unless it was dropped it would prevent a conclusion of negotiations. Russia had never asserted any rights in the waters under discussion and was consequently not a proper party. The president added:

Negotiations for an arbitration have been proceeding between the United States and Great Britain, and both governments are compelled to settle by this friendly method their respective rights and relations in the disputed waters upon a permanent basis. It would seem to follow that no question could arise as to their competency to deal with the whole subject of a single season. If Great Britain now insists upon impossible conditions—viz., that the concession of the right of search be delayed until and made contingent upon the assent of Russia to stop the killing of seals on its own islands and in its own waters and upon the exercise of the president of powers not conferred by law, this would be, in his opinion, a practical withdrawal by Great Britain from the negotiations for a modus vivendi. This he would very much regret, and he confidently hopes that a reconsideration of the proposal of Salisbury to waive the suggestions of Russia's participation in the convention will enable Great Britain to enter upon a modus vivendi for the waters than those to which the contention between the United States and Great Britain relates.

To Arrest the Guilty Vessel.

The president then proposed a provision providing for the arrest by either government of vessels violating the closed season, such vessels to be turned over to the nearest port of the nation whose flag they carry for judicial proceedings.

He Waived His Point.

Lord Salisbury then waived his point that Russia should be a party to the agreement. He suggested that the United States could obtain the desired result "by authorize" the residence of a British agent on the seal islands during the present season to satisfy the British government that the 7,500 limit was not exceeded. Salisbury would extend the prohibition over the entire Behring sea if the United States agreed to the same. In conclusion Lord Salisbury stated that her majesty's government considered it a matter of great importance that the two governments should be in accord on the terms of a modus vivendi at the same time as on a modus vivendi. The suspension of sealing was not a measure which they could repeal another year.

No Foreign Supervision.

Acting Secretary of State Wharton replied June 6 expressing the president's satisfaction with Lord Salisbury's note, and adding:

The president is sure that Lord Salisbury will not question the absolute good faith of this government in observing its stipulation to limit the catch to 7,500. This government, not to be outdone, assures her majesty's government that implied such a doubt or involved any foreign supervision on the islands. If the proposed arrangement fails to be effected, the Canadian sealers now at sea will be as fully within the control of Great Britain as the president would not have suggested the provision for the arrest by either party of vessels violating the prohibition, but would have rested confidently in the assurance given by her majesty's government.

The President's Proposal.

The following proposal is then submitted by the British government:

1. The government of Great Britain will prohibit until May, 1892, the killing of seals in all that part of the Behring sea lying east, southwardly or southeastwardly of the line described in article 1 of the convention between the United States and Russia of date March 30, 1867, and will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectively to insure the observance of this prohibition by the subjects and citizens of Great Britain and all vessels flying its flag.

2. The government of the United States will prohibit until May, 1892, the killing of seals in that part of Behring sea above described, and on the shores and islands thereof belonging to the United States (in excess of 7,500 to be taken on the islands); and the government of the United States will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectually to insure the observance of this prohibition by the citizens of the United States and the vessels flying its flag.

These changes are suggested in order that the modus may clearly have the same territorial extent with the pending proposals for arbitration; that the stipulation for a prohibition of seal killing upon the islands of the United States may rest upon its own order, and that the obligation of the two governments to give prompt and vigorous effect to the agreement may be more clearly apparent.

It Did Not Seem Pertinent.

The first paragraph of Lord Salisbury could not see the pertinency of the third subdivision of Salisbury's agreement because, according to the laws of the United States, no consular officer could be discharged upon the islands by any representative of her majesty's government. The president added, however, that he would be pleased to give British agents reasonable facilities of posting themselves concerning facts at the islands for use before the arbitrators.

Salisbury's Impossible Proposal.

Great Britain's fourth proposal, concerning the assent of Russia to the convention, seemed to the president an insuperable difficulty. Unless it was dropped it would prevent a conclusion of negotiations. Russia had never asserted any rights in the waters under discussion and was consequently not a proper party. The president added:

Negotiations for an arbitration have been proceeding between the United States and Great Britain, and both governments are compelled to settle by this friendly method their respective rights and relations in the disputed waters upon a permanent basis. It would seem to follow that no question could arise as to their competency to deal with the whole subject of a single season. If Great Britain now insists upon impossible conditions—viz., that the concession of the right of search be delayed until and made contingent upon the assent of Russia to stop the killing of seals on its own islands and in its own waters and upon the exercise of the president of powers not conferred by law, this would be, in his opinion, a practical withdrawal by Great Britain from the negotiations for a modus vivendi. This he would very much regret, and he confidently hopes that a reconsideration of the proposal of Salisbury to waive the suggestions of Russia's participation in the convention will enable Great Britain to enter upon a modus vivendi for the waters than those to which the contention between the United States and Great Britain relates.

To Arrest the Guilty Vessel.

The president then proposed a provision providing for the arrest by either government of vessels violating the closed season, such vessels to be turned over to the nearest port of the nation whose flag they carry for judicial proceedings.

He Waived His Point.

Lord Salisbury then waived his point that Russia should be a party to the agreement. He suggested that the United States could obtain the desired result "by authorize" the residence of a British agent on the seal islands during the present season to satisfy the British government that the 7,500 limit was not exceeded. Salisbury would extend the prohibition over the entire Behring sea if the United States agreed to the same. In conclusion Lord Salisbury stated that her majesty's government considered it a matter of great importance that the two governments should be in accord on the terms of a modus vivendi at the same time as on a modus vivendi. The suspension of sealing was not a measure which they could repeal another year.

No Foreign Supervision.

Acting Secretary of State Wharton replied June 6 expressing the president's satisfaction with Lord Salisbury's note, and adding:

The president is sure that Lord Salisbury will not question the absolute good faith of this government in observing its stipulation to limit the catch to 7,500. This government, not to be outdone, assures her majesty's government that implied such a doubt or involved any foreign supervision on the islands. If the proposed arrangement fails to be effected, the Canadian sealers now at sea will be as fully within the control of Great Britain the president would not have suggested the provision for the arrest by either party of vessels violating the prohibition, but would have rested confidently in the assurance given by her majesty's government.

The President's Proposal.

The following proposal is then submitted by the British government:

1. The government of Great Britain will prohibit until May, 1892, the killing of seals in all that part of the Behring sea lying east, southwardly or southeastwardly of the line described in article 1 of the convention between the United States and Russia of date March 30, 1867, and will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectively to insure the observance of this prohibition by the subjects and citizens of Great Britain and all vessels flying its flag.

2. The government of the United States will prohibit until May, 1892, the killing of seals in that part of Behring sea above described, and on the shores and islands thereof belonging to the United States (in excess of 7,500 to be taken on the islands); and the government of the United States will promptly take such steps as are best calculated effectually to insure the observance of this prohibition by the citizens of the United States and the vessels flying its flag.

Arbitration Agreed To.

3. All persons violating the laws of their respective governments in this regard outside the ordinary territorial limits may be arrested and delivered to the nearest duly commissioned officers of either of the high contracting parties, but they shall be handed over as soon as practicable to the authorities of the nation to which they respectively belong for trial and for the imposition of the penalties and forfeitures provided by law.

British Agents to Be Admitted.

4. In order to facilitate such proper inquiries as her majesty's government may desire to make with a view to the presentation of the case of that government before arbitrators, and to their subsequent action thereon for the arbitration may ultimately be reached, it is agreed that a suitable person or persons to be designated by Great Britain will be permitted at any time upon application to visit or to remain upon the islands, having during the present sealing season for that purpose.

A Commission of Experts.

Lord Salisbury, through Sir Julian Pauncefote, then submitted counter proposals differing little from the president's, and added the following:

A commission of four experts, two nominated by the two governments, and a chairman nominated by the arbitrators, if appointed, and if not, by the aforesaid commissioners, shall examine and report on the following questions:

1. What international arrangements, if any, between Great Britain and the United States and Russia are necessary for the proper protection for the purpose of preserving the fur seal race in the northern Pacific ocean from extermination.

2. The government of the United States will take steps to forbid their subjects from sealing to the east of the line indicated in article No. 1 of the present agreement until May 1, 1892.

Lord Salisbury urged that the commission be appointed at once. He agreed to sign the agreement in the precise terms proposed by the president's note of June 4, provided that the question of a joint commission was not left in doubt and that the United States would give an assurance to some time that they would concur in a reference to a joint commission to ascertain what permanent measures are necessary for the preservation of the fur seal generally in the Pacific ocean. The president promptly agreed to the joint commission scheme and appointed June 15 as the day for settling the matter.

Warships for Behring Sea.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary Foster has telegraphed Captain Hooper, commanding the revenue steamer Corwin, at San Francisco, to proceed with all possible dispatch to the Pribilov islands with copies of the president's proclamation for distribution to interested parties, commanders of all United States and British war or revenue vessels, and then to proceed to enforce the provisions of the proclamation. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Soley said that the United States men-of-war Thetis, Alert and Mohican would sail immediately for the seal islands in Behring sea for further catching of seals this season, as agreed upon by the United States and British governments.

M'KINLEY FOR GOVERNOR.

He Is to Be Nominated by Ohio's Republicans Today.

COLUMBUS, O., June 16.—All the candidates for governor have arrived in the city and the Republican state convention, which convened at 2 p. m. today and which will continue till Wednesday. Major McKinley, who is to be nominated for governor, arrived on a special train from Canton at noon. A feature of Stark county clubs and the Cleveland delegation came at the same time and escorted Governor Foraker here. The indications point to a lively contest for some of the lesser places on the ticket. The names of farmer candidates for lieutenant governor are appearing with much favor, but it is not certain that one representing this element will be chosen. From present indications Governor Foraker will present the indictions are for an unusually large convention.

To Hear the Big Blast Fired.

ALBANY, June 16.—Governor Hill, Secretary of State Rice and prominent electricians and mining experts from all over the country will assemble at Hudson tonight to witness the explosion of 60,000 tons of limestone at Peter Callanan's quarry, South Bethlehem, this afternoon. One hundred and fifty holes in the quarry have been drilled to a depth of thirty feet each. These are filled to the surface with dynamite, and when the connections are made a four-fifths of a pound of that explosive will ignite. The current will be turned on by Helen Callanan, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the proprietor. A hole of rock 90 feet high, 60 feet long and 60 feet deep will be displaced. The blast is the largest ever made in this country.

An Explosion on the Philadelphia.

NEW YORK, June 16.—There was a mysterious explosion on board the steamship Philadelphia, lying at the navy yard in Brooklyn. Joseph James, who was in the storeroom at the time, was severely burned and injured by shock. Flames followed the explosion, but they were speedily extinguished. But little damage was done to the vessel. The officers of the vessel were at a loss to know the cause of the explosion, as there was no powder in the vessel, but the theory that some fourth-fifths of the gases arising from turpentine, pitch and tar in the storeroom might account for the phenomenon.

The Juries Were Illegally Drawn.

WHEELING, June 16.—A sensation has been caused in legal circles of the state by the discovery that every one of the four-fifths of the juries drawn since the session of the legislature were drawn illegally. The legislature ordered the jury laws, but owing to a misunderstanding if the changes were generally disregarded. Dozens of important trials will be rendered void and thousands of dollars' expense will be entailed. Judges have refused to hold court until the new law is tested.

Pushing the Land Bill.

LONDON, June 16.—In the house of commons the Irish land purchase bill passed a third reading by a vote of 229 to 98. The house of lords will now have agreed that for the remainder of the session government measures shall precede all others. All will be dropped except the Irish land bill, the education, the factories and the public health and the renewal of gold coinage bills.

England's Copyright Regulations.

LONDON, June 16.—In the house of commons Sir James Fergusson said that the government had been advised that the English regulations respecting copyrights were not favorable to the United States and they would certainly alter the conditions of American law.

A ROYAL CO-RESPONDENT

Has Wales Been Named by Lady Brooke's Lord?

THERE'S A REPORT TO THAT EFFECT

Secretary Stanhope Apologizes for the Prince in the House of Common—No Action Will Be Taken Against His Royal Highness.

LONDON, June 16.—There is a rumor today, which cannot be confirmed, that Lord Brooke, son of the Earl of Warwick, has filed a petition for divorce from his wife on the ground of adultery, the Prince of Wales being charged as co-respondent. It is a matter of common knowledge that heretofore both the prince and Lord and Lady Brooke have maintained that the intimacy between the prince and Lady Brooke was platonic.

Apologizing for the Prince.

The first official explanations in parliament last evening were what was expected from Stanhope, an aristocrat of the aristocrats, and all the more intense in his devotion to royalty because, being a younger son of the noble house of Stanhope, he has no prospects except what royal favor chooses to bestow. There was an ominous silence in the Liberal and Radical benches when Stanhope concluded his qunsi-apology for the prince with the statement that the government did not propose to do any thing about the matter. The squires and lordlings cheered, but their applause had a hollow sound in contrast with the evident displeasure of the representatives of the popular party.

The Prince Hadn't Seen It.

In his explanation of the Tranby Croft matter, Secretary of War Stanhope said last summer, before the accident of consumed "The army regulations in question had undoubtedly never been specially brought to the notice of the Prince of Wales, but when they had been laid before him, with all the circumstances of the case, the Prince of Wales saw his error of judgment in not requiring Sir William Gordon Cumming to make an immediate report to his commanding officer. In this view I concur, but I should like to express my personal opinion that, had any one else suddenly heard that a friend who had greatly distinguished himself in the service had been accused of such an offense, he would certainly have acted at once and adopted a course that would bring an immediate and irretrievable blight on his whole future."

Prince Christian, brother-in-law of the Prince of Wales, was present in the house of commons during the baccarat discussion.

The Conservatives Alarmed.

As stated in these dispatches just two weeks ago, the effect of the baccarat trial upon the next general election is likely to be great. The Conservatives in power find themselves are now beginning to appreciate the fact that the game at Tranby Croft may prove to them a Greenback case proved to home rule. At the farthest, the general election is near at hand, and there will not be time for the constituencies to forget what occurred.

Worse than the Mordaunt Case.

The case is much worse than the Mordaunt case, because then the Prince of Wales on oath denied the charge, which, even if admitted, would not have been criminal under the English law. In this case he has admitted the gambling under oath, and gambling with cards is a crime. Sir Edward Clarke does not propose to stage Lawyer under the burden of aristocratic displeasure which he incurred by his attack on Labouchere. Edward is a man of the people, sprung from a respectable family, but not akin to the tanta-ra-ra classes.

Whatever he has gained he has acquired by his personal merit and ability, even to the air which adorns his name, and the Tories would lose more than he would by any rupture that would drive him out of the party. He would be a tower of strength to the Liberals in the coming campaign. Lord Salisbury and his associates are well aware of this and are likely to smother whatever wrath they may feel.

Cumming's Hearty Reception.

The correspondent of a London paper who witnessed the demonstration at Fonthes states that it was the most enthusiastic scene he was ever present at, and that mingled with the cheers for Sir William were numerous loud groans for the duke and the Englishmen who had played the usual on the laird of Altyre.

THE INTERNATIONAL RELIGIOUS CONGRESS.

The International Irish Battle.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Counselor W. Lane O'Neill, who recently succeeded on behalf of the Parnellites in temporarily restraining Eugene Kelly, the New York banker, from sending any more of the $48,000 of the Irish funds in his hands to the McCarthyites, has had nothing granted in his temporary setback of Judge Barlett's decision, which practically vacated the restraint. Lawyer Lane O'Neill has several papers in a second motion upon entirely new evidence for another injunction.

All Ready for the Suburban.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The great Suburban Handicap, at once the greatest and most popular race on the American turf, will be run at Sheepshead Bay this afternoon. The Suburban is to Americans what the Derby is to the English, and fully 30,000 persons will witness the race. Tenny will go to the post a warm favorite. There is general consensus of opinion that Tenny has but one real rival in the race, and that Tee Tray will push him, but take second place only.

Fell Overboard and Drowned.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., June 16.—J. B. Clapsattle, son of Mr. B. Clapsattle, a prominent merchant here, was drowned at Olcott. He was engaged in rigging his yacht when he fell overboard. He was twenty-one years old.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Advt.

GENIAL FRITZ IS GONE.

Death of the Famous German Dialect Comedian, J. K. Emmet.

NEW YORK, June 16.—J. K. Emmet, the comedian, died at the Storm King House, Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, yesterday afternoon of pneumonia. He went there in bad health about a week ago, but his condition was not considered really critical until Saturday. Joseph Kline Emmet was born of Irish-German parents in St. Louis about fifty years ago. He made his first public life as the drummer boy of a Missouri regiment in the Federal service during the War of the Rebellion.

After the war he joined a dramatic amateur dramatic company, and soon developed a talent for singing and dancing and for mimicking the German-English dialect. His first successes were made under the management of the Eeber Brothers, who ran a variety theater in St. Louis and like then famous Palace garden in Cincinnati.

In Cincinnati Mr. Emmet played an engagement of several months' duration under the name of the Count de Glenfriss, a plagiarism of Frank Chanfrau's name.

Besides doing the "straight business" in the olio, he used to sing and dance German songs and such as "Patty Leetle Kathrine with the Roden Hair," a parody on "Pretty Little Susan," which was then all the rage. He became a great local favorite and attracted the attention of Uncle Dick Hooley, of Chicago. He made a great hit in Brooklyn and not long after he appeared in the play with the then famous and popular Dan Bryant.

At that time Gus Philipps, "Ooty Goot," who is now lying very sick at St. Vincent's, was the king of the Bowery Americus club and a contributor to the New York Clipper, in which he published a series of personal sketches under the title "Walking the Chalks." They gave Emmet an idea which he utilized in a song, "I Walk Dot Broadway Down." He sang this dressed in German peddler's togs, with checken plaits, short skirts and sabots. Large busties were in great vogue with the ladies in those days, and Emmet wore one that was the envy of every female one who ever heard him sing this song and saw the walk he took during its chorus will ever forget the comical, laughter foreladen effect he produced.

It was not, however, until Mr. Emmet met Charles Gaylor, the dramatist who wrote for him "Frits, Our Cousin German," he began to reap very handsome popular favor. The play was first produced in Buffalo, and made an instantaneous success. Its profits were immense.

Mr. Emmet was the first American actor to make big money in England. Edwin Forrest, James E. Murdoch, Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth, Charlotte Cushman and Mrs. Anna Cora Mowatt had all achieved more or less fame in Great Britain, but the man had not reaped very substantial financial rewards. Mr. Emmet took London by storm, and ever since he has been as popular and as profitable as Toole before and after his retirement. He played several tours through Australia, and wherever the English language is spoken by 10,000 people "Joe Emmet" has been a star and idol.

The man's magnetism was simply marvelous. Possessed of a handsome form, a splendid set of teeth, a pair of roguish, laughing eyes and a most captivating smile, Joe Emmet would not be on a stage five minutes before every man, woman and child in the audience would have an idea that he was going to do a funny thing. His voice, though slightly nasal, was very melodious, and as he threw his whole soul into his work with an energy that was delightful, the results he achieved were unapproachable by all imitators, and he naturally had many.

He made his debut in the outset of his stellar career, and for many years he was a model husband. At times he was bibulous in his habits, and then he was uncontrollable. He was separated for several years from her husband a couple of years ago on statutory grounds. Even then her husband settled half a million of money on her. They had one daughter, Mrs. Solomon Jr., who is married, and was with his father when he died. Mr. Emmet introduced many popular melodies to the stage. His lullaby, which he sang to lull little ones to sleep. He heard the air in Switzerland, and had words written to it. He also was the author of "Sweet Violets" and "The Cuckoo Song."

Several years ago he bought a tract of land on the hillside above Albany, and on it he erected a chalet of most exquisite appearance. Everything in his house, in color and of strange costumes, his home was the most picturesque of any on the Hudson. He was a most delightful and drawing card known to the theaters. He could make more money than any man who ever appeared on any stage. He probably earned during his career over $500,000. Many will sigh when they learn that poor Joe is dead.

AFTER THIRTY-ONE YEARS

Cameron Came Back, but His Wife Would Not Have Him.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., June 16.—Mrs. William Madden opened her door last evening in response to a summons and was greeted by a tall man, evidently about seventy years old.

"Does Mrs. William Cameron live here?" he asked.

"No," was the reply.

Looking her coly into her face, the stranger said:

"Mary, don't you know me! I am Charles, your husband, and humbly ask forgiveness."

The woman started and, closing the door in the man's face, sank swooning to the floor.

Charles Cameron, a cousin of the United States senator, lived in Pottsville, Pa., in 1848, and was a well known bulletin conductor. In that year he married Miss Mary Markle.

For a few years the two lived happily together, when Cameron began to drink heavily. In the spring of 1860 he deserted his wife and children and had been gone ever since. His wife will not live with him.

THE DEADLOCK AT HARTFORD.

The Senate Met, but the Senators Could Not Agree.

HARTFORD, June 16.—The senate met yesterday at 1 o'clock and at once took a recess until 2:30 o'clock. At the caucuses held a caucus on the appropriation bills.

When the senate met in the afternoon an attempt was made by the Republicans to have the bill instructing the controller to draw his order for all the claims against the state put upon its passage. The Democrats, however, voted against it and had the bill referred to the committee on state expenditures. The senate adjourned until June 29.

The Furnaces Will Resume.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., June 16.—The Everett and Riddlesburg furnaces, with a total capacity of 185 tons, after five months' idleness will go into blast in two weeks.

This Date in History—June 16.

1815—Hugo the Great, father of Hugh Capet, head of the third series of French kings, born.

1330—Edward I of England born; died 1397; he completed the conquest of Wales and made his first born "Prince of Wales"—a title continued ever since.

1423—John Plantagenet, the famous duke of Marlborough, died.

1825—Battle of Sacandaville on James Island, S. C.; the Federals were repulsed with a loss of ten men in a fierce contest.

1880—Discovery that the imperial palace at Gatschina was undermined, made just before the time set for blowing up the czar and family; widespread conspiracy revealed; many arrests.

The Knack in Breadmaking.

Three slices of bread shown by a Lewiston flour dealer spoke for themselves. Placed side by side they shaded very abruptly into three strikingly distinct tints. One was of the line of Graham and fell into your hand like a half baked brick. Another was nearly white, and would be greeted with pleasure by a hungry man. The third was so white that snow would have to be bleached to compare with it; moreover, it possessed that spongy texture which is so admirying to the nutritive qualities of so much pride to the cook. It threatened to dissolve in one's mouth, and would tempt a gorged epicure to eat. It would not be a stretch to say one could distinguish them in the dark.

The flour dealer deposed that the three slices of bread lost sight by three women from one and the same kind of flour. The cook who produced the first slice was dissatisfied with the flour, while the woman who made the bread last mentioned said she could make good bread out of flour that didn't cost less, than four dollars a barrel. It is evident that bread cooking is a gift, with feeden plaits, short skirts and sabots. Large busties were in great vogue with the ladies in those days, and Emmet wore one that was the envy of every female one who ever heard him sing this song and saw the walk he took during its chorus will ever forget the comical, laughter foreladen effect he produced.

DID YARD GET THE CASH

A New Theory as to How Bardsley Fell.

THE LAND SCHEME THAT FAILED.

Yard, Marsh and Bardsley Were Ready to Finance an English Syndicate When the Baring Crash Came and Knocked Their Plans on the Head.

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Unless the indications of the day's developments in the Bardsley case are deceptive the investigation is probably close to finding out the whole remarkable story. The puzzle of what Bardsley did with all the vast sums of money he stole is not likely to be a puzzle much longer. According to the present indications it was not politics, nor a desire to enrich his friends, nor any other of the improbable causes that have been suggested, but a sort of blind pool in southern speculations that wrecked the Keystone bank, drained the city treasury and brought "Honest John" Bardsley face to face with a lifelong imprisonment. The center of the pool and the chief actor in the whole story is alleged to be H. H. Yard, who came to this city and surrendered himself last evening.

Yard's Big Scheme.

The city authorities believe that in him they have the key of the whole situation. Yard has been known for a long time as a daring and generally successful speculator, and about a year ago he turned his attention to southern investments. This was just at the time that English capitalists were putting so much money into the south. Yard found at a place called Liberty, in the southwestern part of Virginia, an abandoned iron district, two old disused furnaces and a lot of other property belonging to a partly moribund concern known as the Columbia Liberty Iron company. This he bought up the property, including 18,000 acres of land and an iron mine that hadn't been worked for years.

Ready for a Fat Pocketbook.

Then he set about to develop his purchase for the market. He organized the Liberty Furnace company, with a capital of $250,000, of which $400,000 was paid in and a bonded indebtedness of $200,000 more. He next proceeded to open up the country. He built twelve miles of railroad to connect the furnaces, he opened the mines, cut down trees, started fowns, in the neighborhood of which he bought large quantities of real estate, and by fall had the whole property ready for sale at a big advance to the first English syndicate that should come along with a fat pocketbook.

Killed by the Baring Crash.

But just at that time came the Baring Brothers' collapse and the stringency in the money market. The English syndicate suddenly developed cold feet all right. The Liberty Furnace company was not in a position to carry on the work itself. Yard was left with all the improvements on his hands in a property practically unsalable. The next link in the chain is President Marsh, of the Keystone National bank. It is known that Marsh was singularly and completely under Yard's control. They were visiting the seashore together, and Yard pointed out a young woman friend as the person he would like to have Marsh marry. Marsh promptly courted and married her.

Marsh was a feeble man, without will of his own. Yard was bold, dashing, aggressive fellow, with nerve and push, and he did as he pleased with the other man. He pleased to have large loans from the bank and he got them. He pleased to overdraw his account there many thousand dollars and he did so. On the day of the run he pleased to put $28,000 of his own checks in the bank, which were subsequently found to be worthless, and he was pleased to have such other dealings there that the bank has now a claim of $130,000 against him. It is also known that Marsh loaned out great sums to somebody, and the supposition is that the somebody was Yard.

It Seemed a Nice Thing.

Probably a year ago was the time when Bardsley began to get largely in arrears with his public accounts. He was intimately connected with Marsh, and had accommodated Marsh's bank with deposits in excess of the legal limit. If there should have been presented to him then a scheme by which all his losses and shortages could be covered, and he be left a rich man it is a plausible theory that he would have accepted the opportunity. The city authorities are believed now to think that the opportunity was Yard's southern venture, and it was broached to Bardsley through Marsh. All that Bardsley had to do was to turn over the public funds to Marsh.

All Marsh had to do was to loan the money, either through the bank or personally to Yard. All Yard had to do was to get the Virginia property into shape for sale and sell it. All through the south similar investments had proved as profitable as Yard could imagine or Bardsley hope for. At Big Stone Gap and Roanoke land had been bought for $2 an acre and sold to English syndicates for $1,000, $1,800 and $2,000 an acre. English syndicates were buying anything in sight that had a show of dividend making.

They Will Sue Uncle Sam.

The Spring Garden depositors' committee met in Labor hall last night. Addresses calling for the vigorous administration of justice were delivered by the Rev. Drs. Duncan Macgregor and Knox Von H. Young. Resolutions were adopted calling on the president to investigate the conduct of District Attorney Read in withdrawing warrants for the arrest of Directors Lewis, Evans and Ephraim Young. He was also resolved to sue the government for the percentage of the deposits lost. Every vigorous remark was heartily applauded.

He Wanted a Death Sentence.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The jury in the case of Ferdinand Legrano, charged with the murder of Charles Mauro on April 20, 1891, returned a verdict of murder in the second degree. When Legrano was informed of the nature of the verdict he exclaimed: "It's a humbug. I don't want imprisonment for life. I want a death sentence!"

Rioting at Bridgeport.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 16.—Part of the police rebelled last night and defied Chief Rylands. The rebellious policemen, all of whom are Democrats, refused to obey a Republican mayor. There was a riot at the station house and the militia was called out. More trouble is feared.

Shot His Little Brother.

EASTON, Pa., June 16.—Joseph Scarlow, aged fifteen years, accidentally shot and killed his eleven-year-old brother Frank. The boys were hunting near their home at Belgelville when the accident occurred.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

Full dispatches from Berne and Basel give detailed descriptions of the heartrending scenes accompanying the terrible railroad accident which occurred on Sunday. At least 130 were killed.

Rumors here and abroad that J. B. Haggin's rich Anaconda copper mine has been purchased by either Baron Hirsch or the Rothschilds are said to be due to the sale of an option to the latter which has yet some time to run.

Alderman Charles Smith, of New York, better known as "Silver Dollar Smith," was indicted by the grand jury for assault in the third degree, committed on Frank Wolf.

Statements are made that the New York Life Insurance company, owing to a loss of $2,000,000 in shrinkages of real estate values, finds a serious aftermath of defalcation an exceedingly serious matter.

The sloop yacht Emilia was run down and cut in two in the North river, at New York, by a tugboat. The yacht sank instantly, and two of her passengers, Frank Jenkins and William H. Rahan, were drowned. The pilot of the tug, Thomas Walsh, is under arrest.

General O. Woodward, of the League of Atlantic I. O. O. F., has appointed Dr. James F. Munn, of Syracuse, to the office of assistant surgeon general in place of Dr. Jerome H. Brown, resigned.

Sevill Schofield, of the firm of Sevill Schofield, Son & Co., the Manayunk woolen manufacturers, has assigned. Liabilities between $100,000 and $200,000.

The board of control, representing the national commission of the World's fair, rejected the nomination of General N. P. Chipman, of California, as chief of the department of horticulture.

The reports that Rev. Sam Small was expelled from the M. E. church are erroneous. He was discontinued at his own request.

Judge McConnell, of Chicago, has decided that the city could not compel the street car companies to heat their cars in winter.

Samuel Booth and John A. Snooks, composing the firm of Samuel Booth & Co., agricultural show printers at 39 Centre street, New York, have assigned.

THE DAY WAS A SCORCHER.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 16.—The thermometer at 2.30 p. m. stood at 92 degs. in the shade.

The Warmest on Record.

NEW YORK, June 16.—At 8 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer stood at 79, at noon 99 and at 2.30 p. m. it was 96. The signal office says it was the warmest June 15 on record.

Crops in Need of Rain.

HARTFORD, June 16.—The thermometer registered 101 degs. in the state Monday. The crops throughout the state are greatly in need of rain.

Throughout New England.

BOSTON, June 16.—Heat advices from many towns in Maine and New Hampshire Monday showed a very sultry condition of things. The thermometers received from Maine points showed a range from 92 in the latter to 100 in Portland. Of eighteen towns in New Hampshire but one was below 90, and that was Fabyanhouse, where the thermometer was 88, while the other towns reported from 90 to 96, the latter figure at Contoocook. White River Junction, Vt., reported 92; Woonsocket, R. I., 96; Newport, R. I., 78.

Commissioner Harvey Resigns.

TRENTON, June 16.—G. B. M. Harvey, New Jersey's commissioner of banking and insurance, resigned his office yesterday. Mr. Harvey's reason for resigning, he writes, is that he cannot afford to give the amount of time which the duties of the office demand for the remuneration offered. Governor Abbett urged him to remain, but without effect. The view is expressed that the National Building and Loan association "cannot be relied upon to furnish opportunities for safe investment."

Ex-Senator McDonald Dying.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 16.—There has been a very decided change for the worse in ex-Senator McDonald's condition within the past twelve hours, and he is now so troubled that no hope is entertained of his recovery. He suffers very little pain and is quite cheerful.

Weather Indications.

Generally fresh to fair, partly cloudy, with nearly stationary, followed by slowly falling temperature.

TO GIRLS WHO SING.

A SINGER'S ADVICE TO THOSE ANXIOUS TO STUDY MUSIC.

The Task That Lies Before the Young Woman with a Taste for an Extensive Musical Education—Miss Emma Albani's Long Course of Study.

My first thought, in giving advice to a young girl desirous of becoming a singer, would be to warn her of the very great obstacles to be surmounted; to give her an idea of the time and labor and patience which are necessary to success, and to ask her if she was perfectly sure that she was destined and fitted for this career.

If her voice really warrants cultivation, and if she has the necessary determination, I would then say, "Go ahead, and godspeed!" I succeeded, and why should not she succeed also?

At the same time it often seems to me as if many pupils of vocal culture in our days begin, and are permitted to begin, in the wrong way. They often begin too late; and more than this, not enough weight is placed upon what I consider the absolute necessity of a thorough, all round musical education. I was particularly fortunate in this respect, and I attribute a great deal of my success as a singer to the fact that I was well trained in all the other branches of music.

When I was eight years old I was thoroughly conversant with nearly all the classical pianoforte music, and could play most of the Beethoven and Mozart sonatas. When I left Italy and went to Paris to study I was seventeen years old, and although my whole idea was to study music, strangely enough I had no idea of becoming a singer.

I studied in Paris the pianoforte and organ playing, composition and also the voice. Dear old Duprez, my master, finally told me that I ought to give up all the rest and devote myself solely to singing, and this I determined to do.

At that time Povinatowski, the well known Polish musician and composer, told me that the French school was not suited for my voice, and insisted that I should study in Italy. It was finally decided that, I should go to Lamperti, the celebrated Milanese master. With him I remained nine months. This may at first seem a short time, but it must be remembered how much and how thoroughly I had studied before.

CARE OF THE VOICE.

If a student has the real genius of song, it will show itself very soon under proper teaching. If she is destined to sing she will sing; and although it is very far from my idea to recommend slovenliness or shirking, it is also true that the mere training of the voice can be overdone.

Assuming that the beginner has reached the point where her public career is about to begin, the time comes when some really valuable advice can be given. Up to that time the teacher will be her helper and guide. She must, of course, take the greatest care of her health, for anything which is bad for the general health of the body is also bad for the voice, and vice versa.

It is especially necessary that the stomach and digestive organs should be in a thoroughly good condition, and for this reason a singer should avoid all indigestible food. Nuts, cakes and candies are especially bad for the voice, and a strengthening, simple diet is the best to adopt.

A great deal of exercise and fresh air are absolutely necessary. For an opera singer, who is probably getting plenty of active exercise on the stage, I consider driving to be the best exercise of all—especially if she is never a day, no matter what the weather may be, that I do not drive for an hour and a half, making a special point of this on singing days.

THE FIRST APPEARANCE.

With regard to clothing, the chief thing, of course, is not to catch cold. Singers should be careful not to muffle up their throats, for this only makes that precious organ the more susceptible to exposure. Pneumonia is to be avoided on singing days, but otherwise it is an excellent exercise for the voice, and to be recommended while the weather is fine.

These simple precautions are not difficult to follow. They do not inconvenience to any great extent, and they repay tenfold.

The first appearance of a beginner will always be a very trying occasion, but to her her art must be sacred, and she must live up to its highest canons. Not only must she show what she has learned, but also what she is herself. The voice itself comes from God, and the acquirement of vocal technique is a mere matter of routine. It is in the singing itself, the pleading and the declamation, that the artist shows what is her very own—her artistic personality.

Probably the young entertainer will be intoxicated by her first applause. It is, indeed, the most grateful of all tributes to the artist; but she must not be induced by this to think that it is the highest. Applause should never cease to study; and they will find that, however well they sing it is always possible to improve.

It is a very fortunate thing for a singer to take a vacation every year, during which time all singing is absolutely given up.

Although vacations are undoubtedly necessary, both for the student and for the finished singer, still they should not be too long, for in that case ground would be lost which it might be a laborious matter to recover.

Before closing I want most especially to speak of Wagner's music in its relation to the singer, because I have previously referred to deny the theory that it is in itself injurious to the voice. Of course most of his beautiful music is very difficult to sing. The intervals are new and unusual, and there are many very long sustained notes and cantabile passages which must be sung carefully. But I maintain that to a properly trained singer, and there is the whole point of my argument, Wagner's music need have no terrors.

If a young and inexperienced artist attempts to sing these parts, it is very likely that the result will be injurious. The actual days are only just over, and the voice has not yet learned how best to make use of its freedom. It is always best to begin with simple tasks in any art or profession; but in the case of a singer a few years have brought experience and self reliance, she should be able to sing anything without injury to her voice, always provided that is the way she trained in the first instance.—Mme. Emma Albani in Youth's Companion.

For a cut take powdered rosin, pound it very fine and spread or sift it over the cut. Wrap a piece of soft linen around it and wet it in cold water quite often. This will prevent inflammation and soreness.

A MOTHER'S LESSON.

Something had gone wrong that day,
And my mother was grieved with me;
And sharply I spoke to my little boy,
When he came to bring petted.
I told him he ought by himself to find play,
And with questions not to trouble,
For he was a little hindering thing
And made me more just double.

He stared in surprise, then turned away,
With his curl crowned head bent lowly,
His winsome face had a grieving look,
And his lips were quivering slowly.
I turned again to my writing then,
And the room seemed very quiet,
But after all I was ill at ease,
And longed for my baby's voice.

I turned to call him, when something went
By the window with sudden flashing,
I heard horse-hoofs clatter and fling fast,
And a sound of something crashing.
I sprang to the door; men were lifting up
A child, all limp and quiet,
From the ground where the trampling hoofs had been.
In an instant I was by it.

Kneeling there in the dusty street,
Eager and faint and fearful,
While a pitying crowd came surging round,
Horror-struck and tearful.
But, ah! 'twas another mother's heart
That was broken that summer morning.
Who saw the light of her life go out
With never a word of warning.

But where was my boy? Why, in grandma's room
(And the room seemed full of glory),
Curled in her lap, with her arms clasped round,
And listening to a story.
I have learned my lesson, and now I deem
Of more worth than gold or pleasure,
To live for my "little hindering thing"
Lest I merit heart breaking leisure.

—Lillian Grey in Housewife.

THE WIDOW SMITH.

What a Careful Study of Brooklyn's City Directory Reveals About Her.

The Widow Smith is a most interesting individual. She is young and old, placid and irritable, rich and poor, lean and fat, tall and short, dark and light, beautiful and plain, blessed with many children, destitute of any, a devout church member, a non-churchgoer, devoted to bread making and unable to cook at all. She is fond of dress, and she takes no heed of her clothes. She is gay and sad at once, sick and well, tired and overflowing with buoyant spirits, wise in the learning of the ancients and unable to write her name. She cherishes the most contradictory hopes, fears, prejudices, beliefs, opinions, loves, hates, tendencies. She has a passion for candy and pickles, tragedy and comedy, Booth's Hamlet and Hoyt's "Tin Soldier."

The Widow Smith lives in Brooklyn. Brooklyn is indeed the paradise of widows. It would be an interesting subject for investigation why the City of Churches should be so fatal, apparently, to married men. Or is it that its quieter streets form calm eddies in the rushing currents of metropolitan life unto which these shipwrecked of hope steer their shattered barks for sheltered sailing on narrower waters, or for careful recharge by anvailing the final dissolution? Brooklyn is an immense harbor full of such disabled vessels.

Some of these barks bend new sails to their masts, and make brave shift against the winds and tides. Brooklyn widows are found in drop the metaphor, earning their bread at dressmaking, millinery and minor arts and crafts of a thousand descriptions. They keep candy and stationery stores, they sell hardware, two of these are undertakers and one runs a fish market. They peddle milk and fruit and butter all over the streets, they preserve fruits and experiment with home bakeries. They engage in large ventures once in a while. One of these has been on for years in important dry goods business, and retired with an ample fortune a couple of seasons ago. Her masculine successor, who tried to imitate her methods with a little less success, became bankrupt with astonishing promptitude. It is a widow who runs, over a masculine name, a well known men's clothing store.

The Widow Smith—who though lost in generalities must not be forgotten—is able to cherish such a variety of tastes and exhibit such inconsistencies of character because there are 198 of her, without counting the young widows Smith who live at home with their parents and so are unknown to the directory, and without making reckoning either of the Smyth, Smythe, Smitt, Smitz, Smith, Smidth, Smid, Smet, Schmitz, Schmidt, Schmitz, Schmitz, Schmitt, Schmidts, Schmidt and Schmid widows, who form of themselves "a large and influential element in the community."

It is interesting to note the names borne by the Widows Smith. Thirty of her are known as Mary Smith, thirteen as Catherine, ten as Elizabeth, ten as Sarah, six as Ellen, five each as Ann, Annie, Margaret and Susan. There are four Bridgets, three Emilys, three Louisas, three Helens, three Marias and two each who are called Abbie, Alice, Amelia, Anna, Anne, Caroline, Carrie, Ellen Emeline, Josephine, Julia, Martha, Minnie, Rebecca and Rose. There is but one Widow Adelia, Adeline, Annette, Barbara, Charlotte, Chary, Christiana, Deborah, Delia, Dora, Elia, Harriett, Harriotte, Hattie, Kate, Laura, Letitia, Lizzie, Louisa, Margaretta, Matilda, Marie, Rosanna, Selina, Jane, Sinia, Sophy, Veronika, Susanna and Wilda Smith. —New York Recorder.

A Meat Chopper.

A meat chopper for domestic use is distinguished by the fact that the meat is cut by means of a knife that is a pair of scissors and is not torn apart; neither is it ground into a greasy pulp. The forcing screw feeds the meat up to a knife with eight blades, alternating between a fixed two bladed knife and a cutting plate of novel construction. The plate has a number of grooves converging toward a slotted aperture in the center between the grooves having sharp cutting edges. The work is well and rapidly done. A medium sized machine will produce four pounds of filled sausages per minute.—New York Telegram.

The Pian Works Well.

A sensible man, wise in his generation and beyond his kind, has admitted that the only way for a man to save money is to give it all to his wife and let her manage it for him. Women—and when one says women he does not mean butterflies—have a horror of debt, and will manage to live inside their income be it ever so limited. This Utopian man adds farther that he has, since he gave his wife means of the exchequer, no unexpected bills coming in as unreasonable and embarrassing times, but everything is done on a cash basis, and economy is being laid up for the future. New York Sun.

When decanters and carafes become so discolored inside that shot or fine coals will not cleanse them, fill the bottle with finely chopped potato skins, cork tightly and let the bottle stand for three days, when the skins will ferment. Turn out and rinse. The bottle will be as bright and clean as when new.

CHARLES G. JEFFERSON.

The Boy State Man Who Can Lift Over 1,571 Pounds.

One of the youngest amateur lifters of heavy weights in America is undoubtedly Charles G. Jefferson, of Clinton, Mass., who not long ago is credited with having broken David L. Dowd's record of lifting 1,443½ pounds of iron with both hands by easily raising 1,571½ pounds. Jefferson is thirty-seven years of age, 5 ft. 10 in. tall, and carries about with him 161 pounds of muscle and bone. There isn't any fat about him. He is a New Hampshire man by birth, and from early youth displayed remarkable strength. Before he began to train he could shoulder a 203-pound barrel of sugar and walk off with it.

In 1885 his unusual strength had attracted so much attention that he concluded to systematically develop himself. The result was that in a short time he could lift 407 pounds with his middle finger. One day he surprised himself by raising one end of a 1,026-pound beam with a single finger, a lift said to be equal to 914 pounds. Another of his simple feats is to lie upon his back, grasp 200 pounds of iron that lie beyond his head and swing them into the air above him twelve times.

Wrestler Jake Mans.

Jake Mans, amateur champion middleweight wrestler of this west, was born in Milwaukee about twenty-five years ago. He is 5 ft. 6 in. tall, and tips the beam at 143 pounds in wrestling costume. Mans, who is a member of the Milwaukee Athletic society, is an all round athlete of no mean ability. Though generally heavily handicapped in the matter of weight, he offsets that disadvantage by his great headwork, wonderful science and catlike movements when on the mat. He wrestled his first match in 1886, and his record since then has been a brilliant one. He won the title of middleweight champion wrestler of Wisconsin at the Milwaukee exposition in July last year.

At the big athletic tournament at Chicago March 3 this year Mans and C. G. Knode were the competitors in the final bout for the middleweight amateur championship of the United States and the west. The bout was well contested and caused much enthusiasm, but as the match was limited to time, and as neither man had gained a fall, it was declared a draw. Mans expressed his willingness to continue till a satisfactory decision could be arrived at, and as Knode declined to go on with the contest Mans was declared the winner.

THE ABOVE is not used altogether as a mere advertising "catch line," but is very significant in connection with our business.

OUR SALES the first week in June this year were larger than any corresponding week since we have been doing business in Plainfield.

WE FEEL quite proud of it because of the fact that the cry of dull trade is heard all over the country. We are going to make a strong effort to be able to say this of the whole month. Low PRICES must help to do it.

CHARLES G. JEFFERSON.

The Boy State Man Who Can Lift Over 1,571 Pounds.

One of the youngest amateur lifters of heavy weights in America is undoubtedly Charles G. Jefferson, of Clinton, Mass., who not long ago is credited with having broken David L. Dowd's record of lifting 1,443½ pounds of iron with both hands by easily raising 1,571½ pounds. Jefferson is thirty-seven years of age, 5 ft. 10 in. tall, and carries about with him 161 pounds of muscle and bone. There isn't any fat about him. He is a New Hampshire man by birth, and from early youth displayed remarkable strength. Before he began to train he could shoulder a 203-pound barrel of sugar and walk off with it.

In 1885 his unusual strength had attracted so much attention that he concluded to systematically develop himself. The result was that in a short time he could lift 407 pounds with his middle finger. One day he surprised himself by raising one end of a 1,026-pound beam with a single finger, a lift said to be equal to 914 pounds. Another of his simple feats is to lie upon his back, grasp 200 pounds of iron that lie beyond his head and swing them into the air above him twelve times.

Wrestler Jake Mans.

Jake Mans, amateur champion middleweight wrestler of this west, was born in Milwaukee about twenty-five years ago. He is 5 ft. 6 in. tall, and tips the beam at 143 pounds in wrestling costume. Mans, who is a member of the Milwaukee Athletic society, is an all round athlete of no mean ability. Though generally heavily handicapped in the matter of weight, he offsets that disadvantage by his great headwork, wonderful science and catlike movements when on the mat. He wrestled his first match in 1886, and his record since then has been a brilliant one. He won the title of middleweight champion wrestler of Wisconsin at the Milwaukee exposition in July last year.

At the big athletic tournament at Chicago March 3 this year Mans and C. G. Knode were the competitors in the final bout for the middleweight amateur championship of the United States and the west. The bout was well contested and caused much enthusiasm, but as the match was limited to time, and as neither man had gained a fall, it was declared a draw. Mans expressed his willingness to continue till a satisfactory decision could be arrived at, and as Knode declined to go on with the contest Mans was declared the winner.

Rolled Wheat.

Do not many remember among the good things of childhood that old fashioned dish, boiled corn? But how many of those who remember how good it was as their grandmothers made it know that boiled wheat is far superior? Indeed, it is so much better that we have given up the corn entirely, and when we want a dish of that kind we use the wheat. As the process of preparing is easy to be understood I will give it.

Take two or three quarts of sound wheat and pick it over thoroughly. We run ours through the fanning mill and then have to pick out many odds and ends. Put it into a porcelain kettle and with it a pint of clean wood ashes tied in a coarse cloth, had gained a fall, it was declared a draw. Mans expressed his willingness to continue till a satisfactory decision could be arrived at, and as Knode declined to go on with the contest Mans was declared the winner.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

—The Plainfield Reform club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The Crescents will cross bats with the Seton Hall College team in a game of base ball next Saturday afternoon.

—At two o'clock this afternoon the thermometer in front of Stelle's drug store registered 90 degrees in the shade.

—Yesterday was the hottest day yet this Summer. At three o'clock the thermometer registered 96 degrees in the shade.

—Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men will hold a meeting for the election of officers one week from Friday evening.

—John Brown of South Second street, was held in bail yesterday to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of wife beating.

—VanEmburgh and White's advertisement will be of especial interest to ladies, to-day. The offer made is novel and will be gigantic. Read the advertisement.

—It was rumored in this city last evening that a cyclone had visited either Belvidere or the near vicinity, and that several houses had been destroyed. The report could not be confirmed.

—Gov. Abbett has refused to appoint a County Excise Board for Bergen on the ground that the new law does not apply to the northern counties, where the licenses are under the control of the courts.

—Bananas for breakfast are quite as much in gastronomic order now as oranges ever were, since the published article which claimed for them so many many health-giving qualities and beneficial virtues.

—Miss Smith, the superintendent of Kitchen Garden will read a paper at the meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. All who are interested in knowing about the kitchen garden work are invited.

—The following contest which was scheduled to take place on the Crescent League alleys last evening between members of the Y. M. C. A. bowling team and the Crescent League team, was postponed indefinitely on account of the hot weather.

—The rain storm of last evening may have been the cause of some damage, but the good done by it more than counteracts the evil. Farmers went to bed with thankful hearts last night, for with many a few more hot days meant a heavy loss in crops.

—Some of the members of the Y. M. C. A. will take a bicycle run to Westfield Tuesday evening next. Further information in regard to this and subsequent rides may be obtained from Charles C. Dilts, chairman of the Committee on Physical Work, or at the Association Rooms.

—Mr. R. P. Wilder, one of the originators of the Student Volunteer Missionary movement, will speak on the subject of Foreign Missions at the prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue church this evening at eight o'clock. At nine o'clock a social meeting will be held in the church parlors, to which all who are unable to attend the first meeting but who would like to meet Mr. Wilder before he sails, are invited to be present.

—The thirtieth regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, was organized largely from Somerset county, but since their return from the war they have never had a reunion. It is not known how many survivors there are. Colonel Ten Eyck says they propose to have a reunion during the coming Fall, and he desires that all old comrades and other citizens meet at the Court House, in Somerville, on June 27th, at 2 o'clock, to make arrangements. This day is quite appropriate, as it is the anniversary of the day on which the company was mustered out.

Crazed By the Heat.

A small cat was crazed by the heat at about eight o'clock. It ran around Smith's saloon snapping at the chairs and tables. The employes finally succeeded in ejecting it. Mr. Smith's young son Georgie was playing in the yard in the rear of the saloon. The crazed feline espied him. It made a jump for his head. The little fellow noticed the move and dodged, thus saving himself. The cat then escaped through a hole under the fence in the rear.

Charged With Assault and Battery.

George Lewis, Jr., of Somerset street, North Plainfield, has had a warrant issued for the arrest of a young man named Butterfield on the charge of assault and battery. In his complaint young Lewis claims that as he and a party of friends were on their way to take a bath in the brook he was insulted by young Butterfield, and that when he resented the insult the latter knocked on him as fielled him to to the ground with a club.

Court of Errors.

The Court of Errors and Appeals opened its June term yesterday morning. There was a great crowd of lawyers, in fact, more than the court could accommodate with comfort, and it was apparent that the new addition to the State House, that will yield more room to the court, is an absolute necessity. The only business transacted yesterday was the calling of the list and the hearing of a number of motions.

ECHOES OF THE STORM.

A DYNAMO IN THE ELECTRIC LIGHT STATION DAMAGED.

Limbs Torn From Trees.—A House Blown From Its Foundation.—The Telephone and Electric Light Service Crippled.—Further Details.

A severe thunder storm paid a visit to this city last evening at about five o'clock. It was accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning. One of the latter struck an electric light wire on West Seventh street and was conducted into the station on Madison avenue, where it burned out one of the armatures on one of the large dynamos. When the electric fluid struck the dynamo, the report that followed sounded like a report from a cannon. It put out all the lights on the circuit. The dynamo was badly damaged.

The wind which accompanied the rain blew limbs from trees. It played havoc with the trees on East Fifth street and that thoroughfare was strewn with broken branches.

The wind also blew the sky-light off a photograph gallery at the corner of Linden avenue and Somerset streets.

The telephone system was also badly crippled by the breaking of the wires and burning out of phones.

After the storm a number of small boys and young men discovered a tree on West Second street, in front of the residence of Mr. Proctor Kurtzals, which was charged with electricity. They amused themselves by touching it and receiving a shock. It was a dangerous thing to do and might have resulted seriously.

It was rumored that a young man named John Goodman, who resides on New street, had been shocked by the electric current, but the rumor cannot be verified.

The electric light wires were more or less damaged by the wind and rain and consequently a number of the street lights were not burning until late in the evening. The damage was repaired as soon as possible, however.

A cloud burst, it is said, deluged Cranford and washed away the foundations of several houses in the course of construction.

The fire alarm system was only slightly damaged and is again in good working ing order.

A frame dwelling, belonging to Mr. Wallace Cox, which was being erected on the Boulevard at Westfield, was blown from the foundation and carried a distance of twenty yards by the wind. The building was badly wrecked.

During the severe thunder-storm at Elizabeth the lightning played havoc with the telephone system, burning out about seventy-five telephones in the city.

At Bound Brook the storm also did much damage.

The lightning struck the steeple of the Park Avenue Baptist Church last evening, only slightly damaging it, however.

A tree in the yard of Mr. George Rogers, on Peace street, was struck and split in two places by lightning last evening.

COLONEL HARVEY RESIGNS.

Jersey's Insurance Commissioner Unable to Give all His Attention to the Work.

Colonel G. B. M. Harvey's resignation as Commissioner of Insurance and Banking was made public yesterday. In his letter of resignation Colonel Harvey pays considerable attention to the "short-term orders," some of which, he says, were fraudulent,—and all apparently unauthorized.

It is obvious, he says, that further legislation is an outward requirement. After calling attention to some of the defects of present laws, the Commissioner suggested a law similar to that of Massachusetts regarding lapses. The Commissioner's reasons for resigning are that he is unprepared to give his undivided attention to the work, as he thinks it requires.

A Mad Dog.

A large red dog of the bird dog species has created a reign of terror in the Washington Valley. The animal appeared about a week ago, and is particularly vicious. Dogs have been bitten time and again by the savage brute, and several persons narrowly escaped the maddened animal's fangs. E. W. Milligan, a well-known farmer, was returning home one night recently when the mad animal ran toward him with distended jaws, from which froth dropped to the ground. The terrified man made a dash for the door of his house, which was fortunately was open at the time. With a smart and a snap the brute flung itself against the door just as Mr. Milligan succeeded in closing it. Another farmer, while returning home late at night, heard some dogs snarling at each other. Investigating the cause of the fight, he discovered that the red bird dog was the leader in the fight. He succeeded in escaping, although the mad animal gave chase. Other farmers have had similar experiences, and now a reign of terror prevents the farmers' families from venturing out at night.

Testing the System.

At 10.30 o'clock last night Chief Doane tested the fire alarm, to see whether or not it had been damaged by the storm. A number of persons thought that it was an alarm of fire, and it caused considerable excitement. Captain Grant notified the police that in case of fire they should sound the alarm with the bell.

THE 11TH N. J. REUNION

THE VETERANS HONORED AT PHILLIPSBURG.

Streets and Residences Decorated With Bunting.—Children Line the Streets and Sing to the Passing Soldiers.—A Gala Day.

SINCE the days of camp-life, during war times, when the Eleventh New Jersey Volunteers was a regiment in numbers as well as name the few survivors have kept in remembrance the comrades by occasional visits.

Yesterday in response to a call a reunion was held at Phillipsburg.

The G. A. R., Posts of that quaint "City on the Hill" turned out in force to welcome the 50 or more 'vets' of the 11th, and with them, the police force of the city and the Mayor and Board of Aldermen, paraded to Westminster church where services were to be held.

Along the route which was profusely decorated with bunting groups of children were stationed, and as the soldiers marched by they sang in sweet unison stirring war songs and the national hymn.

At the church address were made by the Regiment's Commander "Fighting Dan" Sickle, and many others.

The ladies of Phillipsburg furnished bountiful provisions for the entire body of men.

The Eleventh New Jersey participated in about 28 battles and skirmishes.

The following members of the regiment were present from Plainfield—Messrs. Hand, Randolph, Titsworth, Doane and Goodwin.

Officers were elected as follows: Mr. John Schoonover, president; Mr. G. M. Lindley, vice president; Bishop Maine, secretary; U. B. Titus, treasurer.

These officers will arrange a date for the next reunion, which will be held at Gettysburg in '92.

W. C. T. U. SOCIABLE.

A Pleasant Time at the Rooms.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union gave a sociable at their rooms on West Front street last evening.

In spite of the heavy storm earlier in the evening and the threatening aspect of the weather later, a good attendance was secured.

The rooms had, by the aid of portierre curtains, a few bunches of flowers, some pictures, and a great deal of artistic taste, been changed from its usual bleak appearance to a very comfortable cosy room. Mrs. F. Minturn Smith was chairman and assisted by other ladies present welcomed the visitors.

The following interesting programme was delightfully rendered, each selection receiving warm applause.

1—Opening address by Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell.

2 Vocal solo—Miss Carrie Maud Pennock.

3 Piano duet—Misses Boone and Winckler.

4 Emotive gestures—Miss Millicent Humpston, Miss Eleanor T. Morrison.

5 Vocal solo—Miss Pennock.

Accompanist for singing, Miss Marsh; for the gestures, Miss Smith.

At the close of the programme, refreshments were served.

The Homeopathic Congress.

About three hundred delegates to the the International Congress of Homeopathic Physicians arrived at Atlantic City yesterday. This morning the American Institute of Homeopathy, a subordinate body, held its annual meeting, some of the delegates to the congress being also delegates to the American Institute. Reports were read on "Life Insurance in Relation to Objections Raised by Insurance Companies" on Accepting Homeopathic Certificates"; also, "A review of the Institute."

Dr. T. Y. Kinne of Paterson was elected President. The next meeting place will be at Washington. Delegates from this city were in attendance.

The Westfield Equestrian Club.

The Westfield Equestrian Club is composed of about twenty-five members, and they take weekly gallops across the country, sometimes to Rahway, and again to Plainfield, but more often to Springfield, Union and Roselle. Some of the riders are Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Vail, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Peddle, Frank Rogers, Miss Bennett, Mrs. Cornell, the Rev. Mrs. N. W. Cadwell, Mrs. Dr. J. B. Harrison, Robert Sinclair, Miss Peddle, Rollin Grant, Miss Alice Greaves, E. Tancey, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Miller, Dr. J. Jackson, Miss Jackson and Mrs. Dr. Jobs.

New Market Notes.

The many friends of Wm. L. Larabee are glad to welcome him on his return from an extended western tour for the firm of P. A. Rasson & Co., Dye works by whom he is employed as a traveling salesman.

Mr. Stephen A. Brown, engineer on the C. R. R., has purchased a building site for $900 of Mr. P. A. Rasson on which he proposes to erect a fine residence in the near future.

RIGHTS OF BICYCLISTS.

THE LAW DEFINING THEIR PRIVILEGES ON PUBLIC ROADS.

Of Interest to All Who Either Drive or Ride.—The Question Settled.—Bicycles Have the Same Rights as All Other Vehicles, and No Others

As there is such a general misunderstanding as regards the rights of bicycles on the public highways we print below the law governing the same, enacted by the Legislature of 1888:

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That bicycles and tricycles, and all other vehicles propelled by pedo-motive or mammative power, are hereby declared to be carriages within the meaning of that term as used in section ninety-one of the act entitled "An act concerning roads" (Revision), approved March twenty-seventh, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and that all persons by whom bicycles, tricycles and said other vehicles are or may hereafter be used, ridden or propelled upon the turnpikes or public roads in this State shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges and subject to the same restrictions in the use thereof as are prescribed in said section ninety-one in the case of drivers of carriages, sleighs and sleds.

2. And be it enacted, That the Mayor and Common Council, Commissioners, Overseers or other authorities having charge or control of any public street, public road or turnpike, public parkway, driveway or other public place in this State, shall have no power to pass, enforce or maintain any ordinance, rule or regulation by which any person using a bicycle or bicycle shall be excluded or prohibited from the free use of any public street, avenue, road, turnpike, driveway, parkway or other public place at any time when the same is may hereafter be open to the free use of persons having or using any other vehicle or carriage.

3. And be it enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to prevent the passage, enforcement or maintenance of any regulation, ordinance or rule regulating the use of bicycles or tricycles in public streets, avenues, roads, turnpikes, driveways, parkways and other public places in such manner as to limit and determine the proper rate of speed with which such vehicles may be propelled, nor in any such manner as to require, direct or prohibit the use of bells, lamps and other such appurtenances, nor to prohibit the use of any vehicle upon that part of the street, road or parkway commonly known as the footpath or sidewalk.

4. And be it enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistant with the provisions of this act be and the same are repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

The following is section 91 referred to in the above law:

That drivers of carriages, sleighs or sleds, whether of burthen or pleasure, using any of the turnpikes or public roads in this State, when met by another carriage, sleigh or sled, shall keep to the right, and when overtaking a carriage sleigh or sled, they shall likewise keep to the right, so as in both cases to permit the passing, sleigh or sled, either meet or overtaken, to pass free and uninterrupted; and if any person shall offend against this provision, such person shall forfeit and pay the sum of two dollars to any person who shall be obstructed or hindered in his or her passage and will sue for the same and shall be subject to an action of trespass therefor, and such offense, to be recovered with costs of suit.

SEVEN CONVICTS PAROLED.

One Had Served But Four Years on a Sentence of Fifteen.

The Court of Pardons yesterday parolled the following State convicts:

John H. Hunkle, sent from Essex county for atrocious assault and battery in June, 1888, for five years.

Timothy Donnelly, a young man, sent from Essex County for ten years for breaking and entering. Sentence expires in October, 1893.

James Quinn, seventeen years old, sent from Camden for ten years for assault and battery. Term expires in 1896.

John Lang, Essex county, breaking, seven years; term expires in October, 1891.

Martin Ryan, aged seventeen, Essex county, entering, sentenced for three years in Reformatory.

Frederick Barbeck, sent from Essex for assault and battery and robbery in April, 1888, to serve five years.

John Calher, sent from Essex for assault and battery in May, 1888, for seven years; term expires in November of this year.

Daniel O'Connell, sent for murder from Morris county in January, 1887, to serve a sentence of fifteen years. The sentence expires in October, 1897. O'Connell was backed by Senator Werts and is from Dickerson Mine, near Morristown.

The court will meet again next Tuesday.

Mr. William A. Coddington of this city has been chosen as counsel for the administrators and heirs of the estate of the late Samuel Giddis of Warren Township.

Ex-Mayor John H. Van Winkle, of North Plainfield, will be married to-morrow at Paris, Ill., to Miss Emma TenBroeck Judson. Mr. and Mrs. VanWinkle will reside in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen were tendered a surprise by the Washington Park Whist Club Monday evening. It was the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A BRIDGE SPANNING THE PASSAIC RIVER FALLS IN.

A Young Man, Driving a Herd of Cattle, Had Just Crossed.—A Contract For a New Bridge Awarded Eight Months Ago by the Freeholders and Not Attended to.—A New Contract Given Out Yesterday.

SUSSEX, N. J., June 17.—The wooden bridge across the Passaic river at this place fell in, Monday evening. A workman had just crossed with twenty cattle belonging to Mr. John Wendell, which had been pasturing on the opposite bank. They had hardly reached a safe place when, without warning, the bridge, which has a span of sixty feet across the river, caved in with a crash.

That some one was not on the bridge and killed by the fall, is a wonder, for the crossing is extensively used by the residents of the vicinity.

Gross carelessness is charged to the freeholders, who knew the bridge, which was built about 17 or 18 years ago, was unsafe. They awarded a contract to a man named Joseph Byer, August 25, 1890, to build a new bridge, which was to have been completed in October. Byer did nothing toward fulfilling the contract and the old bridge remained—a constant menace.

Monday night, as stated, it fell, filling the river with debris, a portion of which the high water of Tuesday night twisted into shapeless masses and strewed along the banks.

Messrs. G. W. Bullman, Aaron Dilly and Israel V. Adams a committee of the Freeholders visited the ruins Tuesday, and later awarded a new contract to Mr. John C. Cooper of Warrenville, N. J., who will clear away the wreckage and have a new bridge up by the latter part of July.

The Earth's Nearest Neighbor.

[From the Boston Herald.]

Years ago it was supposed that Sirius was nearer the earth than any other star, and its light required over three years to reach us. Now, however, Alpha Centauri, a comparatively insignificant star of the southern heavens, is known to be nearer than Sirius, and Sirius is so far removed that the human mind fails to grasp the distance when expressed in miles. The fact that light requires from seventeen to twenty years to cross the space between our little earth and this giant orb is scarcely more easy to comprehend. If one would appreciate the enormous size and the brilliancy of suns he should not think it as near, but rather let his mind make the vain attempt to follow a ray of light thither as it travels on, unwearied, day any night, at the rate of 186,000 miles a second for twenty years.

Trial To-Morrow.

The case of Felix Sterpon, the Italian who is charged with selling liquor to his fellow countrymen in an impromptu saloon which had been established in the woods at Netherwood Heights, is to come up before City Judge Codington to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock. The police claim to have abundant evidence and say that there is no doubt but what they will convict the accused.

The Columbian Express, via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The new fast train to Chicago by the Pennsylvania Railroad, which entered the service on June 7th as the Chicago Special, has been re-christened "Columbian Express" in honor of the great fair. In bestowing this title on the new train, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has taken the initiative among the railroads in recognizing the World's Exposition by providing special facilities for the comfortable and speedy movement of its visitors. The train is particularly worthy of bearing the honored title. It is the ripest example of the finish of travel. It contains accommodations for those who desire luxurious apartments as well as for those who seek the comforts of a well-appointed passenger coach. The Pullman drawing-room sleeping cars, dining cars, and the cheery Passenger coaches, are all vestibuled. The Columbian Express leaves New York at 4.00 p. m. Philadelphia 6.25 p. m., Harrisburg 9.30 p. m. every day, arriving at Chicago 8.10 p. m. the next day.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

Growing Healthier and Happier.

In this dreary time of painful toil, struggle and unsatisfied longing every thing that tends to cheerful and optimistic views of life ought to be welcomed and made the most of. It is with satisfaction, therefore, that we read in the Popular Science Monthly the paper of Mrs. H. M. Plunkett showing some of the advancements in sanitary and social science that have been made in the past century. Her article is entitled "Our Grandfathers Died Too Young."

The first and strongest proof, that life, for example, was growing longer, was given in a curious list of evidence that touched the pocket, and therefore could not be controverted. Something over a hundred and fifty years ago, when the English government was hard up for money, the authorities established the system of life annuities. For a certain specified lump sum paid into its treasury the government agreed to give in return a regular fixed annual income as interest on the money. At the end of the life of the person the annuity ceased and the government became the owner out and out of the money. This system went on for more than a century, when about 1835 it was discovered that the average of life was so much longer than it had been that England was losing money steadily on the investment, and the life annuity system had to be readjusted on a new basis.

The Roman average of life was thirty years. But in Geneva, Switzerland, the only city in which vital statistics have been properly kept since as far back as 1551, it was found that fifty years ago the average length of life in that city was over forty five years. Now, so great has been the advancement that Sir Edwin Chadwick, the father of modern sanitation, declared that man should now live, in the avarage, a century, and he himself exemplified his theory by dying last July at the age of ninety.

The causes enumerated for this lengthening of life are better and more abundant food, less murder and violent crime, and finally sanitation in particular, particularly vaccination and ventilation. Death in London alone in the Eighteenth century amounted to almost 200,000 from smallpox. In New York city, in 1878, in a population of 1,100,000, there were only fourteen cases of smallpox—thanks to vaccination.

A City in Ninety Days.

It would scarcely be thought of outside of America. We are informed, however, that a number of capitalists, eastern and western, are preparing a grand coup which shall plant in three months' time a full fledged city of say 10,000 inhabitants, with all the modern improvements, even to a baseball club, somewhere on the shore of Puget Sound. It has long been known that there are some wonderful harbors on the shores of that vast undeveloped region known as Puget Sound. At one place, Port Gardner, the water is claimed to be 500 feet deep. The capitalists who propose to build the city have concluded there is lumber enough in the forests of this region to supply the world's wants for a hundred years. In the edge of this great wooded country they will build their city. It is expected to be located on the sound at a point within a hundred miles of Seattle.

Machinery for erecting mills and factories will be on the spot soon, ground will be broken, and the work will begin. Among other industries expected to blossom here are a steel barge shop and yards, a paper mill, machine shop, ship yards, and perhaps a sugar refinery. There is certain to be at some time in the future a great Pacific port, which will be to that side of the country which New York is to the Atlantic side. Commerce with the orient is increasing immensely year by year, and there is a rivalry among the towns already on the west coast to see which shall be the New York of the Pacific. San Francisco is certain that this is her manifest destiny, but there are other towns in Washington that are not so sure.

Good news again from aluminum. A company now announces that it will actually put the splendid metal of the future on the market at fifty cents a pound, and that unlimited quantities will be turned out at that cost. If aluminum does all that is claimed for it the present generation may well be thankful that they have lived to see this day. Within a few years the price of aluminum has declined from twenty dollars a pound to the fifty cents which we are told is now to be the ruling rate.

This is what a Theosophist says happens to you when you die: "When a person dies the mental, which is the name we have for the three higher attributes of the being—the divine spark, the spiritual soul, which is the vehicle of the divine spark, and the intellect or manas—is slowly released from the baser manas, taking from that mass whatever is good and pure and worth taking away." This adds new terrors to the grave, really.

Twenty-five states have now adopted the Australian ballot system. The latest to swing into line was Delaware.

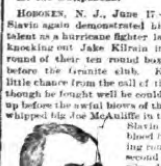
KILRAIN KNOCKED OUT.

Bested in Nine Rounds by Frank P. Slavin.

THE AUSTRALIAN'S AWFUL BLOWS.

Kilrain Had Little Chance from the Call of Time and Was Floored Four Times in the Third—Sensational Finish Fight for the Antipodean.

HOBOKEN, N. J., June 17.—Frank P. Slavin again demonstrated his marvelous talent as a hurricane fighter last night by knocking out Jake Kilrain in the ninth round of their ten round boxing contest before the Granite club. Kilrain has little chance from the call of time, and although he fought well he could not stand up before the awful blows of the man who whipped big Joe McAuliffe in two rounds.



JAKE KILRAIN.

Slavin got first blood in the opening round. In the second round Kilrain did all the leading, but Slavin got over at vantage there was apparently no chance to be divided on his side. But the third round brought a change. Kilrain was knocked down four times in this round and was only saved from a knock out by the call of time.

Slavin fought even better in the fifth round Kilrain was repeatedly knocked down. He rallied wonderfully, but Slavin received in every round during the seventh round it was evident Kilrain was totally unable to stand his time. The seventh and eighth rounds were the same as the preceding ones. Kilrain did not seem to be in it. In the ninth round Kilrain was knocked down, and although he appeared to gain his feet in the prescribed time, the time keeper announced that the fight was over. Slavin was declared the winner. There much excitement and great sympathy was expressed for Kilrain. Slavin did not appear very much distressed over his exertion.

The Fight by Rounds.

The fight by rounds was as follows:

Round One—It was twenty minutes past 11 when the men shook hands. The next instant they advanced to the scratch. Kilrain looked very fat. His stomach was paunchy. Slavin was the first to make play very lightly. He smashed Jake on the right on the jaw. They fought at close quarters, lasting left and right. Slavin landed his left on the jaw and Jake clinched. After they separated Slavin got in his right on the ribs and Jake returned on the face. A clinch. Slavin smashed Kilrain in the stomach. The latter squirming to avoid punishment. Dunn pulled them apart. Slavin landed left and right, and they were in the middle of a rough clinch, when the gong sounded.

Round Two—Kilrain was bleeding slightly from the nose as he walked to the scratch. He went right at his man, driving him to the ropes. They were pulled apart and then ensued an other terrific rally at close quarters in which both fought for the body. Slavin most effective. Again separated. Jake planted two terrific body blows in rapid succession. He planted his left on Jake's ribs, and was smashed in the face for the return. Jake planted left and right on Slavin's face and body, and forced his man to the ropes. Slavin was terrific cheering for Kilrain as he went to his corner.

But Slavin Checked It.

Round Three—The enthusiasm over Kilrain was tearful. But Slavin soon checked it with two hard body blows. After a walk around Slavin landed left and right on Jake's face. Kilrain rushed in and planted hard on Slavin's jaw. Jake missed a vicious uppercut, but landed his man with the right. Slavin went right at him and smashed him with the left on the face, and catching him with the right across the jaw, toppled him to the floor. almost knocked out. Kilrain was very sorry acting, but when he was squarely on his feet Slavin again sent him to the boards. Jake was very groggy when he got to his feet, but he managed to clinch Slavin until the gong came to his assistance.

Round Four—Slavin went right at his man, and floored him with a right hander. Kilrain was a pitiable looking object as he rose from the floor, and it was thought that he was about done for. Slavin led his man, however, until his strength began to return. Suddenly he smashed Slavin on the face with his left, whereupon there was terrific cheering. Slavin jabbed him several times with the left. Again Jake clinched and Slavin banged him over the heart.

Slavin Now Too Fresh.

Round Five—Though Kilrain was weak Slavin was none too fresh, and though he tapped Jake on the jaw he was taken back again. He followed Jake around the ring and finally he slipped and fell in Frank's corner. He was up sooner than he was on him again with his left. Jake rallied well, though losing profusely. He made Slavin several good, hard blows. Slavin forced the fight and landed with great severity on his stomach as the gong rang.

Round Six—Slavin clinched his man the instant they got together. Both exchanged blows and then they were pulled apart. Kilrain put in a good lefthander on the jaw, but received two terrific smashes over the heart in return. He was now more on the defensive, and the only wonder was that he was able to stand up at all. He sparred in this round several times, but Slavin gave him very little body punishment. He tried hard to catch Jake on the point of the jaw with his right, but Kilrain though weak was clever enough to avoid his right twice into the stomach as though he would drive it through his body. The blood was dripping from Kilrain's face and ran in little rivulets down his breast. Once Dunn got between them in order to get them more toward the center of the ring, when Slavin angrily protested with "Mind your business, and let me fight my man." He drove Jacobs to the ropes and there pounded him at will. Jake, although nearly helpless still was as game as a pebble.

Terrific Heart Blows.

Round Eight—Slavin again went at his man, but though he could hit him with his left when he pleased he could not get the right where he wanted it on the jaw. Again he resorted to body punching, and he landed several terrific blows over the heart. Kilrain clinched and held Slavin's arms. Just as they were separated the gong rang.

Round Nine—Slavin was fight at his man, and banged him on the jaw. Kilrain reeled against the rope. Frank gave him a terrific punch in the stomach. Kilrain fell against Slavin and held to him with a death grip. Frank at length freed himself from Kilrain's embrace and sent him to the floor in an instant. Slavin straddled him with his left, and then caught him full with the right on the jaw. Kilrain turned half round, and then fell flat on his back with a thud. He tried to get up but couldn't rise. Seconds were counted, and he was still prone. Dunn declared Slavin the winner.

Kilrain's seconds picked him up and carried him to his corner. Slavin walked over and shook hands with him and left the stage. A moment later Kilrain got up, and tottering across the ring to the referee, protested in a dazed way against the decision. It was too late. The fight lasted thirty-five minutes. Kilrain's nose was broken, and his face was terribly punished across the body. Of the purse $7,500 goes to Slavin and $2,500 to Kilrain.

Austin Gibbons the Winner.

LONDON, June 17.—The glove fight between Austin Gibbons, of Paterson, N. J., and Jim Verrall, of London, came off at the Pelican club last night. The contest was ostensibly for the 126 pound championship of the world, but Verrall was eight pounds beyond that mark and Gibbons was a couple of pounds outside the limit. Apart from this the men were battling for £200. Gibbons knocked Verrall out in the fourth round.

SEABRIGHT SWEPT AWAY.

Flames Spared Little of the Well Known Summer Resort.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., June 17.—This well known summer resort was visited by a destructive fire last night, which reduced to ashes the larger portion of the town. The fire originated about 400 building was burned, but whether there was any loss of life cannot be stated as yet. Several hundred families have been rendered homeless. The total loss will reach at least $500,000.

The fire broke out in a livery stable in Stuart street, and as a gale of wind was blowing at the time, the flames spread rapidly. In a remarkably short time a whole block of buildings on Ocean street was burning. There is but a small fire department in the town, and help was telegraphed for from Long Branch and Asbury Park. By the time this assistance arrived a large portion of the southern part of Seabright was in flames. Women and children ran through the streets crying and wringing their hands in a frantic manner.

The flames made such rapid headway that in many instances the inmates of buildings hardly had time to escape with their lives. At a late hour last night the fire was under control. The section burned over extends from the Shrewsbury river to the ocean and to the point where the New Jersey Southern railroad crosses Ocean avenue. Among the buildings burned were the postoffice, the Seabright and Ridgeway's Methodist Episcopal church, the school house and the buildings occupied by the New Jersey Telephone company and the Elberon Steamboat company. Part of the Sea Bright hotel was burned. Many residences were burned, and the portion in which the fishermen dwell suffered severely. Many of these people lost their all and are homeless and penniless. Many of the wealthy cottagers and the hotels which escaped destruction have thrown open their houses to the sufferers.

LOOKING INTO THE PENN TRUST.

Experts Unraveling the Tangle—United States Attorney Reed's Defense.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—The Penn Safe Deposit and Trust company's books have been put in the hands of an expert, and some startling revelations of the methods of the looters who wrecked it along with the Spring Garden bank are shortly expected. Accountant John B. Heins has begun to unravel the skein which bound the deposit company and bank so closely together, and yesterday ex-Judge Elcock, counsel for the duped depositors of the Penn company, said, "I think that it will not be long now before we get to the bottom of this fraud."

United States District Attorney John R. Reed has taken exceptions to the strictures on his conduct indulged in by speakers at the Spring Garden depositors' meeting.

He stated that the statement that no warrants had been issued from the United States court for either Nelson F. Evans nor Ephraim Young. He said: "Prior to the arrest of Francis and H. H. Kennedy my attention had been called to the fact that large amounts of money had been borrowed from the bank by Nelson F. Evans and Ephraim Young. When the committee of depositors called upon me prior to the arrests that have already been made I informed them that they would furnish me with information that either Mr. Evans, Mr. Young or any other director of the bank had violated the law I would have them arrested. No such information has yet been furnished me by that committee, and with the exception of a short interview with George B. Carr, none of them has since called upon me."

No Canadian Cabinet Crisis.

OTTAWA, June 17.—All reports as to the possibility of a cabinet crisis in the provinces have been disposed of. When the house of commons met in the afternoon Premier Abbott read a statement from Premier Abbott. It stated that nothing on Sir John Thomson's advice he (Abbott) had instructed that the present cabinet should be continued in their positions. Mr. Abbott will assume the position of president of the privy council and the railway department will be administered by another member of the cabinet.

Beach Was the Winner.

NEW HAVEN, June 17.—The tennis tournament for the championship of New England opened at the grounds of the New Haven Lawn club. The contestants were F. M. Beach, of this city, and C. T. Lee, of the University of Pennsylvania, Beach winning by a score of 6—3, 7—5.

Miss Stone Killed by a Rock.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 17.—Henrietta Stone was killed by being struck with a rock thrown by a blast on C. S. Herr's property. Herr, Contractor Gerlach and the workmen engaged in the blasting have been arrested charged with murder.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv

WILL LORD BROOKE SUE?

That Is the Question Agitating All England.

LADY BROOKE AND THE PRINCE.

Something About the Woman Who Is Said to Have Enticed Gordon-Cumming for Revenge, and Who May Get Wales in More Serious Trouble.

LONDON, June 17.—For several days rumors have been afloat to the effect that the exposure of Lady Brooke in connection with the baccarat scandal was inevitable, and that legal steps had already been taken against the prince and herself. Sir W. Gordon Cumming's friends accuse her openly of having been the cause of his ruin. The fast friends of a faster prince, however, emphatically deny that there is any truth in the matter, and say that it is nothing but the malicious talk of a set of jealous society women.

Recently at a social gathering where royalty and its satellites were not present, it was open talk that the threatening clouds which had been hovering over his royal highness' head for some time past had by no means been dispersed.

The Prince Was Rejected.

The relations between the Prince of Wales and Lady Brooke have been the topic of social gossip on several occasions. As yet nobody has openly accused the pair of any undue intimacy, yet it has been repeatedly hinted that if Lord Brooke were not so easy going he would long ago have put a stop to the repeated interviews between his wife and the heir apparent.

She Was Smitten with Cumming.

It is also a well known fact that the Princess of Wales has strongly objected to having Lady Brooke's society forced upon her, and hopes that the queen simply ignores her. A few years ago rumor had it that Lady Brooke had become smitten with a handsome gentleman, but that Sir William Gordon-Cumming, being aware of the close relations between his friend the prince and the lady in question, met her advances coldly. Lady Brooke is considered a woman who will never rest until she has brought ruin upon any person she hates.

Lady Brooke before her marriage was Miss Maynard. Her father, Colonel Maynard, left an enormous fortune, of which only the smaller part went to his widow, who soon after his death became the wife of the Earl of Rosslyn. Lord Brooke is the eldest son of the Earl of Warwick, of Warwick castle. He is undoubtedly the poorest peer in the United Kingdom.

Lady Brooke's Career.

A few years after their marriage rumors became afloat concerning an imminent social scandal in which the names of several prominent statesmen, officers, etc., were connected with that of Lady Brooke, and it became an open secret that Lady Brooke's reputation was at stake. No less than fourteen co-respondents were named, among them the prince, the Duke of Marlborough and even Lord Randolph Churchill. The affair was hushed up, and the only man who saved his reputation in the matter was Lord Randolph Churchill.

It seemed then but little short of a miracle that the apparently pure, sweet, simple girl should be brought into court with no less than fourteen co-respondents so shortly after her marriage.

She Is Indispensed.

The real cause why Lord Brooke did not push the divorce case above referred to has never been known, but it was hinted that the old Earl of Warwick objected to having his untarnished name dragged into court. Lord Brooke was Lord Algernon Percy's next brother. Captain Fulke Greville, was acting as best leader to the Prince of Wales' wedding, and it is likely that a good deal of influence was brought to bear upon the heir of Warwick castle from that quarter. Lord Brooke was in his seat at the house of lords last night for the first time in months. Simultaneously with his lordship's reappearance in public life comes the announcement that his wife, Lady Brooke, is indisposed and will absolve all her engagements for the near future. People who believe that Lord Brooke is at last to bring suit for divorce, naming the Prince of Wales as co-respondent, are pondering over these developments.

DEATH SHAFTS FROM THE SKY.

Many People Killed by Lightning in Various Parts of the Country.

OIL CITY, Pa., June 17.—The storm in this vicinity was very severe. Reports of damage by lightning are coming in from various points. Robert Taylor, a boy, was killed by lightning in Allegheny township, Butler county. Clarence Sanborn, living seven miles from Emlenton, this county, was also struck and instantly killed. Lightning struck a barn containing oil belonging to Thomas McBriney, at Siverleyville. The tank, derrick and boiler house were destroyed. Fall's block in Franklin was struck and slightly damaged.

Struck and Killed.

CLARION, Pa., June 17.—A heavy thunder storm passed over this place this afternoon. A young man named Taylor was struck by lightning and killed. The National bank building and residence of John Brown were struck and considerably damaged.

A Little Girl the Victim.

ST. LOUIS, June 17.—A party of picknickers took refuge beneath a tree in Forest park during the thunder storm. Lightning struck the tree, killing a little girl and stunning four ladies.

One Million for Colgate University.

UTICA, N. Y., June 17.—At a meeting of the trustees of Colgate university at Hamilton a letter from James B. Colgate, of New York, was read. It was accompanied by an indenture by which Mr. Colgate gives the university a million dollars without reserve. There are certain suggestions, however, among them one that the principles of the Baptist creed be taught.

The Blast a Failure.

ALBANY, June 17.—"An expert failure," is the verdict in the big blast at Callanan's South Bethlehem limestone quarry. Instead of touching off 5,000 pounds of dynamite at one charge the event dwindled into seven separate blasts. The cliff was pretty badly used up, however, by the explosion.

Mysterious Arsenic Is

LONDON, June 17.—Mr. Julio Mercbacher, whose affairs in connection with the New York Life Insurance company have created such a stir, denies that he has absconded with the company's funds, and cannot imagine why he should be accused. He says he has no money whatever.

O'Gorman Mahon Dead.

LONDON, June 17.—The O'Gorman Mahon, member of parliament, is dead. He was born in 1803, and was known as "The Grand Old Man" of the Irish party. He entered parliament in 1831, and was a colleague of Daniel O'Connell. His full name was Captain James Patrick Mahon. He was tall and handsome, and dignified to the last. He represented Carlow county, Ireland. In politics he was a Nationalist, but he was never bitter in his attitude. Mahon was the man who introduced Parnell to Mrs. O'Shea. He was a man of strict and punctilious ideas, and when the scandal came out he wanted to fight a duel with Parnell.

M'KINLEY FOR GOVERNOR

He Is to Lead the Ohio Republicans.

A DECIDED SETBACK FOR SHERMAN.

He Was Not Chosen Chairman, but Was Defeated by the Foraker-ites—It Is Alleged, Too, That He Will Not Find Favor in the Convention's Eyes.

COLUMBUS, O., June 17.—The capital of the Buckeye state is bedecking over with Republican enthusiasm today. The crowd gathered here is the largest that has been drawn together by any political state convention since war times. The lion of the hour is Major William McKinley, whose nomination for the head of the ticket will be made today by acclamation. His name and his familiar features are everywhere to be seen. The most popular badge is a sheet of tin plate, two inches square, with the inscription, "William McKinley, champion of protection, nominated and elected 1891. American tin." A hearty reception was accorded the ex-congressman on his arrival. He reached the city shortly after 11 o'clock on a special train of fifteen coaches. Accompanying was the entire Stark county delegation. The trip was one continuous ovation to the prospective nominee.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Cheers for Harrison and Sherman.

It was 2:10 o'clock when the Republican state committee was called to order by L. W. King, Colonel Conger, chairman, being absent. Mr. King congratulated the convention upon the fact that the Republicans of Ohio upheld the clean, conservative and level headed administration of the present president of the United States. Three cheers, twice repeated, were then given for President Harrison. The mention of Senator Sherman's name, however, brought out applause lasting twice as long. Colonel Bob Nevin, upon being introduced as temporary chairman, received an ovation. His address was a defense of the Republican party, both in state and federal affairs. When Mr. Nevin concluded his speech it was decided that 9 o'clock should be the hour for assembling today. At 3:10 the convention adjourned.

A Defeat for Senator Sherman.

When the convention was called to order today Asa Bushnell, of Springfield, was made permanent chairman of the Republican convention. It took the committee just forty-five minutes last night to name its man. The result is a signal defeat for Senator John Sherman and a consequent glowing victory for Joseph B. Foraker. This latter had eighteen members of the committee out of twenty-one. Sherman was not even placed in nomination, although it had all along been understood that in coming here as a delegate at large he had expected to preside over the gathering. This means that no resolution indorsing John Sherman for senator will be submitted today. His past course, however, may be approved by a satisfactory resolution. Yesterday the anti-Sherman feeling was scarcely apparent, now it overshadows even the contested portions of the ticket. Sherman's friends have made a magnificent struggle to secure the indorsement of the convention for his candidacy for reelection, but the odds are against them by a large majority.

"Sherman's Sun Has Set."

To quote a delegate who is a power in his county: "Sherman's sun has set." The senator himself is aware that it is impossible to force matters to an issue at this time, and intimate friends report him as saying that he would prefer to step aside for good rather than endanger the harmony of the party.

Are the Knights Against McKinley?

A good deal of speculation was caused by the arrival in the afternoon of Hugh Cavanaugh, worthy foreman of the Knights of Labor, and W. Hayes, of Philadelphia, a member of the executive board. Both flitted around the lobbies of the hotels, and at times conferred with delegates that wore the tin badge.

The general impression is that their visit has relation to the threats of a boycott by the order on McKinley that have been made growing out of the troubles in the government printing office at Washington. Both Hayes and his colleague, however, aver that they have no interest or indifference with the present political situation.

Foraker Makes a Speech.

Major McKinley was tendered a largely attended reception by the Lincoln league at its club house last night and made a brief address. Foraker arrived at 10:35 last night, and was escorted from the depot with honors fully equal to those paid to Major McKinley earlier in the day.

When the Neil House was reached he made a brief address, in which, alluding to the prevailing topic, he said he had no personal motives to prfod or to serve. All he wanted was the good 9rill of his party and of his fellow men. If he had the good will, then other people could have everything else.

IN THE STANDARD'S GRIP.

German Oil Retailers Want the Big Monopoly Abolished.

BERLIN, June 17.—The minister of commerce, Baron Von Berlepsch, is engaged in an investigation of the coal oil trusts, which are, it is claimed by the German retailers, aim to supplant them in their businesses. The retailers claim that the Paris branch of the Rothschild family, who own the Russian monopoly, and the Standard Oil company of the United States have entered into an agreement whereby the Standard Oil company is to control the German market.

With this object in view the Standard Oil company is reported to have obtained control by purchase of all the petroleum steamers plying between the United States and German ports, and to be forcing the Dutch and German importers to form stock companies subject to the control of the Standard Oil company, which company, it is said, now regulates the price of coal oil in Germany, and is threatening to erect tanks in the larger cities so as to sell oil direct to consumers.

German coal oil retailers were alarmed at this state of affairs, and turned to Russia for supplies of oil. But the Rothschilds, in accordance with an agreement with the Standard, refused to meet the demands of the German retailers, putting them into the power of the Standard. Stringent measures will probably be adopted to abolish this monopoly should the charges be established.

LOANTAKA WINS THE SUBURBAN.

Tenny, the Favorite, Was Away Out of Sight.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The great Suburban has been run and will pass into history as the greatest turf event of 1891. Never before has such a crowd witnessed a horse race in this country, and this despite the fact that it was the hottest June day ever known in the vicinity of New York. At the track it was simply blazing, blistering hot, with not a nook nor corner within reach where the heat could be escaped. A conservative estimate placed the number of persons present at 30,000, but many believe that 40,000 was much nearer the figure. The race itself proved very sensational inasmuch as Tenny, who went to the post the hottest favorite ever known in the Suburban, was not only defeated for first place, but finished in the muck. The second choice, Tea Tray, finished absolutely last, but Major Domo, the third choice, managed to get the place by a length from Cassius. The winner turned up in Loantaka, the 4-year-old son of Sensation and Peggy Dwindle, who was a long shot in the betting, there being as much as 40 to 1 against him.

The judges summoned the horses to the post at 4:15 o'clock, at which place they soon appeared. They then paraded past the grand stand and turned back again. After a little maneuvring they came down toward the starter on a line. Down went the red flag, and with a mighty roar of "They're off!" the race was on. Major Domo was the first to break the line, and he came toward the stand with a head the best of it, while Cassius was second, a length before Banquet, who was a length in front of Demuth, who in turn was a head before Isaac Lewis, with the rest all bunched. Tenny, Tea Tray and Loantaka were bringing up the rear. Tea Tray was sulking, and notwithstanding Garrison's efforts refused to run.

When the backstretch was reached, the order was about the same and Murphy tried to improve his position on Tenny, but the little swayback could not gain a yard. They approached the upper turn Major Domo had three-quarters of a length the best of it, while Demuth was two lengths in front of Cassius, with Fitzjames next, followed by Tenny, who was getting the whip. The interest at this period was intense, and a shout of dismay arose. "Tenny is beaten!" cried the lovers of the favorite, and it was true, for notwithstanding Murphy's most vigorous efforts, Tenny could not improve his position.

As they swung into the stretch, Major Domo was the first to show, a head before Demuth, who was a head before Cassius, while Fitzjames, Loantaka and Tenny came next, with Tea Tray, thanks to his bad temper, bringing up the rear. They ran in this order down to the last furlong, when Bergen cut loose with Loantaka, and it was all over. With apparent killing strides he passed horse after horse, amid plaudits of winners and losers alike, and won, a length and a half from Major Domo, who beat Cassius a length for the place. Then came Fitzjames, Banquet, Tenny, Riley, Demuth, Isaac Lewis and Tea Tray in the order named.

The fractional time of the race was: Quarter, 0:23 1-5; half, 0:50; three-quarters, 1:15; mile and a quarter, 2:07. The starters, their jockeys and last betting are as follows:

Loantaka (5), Bergen, 40 to 1; Major Domo (5), Martin, 10 to 1; Cassius (5), Taral, 20 to 1; Fitzjames (4), Garrison, 15 to 1; Banquet (4), Hamilton, 3 to 1; Tenny (3), L. Murphy, 8 to 5; Riley (4), Overton, 20 to 1; Demuth (4), Doggett, 30 to 1; Isaac Lewis (4), Taylor, 100 to 1; Tea Tray, (5), Garrison, 3 to 1.

BRIDGEPORT'S POLICE MUDDLE.

All Quiet in the City, but the Military Are Ready.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 17.—There was no decided change in the police muddle situation yesterday further than that all was quiet in and about the police station. The old board of police commissioners instructed the firemen who refused to do duty under Chief Rylands to report for duty at 6 o'clock. Two of them did so and the chief refused to recognize them. The others learning of the refusal of their companions did not report.

Prosecuting Attorney Chamberlain has issued warrants for the arrest of the five patrolmen on the charge of disobeying the mayor's orders. The mayor will endeavor to keep the station house and the green in front clear of spectators. The two companies of the machine gun platoon of the Fourth regiment, N. G., assembled at the armory at 9 o'clock last evening ready to report to the mayor's call if needed.

No general outbreak is feared at present. Counsel for the old Democratic board of police have brought two actions in the courts against Chief Rylands, which serve to tie his hands until the case is tried. The case will be heard next Tuesday. Captain Pinkerton is acting chief at present under the direction of the mayor. The police detail was sent out last evening as usual and quiet order prevailed. The military assembled at 6 o'clock, but at 9 o'clock they were relieved from duty until further orders.

GLEN ECHO CHAUTAUQUA.

The New Resort Opened Near the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—In an immense amphitheater, over 300 feet in diameter and costing over $150,000, the opening exercises of the National Chautauqua at Glen Echo were held in the presence of an audience of several thousand people. They were presided over by Rev. A. H. Gillet, D. D., chancellor of Chautauqua, whose experience as field secretary of the original Chautauqua fits him admirably for the position. The feature of the day was the address of Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, who spoke for an hour. He touched upon the different ways which are now occupying the attention of the religious world, and predicted that the Chautauqua movement, with its idea of bringing all denominations together, would in the course of time be the most active agent in causing an end of evangelical strife.

Must Must Serve a Year.

NEW YORK, June 17.—The court of appeals has handed down its decision affirming the judgment of conviction against Johann Most, and now the apostle of anarchy must go to the penitentiary. Most was convicted of violating the law against inciting persons to unlawful acts and was sentenced on Dec. 8, 1887, to serve one year on Blackwell's island.

To Dissolve the Equitable Life.

NEW YORK, June 17.—George Newell, as referee of the New York Equitable Life Insurance company, has filed his report recommending a dissolution of the company and the appointment of John Miller, its president, as receiver.

Scourged by Diphtheria.

HARTFORD, June 17.—East Hartford and Manchester are suffering from a scourge of diphtheria. Eight deaths have occurred and several other cases will probably prove fatal.

IN THE ENEMY'S LINES.

GEN. FORREST'S DARING OCCUPANCY OF WEST TENNESSEE.

Though It Was Roamed in by Union Forces He Slipped Through, Established Headquarters, Recruited, Organized and Led South Several Thousand Men.

(Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.)

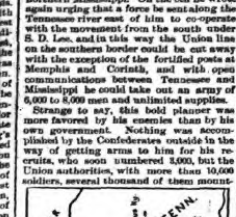
FORREST'S notoriety as a Confederate leader was not confined to dashing raids or brilliant and desperate feats at arms. His recruiting expedition within the Union lines in West Tennessee, in December, 1862, was a rare display of his versatile powers as a man for the war crisis.

After his remarkable running fight with the Union raider Streight in April, Forrest was placed in command of the cavalry division of the Confederate army of the west, and soon afterward became chief of the cavalry in East Tennessee. Later he was assigned to a command under Maj. Gen. Joseph Wheeler, the chief of cavalry of Gen. Bragg's army, and feeling this to be a humiliating order he resigned his commission as brigadier general and asked for duties in another sphere. The Confederate president, who happened to be at Bragg's headquarters when the resignation reached them, sent for Forrest and prevailed on him to withdraw it. In a short time he was formally assigned by special order of Jefferson Davis to "the command of west Tennessee." With a remnant of 310 men, chiefly his personal escort, and a battery of four guns he reached Okolona, Miss., on Nov. 18, en route to his new field. That new field, lying between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers, was wholly included in the Union department commanded by Gen. S. A. Hurlburt, whose forces constituted the Fourteenth army corps, with headquarters at Memphis. Hurlburt's troops were posted in strong numbers along the line between Tennessee and Mississippi, to guard the railroad from Memphis to Corinth. He also had troops on the Mississippi above Memphis, on the western border of Tennessee, and across the northern border in Kentucky.

Nashville, east of the Tennessee, was the headquarters of another Union force having in observation the line of the Tennessee river. Practically, therefore, Forrest's new command lay wholly within the strong envelopment of the Union lines. What was he to do with it under the circumstances? Even the men he was expected to lead were hemmed in at their homes in West Tennessee, and were unwilling conscripts, skulking deserters, and furloughed men absent from their commands, who needed to get clothing and remounts. The Confederate cavalry in northern Mississippi consisted of three small brigades, under Gen. W. H. Lee, and they were fully occupied in holding that country as a Confederate storehouse, and Forrest could look for no material help from that quarter to break down the armed barriers between solid southern ground in Mississippi and the coveted territory across the Tennessee border. A brigade of West Tennessee partisans led by Gen. R. V. Richardson was added to Forrest's remnant, giving him 9 little over 800 armed fighting men.

Under cover of an attack by Gen. S. D. Lee's cavalry, on the Union posts along the railroad between Corinth and Memphis, Forrest slipped through the lines on Dec. 2 and proceeded to the heart of West Tennessee. On the 8th he was at Bolivar, and promptly sent out scouts in all directions to warn him of any hostile movement to close in upon his rear. On the 9th he was at Jackson and there established headquarters. In a letter to his superiors he at once reported progress in the work of raising men, and added parenthetically that the Union authorities were increasing their forces along the Mississippi west and north of him, but if Gen. S. D. Lee would hold the attention of those south, on the railroad between Memphis and Corinth, he, Forrest, could whip any force sent from above. He had been promised arms from the Confederate government to equip his recruits, and if Gen. Lee would move up to Jackson with them, escorted by a small cavalry guard, the newly armed levies would return with him and effectually destroy the railroad between Corinth and Memphis, and run off several thousand head of cattle which the Confederate camps in northern Mississippi. On the 8th he wrote again urging that a force be sent along the Tennessee river east of him to co-operate with the movement from the south under S. D. Lee, and in this way the Union line on the southern border could be cut away with the exception of the fortified posts at Memphis and Corinth, and with open communications between Tennessee and Mississippi he could take out an army of 6,000 to 8,000 men and unlimited supplies.

Strange to say, this bold planner was more favored by his enemies than by his own government. Nothing was accomplished by the Confederates outside in the way of getting arms to him for his recruits, who soon numbered 3,000, but the Union authorities, with more than 10,000 soldiers, several thousand of them mounted, stationed at points varying from 50 to 100 miles of Jackson, left him unmolested more than three weeks. Gen. Hurlburt knew the moment Forrest crossed his line what force the daring Confederate had with him and his route northward, and he immediately wired to the Union commander at Columbus, Ky., Gen. A. J. Smith, to clean out the whole country from Columbus to Jackson with a strong flying column. A day later he received information, derived from a scout, partly true, and to the effect that the Confederates had a large force in West Tennessee, and were trying to arm them and attack the railroads. On the 7th he notified Smith that Forrest had but three cannon, and was concentrating troops at Jackson and at Trenton.



MAP OF WEST TENNESSEE.

By Dec. 14, 5,500 re-enforcements had been sent to Gen. Hurlburt's department to help take care of Forrest, and Gen. Grant ordered a raid into Mississippi in order to draw off supports from the much dreaded leader, whose almost helpless situation was exactly known at the headquarters in Memphis. On the 16th Hurlburt notified Gen. Stevenson, commanding the Union post at Corinth, that Forrest had "about 1,500 armed men and 1,000 unarmed." In point of fact Forrest took no pains to conceal his presence in West Tennessee from his antagonists. On the 15th he sent a communication under a flag of truce to Gen. Hurlburt, assuming to be in control of a Confederate military district, which he termed the "department of West Tennessee," and proposing joint measures to abate the evil of the parasuction of noncombatants of which the inhabitants complained. Gen. Hurlburt responded in full spirit, addressing Forrest as a general of the Confederate army. There was a state of things to make military men gnash their teeth with chagrin. An enemy, with barely a personal escort, had forced his way into a strong Union department, escaped a narrow, circumscribed territory, launched out in recruiting and gathering forage, and gained official recognition from the opposing commanding general whose department he had invaded, in the first two weeks of his occupancy.

Forrest's scouts kept him well informed of the movements of the Union forces in all quarters menacing his peace. By the 15th of December he knew that Gen. Smith was expected to move down from the north, that Gen. Hurlburt's cavalry leader, Grierson, was being strongly re-enforced to hold the southern line between Corinth and Memphis, and that Union columns were under orders to move upon Jackson from Corinth, Memphis, Nashville, east of the Tennessee river, and Fort Pillow, on the Mississippi, west, in conjunction with Gen. Smith's proposed sweep from the north. The arms that he was expecting would arrive from the south for his recruits did not come, and having about 1,500 of these men well mounted, he sent them under a small escort to northern Mississippi to procure equipments and return to him at Jackson. This whole cavalcade actually slipped through the Union cavalry patrol on the southern Tennessee line, and passed near the Union post at Corinth on to Iuka, Miss.

On the 23d Forrest learned from scouts that Union troops were in position to move on him within a very few days. Smith was to start from Union City with 6,000 men and Grierson's cavalry, supported by infantry, moving on the cars, was to be ready to act at any point between Memphis and Corinth. Forrest decided to start southeast at once, hoping to meet Gen. S. D. Lee moving northward with arms for his recruits, or, failing in that, to cut his way through Grierson's line. Detachments of armed men, numbering 1,500 in all, and others had joined him, swelling his fighting force to about 2,000 men. There were still over 2,000 unarmed men in the department, and these, many of them very much scattered, but the leader ordered them to move southward to Estanania on the Hatchie. Gen. Richardson led the way, crossed the Hatchie on the 26th, and soon met the Seventh Illinois cavalry of Grierson's command across his pathway.

THE CHARGE AT THE BRIDGE.

After some sharp skirmishing Richardson was repulsed. Forrest, coming up, deployed his escort, and by a clever display of his unarmed men bluffed the Union cavalry leader and forced him to retreat. The Confederate column and trains now passed through the gap and started hopefully southward. The train consisted of forty wagons loaded with subsistence stores, and 200 cattle and 300 hogs were driven ahead. The guard numbered only 600 men, the remaining troopers being scattered in different directions to protect the flanks. On the 29th Forrest turned to the southwest, toward Memphis, in order to avoid the Union forces in detachments awaiting him in the direction of Corinth. At Somerville he again met the Seventh Illinois cavalry, but cut his way through the Hatchie on the 30th, and soon met the Seventh Illinois cavalry of Grierson's command across his pathway

POLICEMEN ARRESTED.

THEY SEEK TO QUELL A DISTURBANCE.

Rowdies Engage in a Street Fight.—The Policemen Are Called, Insulted, Jeered and Finally Arrested —This is More of Combine Rule.

Last Saturday at about twelve o'clock p. m., two young men engaged in a fistic encounter at the corner of Third and Liberty streets. Before Policeman Giese and Kiely arrived, friends of the participants of the fight had succeeded in spiriting them away. A young man named Thomas Dowd stood on the corners in company with several other young men. As it was after midnight the police ordered the crowd to move on. All complied but Dowd. He jeered the officers and continued tantlizing them in every way imaginable. They stood it for a while, but finally patience ceased to be a virtue and they moved Dowd by force.

Monday morning Dowd went before Justice Nash and swore out a warrant for the arrest of the officers on the charge of assault and battery. The policemen were notified to appear in court, which they did yesterday afternoon at three o'clock. They waived examination and were released, on their own recognizance to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Justice Nash as a special policeman and delinquent tax collector then arrested Dowd for nonpayment of taxes and would not permit him to leave the place until he paid up. Dowd sent for a friend and liquidated his indebtedness to the city.

Both policemen Giese and Kiely are excellent officers and always do their duty fearlessly. They must have had good cause for so doing if they handled young Dowd roughly on the night above mentioned. Dowd has been arrested on one or two occasions before, and he is known to the police as a disorderly character. It is the duty of the officers to keep the streets clear of such persons. The city judge is doing all in his power to uphold the officers as he knows they have much to contend with, while our city affairs are so demoralized as a result of combine rule.

BREVITIES.

—Hereafter Jones & Co., will remove all dead animals. All that is necessary is to report it to the police.

—The commencement exercises of the North Plainfield public school will take place one week from to-night.

—A school girl was insulted by a drunken man near the Park avenue railroad bridge yesterday at twelve o'clock.

—A number of Plainfielders attended an ice cream and strawberry festival in South Plainfield last evening. They went in stages.

—It is said that the Seton Hall College team is to cross bats with the Crescents next Saturday afternoon will be the strongest team they have put in the field this season.

—The commencement exercises of the Plainfield High School will be held in the Stillman Music Hall next Thursday evening. A reception to the graduates will follow in assembly Hall.

—Harrison Randolph and his brother Alonzo engaged in a fistic encounter in an alley on Second street Tuesday afternoon. Both of the participants were badly bruised. No arrests were made.

—Elmer Hoffman, a newsboy, claims that a dog belonging to Mr. Chas. Hunter of West Seventh street bit him a few evenings ago. He further claims that one of the servant girls set the dog on him.

—The base ball nine composed of members of St. Mary's Cadets say that they are prepared to play any nine in this vicinity composed of players under 18 years of age. Kane and Mack comprise the battery.

—The First Baptist Sunday School have selected a most desirable place for their excursion July 2d. Belmar is a locality with many advantages for an enjoyable day at the Sea shore. Shark River on one side with good fishing, crabbing and boating will tempt those who love that sport.

—The Church of the Holy Cross, the Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector, the fourth Sunday after Trinity. Sunday school at 9:45 a. m., morning prayer and sermon at 11 a. m. The afternoon service has been omitted until further notice. The Rev. M. McAllister of Trinity church will preach.

—James Heath, a butcher employed on North avenue met with a painful accident Tuesday afternoon. He stood on a chair for the purpose of hanging up a piece of meat, when the chair tilted and in his endeavor to save himself from falling he grabbed for the meat rack, but instead his hand came in contact with a meat hook and his fingers were badly lacerated.

—At the E. E. Church Sunday morning Rev. F. A. Mason preached a sermon in keeping with the day. In the afternoon a new original programme was rendered entitled "Character Building." There were a number of declamations by the scholars. Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Plainfield M. E. Church made an address.—Bound Brook Correspondence Somerville Messenger.

SENTENCES PASSED.

NINE YEAR OLD BOY CHARGED WITH ATTEMPTED MURDER.

Isaac Bradley Committed to County Jail for Ten Days.—Other Business.

A brief session of the Union County Court of General Sessions was held yesterday morning. Judge McCormick presiding. There were several matters in the Orphans' Court, and motions made in civil actions.

It was expected that judgment would be pronounced on Samuel Beckman and Jennie Wiley, and there was a good attendance of people who were disappointed to learn that the prisoners would not be arraigned until Saturday.

Isaac Bradley was charged with an assault upon Officer Tucker. Prosecutor Marsh said the case was a trivial one. Bradley had some trouble with his wife, and the officer interfered. Bradley was sentenced to the county jail for ten days.

Charles Radford Donaldson was the big name that was given to a very small prisoner, a nine year old boy. The charge against the little fellow was a serious one. The prosecutor read the allegation which was that young Donaldson had assaulted his mother and attempted to kill her.

The boy pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for Saturday next. Mr. John J. Lowden being assigned by the court as the counsel for the young prisoner.

Detective John M. C. Marsh said that the boy is an incorrigible youngster. He has set fire to a barn and some hay barracks, and the assault upon his mother was really a vicious one. The intention is to have the boy sent to the State Reform School.

William Pfiffer, charged with receiving stolen goods, pleaded non vult, by advice of his counsel, Mr. Timothy Keilly, and he was fined $5.

Strawberries and Ice Cream.

The strawberry and ice cream festival given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope Chapel began last evening and it was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. The rain kept many at home so that the chapel with its new addition thrown open was not crowded. There was a very pleasing programme rendered. It consisted of a piano duet by Mrs. Fred. Canfield and Miss Ella Decamp, a recitation by Mr. R. Mattox, entitled "The Drummer Boy," received an encore and responded with a humorous selection; a song by Mr. Kenny and a piano solo by Miss Lizzie Firstbrook closed the programme for the evening.

The festival will continue this evening. There will be quite an interesting programme with the other attractions.

The committee on the tables are: Strawberry table—Mrs. Whitlock and Mrs. Firstbrook.

Ice cream—Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Kenny.

Candy—Mrs. Hangliter and Mrs. Rolston.

Lemonade—Mrs. Thomas Chamberlain.

Cake—Mrs. Cory, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Ball and Mrs. Walker.

Flower booth—Mrs. Samuel Smith and Mrs. McInnis.

Vice Commander—G. W. Rockfellow.
Orator—J. E. Arnold.
Past Commander—T. C. Smith.
Secretary—G. E. Stillman.
Collector—F. D. Fuller.
Treasurer—L. A. Hummer.
Chaplain—G. L. Van Emburgh.
Guide—F. M. Slater.
Warden—C. Pope.
Sentry—D. R. Weaver.
Trustees—G. L. Van Emburg, T. C. Smith, and A. L. Fine.

Is it the Mafia.

The police were notified this morning that the life of James Brennan had been threatened by the Italians if he appeared in court this afternoon and testified against Felix Sterpon, the Italian who was arrested for selling liquor without a license. Contractor Uhdal advised Brennan not to go to work this morning, and he did not do so.

At the request of Counsellor Van Winkle, Sterpon's lawyer, the case of Sterpon, which was to have come up for trial this afternoon was postponed until one week from Monday next.

Held in $200 Bail.

"Gus" Sutterlin, Jr., appeared before Justice Crossley on the charge of atrocious assault on George Lewis, Jr., of Somerset street, North Plainfield. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and his hearing was set down for Tuesday next. In the meantime he was required to furnish bonds in the sum of two hundred dollars. It will be remembered that young Lewis in company with a number of friends went for a bath a short time ago and Lewis claims that Sutterlin committed an atrocious assault on him with a club.

Poisoned by Wild Parsnips.

Mrs. William Bosen is dying of poison at her home in Union Village. She was gathering greens in her garden a few days ago, when by mistake she plucked a number of deadly poisonous wild parsnips. These she cooked and ate. The next day her whole system swollen blotches appeared all over her body. The usual remedies were given, but she rapidly grew worse. Mrs. Keen is eighty-years of age. Her husband was for a long time Principal of the Newark High School.

CLIPPINGS FROM EXCHANGES.

Nicholas Meierhoff, Jr., the heaviest man in Bergen county, died on Monday at his home in Little Ferry. He weighed 400 pounds.

Ten-year-old Willie Crellin, son of John W. Crellin, a contractor, was nearly drowned while bathing at Asbury Park yesterday. Four workmen rescued him.

Fifteen-year-old Aaron Newman, of Farmingdale, proved himself a hero yesterday morning, two companions, William Foley and William Brown, from drowning a millpond.

Edward Shimer, who has been treated with Koch's lymph for consumption at his Bloomsbury home for several months died early Sunday morning. The application of the lymph seemed to hasten death.

Samuel Shaw, who has been oystering in Maurice river, returned to his home at Bridgeton to find the house locked and his wife gone. She had left a note saying that she had sold the furniture and gone to Ohio to live with her parents.

Over two hundred men struck for higher wages at the Standard Oil Company's barrel factory in the Constable Hook section of Bayonne yesterday. The appearance of the lymph seemed to hasten death.

Over two hundred men struck for higher wages at the Standard Oil Company's barrel factory in the Constable Hook section of Bayonne yesterday. The appearance of the strikers are coopers, while the rest are laborers. The coopers have been receiving $2.50 per day for 62. They want $2.50 per day. Laborers who have been paid $1 per day demand $1.50.

The Hudson County Board of Equalization of Taxes has received reports from the several Assessors. They show a gain in ratable property in Jersey City of $5,470,610, divided as follows: First district, $1,492,550; Second, $468,395; Third, $704,980; Fourth, $988,650; Fifth, $395,985, and in the Sixth district $1,470,550. Hoboken shows a gain of $2,107,895. West Hoboken of $944,800, and Weehawken of about $15,000.

A Victim of Electricity.

Tuesday evening as Mr. Frank Hedden was entering his residence, on Nelson avenue, near Eighth street, the electric light suddenly went out and in feeling his way in the darkness he accidentally touched one of the iron posts used by the Electric Light Company to string their wires on. As he did so he received a severe shock of electricity that he was thrown into the middle of the street. Mr. Hedden walked home in a dazed condition and his right arm still pains him from the shock.

Last evening THE NEWS referred to the fact that a tree on Second street, in front of the residence of Mr. Kurzhals, was charged with electricity, and also to the fact that a number of small boys and young men amused themselves by touching it, thereby receiving shocks. During the evening one young man carrying a tin pail in one hand placed the other on the tree, and was thrown from the sidewalk into the middle of the street. He laid there a few seconds and then picked himself up a sadder but a wiser man.

Yet it was attempted to introduce the trolley into Plainfield which is manifold more dangerous. The trolley carries electricity of sufficient force to be a sufficient full of danger to life. Added to the chapter of fatal accidents from this cause was another which resulted in the death of a man in Newark about a week ago as reported in the papers at the time.

Laing's Hotel Property Sold.

The property on West Front street, known as Laing's Hotel, was sold at public auction yesterday afternoon. The purchaser is Mr. J. H. Haven, an extensive New York lumber dealer, who recently purchased property on Plainfield avenue and moved his family here. The consideration was $25,000. A few weeks ago Mr. Haven purchased a valuable piece of property in New York, paying therefore $125,000.

The hotel is the oldest in this vicinity, having been built in 1826. It is not known what Mr. Haven intends doing with the property. Mr. Wallace V. Miller has a lease on the property which does not expire until April 1st.

A rumor on the streets to-day was to the effect that it was intended to use the property for the barriers of the electric railway. But it won't be thus used yet awhile. The people don't want the trolley.

New Jersey State Convention.

Preparations for the next State Convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union are now being made, but the plans are as yet by no means complete. Newark has been decided upon as the place, and the date, if the church can be secured, is June 25, 24 and 25. The first session will be held Friday evening and the concluding services will be held on Sunday. This is something new for our State, and it contemplates a much more elaborate programme than anything that has been adopted. The First Presbyterian Church is the one in which the convention will probably be held.

Bitten By a Dog.

At about half-past twelve o'clock this afternoon a nine year old girl named Williams while passing along West Front street, was bitten by a dog. The young man who saw the canine bite her attempted to follow it but it made its escape. The girl was very much frightened and was assisted to her home. There are too many worthless curs running at large and it would be well for us as there is an ordinance compelling the muzzling of dogs, there is no reason why it should not be enforced.

Too Hot to Work.

The hot weather of yesterday compelled a number of workmen to quit work early in the afternoon. The humidity was terrible and they could not stand it.

The men employed in cutting the new streets through the land near the property owned by ex-Councilman E. R. Clark on West Front street stopped work on account of the heat, as did also several masons.

The Bible Not Opposed to Women.—Rev. Dr. Talmage on the Subject.

[Rev. Dr. Talmage.]

THE BIBLE NOT ANTAGONISTIC TO WOMAN.

"Another false charge which infidelity has made against the Bible is that it is antagonistic to women. It has a religious her degradation and belittles her mission. Is the Bible the enemy of woman? Come into the picture gallery, the Louvre, the Luxembourg of the Bible, and see which pictures are the most honored. Here is Eve, a perfect woman, a perfect woman as could be made by a perfect God. Here is Deborah, with her womanly arm hurling a host into the battle. Here is Miriam, leading the Israelitish women in song by the banks of the Red Sea. Here is motherly Hannah, with her own loving hand replenishing the wardrobe of her son Samuel, the prophet. Here is Abigail, kneeling at the foot of the mountain until the four hundred warlike men, at the sight of her beauty and prowess, halt, halt, a hurricane stopped at the sight of a water lily, a dewdrop dashing back Niagara. Here is Ruth, putting to shame all the modern ideas of womanhood, as she says to mother her back on her home and her country and faces wild beasts and exile and death that she may be with Naomi, her husband's mother. Ruth, the queen of the harvest fields; Ruth, the grandmother of David. The record of her virtues and her life-sacrifice the most beautiful pastoral ever written. Here is Esther, the beautiful, the Nehemiah of a thousand drunken lords, and Esther, willing to throw her life away that she may deliver her people. Here is Dorcas, the sunlight of eternal fame gilding her philanthropic needle, and the women in every town as she has made from the hills of Alabastron, pouring the box of precious ointment, the fragrance lingering all down the corridor of the centuries. Here is Lydia, the merchantess of Tyrian purple, immortalized for her Christian behavior. Here is the widow with two mites, more famous than the millionaires and the Lemuxes of all the ages, while here comes in, slow of gait and with careful attendants and with especial honor and high favor, leaning on the arm of inspiration, one who is the joy and pride of any home so rarely fortunate as to have one, an old Christian grandmother, Grandmother Lois."

The tennis courts and croquet grounds will be open to players as usual. Judging from the large attendance at the ten held two weeks ago these entertainments bid fair to become very popular. The many friends of its members highly appreciate the pleasure afforded by this select and pleasant organization.

A Mad Dog Shot.

THE NEWS of last evening published about how a dog was terrorizing the residents of Washington Park. While passing as Mr. John Smalley was driving along Brook avenue, espied the canine which had fallen in a fit near the brook. It was foaming at the mouth and appeared to be suffering terribly. Mr. Smalley drove to the store of Mr. H. M. Spencer, where he borrowed a revolver. He then returned to Brook avenue and shot the dog. It required four shots to kill it.

COOK AND WALKER.

They Plead Guilty to Assault and Battery and Robbery.

It is stated here yesterday that Frank Cook and John Walker, two men who robbed and tied up old John Thoms, and left him to die in Mrs. Kilpatrick's Summer residence, on the Hamilton street road near New Brunswick last Winter, were arraigned at Somerville on the charge of robbery and atrocious assault and battery with intent to kill. They pleaded guilty to robbery and assault and battery, but refused to plead guilty to the intent to kill. It is believed that they will get 20 years each. They were defended by Howard MacSherry.

Base Ball Notes.

[From the Somerset Messenger.]

Let the eagle screech in honor of Plainfield's defeat! The mighty have fallen, and weeks will pass ere the head of the Crescent City is lifted from the dust wherein it now lies prone.

Saturday ended in a blaze of glory. Skyrockets, Roman candles and colored fire were predominant from 8 to 10 p. m., and the club house was ablaze with lights. A large crowd of people gathered to see the fun and witness the celebration and do honor to the apple-green and white.

W. W. Pearson, a Plainfielder of legal lore, and who is imbued with the spirit of Crescent strength, came up very strong on Saturday. His carriage was decorated with the national colors and Crescent emblems of blue and gold, the front bearing the legend, "Blood! Blood! Victor! Gore!" in large, black letters. After driving around the town and enlightening the good people of our village as to what side he was on, he drove to the grounds, and taking up a position near the Grand stand, said he was ready to see the game and the West Ends beaten out of sight. To his surprise and disgust the Crescents were turned, and at the end of the fifth inning he swallowed his chagrin, and, turning the sign of his carriage from blue and gold to that of the apple-green and white rooters threw the words: "We bet our money on the West Ends." Well, to say the least, we didn't get the better of Pearson, by a good deal. He was ready for us either way we went, and he is to be congratulated that he held his end up, and did not do as the rest of the gang did—go home broken in heart and spirit.

Summit's State Bank.

Articles of incorporation of the Summit State Bank were filed at Elizabeth yesterday with the clerk of Union county. The capital of the bank is to be $50,000, divided into 500 shares of the par value of $100 per share. The incorporators are: George Manly, G. W. Dillingham, John N. May, J. S. Palmer, William Halls, Jr., W. Z. Larned, John N. Peet and Albert Newell. All the shares of stock have been taken by twenty-three stockholders. The corporation is to continue for twenty years from the date of its organization. The stockholders are mainly residents of Summit with the following exceptions: A. D. Palmer, East Orange, fifty shares; Thomas Young, Jr., New York, thirty shares; H. C. Palmer, New York, twenty shares; George G. Porter, New York, ten shares; George W. Palmer and Wm. Cogan, both of Brooklyn, each ten shares. The bank will be located at Summit.

—The Plainfield Reform club will hold a meeting to-night at eight o'clock.

Chronos will not carry on a business enterprise.

Was Sir John Macdonald a statesman or only a politician? The weight of evidence seems to incline to the politician's end of the scale?

The new federation of Australia will be a republic identical in government with our own, except in one particular. Instead of a president chosen by electoral college there will be a governor general appointed by the crown. This will save the Australians all the fuss and expense of presidential campaigns.

The farmers still rate the trusts roundly for depriving them of the legitimate fruits of their labor. But one class of men can form trusts as well as another class, and this resort is as open to the agriculturist as to anybody else. Now that the farmers have taken things into their own hands, they have a prospect of righting their own wrongs. It is as old as the history of mankind that only those deserve freedom who are able to win it and maintain it with mailed hand against the world. Evils can be effectually remedied only by those who suffer from them. If the farmers are strong enough and united enough, they can do what they will. That is something. That fact needs no argument. But whether they will be thus strong and united is another question.

Ignoble Ambitions.

It may or may not be true, as reported, that an intense and bitter rivalry exists among some three or four of the following: Mme. Blavatsky as to who shall be the leader and high priest or priestess, as the case may be, of the faithful, now that madame's spiritual monad is reposing in Devachan. If it is true, then what is the gold of theosophy, the philosophy which impresses and emphasizes above all things brotherly love, humility of spirit, teachableness and "in honor preferring one another," just as Paul directed? If this is all theosophy can do for its very greatest lights, wherein is it one whit better than Christianity?

It is not at all improved upon the teaching which declared that unless a man became as a little child in spirit he could not pass the gate into the kingdom of new and sublime knowledge. If this is the best theosophy can work for the spirit of mankind we might just as well keep on trying to follow, in our weak way, the advice which said, "Learn of me, for I am meek and lowly of heart."

The world is decreasingly in one of service. He who has done most for those he is among deserves to be the head and leader of them, and be alone. This was recognized in the early days of our republic, when he who had led the ragged, barefoot armies of the revolutionary soldiers to victory, Washington, was made the first president, and when he who wrote the Declaration of Independence was also elected to the highest office in the republic. Think of Washington or Jefferson, Martin Luther, Wesley or Joan of Arc, on the eve of one of the movements which sent a tidal wave around the world, asking that last, lowest, meanest, most dastardly of questions:

"What is there in it for me?"

Woman's Paradise.

It is not America at all, as we have been led to suppose, but in the middle of the island of Sumatra, if we are to believe the tale told by a returned traveler, an American, Mr. W. J. Shaw. The women own all the wealth in this she paradise, owing chiefly to the working of a certain law which requires men to bestow all their wealth on their parents, while women may hand theirs down to the children. Consequently it is the effort of the well conducted husband in the interior of Sumatra to put every cent of his accumulations in his wife's name, so that his own children may get his money after his death.

In this thrice blessed region, a man may get a divorce from his wife if he chooses; but as all her property is allowed to remain in her possession after she is set free, while the husband is turned out without a penny, he usually does not choose, and divorces are rare. Moreover, a husband must live in the same house with his wife, so that the female members of a household are saved all the bother of having "a man around in the way." The husband calls on his wife in the evening, dressed in his best suit of clothes, as a lover does in civilized countries. Consequently quarrels between husband and wife are practically unknown in this heathen country.

There are gold and silver mines in the country, and the natives understand the art of working the precious metals into cloth and ornaments. It is no uncommon thing to see girls walking about clad in cloth of gold dresses. Perhaps as a result of having such a good time and having things their own way the women of this favored country are very beautiful, having "good figures, exceedingly fine complexions and bright eyes." They display gorgeous wardrobes also. Here is a good land for the unhappy women of civilized countries to migrate to.

M'KINLEY TO LEAD THEM

Closing Scenes at the Ohio Republican Convention.

FORAKER SCORES HIS ENEMIES.

Other Speeches by Major McKinley, Senator Sherman and Secretary Foster. General Grosvenor's New Appointment Greeted with Laughter and Jeers.

COLUMBUS, O., June 18.—The Republicans have nominated William McKinley, Jr., for governor of Ohio. McKinley received an ovation. In response to cheers Mr. McKinley said that the Republican party of Ohio heartily indorsed the administration of President Harrison, was in favor of a regulated immigration which would debar the vicious and criminal, demanded liberal pensions, would insist on laws to bring about free ballot and honest elections, and favored a circulating medium which would be sound and stable and secure from discount, depreciation or fluctuation. He repeated his well known views on the tariff question and said that the Republicans followed in their tariff policy the teachings of Washington and Hamilton and Clay and Webster and Lincoln and Garfield, while the Democrats pursued the fallacies of Cobden and Bright and the statesmen of the late southern Confederacy.

Defending His Bill.

In defending his bill he said:

True, we did advance some duties. It is said they bear heavily on the farmers. Let us see if this criticism is supported by the facts. The average ad valorem per cent of the advanced duties are for the better protection of the American farmer. Twenty-eight per cent of the advanced duties are upon wine and spirits, which will hardly burden the American farmer. Five of the advanced duties are upon tobacco, an agricultural product. In the framing of the law most careful consideration was given to agriculture.

Tribute to the Nominations.

Andrew L. Harris, of Preble county, was nominated for lieutenant governor; Ebenezer W. Poe, of Wood county, was renominated for auditor; W. T. Cope, of Cleveland, was nominated for state treasurer, and Senator John K. Richards, of Lawrence, was nominated for attorney general.

The nomination of General Harris for lieutenant governor was a victory for the Sherman men, though it was the result of a still hunt. Up to the calling of the roll the Hon. Charles P. Griffin, of Toledo, a staunch Foraker man, seemed to have the nomination by a sufficient majority.

"Sherman" was next shouted by thousands of throats, and with difficulty the veteran statesman climbed to the stage and contributed his share of the prevailing enthusiasm. He said:

Senator Sherman's Speech.

Senator Sherman began by reviewing the history and achievements of the Republican party, which he declared was the author of the sound financial system of the country and the protector of America's industries. He eulogized President Harrison's administration.

"The recent Republican congress," he said, "in connection with President Harrison, has dealt with all leading questions of the time, and with the most important questions of foreign nations. Every one of these has either been settled or is in the way of settlement."

Senator Sherman declared that the administration of Mr. Cleveland had devised nothing and accomplished nothing. Referring to the McKinley bill he said it was a measure that extended its benefits to whom and where it should. It was open to discussion and would improve on acquaintance. The free coinage of silver, he declared, was neither just nor equitable. It would demonetize gold and disarrange all business relations. The speaker reiterated the Republican declarations as to the general results and federal election bill, and closed with a prediction that Ohio would again lead the Republican column in November.

Secretary Foster's Address.

Secretary Foster's address was then read. He defended the increased appropriations of the last congress at length; opposed free coinage of silver, but favored bi-metallism, and said that the third party movement had no just ground for complaint against the Republican party. The reading of a dispatch from Washington was received with joy, as the Hon. Charles Grosvenor had been appointed to visit foreign countries in behalf of the World's fair was greeted with laughter and not a few jeers. It was announced that a representation of the American eagle should be the device to be placed at the head of the ballot, and the convention adjourned sine die.

Foraker's Nominating Speech.

In nominating Major McKinley, ex-Governor Foraker made a characteristic speech. He referred to several prominent living Republicans, including Harrison and Blaine, and then evoked a roar of laughter by asking if he had forgotten anybody and adding that he wanted to remember everybody and everything from grandfather's hat to Baby McKee. The coming campaign, he said, would be conducted on the situation at Chattanooga during the war when the rebels were on the crest, the Union men in the hollow, and as the Union men mounted the crest the rebels fell back point by point. Ohio was the Lookout Mountain in the campaign of '92. William McKinley was the Hooker of the occasion, and himself and his bearers "the boys." The ex-governor indirectly paid his respect to the disaffected elements in the party that aided in defeating about his defeat in 1889. McKinley, he said, would be elected. He need not fear the going of accession who in previous years had aided in Republican defeat. He did not know what a political razor was. He was a true, pure man.

An Anonymous Letter Writer Caught.

SING SING, N. Y., June 18.—Robert Robinson, aged forty-five years, is under arrest here charged with sending improper literature through the mails. It is alleged that for over five years Robinson has been writing letters to a gentleman of this village charging his wife with infidelity and then writing to the wife charging the husband with a similar crime. An examination will be made as to Robinson's insanity.

Father Mollinger Prostrated.

PITTSBURG, June 18.—Father Mollinger is so completely exhausted over the strain of the past few days that he has been compelled to take his bed. He has nervous prostration, and he has announced that he cannot see patients.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv

GENERAL SCHOFIELD SURRENDERS.

Not to an Enemy, but to One of the Ushers.

KEOKUK, Ia., June 18.—The marriage of Major General John M. Schofield and Miss Georgia Kilbourne was celebrated in the city at noon today in the presence of a distinguished company. For days the social Four Hundred of the city have been abuzz with excitement over the coming event, and today was a gala day, indeed, for them. A citizens' committee, headed by John M. Craig, met General Schofield and staff at Burlington in the morning on their arrival from Chicago in a special car, and escorted them to this city, arriving at 10 a. m. The party was at once driven to the Hotel Keokuk, where they awaited the wedding hour.

The ceremony was performed at the stately old Church of St. John's, after the Episcopal ritual, the rector of the church, Rev. R. C. McIlwain officiating. The ushers were A. W. Kilbourne, the bride's brother, of Cleveland, O.; David Buel, her cousin; Tobin and William Fyffe, of Chicago; Howard Elliott, of St. Louis, and J. H. Sturgis, of this city. General Schofield and staff wore full dress uniforms, which comprised all the military display of the ceremony.

After the ceremony General and Mrs. Schofield received the invited guests at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. George Kilbourne, from half-past 12 to half-past 2. From 3 to 4 Torrence post, No. 3, G. A. R., marched in grand order and bride a reception at the Hotel Keokuk, at which the public was welcomed.

The newly wedded couple will leave for San Francisco this evening. While in the west General Schofield will make his official tour of inspection of the various military stations.

FOR BREACH OF PROMISE.

Captain Walpole Mulcted $11,500 by Miss Valerie Wiedemann.

LONDON, June 18.—The breach of promise case brought against Captain Robert Horace Walpole by Miss Valerie Wiedemann, in which the plaintiff asked for $100,000 damages, and which has been, off and on, in the courts for about a year, has resulted in a verdict giving the lady $11,500.

The suit was twice tried before, Miss Weidemann being non-suited in the first trial, while the second ended in a verdict for the defendant. Miss Weidemann claimed that after her seduction by the captain, and after she had borne him a child, he deserted her and married a young lady belonging to a well known Irish family. Captain Walpole accused the plaintiff of being a woman of bad repute.

Harrison's Sorrow for McDonald.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 18.—Ex-Senator McDonald is much weaker and unable to take nourishment. There is little hope for his recovery and the end is not many days off. The president telegraphed Mr. McDonald as follows: "I am very sorry to hear of your illness. Accept the sympathy and best wishes for your recovery of an old neighbor and friend." Mrs. McDonald replied: "My husband directs me to express his thanks for the kind expression contained in your dispatch, and to say while his case is critical, yet he is not nonplussed and is prepared for whatever may be the result."

The Slavin-Kilrain Fight.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Jere Dunn, the referee of the glove fight between Frank P. Slavin and Jake Kilrain in Hoboken, has made known his official decision. He decided that Slavin had won the bout and was entitled to 75 per cent. of the $10,000 purse, but that all bets that Kilrain would be knocked out within the ten rounds were off. New York betting men claim that a ten round contest must be concluded, unless one man is knocked out. The purse was short $1,000 short, but the Granite association will doubtless make up the deficiency.

In Honor of "Old Pat."

DANBURY, Conn., June 18.—The city was in gala array yesterday as a mark of welcome to the Putnam Phalanx, of Hartford, which arrived 200 strong. A street parade followed their arrival, after which the party were conveyed to Putnam camp, where luncheon was served, followed by the raising of the Stars and Stripes on General Israel Putnam's old camping ground and addresses by Senator Bartrum and Major Blanchard. The visitors were tendered a banquet last evening at Cosmopolitan park.

The Contract Jumpers Are Out.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—President N. P. Young, of the National Baseball league, has made the following important announcement: "The national board of professional baseball clubs has decided that Messrs. Meekin and Raymond, who 'jumped their contracts,' by signing with Brooklyn clubs, are forever ineligible to play with or against any national agreement clubs." Meekin and Raymond are playing with the Louisvilles.

Lucy Gardner's Fine $100.

NEWARK, N. J., June 18.—John Lucy Gardner, the East Orange belle convicted of stealing goods delivered at her home by Stern Bros., has been sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs of prosecution. Her counsel presented a petition for a writ of error to carry the case to the supreme court, at the same time furnishing security in $500 for the fine and costs to be paid. Miss Gardner was then released.

Drowned Himself and the Girl.

PORTSMOUTH, Pa., June 18.—Jennie Kneny, aged ten, and Frank Bixbee, aged twenty-eight, were drowned in the Schuylkill near Parkersford. Jennie and several companions were wading in the water near the bank when Bixbee came along and said he was going to teach them how to swim. He carried Jennie into the river beyond his depth and both sank. It is believed Bixbee was intoxicated.

Jones Has Not Withdrawn.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., June 18.—Lieutenant Governor Jones, when questioned regarding his reported withdrawal from the candidacy for the nomination for governor, replied: "My no act or word or mine, or within my knowledge has my position in relation thereto been changed."

WAS HIPPOLYTE SHOT?

A Report to That Effect from Hayti.

HORRIBLE CRIMES PERPETRATED.

Hundreds of Defenseless Prisoners, Enemies of the President, Shot Down Like Dogs in the Streets—Awful Scenes of Carnage Reported at the Island.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The little steamer Alvo, of the Atlas line, arrived here yesterday with a cargo of bananas and a choice assortment of insurrectionary news from Hayti, where Hippolyte's friends and foes are indulging in one of those Kilkenny cat games for which the island is famous. The most startling item of information brought by the Alvo was a rumor that Hippolyte had been shot on June 8. The Alvo picked that up at Navassa, where she touched on June 7, but no detailed information was obtained that would substantiate the report.

Later the Alvo got hold of some papers from Kingston, Jamaica, and one of them, The Daily Gleaner, of June 11, stated that a report had reached there that Hippolyte had been killed by a bullet, but in the absence of any well authenticated information no credence could be given to the report, which many people were disposed to regard as "too good to be true."

Tortured by Soldiers.

The Alvo, though scheduled to stop at Port au Prince for freight and passengers, kept clear of that town on account of the insurrection there. She lay, however, two days in Jacmel harbor, on the southern coast of Hayti, about fifty miles from Port au Prince, and there got news of the bloody doings at that port au Prince, which caused a feeling of intense indignation against Hippolyte. There is a small garrison at Jacmel and, it is alleged, they arrested six of the leading citizens. Information was not pronounced and threw them into jail.

Next day a small company of Hippolyte's soldiers came over from Port au Prince to execute vengeance on the six prisoners. They were tied to posts in the street and the soldiers, by instructions, fired three volleys, taking care that the first two should maim and not kill, so that the townspeople might be intimidated by the spectacle.

Horrible Scenes.

One of the poor wretches, the narrators say, endured the three volleys, and, unable to speak, made an appealing gesture for mercy. Two soldiers stepped forward. One leveled his musket at the man's head and the other at his breast, and both fired simultaneously. Another soldier saying that he recognized in one of the bodies a man who had killed his father in a prior revolution, emptied the contents of a repeating rifle into it and then smiled with satisfaction.

They Vowed Vengeance.

The butchery is said to have been witnessed by a large crowd. Three hours after the execution the corpses were still strewn about the streets. While the soldiery remained in the town people concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and kept their feelings to themselves, but when the soldiers left they vowed vengeance against Hippolyte and his butchers. The shooting took place on June 4 and the Alvo left Jacmel on June 7. Captain Wallace Hastings said that Hayti might be compared to a powder magazine, about which several people were prowling with lighted matches. The whole island was liable to explode at any moment. Scenes of bloodshed and needless cruelty were of daily occurrence.

Killing His Enemies.

Captain Hastings said the message on the Alvo at Navassa, said that on May 28 100 prisoners were shot, and on May 29 there was a repetition of the butchery. On May 30 fifteen people were executed, and on the succeeding day eleven. Hippolyte was getting rid of his enemies daily by ordering them shot, but Captain Higgins was of the opinion that this would not prevent more serious outbreaks in the near future than any that had yet occurred. Minister Blanchet Price, the official representative of Hippolyte's government, said that he put no faith whatever in the report that Hippolyte had been shot.

Not Credited in Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The department of state has received no news of any attempt upon the life of President Hippolite, of Hayti. As there is constant communication between this port and San Domingo and the United States, there is no doubt that the news of any such event as the assassination of the Haytian president would be promptly sent here.

The Suits on Archer's Bonds.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 18.—State Treasurer Archer has begun suit in the circuit court. The court of appeals delivered two opinions in the bond cases. In the suit on the first bond in which the state received a verdict of $60,000, the decision of the lower court is affirmed. In the suit on the second bond in which the state received a verdict of $12,000, the court holds that the second bond is void. Under this decision the state will lose $12,500.

A Year for Bribes McCrystol.

NEW ORLEANS, June 18.—McCrystol, convicted of attempting to bribe McFable, who had been summoned as a tales juror in the Henry case, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary, the full term of imprisonment provided for by the law. The jury in the case of McCrystol and Conroy, charged with attempting to bribe J. Gormley, returned a verdict of guilty. The jury had been out since Monday night.

The Homeopathists' Convention.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 18.—The morning session of the Homeopathic convention was called to order with Dr. Tisdale Talbot in the chair. An address was made by Dr. Asa S. Couch, of Fredonia, N. Y., on "The Ethical Basis of the Separate Existence of the Homeopathic School." The address was pregnant with telling points, and received hearty applause. Other interesting papers were read.

The Bridegroom Was Missing.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 18.—George V. Havicas and Miss Nellie Shay were to have been married yesterday, but Havican failed to keep his engagement, and it is thought that he has become temporarily insane and wandered away. Both were prominent in society here and wealthy.

Ex-Governor Ludington Dead.

MILWAUKEE, June 18.—Ex-Governor Harrison Ludington died last night, aged seventy-eight years.

IS KELLY SEABRIGHT'S FIREBUG!

He Has Been Placed Under Arrest on Such a Charge.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 18.—Eugene Kelly has been arrested on suspicion of having started the fire which caused such a terrible conflagration at Seabright. He denies the charge. The relief committee has appointed John L. Riker chairman, and will provide for the immediate necessity of the sufferers. Nearly $10,000 have been subscribed by the cottagers along the coast, and a temporary supply of quarters has been established in the Methodist Episcopal church. Fifty families were fed there last night by the ladies' auxiliary committee, which is headed by Mrs. Henry Alexander. Governor Abbott forwarded 100 tents, and Rev. K. H. Stokes, president of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting association, sent twenty-four more and also fifty cots. The relief committee has supplies enough for two days. The conflagration will not interfere with the summer season, as the hotels are not damaged.

Broker Connor Seabright's Hero.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Broker Washington Connor, who has a handsome residence at Seabright, started a fund among his Wall street associates for the relief of the hundreds of people made homeless and destitute by the fire. Mr. Connor also summoned assistance from other towns over his private wire during the fire. He assisted in directing the work of fighting with the flames, there being no organized fire department in the place, and after the fire had been controlled he ordered a carload of provisions from Long Branch, and prevailed upon the Jersey Central railroad authorities to furnish cars at Seabright for the shelter of the homeless people. The people of the place will long regard Mr. Connor as the hero of the occasion.

Smith at the Canal Investigation.

ALBANY, June 18.—At the canal investigation Senator Irwin testified that he had never introduced a canal bill. He always passed all bills handed to him by assemblymen from his district and left them responsible for them. George P. Smith, of North Tonawanda, who made charges against Messrs. Tabor and Sheehan and Senator Scanlan, was called. Speaker Sheehan prompted the questions, while Scanlan sat behind and suggested others. The witness said Scanlan had a house over the state ditch at North Tonawanda. A man had told him that Scanlan had said that he had the right to build over every street on the ditch. Frank T. Warren and George W. Bennell, of Buffalo, the former a Democrat, would swear that Superintendent Hannen had told the story about Grant and Scanlan, and he personally knew that Assistant Superintendent Chambers had told another story. Witness had no charge to make against Attorney General Tabor or Speaker Sheehan.

A Fight Over Robertson's Millions.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., June 18.—The estate of Millionaire L. A. Robertson, who died recently in Brooklyn, leaving extensive landed interests in Pennsylvania, New York and West Virginia, is about to be the subject of a bitter litigation. The contest is between the surviving children of Mr. Robertson's deceased uncles and aunts, who will inherit the estate if it shall be proven that the decedent was a resident of Pennsylvania, and the surviving uncles and aunts who alone will be benefited if it is shown that he was a citizen of New York. Mr. Robertson left the testate, leaving real and personal property worth $2,000,000. Robertson was the man whose Canada Hooks, the New York adventures, claimed to have married.

President Dexter's Charges.

NEW YORK, June 18.—At the session of the Social Science and Industrial Reform associations, President Dexter made the assertion that the failure of the executive committee's bill to pass the last general assembly was owing to the machinations of the organization, Messrs. Larkin and Hutton, of Brooklyn, who the president declared co-operated with the Nationals to defeat the Democratic legislation that the league was seeking. Dexter's remarks aroused at once the opposition of a large part of the Brooklyn contingent. Finally a peace was patched up, and Dexter, Hutton and Larkin were to be expunged from the record.

The Western Iron Scale.

PITTSBURG, June 18.—The Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers have finished the western iron scale. There is no change in the price of puddling, which remains at $5.50. Nine hours is to be a day's work for heaters, finishers and busheling from changing first heat to finishing heat, but this does not apply to the eight hour department. All differences existing between workmen and mill owners must be settled under the rules of the association.

Appointments at Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The president has appointed W. E. S. Fales, of New York, marshal of the consular court of the United States at Amoy, China. Secretary Foster has appointed Hon. Charles H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, a commissioner of the World's fair to visit Europe and H. J. Semmler, of the Department of Labor, representing the Federation of Labor, a member of the immigration commission to visit Europe.

At Glen Echo Chautauqua.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The events of the day at the national Chautauqua at Glen Echo included lectures by Dr. William Harper, of Yale university; the Rev. Russell Conwell, D. D., of Philadelphia; Leon Vincent, of Philadelphia; Professor D. W. Chickering, of this city; Dr. W. F. Davidson and the Rev. Dr. Talmage. The latter's topic was his trip through Palestine.

The Equitable Fire, Not the Life.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The report announcing the dissolution of the New York Equitable Life Insurance company should have read the New York Equitable Fire insurance company. The misapprehension having arisen in consequence of this report it is proper to say that the item had no reference to the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

Harvard Students Bailed.

BOSTON, June 18.—The twenty-three Harvard students charged with maintaining a club liquor nuisance were arraigned. One was discharged and the other twenty-two were found guilty. They appealed to the superior court and were released on bail.

Elected Bishop of Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, June 18.—The Rev. Isaac Nicholson, of Philadelphia, on last night elected bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Milwaukee on the eleventh ballot. His election is regarded as a victory for the high churchmen.

BARDSLEY MAY CONFESS

But Does He Know Where the Money Went?

PHILADELPHIA IS IN BAD SHAPE.

The Treasury Has Been Literally Gutted and the Taxpayers Must at Once Raise $1,375,000 to Get Out of the Hole Into Which Bardsley Plunged Them.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—John Bardsley's coming confession is eagerly awaited in Philadelphia. His gigantic stealings were either so skillfully or so simply made as to baffle Taylor Faunce, Lawrence E. Brown and Thomas W. Barlow, the committee of experts appointed by Mayor Edwin S. Stuart to peer into the deep, dark hole and find out where all the money has gone. These experts have worked arduously for three weeks, and although they have accounted for some things, they have yet to find the actual sink in the hole.

Bardsley's confession, so his counsel, Mr. Alexander, says, will be presented to Judge Wilson on the day next week when the embezzler shall be called up for sentence.

His Account with the Public.

How much Bardsley can explain and how much his explanation will benefit the city or himself is a problem. His account with the public just now stands about like this:

Stolen state taxes for 1890	$825,848 09
Stolen school fund	443,429 23
Stolen state taxes for 1891	517,709 93
In the Seven Spring Garden bank	144,000 00
In the Union Keystone bank	441,564 32
Magnificent total	$2,474,350 57

Does Bardsley Himself Know?

Bardsley is an old man. The mildest possible sentence must mean the ending of his life in prison. Some people therefore scout the idea that his confession will tell anything.

Other people doubt if he can tell much. There is a popular theory in Philadelphia that Bardsley himself does not know what became of the money; that is, that he does not know what has become of most of it. There is a belief that President Gideon W. Marsh, of the ruined Keystone bank, who jumped his bail four weeks ago and has successfully conce led himself ever since, and Herbert H. Yard, who was arrested in Trenton on Friday and who is now enjoying life at his beautiful home in Belmar, N. J., under $10,000 bail, are the only persons who can furnish accurate information.

Philadelphia in Bad Shape.

Meanwhile the position of Philadelphia is pitiful and unfortunate. While some money may be recovered from the banks and from Bardsley's visible assets the amount of at least $1,375,000 must be immediately raised together. It will have to be raised by direct taxation. Philadelphia long ago reached its debt limit and cannot raise one more money by bonds without violating its charter. The thousands of householders in the big city have settled down to the conviction that the existing low tax rate of 1.80 will not be seen again for a dozen years. This is where the public is hard hit, because almost every resident of Philadelphia is a taxpayer. Long and costly litigation must ensue and great municipal financial stress be felt before the effects of these frauds can be overcome.

A Peculiar Steal All Around.

The thing at fault here seems to be the system of financiering practiced in the state and city. Nobody is responsible. It leaves the public funds entirely at the mercy of individuals. If the individuals happen to be honest, well and good; if not, Harm Bardsley. He was the best hustler right along. It is doubtful if there is a state or city in the Union where such a condition of affairs exists, a condition of affairs which permits stealing without the pretence of doing anything at all in return. Tweed stole vast sums in New York, but on the surface something was done. Streets were opened, parks reserved, public buildings erected, all, it is true, at a cost to the taxpayer of from three to five times what they were worth, but work was done and a percentage of value realized.

Here in Philadelphia it is different. The steal is a cold, clear cleaning out of the safe. The public get nothing for their money, and it does not even appear that the thieves profited much.

A Reform Movement.

A reform movement has been set in motion, having for its nucleus the committee of fifty to reorganize and reform existing methods. The committee, if it undertakes the job, will have a large task on its hands. The work will have to be done at Harrisburg, and hope is held out that something will come from the unwilling sacrifice made by the people of Philadelphia. Certainly the few years that remain of Bardsley's life if all agent in prison will be a poor return for the loss caused by his rascality.

The council's investigating committee and the mayor's experts were yesterday given permission by Receiver Yardley to examine Bardsley's accounts in the Keystone bank. They went to work at once.

Mayor Stuart has received from Washington a pamphlet of about 200 pages, containing all the correspondence of the various departments relative to the reorganization scheme and the subsequent plans for a receivership of the Keystone bank.

Will Bardsley Deny It?

There is a report here that Bardsley is preparing a statement in which he denies that he is a thief and throws the whole blame for the loss of the $945,000 of due bills on the Keystone bank. The report says that when he pleaded guilty to all the indictments which charged him with malfeasance in office and misuse of the public funds he did not intend to accept condemnation and the penitentiary without some kind of an effort to combat public opinion that was so strong against him.

Is March in Brazil?

PHILADELPHIA, June 18.—Gideon W. Marsh, the fugitive president of the Keystone bank, is believed to be in Brazil. He is thought to have sailed for that country from New York on May 30, the day following his disappearance from this city. It is stated that Bardsley believes him to be there, and that Marsh tried to induce the ex-treasurer to go with him to that country. Bardsley is said to have seriously considered the proposition for a time, but finally decided not to run away.

The President Off for Cape May.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The president, Mrs. Harrison and their two grandchildren, Mrs. George B. Williams and Miss Ella Warfield, left Washington this morning at 9 o'clock for Cape May. Their cottage there is in readiness for occupancy. The president is expected to return to Washington on Tuesday next.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

Many more people crossed yesterday at the heat in New York and vicinity June 17, and a number of deaths were reported. Considerable damage was done by lightning in the afternoon thunderstorm.

Commencement exercises were held at Rutgers college, Seton Hall, Brown university, Tuft's college, Lehigh university and other educational institutions June 17.

Serapio Serra, a well known tobacco importer, committed suicide at his office, 90 Wall street, New York, by shooting himself through the head. He was temporarily insane.

An unknown person placed an obstruction on the track of the Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad and threw a passenger train from the bridge into the Cedar river, Ia. Two persons were killed and twenty-one injured.

H. Victor Newcomb, who has been accountant for one of the millionaires of New York, and who up to a year or so ago was one of the biggest and boldest speculators in Wall street, has been committed to an asylum. It is said he tried to shoot Flagler, the Standard oil magnate, and was considered too dangerous to be at large.

War Between Two States.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 18.—The governor of Nebraska and the governor of Wyoming are at loggerheads over a horse thief named Kingen, who slipped into Wyoming and stole a valuable horse. A mob followed him into Nebraska for the purpose of lynching him, but instead took him back to Wyoming, where he was sentenced to the penitentiary. Governor Thayer demanded that he be returned at once. Governor Barber refused, but stated to give up Kingen. Thayer then declared that he would have Kingen released if he had to march an army of militia into that state. Governor Thayer is now in Wyoming.

Space Awarded Every State.

CHICAGO, June 18.—Every state and territory in the Union was given space at Jackson park for a building at the World's fair. Thirty-seven, lying in the improved part of Jackson park, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-eighth streets, will be devoted to these state buildings. In some cases less than half an acre has been given for the buildings, while in others the amount is much greater. This assignment is final. The buildings of foreign governments will cover over seventy acres. The states have been grouped with reference to their geographical positions.

Merrbeecher's Alleged Defalcation.

NEW YORK, June 18.—The New York Life Insurance company has made a statement for the press. It deals simply with the Merrbacher alleged defalcation and makes no reference to any of the charges against President Beers and the management of the New York Life Insurance company. The company asks the state to investigate it and says: "We find that the net estimated deficiency of Sanchez & Merrbacher had been charged as a disbursement previous to Dec. 31, 1890, in the item of advanced commissions to agents."

The Queen Will Lead.

LONDON, June 18.—Queen Victoria, it is believed, will consent to be present with her grandson, the German emperor, on the occasion of his reception at the Guildhall by the city authorities of London. It had been arranged that the Prince of Wales should act the host on the occasion, but since recent developments the city people will not have him. The queen might also be marred by an unpleasant reception to the prince, and they have again solicited her majesty to take the lead in person.

Georgia Editors Want Cleveland.

ATLANTA, June 18.—The Evening Journal has made a poll of the members of the Georgia Press associations as to their choice for Democratic nominee for president and their opinion as to what should be the leading issue in the next campaign. Of eighteen editors interviewed eleven were for Cleveland, two for Hill and five noncommittal. Nine favored tariff reform as the issue, two preferred free silver and seven regarded them of equal importance.

He Turned Up Deaf and Dumb.

NEW YORK, June 18.—David Molloy, the nineteen-year-old son of William Molloy, David Dudley Field's private secretary and confidential clerk, claims that he came to New York Monday, was robbed in Pell street and assaulted. Yesterday he turned up badly battered and deaf and dumb. He says he does not remember where he has been since Monday. He was robbed of $108. His assailants have been captured.

LONDON'S WOMEN REPORTERS.

Some of the English Females Who Have Become Known by Their Pen.

One of the most clever of the article contributors to such papers as the Queen and the Lady's Pictorial is Miss de Grasse Stevens, of New York, whose sister is married to the member for Southampton. Her picture, together with a three column account of her books and her American ancestry, appears in one of the weekly papers. The correspondents in London of some of the leading provincial papers are also ladies, and in two instances the wives of members of parliament, while an occasional contributor of the heaviest matter in a weekly review is said to be the young daughter of an English nobleman, who can present the man who seeks her hand with an income of £20,000 a year.

Of the actual women reporters, I have so far only come across about half a dozen. Of these the most conspicuous perhaps is Mrs. Crawford, the husband of the famous Dilke divorce case. She is a singularly bright and well informed woman, and it is said that she wrote the first interview ever published in The Pall Mall Gazette.

She is still a pretty and decidedly young looking woman, and among the successes of her pen are the instructive conversations which she manages to obtain from Canon Farrar, Cardinal Manning, General Booth and many other men who make it their aim in life to alleviate the troubles of the poor. Mrs. Crawford also receives regular assignments for all sorts of odd work, even to reporting cases in police courts, and also from her work so cleverly and unobtrusively that she has made many warm friends among the very newspaper men looked on their profession against the admission of feminine reporters to their ranks.

Another hard working female reporter is Frances Low, sister of the editor of The St. James' Gazette. She does not get any work on her brother's paper, but manages to eke out a living by contributing gossip to The Star, The Pall Mall Gazette and some of the smaller women's papers. Although her signature would suggest English nationality she is really of Hungarian birth, as her father is a Hebrew gentleman from Prague of the name of Lowe. His children, long suddenly in England, Anglicized themselves by clipping the "e" from their name.

Strange to say, however, one of the most bitter writers upon the Russian Jews is Miss Low's brother, 'of The St. James'. She is a young looking woman, with the black eyes and sharp features of a daughter of Israel, and she may be often seen working out her notes in one of the many aerated bread shops which abound in London.

The most prominent, however, of London women reporters is Marie Belloc, a round little fat dumpling of a woman, who can be met nearly up Trafalgar street and the Strand at all hours of the day. She manages to make a good deal of money, particularly as she is Mr. Stead's chief assistant on The Review of Reviews. She is not more than twenty-five years of age, but she is full of energy, and has done more than one successful bit of detailing news which men have failed miserably.

In a general way, however, London's woman reporter is either a very broad and good natured woman or a very shabby and underdressed female. She writes her copy defiantly in the air, and passes a Cerberus before the editor's door at most times to realize what has happened. Nothing escapes her ears or her eyes once she is inside, and if ever the new journalism, or, as it is called in the United States, Yellowism, becomes rampant in England, it will be the female, not the male, reporter in London who will make or mar it.—London Cor. New York Press.

The Children's Teeth.

It becomes mothers, from the moment that their children begin to eat solid food, to see that they have meat and vegetables and milk, eggs, fruit, bread and porridges of the unbolted grain, and as little pastry, fine flour bread, and confectionery as possible, in order that they may at once begin assisting the material for sound second teeth—which come to take any strong exposure, to be sure, but which under hostile circumstances go without long waiting on the order of their going. It is equally necessary to see that the food agrees with the child; for if it is not of a kind easily digested, then the gases of its fermentation will rise into the mouth, and the heated blood occasioned by indigestion will make diseases of the gums, also hurtful to the teeth, and create more sensibility in the nerves to pain and to heat and cold.

Alternations of heat and cold, by the way, are quite as bad for the teeth as indigestible food, the delicate enamel being obedient, as every other substance is, to the laws of contraction and expansion, crushing and splitting under the process, and affording opportunity for the beginning of decay by lodgment of food, or even by the entrance of the common air. Thus it is hardly a matter of doubt whether ice cream and ices, the food of great detriment to the teeth, whether good or bad for the stomach, and if hot tea and coffee, or even plain hot water, are not equally potent for harm.

Nor must the mother, if it can be helped, allow the first teeth to be drawn. Real pain that caused be allayed—for there was never yet philosopher that could endure the toothache patiently, says Leonato—is the only thing that should be her yield on this point, and it is right that the fangs of the first milk teeth should be absorbed in their place, and not extracted, after which absorption the little crowns will drop away of themselves.—Harper's Bazar.

The Mother and Her Dress.

What a contrast there is in the general appearance of some men and their wives. Some of them look as if they had made a mistake and gobbled up a woman that ought to have been some other man's wife, and some women as if many women's looks like victims of some kind of a mistake. It is not uncommon to see women dressed with all the taste in the world, and signs sent out by Worth or Felix, while the husband seems grateful that he had enough money left to buy even "misfits." The entrance my particular attention, but one's heart will get to aching for the little pallid faced and meek looking woman who wears plush cloak and velvet dress, while the husband is radiant in fresh new suits, tan colored gloves, silk hat and red rose in buttonhole.

I spent an hour with the pale faced woman and radiant husband. It was in a steam car. There were four children with them, the eldest about six years. The wife had in addition to the plush cloak, a rusty black hat and gray veil. The children were dressed tastefully. How they loved her! One little fellow came back to kiss her about once in five minutes. It was, "Oh, mamma, isn't that lovely?" and "How do you like me?" and "Are you tired, mamma?" and "Are you glad we are going?" and "Dear mamma." She gave him some fruit. They would not eat it until mamma had a "bite."

The father was radiant and dignified and grand. He never got a kiss, nor a "bite," nor a glance from those four children. He looked first one and then another out of the window. He had his fine clothes, but the mother was rich in all the love that could fill little hearts.—Teresa Dean in Chicago Herald.

Women and Ladies.

There have been some amusing instances of the misapplication of the word lady, which custom has decreed to mean social culture instead of its original meaning, "loaf giver."

A girl waiter in a large hotel in an eastern city approached a guest with this query:

"Has any other lady taken your order?"

This was equivalent to the politeness of the Irish girl who surprised the family by announcing:

"Mamma, the swill lady is at the back door."

There is a story of the mistress of a fashionable house who, on being left without any servant, answered the door bell and was confronted by a stout girl, who asked:

"Are ye the woman that wanted a lady to work for ye?"

A minister who was very polite changed a portion of Scripture to read, "Ladies and gentlemen, be ye healed," and a lecturer who cared more for the sweet phrases of politeness than for the plain statements of the truth, rung this query upon an astonished audience as he discoursed on the characteristics of women:

"Who were the last at the cross? Ladies. Who were the first at the sepulcher? Ladies."

But even he was outdone by the exquisite divine who, as he concluded marrying a couple, said pallantly:

"I now pronounce you husband and lady."—Detroit Free Press.

A Hint for Mothers.

"There is a good deal of talk," said a mother, "about helpful daughters. I have got a helpful son. He is almost twenty-one and quite a society boy, but in a domestic emergency of last week he came to my rescue as perfectly as any practical housekeeper would have done. I had invitations out for a luncheon to some specially formal friends who were temporarily in town, when my strong dependence, a waitress who had been with me years, received word of the dying condition of her mother. She had to go at an hour's warning, and I was in despair. I could only supply her place with an untried maid, and I felt that the fate of my luncheon hung in the balance.

"'If you were only a girl, Harry?' I said to my son the morning of the affair. 'I want trained intelligence in the butler's pantry today.'

"'I'm not a girl, it's true,' he said, 'but I may have some intelligence, and such as it is you are welcome to it. Only, mother,' he stipulated, 'don't you tell one of those ladies who is in the background.'

"I promised gladly enough, and the luncheon was the most successful one I ever gave. Harry superintended all the courses, had plates hot that should be, and vice versa, and attended to all the little details whose accomplishment makes such an affair a success or the reverse. I want to tell you of it, for other mothers with sons approaching manhood may be selecting equal angels unawares."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Sweet Seventeen.

A lady contributor to The National Review tells how she took an English girl, aged seventeen, for a tour on the continent. She appeared to be, and was partly at least, to test "the effect of foreign travel on a young and untried mind, fresh from the stimulating power of a high school education." The girl was disappointed her. "Sweet seventeen" enjoyed the St. Gothard railway, but, when asked what she thought of the Alps, observed that they "didn't look so very high." "Is that your own opinion?" she inquired, when her mother quoted Lord Tennyson's lines on Mount Rose.

At the Brera, Milan, she wanted to know if all the pictures were hand painted. When Catullus' villa was pointed out to her, it herself quite evident she had never heard of him. At Venice she liked best the sham jewelry shops, and wished to be told "how many dogses there were at once." To her mother she wrote: "I don't like going to churches, they feel so moldy inside. And the sanitary system of Venice seems very bad; there are no end of smells." In Paris she had to be informed what the Louvre was. Her companion discovered afterward that the young lady stood high in her school, being "first" at the term in history, literature and the Shakespeare class.

Women North and South.

A Kentuckian, speaking of the northern fashion of letting a woman handle for herself in public places, says that this is entirely due to the demeanor of the northern woman herself. When he is south, he always resigns his seat in a public vehicle to a woman, and makes it his business to secure her comfort whenever possible, regarding the welfare of every woman as the special care of every man. In the south the women are dependent, confiding and helpless. In the north they know what they want and they go and get it with a rapidity that startles the average man.

The northern woman buys her own car tickets, checks her baggage, gets aboard, buys a newspaper, looks around for a seat, and waits her turn for one with all the independence and courage of any man that can be produced. She wants no favors and she gets none. This is so plainly apparent that, as the Kentuckian says, he is half afraid to offer her any favors for fear she may resent his interference; and, even when he is sure that she will not, and when she looks at him longingly, he himself is half provoked at the general swing of the sex in the north and would not offer her a seat anyway.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Cause of Homely Necks.

"The scrawny necks on American women," said a man dressmaker, "are due as much to the high and tight collars which they have been wearing during the past six years as to anything else. The fashion was started by the princess of Wales, who has a scar on her neck, and it was eagerly taken up here. Street gowns and jackets were fitted with tight velvet, stock or band collars, and these pressed the neck so closely that when women took them off after having been in a hot room they not infrequently found them saturated with perspiration.

"There is no better way of reducing the flesh than this. A man can put a worsted or flannel band around his neck and in a few months emerge with his girth under the band rapidly and surely. The high collars which women wore had precisely this effect. Now that they have fallen distinctly unfashionable, I look for an improvement in the necks of New York women."—New York Letter.

Cure for Burns.

Put the part instantly in cold water, or cover it with moistened baking powder and then with a wet cloth. When the air is excluded the pain is at once allayed, and the blister will not rise. Do this by covering the burn with sweet oil, vaseline, linseed oil, cream, carron oil, lard, or even flour, and thickly on a linen cloth or on a cotton batting.

An excellent covering for burnt surfaces is made by mixing common whiting (used in kitchens for polishing purposes) with sweet oil, olive, cotton seed or other oil, or even water, into a thick paste. With this the burn is carefully covered by means of a feather, taking care not to break the blister, then the whole part is covered with cotton cloth and kept clean and moist.

Burns of large size are always dangerous, often resulting in death, and should receive the careful attention of a skilled physician.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Woman's Physical Proportions.

Celia Logan, speaking of woman's physical proportions, says that the best standard measure is not inches but weight. If the waist is laced in smaller than this, the abdomen is pressed down and the bones of the pelvis are forced apart, causing a protrusion. This is supposed to allow room for the internal organs to allow room for the internal organs to allow room for the internal organs

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, JUNE 19 1891 PRICE TWO CENTS.

SIMPSON'S BARN BURNED.

Incendiaries, Supposed to be Tramps, Touched it off Last Night.

At about half-past nine o'clock last evening the large frame barn on Washington street near Second, belonging to the estate of the late ex-Councilman John Simpson, was discovered to be afire. An alarm was sounded, but before the fire department arrived the building was a mass of flames.

Mr. C. H. Borg leased the building and his horse and some carriages were in the building. The horse escaped but the wagon, harness and a small quantity of hay were consumed. A carriage belonging to Walter L. Hotfield, which was housed in the building was also destroyed.

The loss on the building will not exceed $500. It is partially covered by insurance.

During his lifetime Mr. Simpson not only harbored tramps in the building, but on cold nights he would often furnish them with blankets on which to sleep. Out of consideration for his kindness the tramps would do chores around the barn and house and seemed very grateful to their benefactor. Since his death, however, the police have, on several occasions, raided the place and were always rewarded by finding several tramps. It is thought that one of the fellows whom the officers had arrested, out of revenge fired the building, as the fire was undoubtedly of an incendiary origin.

—The list is nearly complete, and young men intending to go to the beautiful Northfield this Summer, are urged to send in their names at once to either President Wm. D. Murray and General Secretary John H. Manning of the Y. M. C. A., or to Mr. Chas. B. Brown of 19 Craig Place. These gentlemen will furnish full information and will be glad to receive the names of those who would like to join this year's camping party. The trip is remarkably cheap, and any young man should lose this opportunity of receiving alike pleasure and profit from a visit to the great evangelist's home.

WANT THE WILL INTERPRETED.

The Heirs Claim Property Bequeathed to Church Societies.

The taking of testimony in a knotty will case was begun before Herbert W. Knight, Master in Chancery, at Newark yesterday. Among the best known residents of Plainfield, thirty or forty years ago, was Thomas B. Stillman. He was a wealthy man, and at his death left his widow, Susanna Stillman, the bulk of his estate. In 1889 she died, and among her bequests were three which brought on the present legal dispute. To the Seventh Day Baptist church, in this city, she left $1,000; to the Seventh Day Baptist church, of New York city, $5,000; the Seventh Day Baptist Home and Foreign Missions Society, $2,000. Soon after her death it was discovered that there were no churches officially bearing the titles she gave, but it was supposed that she referred to the Seventh Day Baptist Church of Christ, and the Sabbatarian Church of New York, which are respectively the legal titles of the Plainfield and New York churches commonly designated by the titles she gave. There could be found no such religious society as so designated, though there is a Seventh Day Baptist Missionary Society, a regularly incorporated body in Rhode Island, and there was a Ladies' Benevolent Society in the Plainfield church. This last was a part of the foreign missions society in whose work Mrs. Stillman was greatly interested.

The residuary legatees admit that Mrs. Stillman meant the New York church and the Plainfield church in her will, and also that the Ladies' Society was connected with the Plainfield church. They hold, however, that this society has no claim on the estate, being merely a collection of women legally incapable of taking, as a society, a bequest. Besides, it has since emerged into a corporation, and no longer exists at all. Consequently they think the money should go to them instead of to any society. Friends of the Rhode Island Society claim that that Society is meant.

The executors under the will were the late Carmon Parse, cashier of the First National Bank, and Howard L. Emerson. Representing the executors, Charles A. Reed applied to the Court of Chancery to have the will interpreted. W. M. Stillman appears for the societies, and W. K. McClure for the residuary legatees. —World.

BICYCLISTS HAVE RIGHTS.

And They Must Be Respected or Drivers Will Have to Pay Damages.

June 1st, as published in THE NEWS at the time, Mr. Frank Hand of Somerset street, while driving along Park avenue, ran into two bicyclists named H. B. Nichols and F. W. Elliott, from behind. The bicyclists were on the right side of the road and they claim that Mr. Hand ran into them purposely. In fact they said that he admitted doing so, claiming that they had no right on the street.

Mr. Elliot was badly injured, but Mr. Nichols escaped more fortunately. Both machines were badly damaged. Mr. Hand refused to settle the matter by paying for the repair of the damaged wheels, and Messrs. Nichols and Elliott placed the matter in the hands of City Judge Codington, instructing him to prosecute Mr. Hand and then sue for damages. In the meantime Mr. Hand had secured the services of Mr. Charles A. Reed. Mr. Reed was not anxious for his lawyer he was advised to settle. The matter was compromised a few days ago by Mr. Hand paying all damages and the lawyers fees. This will probably teach him, that bicyclists have rights. Drs. Pritz, Lowrie and many others witnessed the accident and were prepared to testify if the case had come to trial.

Scotch Plains Firemen.

At the annual meeting of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company of Scotch Plains, held Monday night, the following officers were elected: Foreman, John Robinson, re-elected; First Assistant Foreman, William B. Noble; Second Assistant Foreman, Robert Jahn; President, Lewis W. Miller; Treasurer, William H. Lake, re-elected; Secretary, David A. Sayre, re-elected; Assistant Secretary, L. A. Bushnell; Janitor, Fred B. Hall, who had been the president of the company for eight consecutive years, declined a re-election. The company was organized in 1869.

A Five Mile Handicap.

The Westfield Wheelmen will hold a five-mile handicap road race Saturday afternoon, June 27. The course will be laid between Westfield and Cranford. Three minutes will be the handicap limit. The prizes to be contested for will be a gold medal for the best time, a gold and silver medal for the first man, and a silver medal for the second man. The entry fee has been fixed at 25 cents. All entries must be recorded with the secretary before June 16.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The following transfers of real estate have been recorded at the Somerset County Clerk's office between May 31 and June 6:

L. M. Codington, Sheriff, to Patrick Sheridan, North Plainfield..... 250 00

Ida A. Avery et al to George W. Demeus, North Plainfield..... 1 00

The Convery-Conger Case.

In the case of Patrick Convery vs. John H. Conger, the contested election case in Middlesex county, the court held that a writ of error should be taken out at once and returnable immediately which would bring the case before the Court of Errors and Appeals.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONFERENCE.

Large Delegations Will Attend the County Union Meeting at Rahway.

The quarterly conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union takes place this evening in the Second Presbyterian church at Rahway, and it promises to be one of the most interesting the Union has held. The attendance of members will be large, and several societies will be represented.

The conference will begin at eight o'clock with a prayer and praise service, Mr. Fred. Morshon of Rahway, and president of the local union of that city, will make an address of welcome. An interesting feature of the meeting will be the reports from the presidents of the societies which will show progress and results of the movement throughout the county. The annual election of officers will also take place.

The address will be delivered by Rev. L. B. Dyott, of the Mills Street Methodist Protestant Church, of Newark, his subject to be "Our work and its present needs."

There will be three papers, as follows: "The Social Committee," by J. H. Williams, of Rahway; "Punctuality in T. F. S. C. E.," by Miss Florence E. Hawkins, of Plainfield; "The Committee's responsibilities," Miss Carrie Meddaugh of Elizabeth.

The societies of Rahway have arranged a fine programme of music. They have also arranged to entertain the visiting societies at the close of the conference.

Plainfield, Westfield, Cranford, Connecticut Farms and North Plainfield will be represented by full delegations, and it is expected that about five hundred Christian Endeavorers will participate in the conference.

PERSONAL.

The pulpit of the Holy Cross church will be occupied by the Rev. M. F. McAllister next Sunday.

Mr. Robert Radford, of West Front street, will spend the coming two weeks at Nannet, Rockland county, New York.

The Rev. Father Smith, the pastor of St. Mary's Church in this city, has been elected a trustee of Seton Hall College; vice Archbishop Corrigan, resigned.

Mr. Frank D. Randolph, a student at the Lehigh University, at Bethlehem, Pa., is spending his vacation with his parents at their home on Madison avenue.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Van Voorhis, took place from her late residence yesterday afternoon. Interment was made at Jamaica, L. I.

Mary Amelia, the youngest daughter of George W., and Freelove A. Terry, died at the home of her parents in North Plainfield yesterday aged eleven months and eighteen days.

The teachers and scholars of the primary department of the Crescent avenue church will be entertained at the residence of Mr. W. D. Murray, corner of Eighth street and Central avenue next Saturday evening.

Marion Russell, the six-year-old daughter of Henry R., and H. Helen Phillips, died at the home of her parents on Plainfield avenue yesterday. The funeral will take place from her late residence Sunday afternoon at four o'clock.

Lawyer William A. Coddington was today appointed a master in chancery, by Chancellor Alexander T. McGill. Besides being an attorney at law, Mr. Coddington is master and solicitor in chancery, commissioner of deeds, and notary public.

Mrs. Forrest Matthews and family, formerly of this city, but now of Frenchtown, left yesterday for Annandale, from a pleasant visit to Mrs. James S. Forbes of West Fifth street. After remaining there a few days they will return to their home in Frenchtown.

George La Monte of Bound Brook, who ran on the Prohibition ticket for Governor, has been notified by the Parisian Inventors' Academy that the academy has conferred upon him the title of "Correspondling honorary member with attribution of the first-class diploma and the gilded medal." This honor is given in recognition of Mr. La Monte's inventive genius.

A pleasant entertainment was held last evening at 65 East Front street. The occasion being the annual social of the Misses Butler's school. Games, tableaux and refreshments were enjoyed by all, while a few were honored by prizes for excelling in the various studies. First prize was awarded to Master Chester Meeker; writing prize to Miss Jessie J. Bushnell, arithmetic to Miss Libby Joseph and dictation to Bessie Field.

One of the social events of the season, was the musicale given by Mrs. Wm. L. Patton, at her home on East Ninth street, last evening. It was in honor of Miss Aldeen, Miss Miller of England, who is visiting her. Mrs. Patton is a hostess at whose home a delightful time is always assured and therefore there were few "regrets," and those only when imperative. The musicale was a success indeed. Mrs. Patton was assisted by Miss Miller in receiving the numerous guests. The musicale was informal, which doubtless enhanced its pleasurable qualities. The programme consisted of piano and vocal solos, banjo and piano duets, recitations, vocal duets and trios. The novelty of the programme was the selection encored. At the close of the musicale, however, a very pleasant entertainment was in store for those, for the thoughtful hostess, thinking a sudden change in the weather would admit of dancing, had everything prepared, and the dreamy music of the waltz, or the rollicking air of a schottische, or other dance, accompanied by the gracefully moving figures of the dancers, closed what will be remembered as a perfect social evening.

CONSUMPTION FROM BAD MILK.

The Health Authorities of the State Begins an Important Work.

The New Jersey State Board of Health has begun in earnest a move against tuberculosis, and will ask the co-operation of local Boards adjacent to large cities. The present particular movement is toward the relation of the New Jersey milk supply to lung troubles in the large cities.

It is held that tubercle-infected cows must necessarily produce deceased milk, which becomes a vehicle for the spread of lung diseases. Dr. Hunt of the State Board of Health and Dairy Commissioner George McGuire are now at work gathering data. They have reached the conclusion that the city Boards of Health throughout the State should inaugurate periodical inspections of all cattle within their jurisdiction.

These investigations are also giving their attention to the general use of skim milk. Heretofore when butter was made by old-fashioned churn the milk left was known and sold as buttermilk, and legally allowed, because it was regarded as an article of food. But recently the use of separators has become general, and the milk left by it is nothing but skim milk. The law does not allow it to be sold unless so marked, because it has no value as food, having little left but a few of the nutrient there is in it. This care is being exercised by the State because many poor people in Newark, Jersey City and New York are being deceived by the sale of skim milk as the genuine article.

There is considerable diphtheria throughout the State, and a search is being made for the cause. At Bordentown twenty-five cases have been reported. It has been learned that the cause came from the spreading of compost over the farms and the continued dry weather. The State Board of Health expresses the opinion that it is necessary for the people of Newark and Jersey City to exert themselves in the matter of securing protection from epidemic diseases. They call attention to the bad effects that come from the presence of the great manure heaps on the Hackensack river, and that they should do something at once to rid themselves of these nuisances. Investigation here as well as in foreign countries shows these heaps to be a source of much trouble, and spread diseases.

Snake Story From Warren.

The oldest inhabitant of the picturesque town of Washington does not remember to have seen so many snakes in the place as are said to lurk about the borough this season. They seem to come from the thick undergrowth which covers the marshy grounds lying along the course of the turbulent Shatteeny Creek that flows along one side of the town. Every day snakes are killed in the streets, and ladies and children are afraid to venture forth after dark. Many of the reptiles have been slaughtered by the workmen in ex-Mayor Allegar's organ factory. The stream is not far distance from the factory, and the men, armed with rifles, watch the snakes from the windows and shoot them. It is thought that the bad sewerage system of the place has much to do with fostering the reptiles and giving them such a hold in the swamp and along the border of the creek.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

Colonel Edmond Instituting New Camps.

Colonel Thomas H. Edmond of the Sons of Veterans of the State of New Jersey will, during the month of July, institute ten new camps in this State, among which will be one at Manasquan, Toms River, Atlantic Highlands, this city, Bound Brook, Haddonfield, Swedesboro, Caldwell, Cape May City and Passaic City.

Col. Edmond is a son of the late Peter J. Edmond, an old veteran in the late war, who was well known in Grand Army circles all through the State. He is twenty-five years of age, and a member of Dayton Camp, No. 5, of Trenton. Col. Edmond was one of the number to start Dayton Camp, No. 5, which has now grown to be one of the finest camps in the State. It has fine quarters on the corner of Broad and State streets, and is open every night during the week.

Closing Exercises.

One of the special features of the work of the Young People's League of the First Baptist church this year, has been the Bible Normal and Training class conducted every Friday evening from seven to eight o'clock, by Mr. Charles B. Brown.

These interesting and profitable studies in the old Testiment, will be brought to a close this evening, for the Summer months, with a general review of all the work accomplished the past year.

A special invitation is extended to all young people to be present.

—Tents have been ordered to accommodate the nine Plainfielders and three Y. M. C. A. secretaries from New Jersey who will attend the World's Conference of College students, all to be held at Northfield, Mass., under the direction of Mr. D. L. Moody, June 27th to July 8th. Any members of the Y. M. C. A., and others, who may desire to join this year's party, are requested to apply at the Association rooms. Mr. A. Stagg, formerly of Yale, will have charge of the athletics. The Y. M. C. A. Boys' Camp, in charge of Mr. S. F. Dudley, will be held at Lake Champlain, July 8th to 18th.

A WHOLESALE FIGHT.

Bad Rum and Sailors Get Mixed.—Result, Six Wounded; Two Fatally.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., June 19th, (Special.)—The steam barge, "Jane Cook" anchored off the Amherstburg dock last evening. Half the crew went ashore and filled up with bad rum. They returned late and created a disturbance below deck. The balance of the crew objected and a free fight commenced. The captain endeavored to quell it.

During the fight, which lasted half an hour, pistols were freely used.

Captain Dupont was shot through the lung and one sailor was fatally, and four badly wounded. The balance were bruised and cut. Arrests have been made.

In Favor of the Plaintiff.

PHILADELPHIA, June 18th, (Special.)—The jury in the Meyer-Dickinson suit to recover excessive duties on hat trimmings from the government, returned a verdict to-day in favor of the plaintiff. They claim that the duty should only be twenty per cent. and the government employes charged them fifty.

Two Men Shot.

JACKSVILLE, Tex., June 19th, (Special.)—Captain Perkins and his son were shot here to-day by a neighbor named Dow. The captain and his son were both seriously wounded. They live at Talo, Pike county. The shooting was the result of an old quarrel.

TROUBLE IN THE L. A. W.

Chairman Randall of the Racing Board Removed.

A Chicago paper says that Charles E. Randall, of that city, is no longer chairman of the racing board of the League of American Wheelmen. Indeed, Mr. Randall is not a member of that body. His head has been summarily and unceremoniously cut off by the president of the League, James B. Dunn. This means that the Dunn faction will try to carry their point in bicycle racing, which is the abolition of the rule G of the racing regulations, prohibiting the payment of training or transportation expenses by bicycle clubs to enable members to compete in races. This rule did not suit the ideas of certain wealthy Eastern clubs, who care little for cycling, but who desire to have fast wheelmen as members. The rule was framed for the protection of poorer clubs and for the benefit of their racing teams and fast men. It is a just rule and its abolition will be condemned by good wheelmen in the West, who are in favor of fair play.

The wheelmen here assert that the Dunn faction are anxious to throw the league and its affairs into the hands of the Amateur Athletic Union. The Rights and Privileges Committee a short time ago met and declared Rule G unconstitutional. Mr. Dunn, Randall and the four colleagues of the Racing Board took the rule to a lawyer, who declared this stand to be correct. Then Randall published in this week's Bulletin a notice that the Rights and Privileges Committee and Executive Committee had no right to abolish the rule, and declaring President Dunn's announcement null and void. Such abolition, he declared, could be made only by amendment of the by-laws by the league.

President Dunn promptly responded with a letter, removing Randall from office and from membership in the board. Randall's friends propose to take the matter up and lay it before the National assembly.—New York Tribune.

Closing Exercises.

A very pleasing entertainment took place in the Vincent chapel last evening, the occasion being the closing exercises of Miss Fawcett's school and kindergarten. Promptly at 7.45 o'clock the exercises began and from then until ten o'clock the school interpreted an excellent programme to the admiration of a select audience. The programme consisted of music, singing, recitations, dumb-bell exercises, emotive gestures, dialogues and questions in Natural history. The children were well-trained and were a credit to their teacher. At the conclusion of the entertainment, prizes were awarded to the scholars.

—"The Violet," the annual publication of the students of the University of the City of New York, has dedicated this year to the Hon. Chauncey B. Ripley, LL.D. of Westfield, and alumnus of the University of New York, and one of the well-known lawyers of New York city. The frontispiece portrait of Dr. Ripley is an excellent likeness of the gentleman, and the editors have been most happy in their selection.—Central Times.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

It is not about time to sit down on the tramp once and for all? In one twenty-four hours lately one gang took possession of a freight train on the Louisville division of the Pennsylvania road and ran it to suit themselves; another gang of three horribly abused and mutilated a boy whom they found alone in his home, in Washburn, Ia., while yet another of these gentlemen of leisure shot at and tried to kill the highly esteemed pastor of a church in New York city. The miscreant tried twice to kill the preacher, who had found out that the fellow was habitually obtaining money under false pretenses. He had a list of 400 ministers, and he drew on their sympathy by telling them he had formerly belonged to their congregation.

The World's Wheat Supply.

Mr. C. Wood Davis, who writes in The Arena on this topic, must have waded through a tremendous array of figures before he reached the conclusions he sets before us therein. The figures he does give are about all that the average reader will like to undertake to carry in his brain at one time. Briefly, Mr. Davis' conclusions are that by 1925 the United States will cease to be a wheat exporting nation, and become instead an importer of breadstuffs on a large scale.

All Europe, west of Hungary, is now a buyer of bread stuffs, and there is in Great Britain and the continent already an annual deficit of 70,000,000 bushels of wheat over and above that received. This deficit has heretofore been covered by the accumulations left over unsold from old crops, particularly from the United States when the Dakotas and the northwestern wheat region were suddenly sprung upon the world, just previous to 1880. That tidal wheat wave, however, has subsided now.

Owing to continued low prices the wheat producing area of the United States diminished 3.4 per cent in the five years ending with 1889. In the older districts of the country the ground formerly devoted to wheat growing has been given up to other and better paying purposes. There are seven wheat producing localities in America. In four of these there is in the last half decade a material shrinkage in the acreage planted to this crop, and this shrinkage will continue for the present. It is safe to put the rate of increase of the population of the Union and the base 2.3 per cent. per annum. At that rate the wheat supply to provide this increased population with bread must increase 8,000,000 bushels a year. Instead of this it is going down. By 1895, counting all possible additions to the wheat crop that may be made by irrigating and opening up new lands to cultivation, the deficiency in the wheat crop of the United States will be 940,000 bushels. Europe annually devours 1,400,000,000 bushels of bread-grains.

Where all this wheat supply is to come from to feed a people "ever drawing nigh and nigher, like a hungry lion to a slowly dying fire," as Tennyson puts it, Mr. Davis does not say. We in the United States can fall back on corn bread. That is one consolation, but the meaning of all this to the American agriculturist is plain. Farm food stuffs will steadily advance in price, and manufactured products will decline proportionally, till we shall approximate the condition in Europe, probably — cheap manufactured articles and dear food. At any rate, Mr. Davis thinks agriculture will boom after 1892 for those disheartened farmers who can hold out and stave off mortgage foreclosures till then. The inevitable result, too, will follow that if agriculture ceases to pay better than manufacturing, men will leave the shops and factories and take to the abandoned farms again, and go to raising wheat. These things regulate themselves. However these things will be, though, Mr. Davis' figures show the following:

Such change is impending, and cannot be postponed very long, unless population shall cease to increase or the average standard of living shall be reduced greatly; and with sheet crops it may occur a year or two earlier, and when this inevitable change comes the era of cheap bread and world-wide agricultural depression will end, and the price of wheat and all other farm products reach a higher level than that known during the immediately after the American civil war, and with the advent of such prices the many millions of people engaging in or supported by agriculture in the United States, now being so little of the products of labor, skill and industry, will have the means of increasing their purchases of and greatly giving business of all kinds an impetus not known for a quarter of a century. Such high prices, and cause an activity in the exchange of products the younger half of the business community has little notion of, and home markets will then absorb an immense volume of wares, giving artisan, professional man, transportation, finance, mines and manufacture ample and remunerative employment, insuring now life into commercial, financial, social, literary and artistic circles. Such will be some of the results flowing from a great increase in the purchasing power of an immense agricultural population.

This may be considered an optimistic view, but it will be but the natural response to the reverting a great and long overshadowed population into one having ample means to minister to their comforts, and an advantage to all for the gratification of such higher needs and longings as are the common heritage of the race.

It is hardly possible to conceive or measure the changes, material and intellectual, which will attend an advance of 30 per cent. in the returns from the labor of the farmer, and such advance is likely to be 100 rather than 30 per cent.

ROMANCE OF A POETESS

Elaine Goodale's Marriage to a Full Blooded Sioux.

BUT HE IS NO COMMON RED MAN.

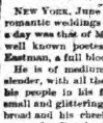
On the Contrary, Dr. Charles Eastman, or "Ohyiesa, the Winner," Is Very Well Educated, a Dartmouth Graduate and a Very Fine Looking Dakota.

NEW YORK, June 19.—One of the most romantic weddings in New York in many a day was that of Miss Elaine Goodell, the well known poetess, to Dr. Charles W. Eastman, a full blooded Sioux Indian.

He is of medium height, straight and slender, with all the racial peculiarities of his people in his features. His eyes are dark and glistening, his face and nose are broad and his cheek bones are very pronounced. But he looked as proud and happy as any white man could have done when he walked down the aisle of the Church of the Ascension at the conclusion of the ceremony with his pretty, refined white wife at his side.

Their Courtship Was Romantic.

The story of this courtship is a romantic one. Briefly told it is this: Four years ago Elaine Goodale, who had lived up to that time among the Berkshire hills, and written poetry, went out to the reservation to do educational and missionary work among the Indians. Here she met Dr. Eastman, who is the government medical inspector at the Pine Ridge agency, and now she has married him. It isn't quite like marrying one of the aborigines however, for Dr. Eastman is a splendid specimen of the Indian race.



ELAINE GOODALE.

A Famous Dartmouth Athlete.

He is about thirty years old and was graduated with honors at Dartmouth, in spite of the fact that he was captain of the football team and a good all round athlete. He afterward studied medicine and met Miss Goodale. That is his story.

Laying aside race prejudice, there is no reason why Miss Goodale should not marry a Sioux Indian if she wishes to and if she thinks him worthy of her, and even taking race prejudice into account, the Indians by right of priority are not the aristocrats of this Continent, then who are? They were here long before the 400. Dr. Eastman's tribal name is Ohyiesa, which appropriately enough means The Winner.

The Match Was Opposed.

The match is said to have been opposed at the first very strenuously by the relatives and friends of the bride, but Miss Goodale met all opposition with so tactful readiness of argument that baffled and finally quieted all remonstrance.

It was remarked by the spectators as the bride and bridegroom passed out of the church that, while each looked intensely happy, the happiness on the bridegroom's face was triumphant, while that of the bride was defiant.

Dr. and Mrs. Eastman left for Boston last night, where a large reception will be given in honor of the happy couple. Following this they go directly to their home in South Dakota, where a house for them is now building.

Miss Skiddy's Marriage.

STAMFORD, Conn., June 19.—Miss Lillian Skiddy, daughter of General Skiddy, was married last night to Willard Parker, jr., of New York. Ex-President and Mrs. Cleveland were among the guests.

For a Chair of Life Insurance.

DETROIT, June 19.—The National Association of Life Insurance Men were addressed at their meeting by Dr. S. Willard, of New York, in reference to establishing a chair of life insurance in Chicago university. He indorsed the action of the executive committee in recommending that such a chair be established. The following officers were chosen: President, Charles H. Raymond, New York; first vice president, J. Layton Register, Philadelphia; second vice president, Alexander Harbison, Hartford; secretary, E. H. Plumacer, Philadelphia; treasurer, William Ratcliffe, New York.

Shotputter Barnett After More Honors.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Mr. Barnett, the Irish athlete, has arrived here on the Guion steamer Nevada. In England he made the championship record for throwing the sixteen pound shot. He came to this country to compete with the American athletes in his line, and will soon issue a challenge for throwing a fifty-six pound weight from the shoulder, to follow. He will also compete with the sixteen pound weight.

Asbury Park's Fire.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 19.—At early morning fire destroyed the power station and engine room of the Seashore Electric Street railroad, owned principally by Robert Lenox Belknap, of New York city. The station contained eight boilers, three large dynamos and eight engines, and the loss is $50,000; insurance, $25,000. The company owned and operated four miles of railway, belting the entire town.

The Westinghouse Suit.

PITTSBURG, June 19.—The suit has been instituted in the United States district court by the Short Electric Railway company, of Cleveland, against the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, of this city, in which the latter is charged with the infringement of patents owned by complainant relating to gearless electric motors.

The New Oatmeal Trust.

AKRON, O., June 19.—The American Cereal company, incorporated at Columbus with a capital of $6,500,000, has been organized here. Thirty mill men were present. The new company, it is claimed, say, will not try to obtain any monopoly of the market in oatmeal, but rather to reduce the cost of production.

To Indict C. P. Huntington.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The scheme for the recent blockade in the Central Pacific railroad is being thrown on the shoulders of Collis P. Huntington. There is a rumor abroad that an effort will be made to have him indicted for manslaughter.

AMHERST, Mass., June 19.—Professor George D. Olds, for several years past professor in mathematics at the University of Rochester, has accepted a similar position at Amherst.

THE PHILADELPHIA MUDDLE.

Mrs. John G. Lucas Interviewed in London—She Says Very Little.

PARIS, June 19.—A correspondent called on the widow of John C. Lucas again and vainly endeavored to get her to talk about her late husband's connection with the Keystone bank.

"I am wired by lawyers and friends in Philadelphia not to say a word," she said, "and I do not propose to do so. As for Mr. Wanamaker, there is no truth in the published conversations I am supposed to have had with him. I may go to America to give my version of my talks with Mr. Wanamaker."

Sold While Drew Was in Possession.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—The council's Investigating committee has made the startling discovery that between Jan. 5 and March 20 extensive transfers of stock were made in the Keystone bank despite the fact that the bank was in Examiner Drew's hands.

It Was Little the Tenants Received.

LONDON, June 19.—The details of the Irish plan of campaign fund show that of the total of £240,000 contributed £80,000 were collected in Australia, £30,000 in America and £10,000 elsewhere. On legal business there was expended £47,000, on relief funds and other expenses in New Tipperary $40,000, and on various objects £5,000. The balance of £37,000, after deducting the missing £3,000 obtained through a forged check, and £30 said to have been paid out to holders of large campaign farms, is all that the tenants in Ireland have received.

Is Wilfred Murray a Myth?

LONDON, June 19.—At the hearing of the appeal of Miss Gladys Evelyn from the judgment in the suit against her brother William Henry Hurlbert, counsel for Miss Evelyn read entries from the plaintiff's diary in regard to the improper letters which she declares were sent to her by Mr. Hurlbert, but which, it was said, were in the handwriting of a person called Wilfred Murray. Mr. Dwight's counsel asserted that there was not a shadow of evidence to show that Wilfred Murray ever existed.

A Very Much Married Man.

BATAVIA, N. Y., June 19.—George H. Storms, who died near Holley, Orleans county, has been indicted here for bigamy. He married Bertha Beach at Kendall, Orleans county, in July, 1889, and Ellen Meyers at Batavia on Jan. 26, 1891. The former wife made complaint. There is evidence that he was married in Missouri in 1870 and a fourth time elsewhere, and that none of the four wives was dead or divorced.

American Bowlers Win.

BERLIN, June 19.—In the great bowling tournament at Hanover the Americans won thirty-two prizes. Messrs. Feldman, Thum, Zanders, Quell, Stellman, Miller and Kamerer taking three each; Messrs. Lurch, Jansen, Schoemich, Wehmer and Schneidenberg one each, while six were captured by Mr. Warnick. The American won the German-American tournament by 161 points.

The Big Canal's Directors.

DENVER, June 19.—At the annual meeting of the Nicaragua Canal Construction company the following board of directors was unanimously elected: Warner Miller, Samuel Thomas, Stuyvesant Fish, Smith M. Weed, Seward Webb, H. K. Fairbank, George W. Davis, J. F. P. Shaugnessy, H. B. Slavin, J. W. Miller, Henry R. Hoyt, Henry A. Parr and Gordon McDonnell.

A Brave Brother Fatally Stabbed.

CELINA, O., June 19.—As Mary Price was going along a country road to a neighbors she was raped by William Veach and John Gattis, who dragged her to a thicket and attempted to assault her. Her brother Elmer rushed to her aid and the men turned upon him, fatally stabbing him with a dirk. The men were subsequently captured.

A Victory for British Labor.

LONDON, June 19.—The government has met with a defeat on the question of factory labor. Mr. Sydney Buxton, jr., member, offered an amendment to prohibit children under eleven years of age from working in factories. The government opposed the amendment, which was carried, however, by a vote of 202 to 198.

Bridgeport's Police Fight.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 19.—The quo warranto and injunction proceedings against Chief Rylands were argued yesterday in the superior court on a motion to dissolve. Judge Thayer will give his decision today.

Parnell Evasive About Marriage.

LONDON, June 19.—In an interview with a United Press correspondent Mr. Parnell denied that he would be married soon to Mrs. O'Shea, and evaded a reply as to the event ever taking place.

Parnell Appointed Trustee.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., June 19.—James O. Parnell has been appointed trustee of the real estate of the Bertram Manufacturing company. The company failed last month.

SULLIVAN WILL FIGHT.

Boston's Pride Wants a Meeting with Slavin.

TEN ROUNDS FOR A MINT OF MONEY

The Big Fellow's Friends Are Ready to Back Him and Think He Will Easily Achieve the Conquest of Australia.

John L.'s Telegram to Wakely.

NEW YORK, June 19.—As the following telegram will show, the great John. L. Sullivan has decided to attempt the conquest of Australia.

SAN JOSE, Cal., June 18.

To James Wakely, New York:

Make match for me meet Slavin for ten rounds, winner to take all the purse and an outside bet of $10,000 a side.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN.

Sullivan can no longer suffer the humiliation of seeing the colors of foreign pugilists waved in triumph on his native soil. As the above telegram indicates, he has authorized James Wakely, of this city, and Charles Johnson, of Brooklyn, two of his former backers, to match him against Slavin, the Australian. The conditions he names call for ten rounds, Queensberry rules, $10,000 a side in stakes, winner to take all and the match to be contested before the athletic club which offers the largest purse.

Slavin Will Accept.

Slavin will probably accept. He promises to return from England in three months, and the champion by that time will have concluded his Australian engagement and will be ready to go into training.

They Would Have Been Heartbroken.

Of all the men who saw the contest between Slavin and Kilrain on Tuesday night none watched it with greater interest than did James Wakely and Charles Johnston, who furnished a good part of Sullivan's $10,000 stake in his fight with Kilrain at Richburg. They are both good judges of the sport and are convinced that had Sullivan been in the Baltimorean's place there would have been three heartbroken passengers on one of the big ocean steamers which will sail for Europe on Saturday—Frank Slavin, Charley Mitchell and Sergeant Washington Moore.

■ It Will Be a Great Battle.

If this proposition meets with favor in the eyes of Slavin the match, which will be the most important pugilistic event in the history of the ring, can be made at once. Slavin will sail for England tomorrow. Sullivan will leave San Francisco for Australia on June 25. Both can depart from this country matched to battle for the world's championship and the largest amount of money ever fought for in this or any other country. Wakely and Johnston will meet the big Australian at any hour the latter may name today or to-morrow to post a forfeit and sign preliminary articles.

"When I tell you that I am authorized to make a match for Sullivan," said Jim Wakely last night, "I am not talking for the fun of it. The last words John said to me as we shook hands in San Francisco a few weeks ago were these:

Where Sullivan Is Said.

"Jim, I have made up my mind to fight once more. If Slavin whips Kilrain and is not defeated by Jackson or Corbett before he leaves Australia, I want you and Johnston to back me against him. Will you do it?

"'Blucher,' said I—that's my pet name for Sullivan—'you are the greatest fighter the world ever saw. Aside from that, you are my friend and Johnston's friend. We will back you against any man living for the amount of money.'

"'That's all I want to hear, Jim,' the big fellow said, 'I intend to take good care of myself, and if Slavin will meet me on my return from Australia I will give you and Johnston a run for your money.'

"Now, then," continued Wakely, "the only conditions upon which I shall insist if Slavin desires to make a match are that Queensberry rules shall govern and that the contest shall take place before the athletic club offering the largest purse. I fancy that the California athletic club will be willing to offer a greater incentive than any other organization in the country. If not, the fight will surely go to New Orleans or to one of the clubs in this vicinity."

He Thinks John L. Will Win.

"You can appear to be pretty confident that Sullivan has enough left in him to beat Slavin. Don't you believe that Slavin is a remarkable fighter?"

A certain look responded the Puritan club man. "Slavin is the greatest fighter I have ever seen, bar Sullivan. Just imagine what the human world have been if Sullivan had landed on Slavin as often as Kilrain did in the first two rounds. The fight would have been over then and there. Slavin is just the style of fighter that Sullivan likes. He is not a 'mixer,' but sails right in to win or lose in a hurry."

Many Warships for Behring Sea.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 19.—The Alert and Mohican have sailed for Behring sea to carry out the recent international sealing agreement. Every vessel encountered is to be warned away and sent to some port of the place and date is to be entered in the cutter's log book. If the vessel is again found sealing she will be seized. There are now six vessels either in or en route for Behring sea. The Marion will follow shortly with the latest orders.

An Aspiring Bicyclist a Forger.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 19.—Hamilton Turner, the eighteen-year-old son of a well known lumber dealer of this city, has been taken to Mays Landing to stand trial on the charge of forging his father's name to a check for fifteen dollars. The money was used to buy a bicycle, on which in last week's Century Bicycle club run.

John F. Adriance Dead.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 19.—John F. Adriance, the head of the firm of Adriance, Platt & Co., manufacturers of the Buckeye harvesting machines, died at his house in this city last night after a long illness. Mr. Adriance was born here in 1825. He leaves a widow, five sons and one daughter.

Master Mechanics Choose Officers.

CAPE MAY, June 19.—At the convention of the National Mechanics association officers were elected as follows: John MacKenzie, Cleveland, O., president; O. Stewart, Charlestown, Mass., treasurer, Angus Sinclair, New York, secretary.

The Jockeys Cannot Bet.

LONDON, June 19.—The new rules of the Jockey club provide only for the licensing of riders, not owners or part owners, unless in special cases. Jockey betting or receiving presents from others than the owners of their mounts are to be cashiered.

THE PUGILIST PUT OUT.

Slavin Requested to Leave a New York Hotel.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Jere Dunn, the referee in the Slavin-Kilrain glove fight, rendered his formal decision last night. He awards the fight to Slavin, but declares that Kilrain was not knocked out. Rats that the contest would not last ten rounds are won. Dunn says that Timekeeper Kelly made an unfortunate mistake after the electrical clock got out of order by not calling out the seconds that elapsed when Kilrain was down in the ninth round. He considers himself equally at fault in not seeing how quickly Kilrain got up. He explains the fact that his back was toward Kilrain by saying that he felt it his duty, on account of Slavin's method of fighting, to watch the Australian to prevent him from foulling. Dunn states that Slavin always showed a desire to go in and sling Kilrain the instant he arose from a knockdown. The referee puts himself on record as being against such tactics, and says he would have decided against Slavin had he committed that act in the ninth round.

Kilrain and Muldoon received their $2,500 of the $10,000 last evening. The other side will get their $7,500 today. During the evening, in the St. James hotel, Slavin and Mitchell, who seemed to have been drinking, made a great deal of noise, and indulged in a roundabout way in Dunn that he had been afraid to decide that Kilrain was knocked out because his (Dunn's) friends had bet against him. Mitchell then told Slavin that he ought to be ashamed of himself for speaking in that style, and finally called him a brute. Slavin was requested to leave the hotel, which he did.

TRAMPS SHOOT A BOY.

Angry Because He Would Not Give Them His Cherries.

MOUNT CARMEL, Pa., June 19.—One of the most fiendish deeds ever committed in this part of the country has just occurred here. John Salade, a sixteen-year-old boy, was going home with some cherries yesterday when he was accosted by two tramps from his brother's residence by two burly tramps.

The lawless nomads demanded some of the cherries, but Salade refused to surrender them. The trio then engaged in a war of words, during which the tramps fatally shot the boy.

The Marksmen at Rome.

ROME, N. Y., June 19.—In the sixth event at the state shoot there was $230 in prizes divided. Straight scores of 25 were made by Crosby, McMurchy and O'Connor. Scores of 24 by Courtney, Stewart, A. S. H., Carr, Mosher, Buck, Rudge, Stewart, Kelsey, Brimblecom, Hammond and Hook way. In events 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6, Crosby, of Batavia, made the best average score, 98 out of 95, and won the diamond badge valued at $150, donated by Rome. Mc Murchy, of Syracuse, made the next best average score. The contest for the Dean Richmond trophy this afternoon promises to be very exciting. The trophy is valued at $1,250.

William May Recognizes Chili's Insurgents

LONDON, June 19.—A Berlin dispatch says that the report that the kaiser has decided to recognize the Chilian insurgents is premature. The question depends on the probable effect of such recognition on Germany's commercial relations with Chili. It is said that but for the French colable attitude of France, Germany and England would recognize the insurgent cause. As it is, should Germany and England take such a step and France hold to the Balmaceda list, in the event of their success, would give French mercantile interests a decided advantage over those of other European countries.

Decoyed and Ruined.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Augusta Usinger, a German girl who has been in this country but eight months, claims to have been decoyed to North Milford, Conn., under pretense of employment, assaulted by an unknown man at a desolate point on a country road and left penniless, to find her way back to this city. Augusta is but eighteen years old, came from Bremen, consigned by loving parents to the care of August Hildebof and his wife, of this city.

A Peacefully Fatal Cloudburst.

CITY OF MEXICO, June 19.—A cloudburst killed at least thirteen people and many mules, besides doing great damage to property in San Luis Potosi yesterday. The water descended in almost a solid mass, and when the clouds had passed it was found that many houses had been washed away. The latest reports place the number of bodies recovered at twenty-three. So far thirty more persons are known to have been hurt.

Paper Immigrant Must Return.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Assistant Secretary Nettleton has directed the return to Regen, Austaria, of John Brame, a paupers immigrant who arrived in this country on Jan. 15, 1891. Brame made his way to Milwaukee, Wis., where he became a public charge. Brame was a public charge in the city of Regen for five years and his passage was paid by the local authorities of Regen.

The Telegraphers Will Amalgamate.

ST. LOUIS, June 19.—At the convention of the Order of Railway Telegraph Operators the anti-strike clause was stricken from their constitution. Mortimer D. Shaw, on behalf of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers, made a speech in favor of the appointment of a joint committee to prepare a plan for amalgamation. His proposition was adopted unanimously.

The Gloriana Wins Again.

NEW YORK, June 19.—The regatta of the New York Yacht club was sailed in a gale. A heavy sea was running and the sloop Gloriana, Mr. Morgan's new boat, proved herself a wonder, and showed that she can sail in any weather. She easily won in her class, beating her nearest competitor, the Jessica, 11m. 31s. The winners in the other classes were the Marguerite and Katrina.

An Umbrella Her Weapon.

KEYPORT, N. J., June 19.—There was a brief but lively scrimmage on the steamboat deck here when Mrs. Peter Bassett belabored Gordon Whiting, a produce merchant, with her umbrella. It is said that Mrs. Bassett was angered by the circulation of stories affecting her character, and accuses Whiting of spreading the reports.

President Dexter Victorious.

NEW YORK, June 19.—At the session of the State Building and Loan associations convention Seymour Dexter was re-elected president. W. S. Darock was chosen vice president, J. T. Barnard second vice president, W. T. Dunmore third vice president, G. Hightingale secretary and T. W. Dris coll treasurer.

A FEMALE FIEND IN JAIL.

Accused of Murder, Arson and Horse Stealing.

EITHER MAD OR FEIGNING MADNESS

She Is Charged with Locking Her Husband's Idiot Son in a Room and Burning the House Over His Head—A Farmer's Sorry Matrimonial Venture.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 19.—There is a girl in jail at Newburg who, if all the charges against her are true, is the incarnation of viciousness and depravity. She is under arrest for horse stealing, but will also be charged with arson and murder. Within three months she is said to have married an old farmer, burned down his house, mill and barn, roasted his weak minded son to death in one of her fires, and wound up by running off with a Newburg livery team and stirring and trading them for other horses and a wagon in the Shawangunk mountains.

Arrested Near a Gypsy Camp.

The girl was arrested in Newburg on a charge of grand larceny on complaint of Yen Allen Whitbeck, a Broadway liveryman, and she then gave the name of Jennie Williamson.

The complainant charged that the girl had stolen a fine team of horses and a carriage that she had hired of him on Thursday morning. When arrested she was near a gypsy camp.

In her cell she acted wildly at times and tore up her white apron and hosiery in what seemed to be a frenzy of insanity. Early in the morning, however, a white haired and frail farmer, sixty-five years of age, asked to see the female horse thief, and as soon as he saw her exclaimed, "Yes, that's her; that's my wife."

Cheaper to Marry Her.

The old man then told me his story. He said his name was Paul Halliday and that he lived near Burlingham, twenty-five miles west of Newburg. Three months ago he visited the intelligence office of Mrs. J. B. Smith in this city, and while there hired as a domestic and took home with him a young girl named Lizzie Brown, who had said she came from Ireland six weeks before. After she had been with him a few days he concluded that it would be cheaper to marry the woman than to continue paying her ten dollars a month for her services. He had therefore proposed to her, was accepted and they were married the next day by a Methodist minister at Middletown.

She Would Meet Her Waterloo.

Lizzie had a violent temper and the farmer discovered that her head had a double crown. When he spoke to her about it, she said: "Yes, that's so, and so did Napoleon Bonaparte have a double crown to his head." He reminded her that Napoleon had met his Waterloo, and that she would probably meet her's if she didn't control her violent temper. Words of anger and give him some peace. On May 2 the old man drove to Middletown leaving Lizzie at home with his son John.

House and Son Burned.

The latter was thirty-two years old and half witted. When Halliday returned in the evening he found his little house a mass of smoking ruins. Lizzie coolly informed her husband that his son had been burned to a cross. He had gone into the house to save her from the fire, and had been unable to escape, while she had succeeded in getting out. The old man believes his wife set fire to the house after she had first locked John Halliday up in a room from which he had been unable to escape.

In support of this belief he said he found the door still locked. The key he found in the possession of his wife. He, however, continued to live with her. On May 26 the old man's barn and mill were destroyed by fire. Lizzie afterward admitted to him that she had started the fire, as the barn was an old one and she wanted to see a new one erected in its place.

She Traded Horses.

Halliday claimed that he had ascertained yesterday that Lizzie had sold a team belonging to Walker Valley and had there traded a good horse with Jim Scott, and another one and a surrey with a man named Wyatt, receiving much more than a fair money and an old buckboard wagon in exchange. Wyatt, he said, was a member of the Wyatt family, two or three of whose members had been sent to Sing Sing prison. They belonged to the gang of Shawangunk mountain robbers. He telephoned these facts to Newburg and his statement led to the arrest of his wife, who had given the name of Jennie Williamson.

When Recorder McCroskery called the case of the girl she appeared to be twenty-five years old. Her long, light hair hung over her face, and there was a wild look in her eyes. She had some pieces of her white apron in her hands, and occasionally tore them still finer and with the pieces carefully wiped imaginary dust from the bar in front of her.

She would not answer questions that were put to her by the recorder and would occasionally shriek out, "Take her away, the old block, I never liked her!"

No Fool Like an Old Fool.

It is believed that she is insane, but Farmer Halliday says she is shamming. In an interview Halliday admitted the truth of the story that there was "no fool like an old one," and said that he had certainly been one in marrying Lizzie Brown, and that he would never wed another woman simply because she was a good cook and laundress.

The Heap Jury Disagrees.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., June 19.—The jury in the Heap will case reported a disagreement, standing nine against sustaining the instrument and three for it. The trial occupied two weeks and has attracted considerable interest. The will involved property valued at $50,000 or $60,000 left to T. M. Cushman, of this city, by the late Mrs. E. R. Heap.

THE COMING RACE.

An Expert's Comparison of the Great 'Varsity Crews.

WHY YALE HAS SO OFTEN WON.

Walter C. Dohm Attributes the Blue's Success to "Yale Spirit" and to the Unchanged System of Training Under Captain "Bob" Cook — Harvard's Chances.

The sixteenth annual boat race between the eights of Harvard and Yale universities, on the river Thames at New London, Conn., the latter part of this month, will be an unusually interesting one, from the fact that Harvard for the first time in years has a good chance to win, the last three or four races having been taken rather easily by the New Haven boys. Of the fifteen races already rowed Yale has won nine, the last five in succession.

The men who will row this year, with positions, age, weight and height, are as follows:

HARVARD.

	Age.	Weight.	Height. Ft. In.
M. Newell, bow	19	160	5 7
C. Powers, No. 2	22	164	5 9

W. W. Helfeldinger, No. 5	23	164	6 0½
G. S. Brewster, No. 6 and captain	22	164	6 1
F. Hagerman, No. 7	22	170	6 0
J. A. Gould, stroke	19	174	5 10½
R. M. Bonnes, coxswain		108
Averages for crew	20½	167½	5 10

Of the Harvard crew, Perkins and Kolben rowed against Yale last year, and Lyman stroked the Hasokian crew. Of Yale's eight, Brewster is in the boat for the third season, and Simms for the second. Hagerman rowed last year in the Oxford crew. Helfeldinger has rowed against Oxford three times and Cambridge twice. Gould rowed against Mr. Cheney, of the Harvard eights very successfully some years ago, and would have taken the position the first year he was eligible, but for the fact that he thought it best that he should have complete control of Harvard's boating for three years. Captain Perkins thought this a good idea, the Harvard Old Blues of course, didn't. Mr. Adams, '92, is now looking after the crew's work.

CAPTAIN PERKINS. [Harvard.]

Then, too, Yale works harder when in a "hole" than Harvard. Everybody has heard of "Yale spirit," but few people know that this spirit is nothing more than grit, and determination to be willing to sacrifice self in the interests of the college. For instance, during the spring vacation the Harvard crew disperses to their homes for the two weeks' rest generally. Their weight, which they had worked hard to reduce, went up again, and the result was that the few days off the water lost virtually two or three weeks of hard training wasted. During this time Yale was getting in her very hardest licks. At Philadelphia, at Schuylkill, the crew rowed once and sometimes twice every day, under the personal supervision of Messrs. Cook, Stevenson and Isham. The different men in the crew were given their respective vacations but has been worth a month's work to the Yale men. So much for "Yale spirit."

Harvard also has Yale's fault of not keeping the body in the same line in the swing back and forth. The men, however, keep the back still and do not sway, as do the Yale oarsmen. Harvard's greatest weakness is in her blade work. Toward the end of the stroke the oar is gradually lifted from the water instead of being kept entirely below the surface and then withdrawn all at once. The result is that during a small portion of the stroke the upper edge of the oar blade is out of water and is not helping the boat along at all. Captain Perkins recently strained his arm, and has had more trouble therewith. Should he not be able to stroke the crew Harvard would have little chance to win. Perkins is a far better man than his rival, Gould, in the Yale boat, and this disparity was one of the points on which Harvard was backing her crew.

As far as equipments for the race is concerned neither crew has any great advantage. Both use paper shells of the same manufacture, 60 feet long by 24 inches wide. The oars used by the crews are also the same—12 feet with 7½ inch blade. Yale, however, uses rowlocks with anti-crab attachments, while Harvard sticks to the ordinary lock. Harvard's seats are on rollers, Yale's on slides. The Yale crew arrived at their old Gale's Ferry quarters on the 15th. Harvard is now also on the river. Active batting has not yet begun, but the blue is a slight favorite at $100 to $65.

"As You Like It" Out of Doors.

On the lawn of the Stevens mansion at Castle Point, Hoboken, N. J., there was recently performed a portion of "As You Like It" which will live in the history of the American stage. In the cast were Maurice Barrymore, Frank Mayo, Fraser Coulter, Frederick Bond, John T. Sullivan, C. W. Cocklock, Frank and Sidney Drew, Rose Cochlan, Agnes Booth, Viola Allen, Nellie Lingard, Maida Craigen, Bijou Fernandez and others equally well known. The performance was for the benefit of charities in which Dr. Houghton, of the Little Church Around the Corner (which is dear to the hearts of actors and actresses), is interested. It was the second out-of door theatrical performance to be given by the company this year, the earlier one having been in Central park.

Yankee Harper, of Columbia.

Victor Mapes, of Columbia college, winner of the running broad jump at the recent intercollegiate championships, broke the college record and established a new one of 23 ft. 11¼ in. Mapes is only 21, but he has already established for himself an enviable record as an athlete. He comes from a family of athletes, and has three brothers who have done good work for Columbia. His sprinter Victor can do the 100 yards dash in a small fraction over 10 seconds, and not long ago he defeated the great Luther Cary in 10 seconds, but had a handicap of 10 yards.

It is as a broad jumper, however, that Victor Mapes excels. One of his first creditable jumps was in 1889, when he cleared 21 ft. 5 in. Since then his development has been rapid, as his last great jump of 23 ft. 11¼ in. shows. The best jump on record is that of P. Copeland—23 ft. 8¼ in., made in 1890. Should Mapes continue to improve he may soon rank with Copeland and Ford in his specialty.

Henry L. Williams, of Yale.

One of Yale's famous athletes is Henry L. Williams, whose general physical outline is as follows: Age, twenty-two years; height 6 feet; weight, 175 pounds. William has never paid much attention to athletics until he entered Yale, but in his freshman year he performed the remarkable feat of jumping 5 feet 8 inches, taking first place in the 120 yards hurdle race, the running broad and high jumps and putting the shot, and was second in hammer throwing. Numerous minor series followed until in May, 1890, when he defeated Herbert Mapes in the 120 yards hurdles, and equaled the world's record of 16 seconds. The same day he did the low hurdles in 25 2-5 seconds. That year he captured the intercollegiate championship, and the Canadian championship in 1890 and 1891, the latter besides. On May 31, 1891, Williams captured the intercollegiate championship in the 120 and 220 yards hurdles. He is also a clever football player, and as salesman of no small ability.

EXPERIENCE IN MARKETING.

A New York Woman Can Save Money and Secure Better Things to Eat.

Many a young housekeeper has said to herself: "If I were not such an ignoramus I should love to do my own marketing; but I feel like such a goose the moment I get into a butcher's shop, and I always know that I simply make myself ridiculous." And she then gives such a one the experience of two young matrons who found they could make a saving of twenty dollars a week by going themselves to the market. They had for several years they marketed together every other day, and by taking the elevated road with their friends at 9 o'clock they got home about 11, and had the whole day before them.

"It was the greatest fun!" one of them said, "and I always look back with regret to those days when we had to sacrifice fun to economy in order to live within my husband's income. You see we were all great friends. May and I had been to school together, and our husbands, too, were intimate. One evening, as we were talking over the most economical way of living, for it was a subject naturally very much discussed by all of us, we hit upon the idea that we should try for a month the plan of going to the markets ourselves and paying cash for everything.

"We had a glorious month of fun, because we thought that if we did it at all we wished to go down to the 'rock basis,' as the financial people say. Of course at first we made many mistakes, but that is what we finally learned—and perhaps it may be of use to others: In the first place, it is best to keep to one dealer, after you have decided which is best. For instance, in a big place like Washington market, it is well to have your butcher, your poulterer and your vegetable and fruit dealer. They will all take greater interest in supplying a regular customer at reasonable rates than one who only buys of them occasionally—especially if you always pay ready money.

"In buying beef there are a few rules to remember. Bullock beef is the best to buy. It should be fine grained, the less white streaks of clear, white looking fat running through it and of a bright red color. Unless there is enough fat the meat will be tough. Cow beef is poorer than ox beef, so you can tell it in that way; and it is not so nutritious; but if the meat is of a very dark red it is too old. To test beef, press it down with the thumb; if it rises quickly the meat is good. For soup meat get the shin bone and a few pounds of the round. Soup meat should have as little fat as possible. The best beef for beef tea is from the round. Mutton should be dark colored and have plenty of fat.

"In choosing poultry see that they have smooth legs and short spurs; the male birds are best. The feet should always bend easily and the eyes should be bright. If a fowl has begun to turn blue, or if it has stiff legs, it is not good. In selecting fish the body should be stiff and the gills red; if not, it is not fresh. In buying vegetables get a good dealer and have them fresh, as stale vegetables are unhealthy. Asparagus and peas and also green beans should be eaten on the day they are bought, and for these reasons they should be always easily kept, such as onions, cauliflower, cabbage, etc.

"My husband happened to know a good deal about marketing and he went with us for a week and got us started; but after that we always went alone, and I assure you we became very expert. Our weekly accounts were greatly reduced, and as I said, it was altogether an amusement as well as a benefit."—New York Tribune.

NOVELTIES IN NEEDLEWORK.

Attractive Things in Materials Pleasant to Work With—Some Useful Hints.

A simple but stylish cushion is the white linen tidy, with design of acorns and oak leaves worked in blue. The ends of the holder are dark blue satin, within a gauze ruffle, tied round with cords; upstanding frills are left at both ends.

A handsome quilt with design of conventionalized carnations is made of white linen damask. The pattern is boldly drawn; a bird occupies the center, and this and some overhanging fruit give a quaintness all its own to the quilt. As for the colors, the red round with some shades purpendicular, but they are toned with pale yellow and golden green.

Soft white linen canvas makes a charming work bask and chair backs too. The foundation is decorated with detached sprigs of flower sprays in terra cotta, yellow green, gray blue and golden brown shading; there is a narrow border along the bottom and a simple hem to finish it.

Honeycomb canvas is again in favor. An effective and easy way of decorating it is to outline a conventional design in white linen floss, and then darn in the surface of the design in gold colors. This can be used for bureau scarfs, head rests, etc.

As delicate work for the summer, crocheting is being revived. A very odd and pretty quilt may be made of alternate squares of linen and fine crochet. Some of the most fashionable old guipure and Venetian laces, and for the linen squares doilies are used, hemstitched and worked in wash silk in delicate designs. Shades of gold and white are very pretty, or any color or shade harmonizing with the decorations of the room.

Very pretty are the soft cushions are covers of duck embroidered in white and finished at the sides with large eyelets or buttonhole slits for lacings of inch wide ribbon.

The ordinary honeycomb bedspread may be transformed into a fashionable coverlet by simply darning in the ground with yellow rope linen, leaving the pattern in relief.

Almond Jumbles.

Ingredients for almond jumbles are one pound of sugar, one-half pound of butter, two eggs, one pound of almonds blanched and chopped fine, with flour enough to mix stiff. Roll thin and cut out the cakes with a round cake cutter. Then with a smaller cutter take out the center. Lay the jumbles in the pan, brush over the tops with white of egg slightly beaten and sprinkle with sugar.

To Brighten Oil Finished Furniture.

For cleaning oiled furniture a housekeeper recommends a mixture of pure cider vinegar and pure, raw linseed oil. Use a teaspoonful of the vinegar to a gill of oil, shaking them together till well mixed. The vinegar prevents the oil from gumming. Apply the mixture by slightly moistening a soft woolen rag with it. It is good also for brightening grained or stained wood.

Time for Sleep.

"Will you kindly sing something?" he said after a somewhat prolonged pause in the conversation.

"What shall I sing?" she asked, running her fingers carelessly over the keys of the instrument.

"Anything—something appropriate."

"Something appropriate," she repeated, looking at the clock; "then I will sing a lullaby."—Cape Cod Item.

Housemaid's Cap.

There is a new cap for housemaids. It is of English origin and resembles somewhat in shape a plate, as it lies close on the head in front. A little peaked crown appears at the back and is finished off with muslin strings.

A NEW CAP FOR HOUSEMAIDS.

It is more dressy than the coronet cap and more becoming to the majority of maids than is the Normandy cap.

Latest Styles of Ribbons.

With regard to ribbons, very wide, soft shot silk fled fabrics are in favor and four inch width for trimmings. Tinsel embroidery appears on the solid colors and spots of several sizes, but the charming little jacquenor sprigs on satin grounds are the leading ideas, while the favorite flowers are the cowslip, the polyanthus, cornflower and the lustercap, and fruits are prepared for the later season. Brocades on gold gauze ribbons are much worn, and shot silks, which often display brocaded forgetmenots and pansies and short sprays of jessamine, round and sometimes elliptical. The favorite combinations are brown and blue, lemon colored and sky blue, pink and yellow, yellow and green, black and gold.

Gloves and Shoes for Men.

Golden tan kid gloves are worn by gentlemen in the street, when making calls, and at church. At morning weddings the groom, ushers, best man and guests wear very light tan colored gloves. At afternoon weddings and in the evening also, the men of the bridal party wear the palest pearl colored gloves, with very narrow stitching of black or self color. Men's gloves are of glace kid, and are fastened by two buttons.

Patent leather and fine calfskin shoes worn by men of fashion have the round French toe instead of those with sharply pointed toes of a few years ago. Walking shoes are high about the ankle, and are laced or buttoned, as the wearer prefers. Low shoes, laced on the instep, are entirely of patent leather, and indeed all very dressy shoes, whether high or low, are of the glossy patent leather throughout. Black socks of lisle thread or fine Balbriggans are still preferred for wearing, either with high or low shoes. Tan colored, mode and gray socks, quite plain or with narrow lines of color, are also worn. Pocket handkerchiefs of fine linen, with narrow hems hemstitched, are for best use, and those with a narrow border of color are for general wear.—Harper's Bazar.

BREVITIES.

—The potato bug has not answered the roll call up to the present time.

—The Salvation Army will hold services in Reform Hall to-morrow evening as usual.

—Does your moustache grow like this —, or does it drop like——, or does it resemble ((( )))?—Ex.

—The services of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school have been changed from 2:30 p. m. to 10 a. m. for the Summer.

—A number of delegates from the various Christian Endeavor Unions of this city attended the convention at Rahway last evening.

—The Fire-cracker nuisance has commenced already, and for the next two weeks the annoyance will have to be submitted to.

—During the Summer months Sunday school will be held in the Congregational Church in the morning at the close of the morning service.

—The case testing the constitutionality of the law giving the courts power to grant licenses in boroughs of the second class, has been postponed until November.

—Eat a little bit of onion before your regular meal and then you will not observe the taste of garlic should the butter or milk happen to be tainted therewith.

—An excellent way of testing tea is to put a teaspoonful in a glass of water and shake it thoroughly. If the tea is pure the water will be clear amber tint, but, if adulterated strongly colored.

—Birthday rings are beginning to be the rage among young misses all over the country. There is a pleasing sentiment about the idea that tickles the feminine fancy, and puts the manufacturer on his mettle.

—A few days ago as Asa Merrill of Dunellen was driving a spirited horse near Netherwood, the animal became frightened at a bicycle and ran away. Mr. Merrill was thrown out and dragged some distance. He was badly bruised.

—This morning on the Plainfield Bicycle Club grounds, at a game of base ball, the Resolutes defeated H. Martin's nine, in an eleven inning game by the score of 17 to 16. Battery for the Resolutes Kline, pitcher; Giles, catcher. Battery for H. Martin's nine Sebring, pitcher, and Sutphen catcher. Umpire—W. Cornwell.

—Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell preaches tomorrow night a special sermon in a course of sermons being preached to the young people of Simpson M. E. Church, Jersey City. Rev. Wm. Eakins, pastor of Simpson church, preaches here for Mr. Mitchell to-morrow night.

—The residents of East Front street are now without a night-watchman. Frank Moran who formerly served in that capacity has left rather unceremoniously. He says he is having hard times and there was not enough money in the job to justify him in watching all night.

—There were 239 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 226 in the preceding week and 144, 205, 177 and 161 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st, to date is 5,730 against 5,595 in 1890.

—The heaviest sentence ever imposed on a chicken thief was given at Elizabeth last Saturday, by Judge McCormick, in the Union county court, who sentenced Louis Wahl to five years in State prison for the offense. Wahl had pleaded guilty to six indictments charging him with robbing farmers' poultry houses in Somerset, Union and Middlesex counties.

—The New Jersey Historical Society will soon have its centennial medal ready for distribution. When it is finished it is the intention of the society to present one every year to the scholar in the public schools of New Jersey who passes the best examination in the history of the State. This medal is to commemorate the Washington Centennial held at Elizabeth two years ago.

—Joseph Battin, an aged and wealthy resident of Elizabeth, as given to the faith cure people a piece of ground worth $25,000 on which to erect a house of worship. It is said he is about going to live with the Rev. Mr. Simpson, though it is not known if the deed has given the latter $70,000 for the purpose of promoting the cause of the faith curists. Mr. Battin is eighty-one years old and the founder of the Elizabeth High School.

—There seems to be a kind of vague hope in the breasts of the race track gamblers that the court of errors and appeals will decide the law prohibiting bookmaking and poolselling to be unconstitutional. What should warrant that vague hope no one seems to comprehend, unless it may turn out that the lay judges should again contrive to vote against the Supreme justices. And should this be the case it would be but another reason for wiping out the present State administration, and, when the time came, appointing men of moral convictions as law judged of the court, leaving off such men as decide in favor of the legality of gambling. But it is not likely notwithstanding the vague hope of the gamblers, that the lay judges will overwhelm the votes of the supreme court justices. It would be bad law and mighty bad politics.—Elizabeth Journal.

NEW JERSEY STATE CONVENTION

Of the Y. P. S. C. E. to be Held in Newark.

Preparations for the next State convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union are now being made, but the plans are as yet by no means completed. Newark has been decided upon as the place, and the date, if the church can be secured, October 23, 24 and 25. The first session will be held Friday evening and the concluding services will be held on Sunday. This is something new for this State, and it contemplates a much more elaborate programme than anything before attempted. The First Presbyterian church is the one in which the convention will be held.

Commencement Exercises.

The closing exercises of the Dunellen Public School were held in the Methodist church last evening, and were attended by a large number of parents and numerous friends of the happy children. Promptly at 7:45 the exercises commenced with a song by the school. The declamations and essays by the pupils of the High School department were particularly fine, and the drills and recitations by the younger scholars showed careful training on the part of the teachers. The Dairy Maids' Drill by sixteen girls, the United Workmen by the primary boys, the Doll Drill by the little girls, and Fannie Richardson's "Great Exhibition of Wax Figures" were received with great applause. The solos were well rendered. At the close of the exercises prizes were awarded for scholarship and attendance. The following was the programme:

Vocation Days	School
Invocation	Rev. W. C. Kincey
Welcome	Mildred Gaskill
Recess	Fannie Lohde

State Tax Commission.

The State Tax Commission have begun their preparations for the July meeting, which is the time for the hearing of the complaints of the people. The commission to sit as an appellate court on the first Monday of July for the purpose of hearing the complaints of any taxpayer respecting the taxes assessed against him; also the complaints of any county or county collector concerning the action of any county board of equalization. Commissioner Albert Slape, of Salem, states that from the correspondence he is of the opinion that the board will have many appeals. This being the first year in which the taxation of every county seems to have a distinct way of taxing property, there is much confusion. The law allows any tax-payer who feels himself aggrieved to appeal to the Board for a decision. The Commissioners anticipate many appeals, and are now getting ready the machinery of the court for the business that will come before them.

A Double Egg.

An ambitious hen on the farm of the late Dr. George H. Cook a few days ago produced a double egg. The curiosity is two complete eggs one shell inside of another, the space between the two shells being filled with white. The inner egg is about the size of an ordinary egg and the outer egg is one-third larger. Somebody should tell that hen that it is nonsensical to exert herself to lay two eggs in such a shape that she only gets credit for one in the count.

No Meeting.

A meeting of the Borough Council was called for last evening at 8:10 o'clock. Mayor Place, Councilmen Buckle, Hegeman, Hummer, Needham and Sebring were present, besides the reporters.

The Council awaited a conference and when at 8:12 o'clock, the Mayor called the meeting to order and after Clerk Brokaw called the roll Mr. Hegeman moved to adjourn, it was a surprise to all the outsiders present. No business whatever was transacted.

Honors for Bound Brook.

The Plainfield High School ranks as one of the best educational institutions in New Jersey, and it is therefore with commendable pride that The Chronicle congratulates Mr. Alfred G. Kilmer, of this place, on receiving the honor of valedictorian of his class. The commencement exercises will take place in Stillman Music Hall next Thursday evening.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

The Cranford Regretta.

The Executive Committee of the Cranford Rowing Association has decided to open the season of 1891 with a regatta on the afternoon of July 11th. Entries will be booked for single and double sculls and single and tandem upset canoe races.

—The new schedule of trains on the Central Railroad will go into effect tomorrow.

—Sherwin's advertisement to-day calls attention to the fact that 79c buys a pair of regular $1.00 ladies' Oxford ties tonight only.

MAY SAVE BEEKMAN.

An Appeal Sought Because the Prosecutor Held Two Offices.

Samuel Beekman and Jennie Wiley, convicted of manslaughter, were to be sentenced to-day in the Union County Court. Louis A. Graff, their lawyer, announces that he is going to appeal to the Supreme Court to test the validity of Senator Marsh's right to act as a Prosecutor of the Pleas while holding another State office. Lawyer Graff, it is said, has an opinion from eminent legal authority that the question is a grave one to decide, and he means to take advantage of every point that may save his clients from going to the State prison.

The prisoners will be sentenced even though the case should be carried higher up.

John Tacker, the Assistant Paymaster, convicted of embezzling money from the Singer Company, was also to be sentenced to-day.

PERSONAL.

Miss Louise Kuenlin of Dunellen is visiting friends in Hoboken.

Miss May White of Rahway is the guest of Miss Snediker of Grove street, North Plainfield.

Miss Fannie Mattlage of Somerset street, North Plainfield, will spend the Summer in Connecticut.

The Rev. J. J. Pierson of Woodbury is visiting at the residence of his mother on Duer street, North Plainfield.

Mr. Carl Ernst of East New York is visiting his nephew, Mr. Charles Smith of West Front street. Mr. Ernst has been ill for several months past and came to Plainfield to recuperate.

Bishop Vincent is still confined to his home with a bronchial cough, and has been compelled to cancel his June engagements. He can not preach here to-morrow as formerly announced.

Elizabeth H., widow of the late George Opdyke died this morning in the eighty-seventh year of her age. The funeral will take place from the residence of her son, Henry B. Opdyke, of Farragut Road, Tuesday morning at 11:15 o'clock.

Miss Miller of Lancaster Gate, Hyde Park, London, who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Wm. L. Patton of East Ninth street, expects to sail, via the Cunard line, for her home, in about a week. Miss Miller came from England to attend the wedding of her brother Mr. J. Mc. Miller, who recently married Miss Elinor Shepard of East Front street.

Rev. T. H. Stockton, D. D., who went to Buenos Ayres, South America, at the conclusion of his pastorate of the Methodist Episcopal church in this city eight years ago, is now one of the leading men in Plainfield, and will occupy his old pulpit in the Methodist church to-morrow morning, and preach in Monroe Avenue Chapel at night. Dr. Stockton has charge of the English speaking branch of the Methodist Episcopal church in Buenos Ayres. He is in this country only for a few weeks on business connected with the mission, of which he has charge.

Base Ball Notes.

There must be a screw loose somewhere in Central New Jersey base ball clubs having the standing attained by the Bergen Points and the Rahways formed a league game or a series of games from the Plainfield Crescents management. The trustees of the Rahway association say in a letter to a Rahway paper: "We are asked, Why don't you [Rahway? Plainfield? We reply that we have used every honorable means to try and induce the Plainfield management to give us a game, or a series of games, believing that such game or games would create and revive a local interest in baseball that would be lasting; this interest would, no doubt, prove beneficial from a financial point of view for both teams."

It is claimed that the local management have about decided to allow interest to be revived in base ball by a game or two with the Westfields. One contest with the Crescents would be enough for more unwilling people over to that twenty-five cent ball ground than ten games have been played next Saturday with the Seton Hall club.—Central Times.

Morris Nolan Dead.

Morris Nolan the man who was convicted of murder in the second degree in the Somerset county court, and sentenced to twenty years imprisonment, died in the State Prison at Trenton on Thursday. It will be remembered that Nolan was arrested on the charge of murdering an old man named William Race, and, after two trials, was finally convicted of murder in the second degree. The court sentenced him to twenty years in State Prison at hard labor. He served less than three years.

—F. C. Brink, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the bladder. When about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV.

DYING OF LOCKJAW.

Brakeman Patrick Galvin Cannot Possibly Survive.

About a week ago Patrick Galvin, a brakeman, while coupling cars on the Long Branch Division of the Central Railroad in this city, had one of his fingers mashed. He went to his home in DeKalb avenue, Perth Amboy, and as a result of the injury he is said to be dying of lockjaw. Dr. Ramsay says Galvin cannot survive. Mr. Galvin is well-known in this city, having formerly resided here.

Dunellen Notes.

[From the Bound Brook Chronicle.]

Miss Clara Frolich has been visiting friends in New York this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Brakeley have been on a visit to Boston this week.

Mr. Arthur Giles has been detained at home for the past week with the measles.

W. J. Wingee was out driving Sunday for the first time since his encounter with the tramp.

The old Bohn Homestead has put on a better appearance since Miss Annie came home to stay.

Mr. Joseph Maier has serious thoughts of visiting the old country to recuperate his health, which has been much impaired lately.

The electric light poles have all been put in their places and are now ready for the wire. The manager hopes to have the town lighted by July 4th.

Hannah, oldest daughter of Herman Danz, received the first prize for best attendance at school during the past year. She was not absent from one session.

Mr. Robert Giddis has been taking a week's vacation, which he spent with friends at Stockton, N. J. Mr. Giddis reports having had a very pleasant time, but it is harder to come back than it is to go away.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union has just finished cleaning and repairing its room and although Sunday was a very hot day the temperance workers were well represented. Messrs. Lungerand Nice of Plainfield addressed the meeting.

At the Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening Miss Peck, who recently returned from the South, delivered a very interesting lecture on "Education in the South." The congregation was also entertained by a sweet singing by the the Sunday school scholars, who deserve special praise.

The choir of the Methodist Episcopal Church feels much pleased over the new platform built for the singers. It is ornamented as well as well as beneficial to the effect of singing, as it brings the sound from the front of the church and aids the congregation also in their praise service. The wood work is in keeping with the church furniture and a plush curtain screens the choir, when seated, from the view of the audience.

T. F. Van Horn sold a horse last week which was to be delivered in Newark. He duly came across "Red Pat" and intrusted it to him, at the same time giving him $1.20 to have it shod all around. Pat thought he could use the money to better advantage and proceeded to satisfy his appetite for liquor and then started for Newark. On the road he met with several mishaps, falling off of the horse a number of times, and when he arrived at Irvington he found the animal had went out to pay his respects to the saloons. When he arrived in Newark he found he were so confused and his geographic knowledge of the town so limited he was unable to find the owner of the horse's stable. He then started for home and informed Mr. Van Horn of his loss. Mr. Van Horn was delighted when he found the horse all right in the hotel stables. "Red Pat" thinks he is a very much abused man and to this day none was given to him under false postences.

Trying to Oust Superintendent Apgar.

For some months there have been rumors of trouble in reference to Superintendent of the Public Schools of New Brunswick, Professor Elias Apgar, formerly State Superintendent of Schools. Thursday night the Committee on Teachers adopted resolutions declaring his office, and that of the musical instructor, Professor Charles Stevens. These resolutions will be presented at the meeting of the School Board on Monday night and it is believed they will be passed. A copy of the resolution in reference to Professor Apgar was given him to-day so that he might have a chance to resign, but by advice of friends he refused to do so, and will doubtless make a strong fight. The places, by the resolution, will become vacant July 1. A law was passed by the last Legislature which requires the holder of offices of teachers, which may operate in Apgar's favor, as it is said no charges against him will be preferred.

Troubles at Somerville Jail.

Jailor Wilson says he has a "tough crowd" at the Somerville Jail just now. He showed articles he recently found in the possession of the prisoners. A knife, with a regular saw blade, and three other blades with saw teeth formed in them, and a file also appeared to be among the belongings of a prisoner.

A case knife, saw-edged; which the jailor says he got with a file would make no impression upon, was among the lot, and several other things with which to work out would be found.

The gang had commenced work already by slipping one of the bars out of its place in the window, and after it was slipped it back again, the cut being hidden by the cross bar.

Treadwell, the man who is in for forging a money order, gives some little trouble.

—The June moon, which was new on the 6th and will be full on the 22d, will make several interesting conjunctions with planets during the month.

—Doane and VanArsdale call attention to-day to their $1.50 Oxfords for ladies wear. They say they have stood the test for four years, so that they can recommend them in every way.

—VanEmburgh and White say that one of the busiest places in Plainfield these days is their store. Their new advertisement to-day will interest the ladies, and they say that they offer their goods at such low prices that you can't help buying.

Got Out Doors.

Manage it somehow, but get out doors. Man was made to live in the open air. The Almighty is declared to have made man—though it is hard to believe it in case of some specimens we meet—but man certainly made houses. They are a necessary evil, but they rob us of our health, our good looks, our good figures and perfect limbs. Because we have protected ourselves with walls, with flannels and with felt hats, therefore we take cold if we sit in draughts or cool ourselves comfortably when overheated, and we grow baldheaded.

Let us get back to nature. However man has petted, pampered and housed domestic animals and birds, they cannot begin to compare with those simply left alone in their native wilderness. The meat of the best fed fowls and animals has not the flavor of wild birds or venison. The brightest plumaged bird ever grown in captivity looks dull beside the dazzling colors of the wild woods songster. A traveler writes that no grooming, currying or oil cake feeding of a gentleman's blooded carriage horse ever gave his coat the luster, his eye the fire or his form the grace displayed by the wild horse of the plains, which picks up its own food or starves. Reason—All these creatures live in the open air, as nature meant them to do.

Therefore, get outdoors. Life in a boat on the water is good; life in a tent in the woods is good. Only get near to Mother Earth and draw electricity and the vital fluid from her into your own body. You are starved of red blood, and your eyes are dimmed with much poring over miserable books. Your back is crooked and your feet are covered with corns. Go barefooted if you can, and lie sideways. If mankind would do that, reincarnation and bald heads would flee into the dark and moldy past.

Spend several weeks with the waters, the sky and the earth. Let the winds blow around you freely. You will learn to love them so that they will never again give you cold. Make the elements your friends and they will not harm you. Throw away your umbrella and let the loving, kissing rain bathe your cheeks at will. Swim, fish, walk, row, ride, or just lie upon the grass and listen to the sweet whisperings of the trees. Two-thirds of our ailments have come because we have ceased to live outdoors.

The First Gold Discovery.

Rev. R. T. Cross tells in The Magazine of American History an odd story of the first gold discovery in western America. Lieutenant, afterward General Zebulon M. Pike, for whom Pike's peak was named, was in New Mexico, then Mexican territory, in 1807. At Santa Fe, working at the carpenter trade among the Mexicans, was a citizen of the United States named Pursley, originally from Bardstown, Ky. The carpenter had been out on the plains with a hunting party. Encountering hostile Sioux they were driven to the high grounds in the vear of Pike's peak. In this region, near the headwaters of the La Platte river, Pursley found gold, returned to Santa Fe and told it to Santa Fe and had it still in his possession when Lieutenant Pike found him in 1807.

The Mexicans had used every inducement to persuade Pursley to go with them and show them the gold region. They had even offered to send a strong force of cavalry with him as an escort, but he had refused, because he believed the district in which the yellow metal had been found belonged properly to the United States. If gold really existed in large quantities there, as Pursley believed it did, then Mexico would certainly have claimed the discoveries. So Pursley kept his secret from patriotic motives and bided his time. Unfortunately, his time never came. Lieutenant Pike published the story in his reports, but nobody followed up the clew. Time went on. The Mexican war was fought and a vast territory gained for the United States. Then it was, only a few years later, that the gold field was rediscovered, undoubtedly in United States territory, for it had conquered it.

The death of Sir John Macdonald may make great changes in Canadian politics. The party hostileto the United States has lost its head and front. Sir John did not hate us for ourselves, but because he went in with all his soul for the independent greatness of Canada. It meant his own greatness. For this reason he wrought and achomed year by year to push the Dominion of Canada onward. He tried to keep Canada hostile to us because he feared annexation, knowing in his heart that the real interests of that country lie with the United States. So did all he could to belittle and annoy us. And after all they buried him in a Yankee coffin, made at West Meriden, Conn. He would not rest easy in his grave if he knew it.

JOHN L. AND MR. SLAVIN

Contradictory Reports as to the Alleged Challenge.

ONE OF THE GENTLEMEN IS DRUNK.

Mr. Sullivan, Unfortunately, Is Temporarily Unable to Speak for Himself, So Mr. Jack Barnett Speaks for Him. There May Be a Match and Maybe Not.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20.—John L. Sullivan was too drunk during the day to talk sensibly concerning his proposed fight with Slavin. His show was at San Jose Thursday night and after the performance he filled upon "tanglefoot." He had no sleep and he was very drunk. He stood at the bar of the hotel in San Jose which he patronized, in the morning, declaring to a crowd that he was willing to fight any man on earth for any money that might be mentioned on his return from Australia.

One of His Little Pleasantries.

His friends bundled him into a hack and rushed him to the railway station. While he was at the hotel a stranger came into the barroom and Sullivan ordered him to drink. The man didn't know the big fellow and replied "O. K." Thereupon Sullivan stretched him out cold with a back hand blow in the face, and at the railway station Sullivan held another reception of his admirers and repeatedly declared that he could whip any man that ever drew breath. When the train came along he was packed aboard as quickly as possible.

Jack Barnett, Sullivan's manager and part with the latter, said that there is nothing in the story that Sullivan has challenged Slavin.

Mr. Barnett's Utterances.

"Sullivan," says Barnett in an interview, "always exercises before making a match, and it has always been John's custom to refer all people looking for a match to me. Dr. Dougherty and Slavin called upon Sullivan and me in St. Louis Sullivan told Slavin that whatever I said he would agree to. I accordingly called on Slavin that John was under an eighteen months' contract with me, but that if at the end of that time he (Slavin) was still in the ring and an undefeated man, Sullivan would give him a match. Slavin said he was satisfied and we parted good friends. This is the understanding between Sullivan and Slavin, and all these stories in the papers amount to nothing." All of which may be true or it may not.

The Nation Waits to Hear.

It is to be observed that Barnett says further: "You can, however, say that Sullivan will make reply to these challenges from the stage at Corbett's benefit next Wednesday night."

From all that can be learned from various sources there is not much doubt that John L. Sullivan has authorized Jim Wakely and Johnston to make a match for him and Slavin. Whether the thing was done verbally when Jim Wakely was here a few weeks ago or by letter or telegram since is not known. It is certain that Sullivan is ready and anxious to meet the Australian as soon as he is permitted by his present management to do so is pretty certain.

NEW ORLEANS, June 20.—The Olympic club, of this city, has telegraphed an offer of $5,000 for a fight in the Olympic club room between Sullivan and Slavin, to take place Feb. 27.

To Receive the Kaiser in Grand Style.

LONDON, June 20.—Enormous preparations are being made in London for the reception of the German Kaiser. The fireworks, it is said, will be on the most magnificent scale ever displayed in England's capital. The kaiser will arrive in England on the Fourth of July, according to programme, and proceed to Windsor, where he will remain until July 8, meantime being present at several functions, such as the wedding of the Princess Louise, daughter of the Prince and Princess Christian, and the silver wedding and garden party at Garden lodge. On July 8 the kaiser will arrive at Buckingham palace and attend opera at Covent garden. On the 9th he will attend a garden party at Marlborough house, and Albert hall in honor of the Queen. He will leave the city on the 10th, and on the 11th he will lunch at the German embassy and go to the Crystal palace. After a visit to the naval exhibition he will leave England on July 13.

Killed Her Children and Herself.

BLENHEIM, Ont., June 20.—The bodies of Mrs. David Clarke and her two children, a boy and girl, both under four years of age, have been found alongside Rondeau dock. The following words were written on the pier:

Do not blame Garney, I did it. MAGGIE.

Garney is the name of Mrs. Clarke's eldest daughter. Domestic trouble between her and their five children last fall. This is supposed to have caused her to commit the double murder and suicide.

Firewater Makes Indians Dangerous.

PAULS VALLEY, I. T., June 20.—The sixty Chickasaw militia who left here Wednesday to assist the United States troops west of here in ejecting 6,000 Unitad States citizens, who are living in the country without permits, all got drunk when twenty-five miles away from this place. They killed a farmer's horse and stopped a white farmer on the road and threatened to shoot him because he was white.

Train Robbers Severely Punished.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, June 20.—The Rio Grande railway train robbers are on trial in the United States circuit court. Jose Maria Mosqueda has pleaded guilty and has been given a life sentence. He was one of the leaders. Fabian Garcia, another of the gang, has been given a seven years' sentence. The case against the other prisoners was continued.

Angered by the Employment of Negroes.

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 20.—A riot and strike is in progress among the miners at Finleyville. So far no serious outbreak has occurred, but a large force of men. The cause of the outbreak is that colored men are to be employed in opening a mine. The white miners objected and a general fight occurred. Sheriff Lockhart and several deputies have gone to the scene.

Paid the Death Penalty.

CHARLESTOWN, W. Va., June 21.—Sim Johnson, the colored rapist, was hanged at 10:15 a. m. His neck was broken and he died without a struggle.

THE TREASURY STATEMENT.

An Apparent Deficit of $787,117—Captain Macfeelan's Figures.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—The cash balances on the treasurer's books for the day were $62,091,254, but of this sum $23,627,411 was on deposit in national banks and $39,290,960 was in fractional silver, leaving a deficit in the available cash of $787,117.

Captain Macfeelan, chief of the warrant division of the treasury department, said that the actual receipts for the month of June to date, including $1,000,000 which he gave at $26,411,000, making an excess of receipts and cash on hand of $2,812,000. The reason for the difference between his figures and those of the treasurer he said, the fact that his cover the latest warrants, while the treasurer's statement is two or three days behind.

AGAINST UNCLE SAM.

A Case Which May Cost the Government $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—The jury in the suit of Meyer & Dickinson against the government to recover excess of duties levied on materials used in hat trimmings has returned a verdict of $625,000 for plaintiffs. The case will appeal the verdict to the supreme court. By the verdict of the jury in this case the government is mulcted for from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 that it has collected in duties from importers of millinery materials in various parts of the country.

The suit of Meyer & Dickinson was a test case, intended to settle the right of the government to collect the duties on the goods in dispute. Other pending suits will be affected by the verdict, and that is where the large amount of money and the great interest taken by importers comes in.

Jews to Celebrate.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Jewish Messenger says today that a meeting was held Sunday night at No. 8 West Nineteenth street, in the vestry room of the Spanish and Portuguese synagogue, 5 West Nineteenth street, this city, to take action for becoming participation in the approaching quadri-centennial celebrations, as Hebrews as well as Americans. The call for the meeting was signed by the following representatives of the Jews of New York, Chicago, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Baltimore, Peoria, New Orleans, Milwaukee, Washington, Montreal, Cairo, Albany, Newport, Atlanta, Savannah and Port Gibson. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the proposal for the quadri-centennial of the discovery of this continent be marked in some appropriate manner by the Jews of the United States, and that a committee of twenty-one be appointed by the chair, at his leisure, to report at the earliest time practicable to a general meeting of this assemblage what form the memorial shall assume and the mode of carrying it into effect.

New York State Shoots.

ROME, N. Y., June 20.—The state shoot has closed. The team championship race was won by Co. B, Utica, Sinkerhoff and Brigden, of the Auburn Gun club, scoring 26 out of 30; Union Gun club, of Buffalo, second, 25; Oneida County Sportsmen's association, of Utica, third. The Dean Richmond trophy was won by the Union club, of Buffalo, whose team was composed of Lewis, Andrews and Kelsey. Each made a clean score of 12. The Emeralds, of New York, and the Fountains, of Brooklyn, were tied for second place, each scoring 33 hits out of a possible 36. The Hillsides, of Watertown; Onondagas, of Syracuse, and Oneidas, of Utica, tied for third place, the teams scoring 31. Coney Island, Hilltop, of Pompey Hill; Lefevre, of Syracuse, and Capitol City, of Albany, tied for fourth place, each with a score of 29. Auburn scored 28.

The Telegraphers.

ST. LOUIS, June 20.—It is definitely settled that the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and the Brotherhood of Telegraphers will not consolidate at least for a year. It is now thought steps will be taken to organize the telegraphers of the United States, without regard to commercial or railroad service, into a national association. The following officers have been elected for the ensuing year: A. D. Thurston, of Vinton, Ia., grand chief telegrapher; S. O. Fox, of Vinton, Ia., grand secretary and treasurer; H. G. D. Rainsey, of East St. Louis, assistant grand chief telegrapher; Senor J. A. LeCanda, of Celaya, Mex., grand senior telegrapher.

The Evelyn-Hurlburt Case.

LONDON, June 20.—In resuming his argument against the application made by Gladys Evelyn for a new trial of her suit against Mr. William Henry Hurlbert, Sir Richard Webster read the summing up of the judge in the suit brought by Miss Evelyn. During this reading the presiding judge of the court of appeals directed attention to several discrepancies in Miss Evelyn's statements, but he also said he considered the result of that trial as having been most unsatisfactory.

Suing a Railroad for $100,000.

PITTSBURG, June 20.—The guardian of the five minor children of the late Charles Archenbil has brought suit in their behalf against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company for $100,000 damages for the death of their father. Archenbil was killed on a train on the Baltimore and Ohio road on June 20, 1890, while on his way from Baltimore to Pittsburg.

Brooklyn's Pretty Burglar Sentenced.

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 20.—Charles Johnson, the handsome young burglar, of Brooklyn, who was captured in Louisville in April for breaking into the residence of Mrs. Cary Hendrick in this city and robbing Mrs. Chapman Coleman, wife of the secretary of legation of the United States legation at Berlin, has been sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

Mrs. Nelson Acquitted.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The jury in the case of Ella Nelson, charged with the murder of Samuel L. Post, has acquitted her. The defendant fainted when the verdict was announced, but soon recovered, and left the courtroom surrounded by her friends.

Killed by a Falling Rock.

GREENSBURG, Pa., June 20.—While a number of Italians were working at Booth & Flynn's stone quarry the huge rock under which the men were working slipped loose and fell upon Anton Pedro and two other laborers. Pedro was instantly killed.

Quick Work at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, June 20.—Mary Shields, aged nineteen, was divorced from Alexander Shields in the superior court on the grounds of intolerable cruelty. In less than an hour she had applied for a marriage license and had become the wife of John Gillis.

DEATH IN THE STORMS.

Lives and Property Swept Away in Many Places.

CROWDS FLY TO FRIENDLY HILLS.

Towns Inundated, Railroads Disabled and Bridges Swept Away by Cloudbursts and Heavy Rains—A Tornado in Maine Does Great Damage.

PITTSBURG, June 20.—At Leechburg, Armstrong county, thirty miles from this city on the West Penn railway, a cloudburst destroyed much property. One man was killed. At 8 o'clock the heavens grew black, the flashes of lightning fiercely sharp and the peals of thunder shook the houses to their foundations. A great cloud of Leechburg is a deep ravine, through which Anderson's run flows. Down Anderson's run the torrent poured, carrying everything before it. Fifteen dwellings and many outbuildings, stables, fences, etc., were carried away and jammed against the railroad bridges at the foot of the run, which, unable to stand the terrific pressure, also gave way.

The occupants of houses fled to the hills. John Brant fell from the bridge as it went down and was fatally injured. The damage to property will be very heavy. Traffic on the West Penn railway is temporarily suspended. The marks on the hillside show that the water in the ravine reached a depth of thirty feet.

Another Cloudburst.

OTTAWA, Ills., June 20.—The village of Utica, which is situated on the Illinois, the scene of a cloudburst Thursday afternoon, and within five minutes all telephone and telegraph communication with the rest of the world was cut off.

At one burst a torrent poured itself upon the village and almost instantly the streets were buried under debris that rose over lawns, porches, and then into houses, driving the inhabitants from their homes and their places of business to seek safety on the highest points within reach.

The excitement and anguish of the fleeing, panic stricken villagers were terrible in the extreme. Many of them believed their last hour had come. Mothers hugged their children to their breasts and prayed for deliverance.

A Scene of Desolation.

Utica today presents a terrible scene of desolation. The roads from here to that stricken village are almost completely blockaded, and it required five hours of time for your correspondent to reach the inundated village in a carriage.

Along the Illinois and Michigan canal for a distance of 3,000 feet, and for ten miles the water in the canal is not more than a foot or two in depth.

The people of the village lose from $70,000 to $75,000 in furniture and merchandise. The Rock Island Railroad company loses between $40,000 and $45,000 as the result of the destruction of their bridge, the Illinois & Michigan canal company loses $30,000, and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway company loses $20,000. The total loss by the storm will reach $300,000.

A Schoolhouse Washed Away.

NORFOLK, Mo., June 20.—A schoolhouse was washed away here during the storm and three children were drowned. Others were saved with great difficulty. Three more children were drowned in Emerick township, this state. At Neligh a farmer lost his life.

Death Near Peoria.

PEORIA, Ills., June 20.—In this section thousands of acres of corn were destroyed. The Lake Erie and Western and the Peoria and Western railroads are badly washed out. Three boys were drowned at Brooks.

Struck by Lightning.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 20.—Mrs. Barbara Reichl, aged thirty-five, was struck by lightning. She will probably die. A little girl near her was also struck, but will recover.

Fences, Barns and a House Destroyed.

BARODE, Mo., June 20.—A cyclone country was visited by a tornado. Miles of fences were destroyed and one house and eight barns demolished.

The Duchess Loses Her Suit.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Judge Lacombe, of the United States circuit court, has signed a final decree dismissing the bill of the Judge was presided at the last trial, Charlotte, the Duchess d'Auxy, administratrix of the will of Robert Soutter, deceased, against Archie M. Quarrier, inventor of the last will and testament of Henry Fitzgerald, deceased, impleaded with others. The suit was for the recovery of a considerable amount of money. Some time ago there was a hitch in the proceedings, and the complainant was allowed twenty days in which to amend the pleadings. Having neglected to do so, Judge Lacombe ordered a final decree entered.

Mayor Chapin a Candidate.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Advertiser says: Alfred C. Chapin, mayor of Brooklyn, will be formally placed in nomination as a candidate for governor at the next Democratic state convention. His name will be presented in the convention by a Brooklyn Democrat, and the delegation from Kings county will in all probability vote as a unit for him. Nothing shorts of a political upheaval will change this programme.

Surgeon Glennan's Awful Bereavement.

RALEIGH, June 20.—Mrs. T. R. Glennan, wife of Surgeon Glennan, U. S. N., arrived at Raleigh last week from Washington with four children. Rose, aged five years, had a case of diphtheria and died on Monday evening. Harry, aged three, died of the same disease Thursday afternoon. Kenneth is now at death's door and the remaining child has the disease.

The Omaha's Men Relieved from Suspicion

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Acting Secretary Spaulding, of the treasury department, has telegraphed the collector of customs at San Francisco to release the goods seized by him on board the United States steamer Omaha on suspicion of being smuggled upon payment of the duties on the goods.

New England Tennis Tournament.

NEW HAVEN, June 20.—The tennis tournament for the championship of New England was continued. Lee defeated Wright, 1—6, 6—4, 6—3; Huntington defeated Sanford, 6—1, 1—6, 6—2 and also Hollister, 6—4, 6—3.

PHILADELPHIA'S FINANCIAL MUDDLE.

Latest Developments in the Dardsley-Keystone Bank Affair.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—The city authorities have received their first official notification that the state of Pennsylvania intends to hold the municipality responsible for the state funds which have disappeared under John Bardsley's manipulation. Mayor Smart, City Treasurer Cathers and City Comptroller Thompson have received a formal letter from Attorney General Hensel making a demand upon the city for one million dollars, and informing them that if not paid suit would be entered within ten days.

Mayor Smart at once acknowledged the receipt of the communication in a letter to the attorney general, in which he stated that he should at once refer the matter to the city solicitor for such action as may be necessary.

Many people are of the opinion that the state's case against the city is a weak one, while the officials in the various departments contend that the state must look to Mr. Bardsley for the return of its money, and it is more than probable that tedious litigation will follow and that the final case will eventually reach the highest courts, as every one met with is of the opinion that Mr. Bardsley was a servant of the state and that his peculations are its loss alone.

In the matter of the approval of sureties of William Redwood Wright as the faithful performance of Mr. Wright's duty as county treasurer Jude Bregg, of common pleas court No. 1, has taken no positive step, but the matter is held under advisement.

The state authorities ask City Treasurer Wright to give a state bond for $250,000, instead of $125,000, as was given by City Treasurer Bardsley.

The councilmanic investigation committee, which for several weeks past has been investigating matters, has not yet reached the money of the city and state deposited by Bardsley as city treasurer in the Keystone National bank, and which proved its existence and stability and profited through dealings with the disgraced official, were again at the office of the receiver of the defunct institution to-day. The committee had the aid of Bank Examiner Drew and his assistant, Henry C. Jones. The gentlemen intently scrutinized the stock, notebook, ledger and other books. Mr. Yardley took no part in the examination. When they adjourned it was with the understanding that they would resume their labors on Monday next.

A reporter asked one of the committee if they had found anything which will lead to further investigation. "No," was the reply, "but it would defeat our purposes if we were to say anything about our discoveries. It will all be known at the proper time."

It is stated on authority that the expert accountants examining Bardsley's affairs have discovered that his profits from loaning funds at interest during the last two years was $202,000.

Russia Sides With Uncle Sam.

LONDON, June 20.—Advices from St. Petersburg state that the Russian government is prepared to join in enforcing a close season for Behring sea on the terms agreed upon between the United States and England. The Russian government is favorable to the American side of the controversy, and has given the United States to understand that it is against depredations without compromising Russia, and orders to this effect were long ago promulgated to the czar's officers in that section of the country. No doubt the matter has yet been intimated, but it is not believed that the republic will antagonize an arrangement eminently satisfactory to Russia. While Russia stands solidly against America and England, the British government is satisfied that the seals can be protected.

The National Union.

MILWAUKEE, June 20.—After a lively struggle the Grand Army of the Republic National Union, Kansas City won the honor of being the next meeting place in June, 1892. The following officers were elected: Past commander-in-chief: President, T. J. Charlesworth, Toledo; vice president, H. T. Bryan, Washington; speaker, Frank Fair, Chicago; secretary, J. W. Mayer, Milwaukee; treasurer, C. C. Everets, Toledo; medical director, A. E. Keyes, Mansfield; chaplain, E. A. Pettyjohn, Chicago; usher, T. Bowling, Washington; sergeant-at-arms, W. P. Lookin' After Pete.

Just at the top of a long hill, as we had stopped the horse to breathe a few moments, we met a farmer driving a fine span. He was an old man of sixty-five years old, being very gray and wrinkled, and he was so decrepit that he had to use a staff.

"Say, pard," said I, "have you seen anything of my son Pete along here?" he called, as he stopped at the buggy wheel.

"We haven't met anybody on foot this morning. How old is he?"

"Don't forty-two, and six feet high."

"Where was he going?"

"He's run away; Packed up his duds and slid out afore I was up this morning—the ongreatest rascal! I didn't believe that of Pete."

"Why, he was of age."

"Makes no difference! I allus kept him at home, and allus mean to. He's bin gittin' board and lodgings right along, and last summer I let him sell a whole sheepskin to a peddler and keep the money. He's got to come back or I'll know the reason why."

"You can't bring him back, can you?"

"Can't I! Don't you figger that I can't? I think he took the next cross road and made a bee line fur Spoonersville. I'm right up there, and I'll foller him up. When I find him I'll take both hands hold of his collar—like this—and I'll rattle his jawbones—like this—and I'll lay him on his back and lamb thunder out of him for about fifteen minutes. Then I'll walk him home, and you orter be around and see them stumps grubbed out and them rail fences mended! Say, you don't say son Pete back, eh? He's of age, eh? Guess you air strangers in these parts, and never heard of old 'Squar' Jerr!"

"Well, we wish you luck."

"Thanks, but I don't keer fur wishes. I'm sartin to find Pete, an' by the time I git him I'll contrive to limp him fur ten minutes after he hollers 'nuff! Good day!"—New York Sun.

A Dilettant.

Can you recall an ode to June
Or lines to any river
In which you do not meet "the moon"
And see "the moonbeams quiver"
I've heard such songs to many a tune,
But never ode to silver.
Have I ever escaped that rhyme to "June"
Or missed that rhyme to "river."

At times the bard from his refrain
A measure may transfuse,
The while his overcoupled brain
At some new jingle cashes;
A song from the moonlady moon
Himself he cannot sever,
But grapse once more that rhyme to "June,"
And seeks a rhyme to "river."

Then let no indolence be blamed
On him whose verses show it,
By shunning "burdens" (rightly named
For readers) and "silver."
For rhymes must fall him late or soon,
Nor can he deal forever
In words whose sound resembles "June,"
And assonants of "river."

When "icon's" been used, and "shoon" and "spoon,"
And "river" sounded "stirrer,"
Think of a bard reduced to "coon,"
And left alone with "liver"!
Ah, then, how he would woo the boon!
How doubly blest the giver,
Who gave him one rhyme more for "June,"
And one more rhyme for "river!"

ROMANCE AND MILLIONS

A Claim Involving 4,700,000 Acres of Arizona Land.

AN OLD SPANISH CLAIM DUG UP.

Found the Document, Married the Proxy Heiress to the Vast Domain and Will Now Fight Hard for a Great Big Fortune.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The Casa Grande Improvement company, of New York, is soon to present its petition to the new land court established by the last congress to determine the title to 4,700,000 acres of land in Arizona.

It is an old Spanish claim, and the estimated value of the land involved, as it stands at present, is between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000. At the expense of $4,000,000, 500,000 acres of the grant can be irrigated, which will make the total value about $100,000,000.

This petition will probably be the first business to come before the land court, which has not yet been organized, but which will soon organize and be in working order.

The Casa Grande Improvement company (limited), of Arizona, which has been organized three or four years, has a capital stock of $1,000,000. The company announces the nature of its business to be lands, mines and waters, stocks, bonds and water rights, but its officers say the sole object is to push the "Peralta grant" claim to a conclusion.

The Pretty Claimant.

The real claimant to these millions of acres in Arizona is Donna Sophia Micaela y Mason de la Peralta de la Cordova Reavis, wife of President Reavis of the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Reavis are at present stopping at the St. Mark's hotel, Staten Island. With the lives of this couple are connected the romantic features of the Casa Grande grant.

Mrs. Reavis is a woman of about thirty, in whose veins flows Castilian blood. She has an attractive face and figure, with which is combined a charming personality. She was born in Arizona. Her parents died when she was very young.

After the death of her parents she was taken to San Francisco.

Sixteen or seventeen years ago Mr. Reavis, who was then a newspaper writer, while journeying in Mexico, had occasion to delve into some ancient Spanish archives in Guadalahara and the City of Mexico. It was at this time that he discovered the Casa Grande grant.

The documentary evidence showed him that the living lineal descendants of the Baron of Colorado, a Spanish grandee of ancient race, were entitled to the fee simple of nearly 5,000,000 acres of rich mining and farming lands in Arizona.

A Grant Made by King Ferdinand.

The original grant was made by King Ferdinand VI of Spain in 1748, when Spain included within her domain all the property ceded by the Mexican government to the United States in 1848.

This immense grant of land in what is now Arizona was conferred by Ferdinand upon his vassal, the baron, as a mark of his sovereign's affection for distinguished services which he had rendered. The baron at once came to the New World and built a big castle upon his feudal domain. The ruins of his castle can still be seen in Arizona.

The baron lived for some years in his castle, after which he returned to Spain.

After his death the baron's only son set sail for North America and took possession of his father's estate and castle. He, too, returned to Spain and died, but left descendants in America, from whom the present heir apparent, Mrs. Reavis, is just four generations removed.

How It Became a Romance.

When Mexico ceded the territory in which the Casa Grande grant is situated to the United States, the former stipulated that the United States government should recognize the validity of title to these Spanish grants.

After searching for four or five years Mr. Reavis found the sole heir to the estate of the baron of the Colorados in the person of the beautiful Spanish girl in San Francisco.

An acquaintance began through business motives ripened into a marriage contract, in which it was stipulated that the groom should incorporate the name of Peralta into his own name and that the bride should give half of her property, if the claim was successfully prosecuted, to her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Reavis were married in San Francisco ten years ago on the day that the bride became of age.

In case the Peralta claim is successful the titles of actual settlers will not be disturbed, as the United States law protects them. Some holders of these lands, including the Southern Pacific railroad, have already acknowledged Mrs. Reavis' claim. The Southern Pacific paid the Casa Grande Improvement company $50,000 to relinquish the town site of Maricopa.

Johnstown's Victims to Seek Redress.

PITTSBURG, June 20.—Two weeks after the sad celebration of the second anniversary of the Johnstown deluge, in which over 2,000 lives were lost, comes the announcement that damage suits are at last to be entered against the South Fork Fishing and Hunting club which owned the artificial lake whose waters caused the great destruction of life and property. An attempt to indict them for criminal negligence was killed in the grand jury room of Cambria county.

Sir Morell's Valuable Name.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Sir Morell Mackenzie, the English physician, has through his counsel brought suit for $100,000 damages against Soden Mineral Springs company to enjoin the Sinco-Mendelson company for the unauthorized use of his name in connection with a proprietary medicine manufactured by them. A temporary injunction has been granted restraining defendants from using Sir Morell's name.

Mrs. Duncan Not Likely to Recover.

LONDON, June 20.—Advices from Wales leave slight hope of the recovery of Mrs. Duncan, whom her husband of Washington, in America, attempted to kill. It is now believed from all the evidence that Duncan was ashamed to face his people with the avowal of his marriage and tried to get rid of his wife for that reason.

The President's Quiet Day.

CAPE MAY, June 20.—President Harrison remained in the seclusion of his seaside home all day. There were few callers. Mrs. Harrison drove over to Cape May in the afternoon and did some household shopping. Her grandchildren were with her.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

Fourth class postmasters have been appointed in New York state as follows: F. M. Ingelow at South Limsand A. Wemple at Wauperville.

The secretary of the interior has awarded the contract for repairing the great Casa Grande prehistoric ruin near Gila river in Arizona. The sum of $2,000 was appropriated by the last congress.

At a special meeting of the New York Life Insurance company resolutions were adopted calling for a thorough investigation of its affairs, especially with regard to the Spanish-American department, and expressing confidence in the solidity of the institution.

The census office has in press and will shortly publish for distribution an elaborate reportion lumber production and allied industries for the states of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Henry Fanning, who convicted of the murder of Mrs. Emily Taylor on April 18 in New York, has been sentenced to be executed during the week of July 27.

News comes from Alaska that Lieutenant Robinson, of the United States steamer Bear; Mr. W. Moore and a boat crew of four, all belonging to the Mouns St. Elias exploring expedition, were drowned recently in Icy bay.

Captain George I. Pearce and his crew of fourteen, of the British bark Exile, have been rescued from their ship, which was in distress in midocean, by Captain George von Hugo and five others, of the German steamship Sophia.

The British parliament will be prorogued Aug. 5. Salisbury made an address in the house of commons on the treaties of 1862 and 1865, which caused a sensation.

Sixty earthquake shocks were felt in Bengal Thursday, great damage being done.

Seventy-five bodies of victims of the terrible railroad disaster near Moenchenstein, Switzerland, are known to be still missing.

The case of David Molloy, the young man who was found stabbed, bleeding and deaf and dumb in New York, is still unexplained. The theory that he is shamming has been abandoned.

Relief funds are pouring rapidly into Seabright, N. J., which was recently destroyed by fire. But clothing is still badly needed by many who lost their all in the disaster.

Jesus Jimenez, the Mexican general, is dead.

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls says: "The newspapers, I think, have been misinformed in regard to Mr. Blaine's illness, and they in turn have misinformed the public. He is, in my opinion, a pretty sick man, but I think he will recover in time for the presidential nomination."

A Big Cordage Deal.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 20.—It has just been learned that the National Cordage company, of New York, has purchased the business of the Dartmouth Rope Works company. The importance of this transfer can only be properly realized when the magnitude of the property turned over is known. The concern has employed over 600 hands, and its sales, it is said, exceeded $1,300,000 per annum. It is claimed that the National company has now secured all of the Canadian mills, eleven in number, and intends to materially increase the capacity of the larger concerns in the maritime provinces so as to compete for the export business. This it can do owing to the cheapness of labor and other valuable advantages in possession of the Canadian mills.

A Fatal Boiler Explosion.

MARTIN'S FERRY, O., June 20.—At 3 in the morning a boiler exploded at the Benwood blast furnace. The building was demolished. Charles Rouse was fatally hurt, William Rouse probably fatally and Robert Gleen seriously injured. The injured men were sleeping in a boat house on the river 300 yards away. The end of the boiler struck a boat and crashed in upon the sleeping men.

A Horse's Fatal Freight.

FRANKLIN, Pa., June 20.—During a heavy storm Marjoram, a filly, valued at $10,000, owned by Miller & Sibley, became frightened and ran into an old building. The floor gave way and she fell and broke her neck. She was entered in the 3 year old stake races all over the country. Half a dozen buildings were struck by lightning, but no one was injured.

Two Killed by a Train.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 20.—Alice Jones and Mary Davis undertook to cross a high railroad trestle near Union Springs, Ala., when they were caught by a passenger train of the Central railroad, and both were run over and killed.

THE DOT ON THE I.

A Point in the Art of Deciphering Character from Handwriting.

Do you put the dot high above the letter i? Do you put it close to the letter? Do you send it flying before? Is it fat, round, irregular? In each case your peculiarity is the outward and visible sign of some idiosyncrasy, says a master in the art of graphology. "Look at the dots of your i; try to make them different—smaller, larger, rounder, more oblong—you cannot do it. The dot above the i only changes with your character."

Here are some conclusions which the authority quoted says the ladies may draw from the tell-tale dot:

If you often forget to dot your i you will also forget other things which seem unimportant to you, but which for the comfort of everyday life are as necessary as the dot is to the i. If you have often to look in vain for the dot you will also look often in vain for other things, because you have not put them in their proper place. For instance, you put the fifth knitting needle into your book because you were suddenly called away and the latter book mark was at hand. You were anxious to finish your sock—where is the fifth needle? The servant girl must have mislaid it while dusting. Servants are such a trouble. In order to practice patience and self control you knit on with four needles, "mostly pardoning," and presently turn back to your interesting novel. The book opens immediately, and there and then the glittering needle proclaims a silent sermon to you.

If the dot flies high above and far away from the letter to which it belongs, your hopes, thoughts, wishes and aspirations are apt to fly about in far off regions, and instead of making practical use of the present day you dream of the ideals of the future. If this "high flown" dot is of an oblong shape, and if, in conjunction with it, the loops of your l, b, g, f, etc., are loose and long, then goodby symmetry and calm, for you have very little self control.

If your husband's dots are heavy, shapeless and blotchy you will have a hard time of it where food is concerned. He will not be satisfied with a cold supper, an esthetic tea or a bowl of beef and vegetables. On the other hand, you have in his favorite dishes a means to pacify the grumbler, and to incline him to listen to your wishes. Your request for a new gown, for theater tickets, which was peremptorily refused before dinner, is listened to with much more interest after the man of the house's dots had had a good meal. Never ask such a man to grant you a favor when he is waiting for his dinner. The larger the dots appear the more critically a dish will be attacked and judged.

Oliver Goldsmith as a Married Man.

Pall Mall Budget tells that while rummaging among the parochial archives of Islington Mr. Edward Dwyer, clerk of the guardians, has found an old book which gives some interesting facts about the famous author Goldsmith and his wife. The marriage entries differ as it existed at the beginning of the present century. Among other things it contains the quaint reason for bringing in 1754. The club is described as "a pretty village [Islington] in London, and a favorite resort for its cream," and the population is given as 10,000. Now its population is about 300,000. Another entry in the curious volume has raised a stargling controversy among local antiquaries. The postal Oliver Goldsmith is granted permission to have lived and died a bachelor. In islington another tradition exists. It is to the effect that not only had Oliver a little habitation there where he spent a good deal of his time, but by his neighbors he was regarded as a respectable married citizen. In the records found by Mr. Dwyer the name of Mary Oliver Goldsmith, and it is stated that this was none other than the poet's daughter.

Insect Predators.

While insect products are not enormous in comparison with the number of insects, of which there are nearly 800,000 species known, these are one of the most important vital values. The silk worm is the most useful of insects, furnishing the world an annual product of immense value. The yearly value of the cochineal insect reaches to millions, while many of the gums brought from the east are produced by the insects piercing the barks of certain trees and then gathering the exudation. The quantity of honey annually stored up by bees amounts to many millions of pounds, and the wax is almost equally valuable.

Gallnuts, from which a valuable kind of ink is made, are caused by insects, while more than one kind is used in medicine. In some parts of Asia and Africa 4 large share of the people's food is supplied by the swarms of locusts, so that the insect world really contributes largely both to the comfort and luxury of mankind.

Curious Uses of Paper.

Paper is now made to serve for steel and iron. When strong fiber is used it can be made into a material so hard that it can scarcely be scratched. Railroad car wheels are made of it more durable than iron. A building is said to have been made of it, the rafters, weather boards, roof and flooring being all made of paper boards, impervious to water. The Russian fireproof chimney has demonstrated that paper will stand heating stores, bathtubs and pots, when annealed by a process that makes them fireproof, becomes more lasting than iron and will not burn out. Cracks in floors around the skirting board or other parts of a room may be neatly filled by thoroughly soaking newspapers into a paste as thick as putty, and forced into the cracks with a paste knife. It will soon harden and can be painted.

When the Word "Plush" Was Slang.

Notes and Queries tells that the word pluck affords an instance of the way in which slang words in the course of time become adopted into current English. We now use with "pluck" and "plucky" as the recognized equivalents of "courage" and "courageous." An entry in Sir Philip Sidney's journal shows that in 1577 the word had not yet lost its character. He says "scant of that article blackguardly called pluck." Its origin is obvious. Plush very early times had been popularly regarded as the seat of courage. Now, when a butcher lays open a carcass he divides the great vessels of the heart, runs through the windpipe, and then plucks out together the united heart and lungs—lights he calls them—and he terms the united mass "the pluck."

SHADOWS ON THE WALL.

An Amusing Recreation for Home Entertainments Illustrated and Described.

In the method of producing shadows on the wall here depicted, the exhibitor, as well as the cardboard figures, are placed behind the apparatus, a position which has many advantages.

From one of the table a lighted candle, and in front of it, at two or three feet distance, stands to the wall a sheet of white paper to form your "screen." Between the light and the screen interpose some opaque body, for example, an atlas or other large book.

But under such conditions how are we to cast the shadows on the screen? Simply by the use of a mirror, placed at the side of the table. The reflection of the mirror will appear on the wall as a luminous space, oval or oblong, as the case may be, and if you have placed it at a proper angle with reference to the screen, and move your cardboard shapes about cleverly between the candle and the mirror, you will forthwith see little fantastic figures projected in shadow on the screen. The uninitiated spectator is wholly at a loss to discover how you produce them.

How to Make Strong Castings.

According to The Commercial Bulletin some of the English iron founders have adopted a simple practice in making stronger castings. The method is merely the introduction of thin sheets of wrought iron in the center of the mold before casting. This idea was first applied to the casting of thin plates for the ovens of cooking stoves, and a sheet of thin iron in the center of a ¼-inch oven plate renders it practically unbreakable by fire. Recently the process has been applied to the casting of large iron pipes, a core of sheet iron imparting additional strength and lessening the liability to fracture. As an evidence of an additional strength that may be imparted by this process it is stated that a plate of iron one-fourth of an inch thick, cast with a perforated sheet of 27 wire gauge wrought iron in the center, possess six times the strength of a similar cast plate without the core. The ¼-inch plate thus made has the strength of a plate one inch thick.

An Ingenious Automatic Device.

A recent invention of considerable interest is described by Fire and Water. It is a device for automatically shutting off the gas when it has been blown out, instead of being turned off in the usual way. The principle upon which the invention is based is the expansion and contraction of a small spiral loop made of German silver and steel, and which is adjusted very close to the gas flame. One end of the loop is free, while the other is secured to the fixtures. A valve controlling the gas is connected to the loop, and when the gas is burning the valve is open and the gas freely escapes. If, however, the gas is blown out, the loop will contract, the valve will close and the valve will shut off the gas. It is said that the device is exceedingly simple and it responds quickly to the change in temperature.

Testing the Hardness of Iron.

The Industrial World mentions a method for testing the hardness of iron while in the process of manufacture which has been devised by Mr. C. A. Cooperon, of the Penn Iron Works, Lancaster. The inventor, it is said, conducts a current of electricity through a test piece of iron or steel, letting it melt the same, upon the strength of the current needed. Tested in the operation is compared with the strength of current required for the fusion of a standard piece of metal of determined degree of hardness, and of the same diameter as the piece to be tested. The hardest piece will resist longest, but melt if the current is continued sufficiently. By the aid of an ampere meter metals of varying hardness may be tabulated, so as to furnish a scale, it is said, of hardness.

That Troublesome Metal, Sodium.

To preserve sodium it is necessary to protect it from the action of the atmosphere, and to keep it in a bottle containing oil of naptha. Sodium is soft, and it is easily cut with a pair of scissors to cut it like a ball of soft tallow. If the ball is kneaded in the hand. It is lighter than water, and when placed in a basin of water floats on the top like a piece of cork. If it is disturbed it disappears and takes the form of a small brilliant sphere. Great of fervescence is also produced as it floats along, for it reduces the water to a common temperature by its contact. By degrees the small metallic ball disappears from view after blazing into flame, as shown in the cut.

COMBUSTION OF SODIUM IN WATER.

This remarkable experiment is very easy to carry out, as sodium is now easily procured at any shop where chemicals are sold. The combustion of sodium in water can be explained in a very simple manner. Water, as we know, is composed of hydrogen and oxygen. Sodium, by reason of its great affinity for the latter gas, combines with it and forms a very soluble oxide. The hydrogen is released and thrown off, as we shall perceive by placing a lighted match in the jar, when the combustible gas ignites.

The globe of sodium has a great affinity for water. It combines with it, and absorbs it in great quantities. It is a solid, white metallic substance, which burns and cauterizes the skin. It is also alkaline, and brings back the blue color to litmus paper that has been reddened by acids. Sodium combines readily also with chlorine. If plunged into a jar containing this gas it is transformed into a substance which is sea salt. We know that caustic soda, or oxide of sodium, is an alkaline product possessing very powerful properties; it burns the skin and destroys organic substances.

A NEW ANTISEPTIC.

Which a French Physician Says is Cheap, Powerful and Not Injurious to Linen.

Dr. Barlioz, of Grenoble, announces in a paper read before the French Academy of Medicine a new antiseptic called sulrodiase, which is composed of 75 per cent. of naphtholate of sodium and 25 per cent. of naphthol and phenyl compounds. According to The Lancet, it is a white powder soluble in three parts of water, and the solution, which is clean, is said to possess considerable antiseptic powers, without being toxic or caustic or injurious to instruments or linen.

The antiseptic properties of microcidine, while inferior to those of corrosive sublimate or naphthol, surpass those of carbolic and boracic acids ten and twenty times, respectively. Microcidine is eliminated by the kidneys, and is antipyretic. M. Polaillon, who has experimented with this new agent largely as a dressing to recent and other wounds, utilizing as a dressing, after a preliminary cleansing of the raw surface with a 3 per cent. solution, gauze soaked in the same and covered with a layer of oil silk and a thick pad of cotton wool, reports excellent results.

Why the Baby Cries.

A baby does most of its crying because he is hungry. The cry of thirst, while not frequent, is invariably taken for grief, anger or sleepiness, and the mother spends hours petting and rocking the youngster when a tablespoonful of cold water would make him perfectly happy. Aside from the cry caused by hunger, thirst and teething there are almost as many other cries as there are infantile disorders.

For instance, there is the expiratory moan in pneumonia and the husky cry that follows the coughing; then is the broken cry in croup, bronchitis and pleurisy; the continuous cry of earache; the shrill cry, accompanied by a drawing up of the legs, in stomach ache; the screaming and writhing of the hips in intestinal pain, irritability of the bladder; the whining cry of meningitis, when the baby fancies a bright light, and there is the silent cry when the muscles of the face contract, but some mechanical obstruction of the air passages occurs and there is not enough strength to produce sound. The above is Dr. Sumner A. Mason's explanation, as reported in the New York World, of why a baby cries.

Simple and Useful Lotions.

As a wash for tender feet, swelled joints and chilblains (when the skin is not broken), one ounce of sal ammoniac to a pint of water is said to be excellent.

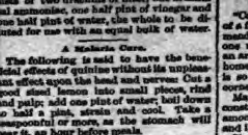
A nice lotion to protect the face from the heat of the sun is tincture of benzoin one part to forty parts rose water.

To allay itching in some cutaneous affections a very pleasant application consists of the freshly expressed juice of a lemon diluted with four or five times its bulk of water, to which a few drops of cologne have been added or the same quantity of rose water. This is very cooling.

A popular remedy for a black eye consists of two drachms of nitre, one drachm of sal ammoniac, one half pint of vinegar and one half pint of water, the whole to be diluted for use with an equal bulk of water.

A Malaria Cure.

The following is said to have the beneficial effects of quinine without its unpleasant effect upon the head and nerves: Cut a good sized lemon into small pieces, rind and pulp; add one pint of water; boil down to half a pint, strain and cool. Take a teacupful of it before meals, the stomach will bear it, an hour before meals.



GOOD FORM.

A Few Items About the Correct Thing in Invitations—Calls, Etc.

According to the best social form, as stated in The Housekeeper, very young ladies do not invite guests, especially gentlemen, in their own names. If the mother is not living all invitations should be written in the father's name, although an elderly sister presiding over the house may issue the invitation in her own name.

It is not at all a correct thing to invite a lady to an "at home" until after you have first called on her in a formal manner, and the visit has been returned.

Calls made on reception days where a guest is staying are not binding upon the guest to return, and no separate card is left for a guest on a reception day, although each caller leaves a card for the hostess, to serve as an after call. This card is also necessary to assist the hostess in remembering all who have called.

A young lady enters the room at the right of her chaperon. In escorting each other ladies never offer or take the arm. The host and hostess retain their post of reception during the whole evening. After a brief interchange of salutations the guests pass on to give place to others.

Invitations to "at homes" do not require an answer unless one is requested; in this case an immediate reply must be sent. No such words as "regrets," "accepts," etc., should be written on a card; a full reply should be written on a sheet of note paper or on a card made for the purpose.

A half hour is the conventional time for the guests to remain at a reception.

The "Too Frank" Individual.

We hear much of people who are "too frank." These destroyers of the peace of mind of friend and foe alike pride themselves on the fact that they are "nothing if not candid," and "always say just what they think." Marion Harland assures us, however, in The Housekeeper's Weekly, that this is not truthfulness, and that the utterances of unnecessary and unkind criticism, however honest, is impertinence amounting to insolence. When your "frank friend" (?) tells you your gown does not fit, that you dress your hair in such an unbecoming manner, that your management of your household is not what it should be, she takes an unwarrantable liberty. If traced back the source of these remarks would be found, in a large percentage of instances, in a disagreeable temper, captious humors, and a spirit that is anything but Christian. One may be entirely truthful without bestowing gratuitous advice and admonition.

Tasteful Corner Arrangements.

"Corner decoration" may be somewhat of a fad just now, but it is certainly a commendable one. In the corners of a room one may give dainty touches and exercise an artistic perception which shall render it homelike, cheery and inviting. Nothing is so ugly and stiff looking as a bare corner.

Many pretty corner furnishings are being constantly devised. Unusually attractive among these are the following, suggested and illustrated by Good Housekeeping.

Since it is no longer the custom to keep one's china in a closet, a corner is just the place for a cabinet, where the various pieces may be displayed. Its shelves should be lined with heavy Indian red paper, a color which sets off china to the best advantage, and pretty silken curtains, hung on a slender brass rod, would add to the effect.

A CHINA CORNER.

This corner will be of especial interest to the ladies, for surely there is no woman who does not delight in this dainty ware? In fact, it may be said of the average woman:

China's the passion of her soul.
A cup, a bowl, a dish
Can kindle wishes in her breast,
Inflame with joy or break her rest.

A hanging mirror is another highly effective in lightening a dark corner of a parlor. Let it be draped in some artistic manner with soft yellow or pale blue silk, caught up here and there with delicately tinted bows of different shapes. A tall palm, or a little table on which is a bowl of flowers, so placed as to be reflected in the mirror, would give a pleasing effect.

One of the little bamboo tea tables so popular just now, with its white cloth and tiny cups and saucers, makes a charming corner, giving an air of hospitality which nothing else in the room can give. They are both pretty and inexpensive, and come in several sizes.

White Sauce.

As all sauces are made on the same lines, this one will serve to show the method: For three or four people take a spoonful of flour and one or two ounces (according to how rich you want the sauce to be) of butter; stir steadily over the fire till the butter is perfectly amalgamated with the flour; then add half a pint of boiling water and a little salt, stirring all the time. Let it cook for a few minutes, then run it through a fine sieve into the same bowl, which should have been previously warmed. Just before it is sent to table, beat up with a little lemon juice and strained, be added to this sauce when taken off the fire it becomes French melted butter—in other words, "sauce blanche."

Plain Lemon Pie.

Three eggs, one cup of sugar, one of cold water, two teaspoonfuls of flour, the juice and the rind of one lemon.

DOOMSDAY IN COURT.

JOHN TUCKER SENTENCED TO THE COUNTY JAIL.

Beckman and Wiley Sent to State Prison for Ten Years.—Other Cases and Scenes in Court Saturday.

The Union county court room was again thronged Saturday with people to hear the judgment of the court in the cases of John Tucker, convicted of embezzling funds of the Singer Manufacturing Company, and Samuel Beekman and Jennie Wiley, who were found guilty of manslaughter in causing the death Pearl Beekman.

Tucker occupied a front seat with his bondsman, Mr. Ulrich, and several other friends near by. His was the first case moved for sentence, and when Tucker was called forward, his counsel, Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, briefly addressed the court in a plea for leniency. He said that in addition to the petition submitted to the court, he wished to call attention to several other facts. He spoke of the previous unblemished reputation of the prisoner, and the eminent respectability of his family.

Mr. Voorhees also gave to the court a certificate from seven of the jurors stating that they did not believe Tucker was willfully guilty.

MOVED FROM STATE PRISON.

Judge McCormick briefly conferred with his associates, and then addressing Tucker said:

"After a very careful trial, in which you were defended by legal ability equal to any in the county, you were convicted, and I cannot refrain from saying that as a member of the court I acquiesce with that verdict. With an experience of over thirteen years in court I came to the conclusion from the manner of your defence, that you were guilty, and I fully acquiesce with the verdict.

"You occupied a high position with the Singer Company, and had you continued in proper conduct with them, it cannot be told how high you might have gone in the employ of that company.

"You have betrayed their confidence and have committed a crime that the community at large look upon as a very serious one. The court has decided to set an example in your case. To let such an offense go by unpunished would be a neglect of duty to the State and the community. The court must show that such crimes cannot be permitted in this State. The sentence therefore is that you be confined for five months in the county jail."

Tucker sat down by Mr. Ulrich for a few minutes and was then called by Detective Keron and taken by Warden Dodd to the jail below.

TEN YEARS FOR BEEKMAN AND WILEY.

Prosecutor Marsh moved for the sentence of Samuel S. Beekman and Jennie Wiley for the killing of Pearl Beekman.

Mr. Leon A. Graff, counsel for Beekman, came hurriedly into court when the prisoners were arraigned, and asked a delay of judgment to give him time to prepare a bill of exceptions and stay of proceedings on the grounds of the illegality of Mr. Marsh officiating as prosecutor while holding the office of State senator.

Mr. Marsh objected to any delay for the reason that he was going South next week, and he could not see that injury would be done to the prisoners if sentenced preceding the action of the Court of Errors. They would simply have to wait in jail until February, pending the court's decision.

Judge McCormick said the court would pass sentence, and would allow the prisoners to be retained by the sheriff for ten days until Mr. Graff could prepare his bill of exceptions.

Mr. Gilbert R. Lindsay, counsel for Jennie Wiley, made an argument for a new trial, but the motion was refused.

The prisoners were then told to stand up. Beekman did not show any emotion, but Jennie Wiley was pale, and trembled while the court was pronouncing judgment.

Judge McCormick said that the prisoners had had a fair trial, and the jury had convicted them after a great deal of patience in the consideration of the case.

He concurred with the verdict, and was satisfied by the evidence that both of the women aided to a great degree in causing the death of the child. All that was left for the court to do then was to pass sentence.

The judgment was pronounced on Beekman first, and was that he be confined in State prison at hard labor for ten years.

A like sentence was imposed on Jennie Wiley. When the final words of the judge were uttered, the prisoner gave vent to her pent up feelings. She reeled forward with a piercing shriek, but was caught by an officer and carried from the room. Her cries could be heard in the court room, and she was conducted to the prison.

JOE SIMMONS SENT TO STATE PRISON.

Joseph Simmons pleaded guilty to an assault on his wife, Minnie, and he was sentenced to State prison for one year. Simmons had been before the court on several occasions.

PRIZE FIGHTER LUYSTER PLEADS.

Daniel Luyster the light-weight pugilist who fought with Quinn at Trembly was arraigned on an indictment for prize fighting. He pleaded not guilty and was bailed for trial in October. Ex-chief of fire department George W. Devlan became bondsman for Luyster in the sum of $800.

SENT TO THE REFORM SCHOOL.

Charles Bradford Donaldson, the nine-year-old boy charged with an assault on his mother, was next arraigned and tried. The only witnesses were ex-Chief Keron and the boy's father, who testified to the confession of the defendant. Mr. John J. Lowden, Counsel for the young prisoner, objected to his conviction on the evidence unsupported by circumstances.

The court held the objection good, and did not enter a conviction against the boy, but under a law giving him the authority sentenced young Donaldson to the reform school.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The Largest Graduating Class in Several Years.

This is commencement week. The graduating exercises of the Plainfield High School will be held in Music Hall on Thursday evening. Dr. H. K. Carroll will deliver the address to the graduates. Afterwards will come a reception in Assembly Hall. Classes '89 and '90 will tender it to the graduates.

The exercises in Music Hall will be notable for two reasons, the class, twenty-four in number, is the largest to graduate in several years, and the valedictorian honors are for the second time in the history of the school in the hands of a young man. Alfred G. Killmer of Bound Brook. Mr. Killmer's essay will be on the subject of "Public Benefactors."

Here is a complete list of the graduates. The Misses Titsworth, Larkin and Dunham and Mr. Wilson are of Dunellen. The Misses Carroll, Nevius and M. F. Thompson are of North Plainfield. All the others are residents of Plainfield. Alice Jennings Carroll, Margaret Ray Cory, Martha A. Covert, Lucy Vail Dunham, Edith Laura Gilbert, Eudora Onderdonk, Grant, Harriette Rice Hallway, Amy S. Hyer, Hannah Lilian Larkin, Anna Beatrix Murphy, Marian Barcroft Nevius, Mary Sumner Patten, Mary Forbes Thompson, Margaret Simpson Thompson, Lucy Maud Titsworth, Erilena J. Van Court, Fred. Allen Daboll, Frank Hastings Flannery, Arthur Fraleigh Freeman, Alfred G. Killmer, Louis Gilbert Newman, Auguste Leopold Saltzman, Frederick Green Smith, Howard Stillman Wilson.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Warren Mission by invitation, unite with the Hope Chapel Society at their regular meeting to-night.

—A party of Y. M. C. A. members will take a bicycle run to Westfield to-morrow (Tuesday) evening. All who desire to join the party are requested to leave their names with Mr. Charles C. Dilts, or at the Association rooms.

—Colonel Rhodes and his adjutant will visit this city next Thursday evening and will drill Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Malta. The drill will take place in the Hall of the Gesang and Turning Society.

—The Epworth League will hold its closing sociable for the Summer at Vincent chapel to-morrow, Tuesday evening. An enjoyable time is expected, and all members and friends of the League are cordially invited to be present.

—The people at Belmar are reported highly pleased to think that the First Baptist Sunday school of Plainfield are coming on July 2d, to their beautiful beach, and extensive arrangements are being made to make special arrangements to entertain them handsomely.

—There was a large attendance at the regular meeting held at the Warren Union Mission last evening after the usual service of song. The meeting was conducted by Mr. Wm. Hayward and by Mr. Nugent, both from the Florence Mission of New York. The service throughout was interesting. Over twenty-five persons in response to invitation expressed a desire to become professing Christians.

Councilmen in a Boulevard Saloon.

Councilmen Smith and Spangenberg spent a portion of Saturday evening in Goff's saloon in the Boulevard in company with Thomas Dowd.

It will be remembered that Policemen Giese and Kiely were summoned to the Boulevard one night last week to arrest persons engaged in a street fight, and that before the police reached the scene the combatants were spirited away.

It will also be recalled that when the police did arrive and ordered some street loafers to move on Dowd abused them and refused to obey until they forced him to, using no more force than was necessary. Then he had the police arrested on charges of assault and battery, and bound over to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Dowd has been arrested and convicted several times for disorderly conduct and fined, and the police regard him as anything but a peaceable, law-abiding citizen.

After the distinguished trio had spent some time in the saloon, they visited ex-Policeman Nick Kelly's, where they remained awhile longer.

The police look upon the visits as intended to try and injure them. Possibly. We are not aware of the trio being distinguished as lovers of peace and good order. But we think the police will not be deterred from doing their duty, but forgetting that public opinion sustains them, and will soon be rid the present incubus.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC GATHERING AT RAHWAY.

Several Hundred Young Church People Listen to a Report on Christian Work.

The conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union took place Friday evening in the Second Presbyterian church, at Rahway, and was an enthusiastic and interesting meeting. The large edifice was filled with the delegates who attended in large delegations from societies in all parts of the county.

This city had a representation of about one hundred and fifty. The members of the Third Presbyterian went in the train, and the societies downtown in large stages wagons. The last Baptist society had two stages, the Marshal street Presbyterian and Methodist Protestant each one large stage.

The Plainfield, Cranford and Westfield, delegations also went in stages, each drawn by four horses.

The societies were fully represented. The singers in the local societies formed a chorus of many voices, and by a quartette choir opened the conference with a praise service.

Devotional prayers followed, and Mr. Henry M. Woodruff, president of the Rahway Christian Endeavor Union, welcomed the delegates from out of the city.

President Martin, of the County Union, briefly responded, and the three minute reports of the presidents of the societies were made. The reports were all interesting, showing growth in membership and advancement in all lines of work. Most of the societies reported additions to the church membership through the instrumentality of the society. It was also shown that the young people are being inspired to helpfulness in all departments of Christian work, hiding the church in all its interests, and doing much for missions. After the reports, the quartette sang "Come, Holy Spirit." Three excellent papers full of helpful, suggestions, were read. These were as follows: "Punctuality in Y. P. S. C. E.," by Miss Florence G. Rawking, of Plainfield; "The Social Committee," by Miss Harriet M. Squire, of Rahway (read by J. H. Williams); "The Committee's Reponsibilities," by Miss Carrie Meddaugh, of the East Baptist Society of Elizabeth.

The hymn "To the Word," was sung, the whole assembly rising and singing with much enthusiasm.

Rev. L. B. Dyott, of the Mill Street Methodist Protestant church, and acting pastor of the new church in Elizabeth, was introduced and made an eloquent and forcible address on "Our Work and its Present Needs."

It was late when Mr. Dyott began, but he held the attention of every one in the large audience, and at the conclusion there was given to him an unmistakable expression of appreciation of his helpful words in enthusiastic applause, and a rising vote of thanks.

He stated the work of the members of the Christian Endeavor Society "to be to do all the good they can, to as many people as they could, and as long as they could. First of all, the work is to win souls to Christ, and then to discover the latent talent and develope the Christian character of the members." He said "there was no dearth in the church. There are more brains and more strength on the side of God than on the side of Satan." He illustrated one purpose of the society by speaking of a man finding a gold mine on his farm. The Y. P. S. C. E. discovered the gold mine in the church.

In speaking of the needs he said the church needs better workers. He had no doubt of the final triumph of the church, but in the present age it needs better workers. The Y. P. S. C. E. is the West Point of the church. It is where the soldiers are being trained.

He then spoke of the need of preserving the inter-denominational relations and the need of faithful pledge keeping. Fellowship, consecration and cheerful Christian workers. His remarks were very happily illustrated, and it was one of the best addresses the Union County Christian Endeavorers ever listened to.

Following the addresses a few minutes was given to a business session, during which officers for the coming year were unanimously elected as follows:

President, George W. Cross, of Westfield; vice-presidents, George G. Teller, of Cranford; Mrs. J. Anderson Fraser, of Elizabeth; E. E. Anthony, of Plainfield; secretary, William B. Hamilton, of Elizabeth; treasurer, W. C. Hope, of Roselle.

Vice-President Teller was introduced and after thanking the conference for the honor, pledged until the close.

Rev. Dr. Liggett made a brief address, inviting the delegates to enjoy the hospitality of the local societies and after the benediction all marched to the lecture room, where a collation was served, and a most delightful social time had.—Elizabeth Journal.

A Clam Bake.

Yesterday afternoon Charles Schanz and Aaron Brower entertained their friends at a clam bake on the outskirts of the city. Mr. Shanz is a bartender, and took along eight kegs of beer. The party was drenched by the rain and in order to dispose of the beer, which there was no use compelled to seek a secluded spot in Mr. Brower's barn. Last evening persons standing at the corner of Front street and Park avenue were disgusted to see people returning from the above mentioned place in a condition that looked as though every hotel and saloon in the city kept an open place on Sunday.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS VICTORIOUS ON SATURDAY LAST.

"Freddie" Jones Disabled.—Bonner Substituted. — Features of the Game.

The Seton Hall College team was the opponent of the Crescents in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon. A large crowd was present.

Hammill pitched for the Crescents and his work was very effective. He struck out nine men. In the second inning, however, he was not well supported and the visitors put four runs to their credit. The Crescents, as yet, had made no runs, and the result looked dubious.

In the same inning Freddie Jones, the catcher for the home team, was hit on the right hand by a "foul tip" and the result was very painful. It cut the finger, but Freddie continued to catch. Before the inning was over, however, he was compelled to quit, and "Little" Bonner was substituted in his stead. It proved to be a good substitution. "Fred," as he is termed by his intimate friends, caught an errorless game. He proved to be the right person in the right place, and his "stock" went up 100 per cent. In fact one of his admirers claimed that it was through his efforts that the Crescents won. Well, it looked so, for before he had caught two innings the Crescents made four runs and the visitors were retired in one, two three order.

The game throughout was very interesting, and the college team was one of the best that has visited Plainfield this season. They conducted themselves as gentlemen, and consequently there was not the usual wrangle on the field. Umpire Berryman gave satisfactory decisions. The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Seton.....	0	4	0	0	0	0	0	1	0—5

STATE CHARITIES' AID SOCIETY.

An Effort to Perfect the Organization of a Somerset County Branch.

In addition to the county branches of the State Charities' Aid Association already existing in eight or more counties, an effort is being made to organize in Somerset. One meeting has been held at the residence of Mr. H. P. Reynolds, 71 Washington avenue, another in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A. church. Both meetings were addressed by Mrs. R. Williamson, Jr., General Secretary. A committee in organization has been appointed and will report at a meeting to be called in October. This committee embraces the following names:

Messrs. E. St. John, H. B. Wells, Frank Curtis, H. P. Reynolds, of North Plainfield, and Rev. Addison Parker, Mrs. J. D. Bartine, Hon. J. J. Bergen of Somerville.

The work of county organization will be pushed until it covers the State, and perhaps not until then will people understand how practical and beneficent are the objects of the "Charities' Aid." Backed by the power of the State it turns the light upon all charitable and penal institutions to the encouragement of all that is good, to the dismay of all that is evil, approved by worthy officials, feared by the unworthy, it offers to the public a means for protection, and it protects the interests of the tax-payer. Its work is done without noise and at small expense. It does not add to the list of public charities, but it tends to lessen it by the enforcement of methods.

The people of Somerset will not remain far behind those of Union and Morris in so good a cause as this society represents.

An account of the practical benefits resulting from the movement now initiated will appear in due season.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson of New York city are visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Richter of North Plainfield.

Miss Susie Stafford of Brooklyn is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Taynor, of 56 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. Edward Terry of Westfield and Miss Georgiana Tolson of North Plainfield were married recently. Mr. and Mrs. Terry will reside in the Borough.

Agnes, wife of George Bold, died at her home on Stebbins place, yesterday. The funeral will take place from her late residence, to-morrow afternoon at half-past two o'clock.

Mrs. Winchester of New York, an experienced and pleasure-loving traveller, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Hilaire Obits of Somerset street, North Plainfield, for a few weeks, preparatory to an extended tour through the western States, to be followed by a Winter in Europe.

New Officers.

At a meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, Knight of Pythias, held Friday evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

P. C.—M. Barick.
C. C.—E. Ommert.
V. C.—G. Clarke.
P.—J. Blimm.
M. A.—J. Heidelof.
Trustee—A. D. Pope.

Base Ball Notes.

The West Ends defeated the Allertons in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon. The score was 9 to 1.

The Rahways defeated the Ridgewoods Saturday by a score of 19 to 0.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[In this column expressions of opinion from readers of THE NEWS are always welcomed, even if contrary to the views of the editor. Writers are requested to be as brief and direct as possible, however, and must always enclose their names not necessarily for publication.]

Mr. Moran Speaks.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In looking over last Friday's Press I saw myself maliciously slandered, as leaving my post of night-watchman, on East Front street, without giving due notice of same to my employers. Some evil disposed person took the liberty of endeavoring to injure me before the community.

I have been more than seven years employed as night watchman, on the same beat. I was never, during that time off duty, only two nights, and those by permission. My salary being small, I concluded to leave on the first of June, so notified all in due time.

On the 5th of June I went to Philadelphia to see my sister whom I have not seen since the war. I wanted to have a couple of days rest, and on my return on the 20th I was astonished at the report spread broad-cast through Plainfield about me.

I have yet to find out whether any of my employers can say that I neglect my duty. I am living in this neighborhood since 1868.

Hoping, dear sir, that you will do me full justice through your valuable and popular journal, I remain, yours respectfully, FRANCIS MORAN.

BOOMING BOUND BROOK.

Several New Enterprises That Are to Be Located There.

The large buildings used by the Shackelton Car-Heating Company at Bound Brook before its suspension have been bought by the American Engine Company, of Buffalo. In addition to the large plant there is in course of erection another immense building. The purchases of land amount to about one hundred acres, and it is possible still further additions will be made to the plant.

Dr. Pierce, also of Buffalo, has within a month purchased land here on an extensive scale. It is understood the doctor will build a branch of his renowned Buffalo laboratory here. As yet it is impossible to give exact details as to the size and nature of the buildings to be erected, but judging from the immense purchases of land made they will be on an extensive scale. It is said 100 cottages will be built to accommodate the employees in both places. This means a good-sized increase in the population of the town, and is viewed with favor by the business people.

The railroad and water facilities at this point are such as to encourage manufacturers of all kinds to locate here. Three lines of railroad pass through the town, and south of these flow the Raritan river and canal side by side, affording shipment direct and efficient service in every direction.

A canning factory, which when completed will give employment to fifty or sixty persons, is in course of erection. A large two-story brick building, thoroughly fire-proof, has taken the place of the big wooden structure of the Graphite Lubricating Company at the corner of Maine and Church streets.

The fire system established three years ago is a perfect one. Pipes from the reservoir, which is on the mountain, furnish a plentiful supply of water at all times. The town is lighted by electricity from the plant at Somerville.

Mayor Whiting has inaugurated improvements such as the betterment of which will tend largely to beautify the residential portion of the town.—N. Y. World.

New Officers of the Knights of Honor.

The following were elected at the last regular meeting of Easter Lodge, Knights of Honor, of this city:

Past Dictator—Thos. B. Cone.
Dictator—C. C. Burnett.
Vice Dictator—Chas. Van Winkle.
Assistant Dictator—H. M. Demarest.

HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

When Mrs. Chauncey M. Depew wants her husband to dine at home she has to invite him beforehand and engage his company just as she would that of any other guest, to feel sure that he will not be off making dinner speeches for somebody else. There is at least one advantage in this, at any rate. Being a guest in his own house, Mr. Depew will never dare to complain of the soup or roast.

The invention of the bicycle has improved the country roads of America as nothing else ever did. It has been found, too, that these roads belong to some extent to the flying wheelers that they are annoyed thereby no more than by an ordinary wagon. Moreover, the bicycle is developing that love of outdoor life which it is said need of American people of both sexes. Finally, it is also degrading American calves magnificently.

The rumor that an English paper dares to voice toward criticising the gambling heir to the British throne is contained in the following words from the London Times. "We almost wish the Prince of Wales had signed an agreement that he would never touch a card again." Suppose now it had been shown that the son of President Harrison habitually carried with him a "gambling outfit and used it, too, on his travels and visits, what in turn it would be said America would not have been large enough to hold that president's son, and the president himself would have had to resign on account of the scandal. Yet the whole English press is so restrained by what is called loyalty that it does not dare speak out in plain words about the baccarat scandal. Next time a Briton boasts that England is as free as America remind him of the Gordon-Cumming lawsuit.

An Agricultural Paper's View.

The Rural New Yorker has, among other things, this to say of the new People's party:

The convention has either made a blunder or has taken a wise political step. History alone will show which name its action deserves.

From a purely theoretical point of view the times are ripe for a new party with new issues and new leaders, but unless these issues are founded on justice and unless the leaders are men who have a common sense of the people will support there will be a halt in the cause of true reform. A third party is often a good thing, but when the other two parties are both wrong the chances are against success. The issues that we are those that need to be discussed and hammered, because pounding wearies and hovering just hides that true gold.

So far as practical politics is concerned, the new party must evidently be called upon to answer the charge that it is a Democratic annex. Its leaders will tell us that the earth will float give the People's party any electoral votes. They also know that there is nothing in their platform to attract Prohibitionists or other temperance men. It is also likely to be charged with being organized for the purpose of destroying the Republican party. The party building the most of the "capitalists and monopolists." These charges must be met and fought, if it does not already realize the fact that its items of are such that a combination of both old parties against it is not impossible.

The Heresy of Dr. Briggs.

The Christian Union calls attention to the fact that there are really two questions to be decided in the case of Professor Briggs. One is the question whether he is a heretic. That is to be decided by trial before the presbytery next winter. The general assembly of the Presbyterian church vetoed his transference from the chair of Hebrew to that of Biblical theology in Union Theological seminary. Whether the assembly had the right to do this is the other question. The assembly claimed this right. Union Theological seminary denied it. Then the assembly appointed a committee to confer with Union Theological seminary to ascertain for certain whether it had this right. The report that was finally adopted, therefore, in one clause disapproved of the appointment of the biblical professor, and in another appointed a committee to find out whether it had the right to veto it. This is the summing up of the case by the editor of The Christian Union.

The Christian Union further criticises the report and throws light on the contest, that will be interesting to the public as follows:

Two circumstances will operate very seriously to affect the moral effect of this report and the action had upon it. Princeton Theological seminary and Union Theological seminary have represented the two schools characteristically united in the Presbyterian church—Princeton, the old school, and Union, new school and progressive, although its former professor of systematic theology was seven years older than Professor Charles Hodge. The relations between these seminaries have been somewhat strained, so much so that The Presbyterian Journal has urged that the joint control of the two seminaries, had to be abandoned. It naturally would be easier to bring Union Theological seminary into disrepute, and send its students away from it, they would, from geographical and theological reasons, naturally go to Princeton, its nearest neighbor and its closest competitor.

Under these circumstances it cannot but be regarded by the world at large as a matter of singular indelicacy that the moderator of the general assembly, himself a Princeton professor, should have appointed the president of Princeton college as the chairman of the committee to whom the case of the Union Theological seminary and of Dr. Briggs would naturally be referred, and that there should not have been on that committee a single member to represent the views—as will not say the interests—of Union Theological seminary. In effect, Princeton seminary, through its officials, has had the shaping of the report upon the question of the direction and administration of its competitor, not to say its rival theological institution. The principles of ecclesiastical politics such a condition of affairs could hardly exist.

RUMORS OF A CONFLICT

French and Siamese Governments Involved.

HOLLAND TO WELCOME WILLIAM.

Great Preparations Making for His Reception in the Old Dutch Capital. They Will Show Their Loyalty and Friendship.

LONDON, June 22.—A dispatch from Calcutta states that war is threatening in Asia between the French and Siamese. The Annamites, who are tributary to Siam, have been driven from their homes by Siamese troops on the banks of the Mekong, and the Siamese are engaged in ravaging the territory claimed by the French to be within their jurisdiction. Nothing has been heard of M. Pavie, a French officer, who, with a party of assistants, was engaged in adjusting the boundary line, and strong apprehension is felt that he may have fallen a victim to Siamese hostility. Should this be the case direct hostilities between France and Siam are more than probable, especially as the Siamese feel but little disposed to make any concession. German and English influences are powerful in Siam, and the Germans and English at home and in all governments have also, after careful examination, signified their intention of adopting this system.

A SHERIFF'S NARROW ESCAPE.

A Tennessee Desperado Instantly Killed While Resisting Arrest.

NASHVILLE, June 22.—Walter Woolard, a desperate character, who instantly killed at Know College by Deputy Sheriff Jones, of Trousdale county. Woolard was arrested a few days ago on the charge of having stolen a mule belonging to his cousin, Haynes Blaylock, a farmer residing near Gallatin, Sumner county, and in default of bail was placed in jail at Gallatin to await trial. Woolard made his escape from jail on Monday night, and, proceeding to the home of a relative, procured a shotgun and made his way to Trousdale county.

Sheriff Terry, of Sumner county, immediately notified the journals of Woolard, and learning that the fugitive was heavily armed, sent to Gallatin for assistance. Deputy Sheriff Franklin and Constable Frank were sent in the relief of Sheriff Terry, who in the meantime had notified the sheriff of Trousdale county to be on the lookout for Woolard.

Deputy Sheriff Jones began a search for Woolard, and came upon him in a store at Know College. Upon being ordered to surrender, Woolard raised his weapon at Jones, who seized the gun barrel. A desperate struggle for the possession of the gun followed. Woolard was about to get the best of Jones, when the latter drew his pistol and fired. The bullet entered Woolard's stomach and he fell to the ground a corpse. Woolard was twenty-one years old and well connected.

Threw His Son Overboard.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Among the passengers on the steamer La Bretagne, which arrived here yesterday, was the Feys family, consisting of the father, mother and a son and daughter, the latter being aged respectively eighteen and fourteen years. When they left Nancy, France, there were five in the family, but the fifth, Pierre, aged five, was the victim of the father's insane act and now lies at the bottom of the Atlantic. On the morning of June 15 Feys suddenly seized the little fellow from the deck and threw him far out into the sea. The vessel was quickly stopped and a boat lowered, but no trace of the boy could be found. The father was placed in irons, but on the arrival here was found that he had gone stark mad. He was placed in a straitjacket, and on arrival here was turned over to the police.

Killed by Unknown Parties.

WINSTON, N. C., June 22.—A double murder occurred in this city at 4 o'clock Sunday morning. John Smith and Wilburn Walker got into a difficulty with some unknown parties and sought shelter in the house of Henry Golzs, a colored man. They were pursued and fired upon, the first shot killing Mary Goins. Walker returned the fire, and Smith, who was between Walker and his pursuers, was shot four times. Smith and the woman died instantly. The unknown parties have escaped.

Sensational Shooting.

PITTSBURG, June 22.—A very sensational shooting affair occurred at McKeesport on Saturday, resulting in the death of William Meyers and the serious injury of Mrs. Virtus Harding. Meyers, who was married, became infatuated with Mrs. Harding, and when she refused to elope with him he shot her twice in the breast. He then put a bullet into his own head, dying almost instantly. Mrs. Harding will recover.

Cheers for Parnell.

CHICAGO, June 22.—James J. O'Kelly, M. P.; William Redmond, M. P., and Henry Harrison, M. P., addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of Irish-Americans at Central Music hall Saturday. Every reference to Parnell was loudly cheered. Thursday, a shower of sympathy message received by Mr. O'Kelly, which read, "Parnell will visit Chicago in the autumn."

Money Lost and Recovered.

BUFFALO, June 22.—Superintendent Maxwell, while waiting for the New York express at Batavia, set his valise containing a quantity of money in one corner of the waiting room. John Crowley came into the depot, picked up the valise and jumped upon a train pulling out for Attica. Four thirty was recovered as Graw alighted from the train.

Poor Place for Money.

BROOKLYN, June 22.—Mrs. C. Steubing, of George street and Evergreen avenue, placed $700 in the oven of her range for safekeeping. Saturday she found it necessary to light a fire in the range. When the fire blazed up she suddenly thought of her money. Opening the oven, she found that the bills had been reduced to ashes.

The Jury Disagreed.

BUFFALO, June 22.—The jury in the case of Mary Ann Cunningham against Dr. Scott Skinner, of Leroy, and Dr. George Herrmann, of Avon, to recover $5,000 for alleged malpractice, reported that they were unable to agree.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv

PORTER WILL NOT RESIGN.

The Superintendent of the Census Says the Work Is Progressing Satisfactorily.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Superintendent Porter denies emphatically the truth of the published report that the census bureau work is blockaded and swamped and its appropriation exhausted, and that therefore he is discouraged and intends to resign. He says he has no intention of resigning until the work of the eleventh census is completed. As to the work of the bureau being blockaded, there is no truth whatever in the statement, but on the other hand it is in perfect condition, well advanced, with ample appropriations and unexpended to carry the work on for another year, or as far as congress expected it would be carried with the appropriations already made.

Superintendent Porter is more than pleased with the progress made thus far. Two volumes will be ready for the printer next month. The volumes embodying the population statistics of minor cities will be ready for the printer by Aug. 1 and the first 500 pages of the population compendium will go to the printer about the middle of August. By July 31 the tabulating cards will be ready and then it will be necessary to dispense with the services of a few clerks now employed in the population division. The system adopted for collecting population statistics has given satisfactory results, and after a test of 200 days, after a careful examination by Canadian officials, was adopted by the government for use in the taking of the next census of Canada. Austrian and Australian governments have also, after careful examination, signified their intention of adopting this system.

BIG RAILROAD WRECK.

An Excursion Train Dumped Into a Ditch.

ONE KILLED AND FORTY INJURED.

One of the Injured Died After Being Taken to a Hospital and Many Others Not Expected to Recover—Cause of the Wreck Unknown.

CLEVELAND, June 22.—A terrible wreck occurred on the Nickel Plate railroad of the New York, Chicago and St. Louis thirteen miles west of Cleveland yesterday afternoon. The West Side Street Railway company gave an excursion to Oak Point for the benefit of their employes. There were two trains consisting of ten cars each. The first section left on time at 2.30. The second section was delayed and did not leave Cleveland until about 3 o'clock.

The Train Ditched.

When three miles west of Dover the second section jumped the track, ditching eight of the rear cars. Seven of the cars were overturned and four of them were torn into splinters. Many women and children were caught under the debris. About forty were badly hurt.

One Man Killed.

Edward Rogers was killed. He was horribly mangled, his head being crushed into a pulp, one arm partly severed and his breast crushed. Rogers was an employe of the Cleveland Burial Case company and at one time was a professional ball player on the Toronto (Ont.) team. His body was taken to Koehler's undertaking rooms.

Partial List of the Injured.

Burt Keeds, aged eighteen, skull fractured, legs hurt; will probably die.

Peter Redon, aged twenty-one, foot crushed and wound in jaw.

S. M. Clark, aged twenty-six, ribs broken.

Thomas Grantly, badly bruised and internal injuries.

Edward Sheppard, aged twenty-three, right leg crushed and hurt internally.

William Stephenson, aged thirty-four, scalp wound and one leg crushed.

Lizzie Ray, aged twenty-six, hip badly bruised.

Charles Quirk, aged twenty-four, cut in the back and badly bruised.

Ernest Stenberger, aged twenty-three, scalp wound.

W. J. Hempstreet, aged seventeen, right arm broken and leg bruised.

One More Dead.

Ten or twelve were fatally injured, but their names could not be learned owing to the confusion which reigned among employes. Every ambulance in the city was called, and met the special train that went out for the injured. They were taken to different hospitals. A man taken to University hospital died last evening. Many women and children had their arms broken and were otherwise badly hurt.

John Higgins, newsboy, was so badly hurt that he could not give a clear account of the wreck, but says the train was running very fast when it left the track. His clothes were torn nearly off, his face cut, and he was badly bruised about the body.

Engineer and Fireman Escape.

The engine buried itself in the ditch, but the engineer and fireman saved their lives by jumping. The cars rolled down the embankment into the shallow ditch, which was filled with muddy water, and the passengers were covered with mud, and as nearly every one was bleeding from some reason, it was difficult to tell how badly they were hurt.

The Cause of the Wreck Not Known.

The car next to the engine was smashed into splinters, and all who were in this car were seriously injured. There were at least twenty who had to be carried from the special train that brought them to Cleveland, and the Nickel Plate union was pressed fifteen or more. It is not known what caused the train to leave the track, but it is supposed the track spread.

FOLLOWED HER LITTLE ONES.

Their Death Made Mrs. Klentz Despondent and She Took Paris Green.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Mary Klentz, a Hungarian, aged thirty-six, died yesterday morning from the effects of paris green taken with suicidal intent. Several years she had been employed as a housekeeper by Victor Klesack, who lives on the second floor of the tenement house at No. 105 Pitt street, and according to his statement she has been very despondent since the death of her two little children, about two months ago, and frequently threatened to end her life.

Saturday evening she visited all her intimate friends in the house, asked them to forgive her if she had ever done anything wrong to them, and said that she was going away and would never return. She then retired to her room and took the paris green, from the effects of which she suffered intensely until yesterday, when death came to her relief. During the whole time she gave no intimation of what she had done, and her employer, thinking her illness was simply cramps, did not summon a physician until it was too late to do any thing toward saving her.

German Turners' Festival.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 22.—The St. Louis societies, eight in number, which are to participate in the festival of the Fourth Circuit of the North American Turnerbund, have arrived, making a total of twenty-four societies now represented. An imposing street parade was held—and the exercises on the fest begun. A reception was given the visitors at the Exposition hall, Mayor Sullivan and Herman Leiber delivering addresses.

Two Men Killed.

CLINTON, Mo., June 22.—The Kansas City, Osceola and Southern passenger train bound for Kansas City was derailed three miles this side of Osceola. The engine went into the creek, which was at the end of a sharp curve. Engineer Leightner, of Kansas City, and A. H. Crandall, a mechanic, were instantly killed and several of the passengers were slightly injured.

Big Fire in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—The G. H. Thomas ton Manufacturing Co.'s drying house, Second and Sydney streets, was totally destroyed by fire. The Larkin-Schaeffer chemical works suffered only a slight damage to their buildings. The Thomasson Manufacturing Co.'s loss is $30,000; fully insured.

An Extensive Failure.

DUBUQUE, Ia., June 22.—The firm of Walters & Hodges, doing business under the name of the Dubuque Brass and Metal company, has failed. There are large eastern creditors of the firm. The total liabilities will aggregate $[illegible]. The gross assets are not over $75,000.

DOLLY DAVIS NOT DEAD.

At Least That Is What She Says—Was It a Mistake?

NEW YORK, June 22.—The World has an article saying Dolly Davis, the well known variety actress reported to have been drowned, is not dead. Under ordinary circumstances this announcement would not create the least surprise, but it was Sunday afternoon that a jury, impannelled by Coroner Sutton, of Hoboken, held an inquest over the body of the unfortunate and beautiful young girl whose corpse was found floating off a brickyard at Croton Saturday morning, and came to the verdict that the dead girl was none other than Dolly Davis.

Witnesses who had known the variety performer for years—in fact, since childhood—went before Coroner Sutton and swore that they believed the girl to be Miss Davis. The affair is one of the most remarkable cases of mistaken identity which can be brought to mind.

But Dolly Davis walked into the reporters' room in the big dome of the Pulitzer building yesterday and astonished those present by announcing herself. Much surprise was created at her appearance on the morning after the well published columns about her death, but the little woman only laughed a gurgling laugh and assured the reporters that the world did not see nothing like than a most remarkable mistake.

Now comes the question. As the coroner's jury has made a mistake, and Dolly Davis is alive, who is the unknown girl? Who is the mysterious "M. E. J.?" These letters were signed to a note found in the pocket of the suicide. Why did the young girl end her life?

If the girl was not a resident of the vicinity of Tarrytown why did she ask to be buried in Hastings cemetery? It is certainly strange that no one has missed her, that no word has come from any quarter about her.

STRUGGLE WITH A SNAKE.

A Dealer in Reptiles Has a Rather Unpleasant Experience.

NEW YORK, June 22—H. Haile is a dealer in all kinds of animals at 246 Grand street, Williamsburg. Recently he received a boa constrictor, which he says he keeps confined in a room in the rear of his store. A few days ago he received an order from a circus for the largest of the lot, one some fourteen feet in length. He prepared to ship the large snake and carried it in a bag to the front part of the store, where he could work to better advantage. Unknown to Haile, the bag in which he carried the reptile had a hole in it, and through this the snake finally crawled, having been thoroughly aroused. Haile's daughter stood near by and the boa sprang directly at her. Her screams startled her father, who was preparing the box, and in an instant the reptile was wound around with both feet upon the snake's head. A terrific struggle followed between man and snake. It wound about Haile's arm and neck. The man fought desperately to loosen the folds of the snake, and finally managed to stun it sufficiently to coax the coils about his arm and neck to relax. He then placed it in the box. Haile's arm was much discolored and bruised from the terrible pressure. Though Haile has handled these reptiles for years he never had such an experience before. He thinks his escape from death miraculous.

Novel Way of Collecting a Debt.

PUEBLO, Colo., June 22.—A constable of the town of Eads, Kiowa county, held up the Missouri Pacific express for three hours. The salary of an employe of the road had been garnished by a citizen of Eads, but the company had neglected to settle, and the matter was placed in the hands of the constable. When the express stopped at Eads the constable boarded the car of the engine and served papers attaching the same. Nearly three hours were spent in telegraphing the superintendent of the road, who finally ordered the payment of the money demanded by the constable. A postal inspector was on the delayed train, and it is likely that suit will be brought against the constable for interfering the mails.

Says He Was Cured by Faith.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Charles H. Weeks, an expert accountant of this city, was injured by falling from a railroad train last November, since which time he has been an inmate of the County hospital here, appearing suffering from a serious nervous trouble, which physicians were unable to name or cure. On Friday a number of revivalists and "Christian Workers" began a series of meetings on the Western Springs, a suburb of this city. Weeks was among the sick and crippled people who were taken to the place of meeting. It is said he was at once suddenly restored to health through faith.

Locomotive Engineers Meet.

CONCORD, N. H., June 22.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers held their meeting here yesterday. This is the first time the organization has met in this state. About 1,100 members were in attendance and nearly half as many ladies. Among the prominent members were Chief Arthur, Grand Secretary Sargent, P. M. Stevens, of Boston; L. M. Butler, of Providence; S. F. Keane, of the New London division; E. Hall, of the Fitchburg division; N. E. Green, master mechanic, and N. S. Lawrence, of New London.

Killed by Lightning.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—During a severe electrical storm, John Humphreys was instantly killed by lightning. Humphreys and his family and brother were sitting in a bedroom watching the storm. Becoming dark Humphreys stepped to the window to raise the curtain, when an awful flash came and he fell to the floor. His brother was badly shocked and a little daughter was knocked down.

Hamilton Republicans Campbell.

CINCINNATI, June 22.—The Democratic primary elections for delegates from Hamilton county to the state convention were held Saturday. The issue was between Campbell and Neal. Mr. Miller, of the board of elections, said that not a single Campbell delegate of the seventy had been elected.

A Postoffice Destroyed by Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 22.—The postoffice at McLannahan Springs, Ala., together with the records, letters, stamps, etc., was burned Saturday night. The stock of goods in the store where the postoffice was kept was also burned. The fire was of incendiary origin.

J. E. M'DONALD DEAD.

Another Once Prominent Democratic Statesman Gone.

A SKETCH OF HIS PUBLIC LIFE.

He Was One of the Most Notable Figures in National Politics—His Presidential Ambition Was Not Satisfied—His Platform.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 22.—Ex-Senator McDonald died at 11:35 o'clock last night.

With Joseph Ewing McDonald there passes away one of the most notable figures in national politics. For over a half century has the greatest of old time Hoosier Democrats after Hendricks been before the people. McDonald was born in Butler county, O., Aug. 29, 1819, and his father died when he was an infant. When he was only eleven years old McDonald was apprenticed to a saddler. To this fact is due his sobriquet, "Old Saddlebags."

Took to Studying Law.

In the "thirties" McDonald determined to secure a collegiate education and become a lawyer. He was graduated in 1842 from the Asbury university, and four years later was admitted to the bar. After serving three years as attorney general he was sent to congress.

He served only one term in the house, being beaten for a return by Oliver P. Morton. He then became ambitious to go to the senate, and undertook the reorganization of the Democratic party in his state, which had been sadly demoralized during the war.

Elected Senator.

He was made chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and in 1874 the Democrats captured the legislature by a fair majority. In return for his services McDonald was elected to the United States senate and took his seat March 4, 1875. He held it for six years. During his term he made himself very popular socially.

His home at the national capital was a resort for senators and congressmen. Mrs. McDonald had been a widow before becoming the senator's bride. The senator acted as her counsel in proceedings which resulted in an absolute separation from her former husband, and the Hoosier Democrat shortly afterward married her.

Presidential Aspirations.

Few men of more intense partisanship than McDonald ever entered the senate. His platform was, as repeatedly expressed by him, was: "Jacksonian Democracy and Free Trade." Recently, however, when his party adopted the shibboleth of free silver, McDonald embraced every possible occasion to denounce the scheme to degrade the American dollar by making eighty cents worth a hundred cents. McDonald had a strong following in the 1884 and 1888 Democratic presidential conventions. Many Indianians favored his nomination for the presidency in 1884.

The national bosses of the party wouldn't listen to it, but put up Cleveland, with Hendricks for second place. Four years later he was pressed for the vice presidency, but Indiana was ignored. Since that disappointment the ex-senator has devoted himself to business.

McDonald's face and form were known from one end of the country to the other. He was tall, of powerful, chunky build and weighed at least 250 pounds. His cheeks were chubby and his head was bald except for a circular fringe of snowy curls that decorated it just above the ears.

Bound, Gagged and Dead.

DELANO, Minn., June 22.—The body of Annie Brunder, aged thirteen, was found a few rods from the railroad track between Montrose and Waverly. She lived about a quarter of a mile from Montrose, and had been to school and was returning home Thursday evening when she was assaulted. Her parents supposing she had spent the night with friends were not anxious about her until Friday evening came, when they became alarmed and at once instituted a search. When found her hands were tied behind her, her feet tied together and her apron tied tightly around her face. Suspicion points strongly toward John Maaue, a fifteen-year-old boy, of Montrose.

A Well Known Lady Dead.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Miss S. B. Packard, well known as one of the founders of the Spelman seminary, at Atlanta, Ga., died here Sunday. Miss Packard was on her way from Atlanta to her home in Massachusetts, and arrived here last Thursday. She was taken suddenly ill soon after leaving Atlanta, and when she reached Washington was unable to proceed further. Her remains were sent on to Massachusetts.

Robbed His Employers.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Inspector Byrnes received a dispatch from the chief of police of Columbus, O., saying that J. Arthur Safford, a clerk in Cumming & Rothe's stationery store there, had stolen $1,000 from the safe and left for New York. Detectives Mulry and Mulvey arrested Safford in Fourteenth street Saturday night and was remanded to await the arrival of requisition papers.

Footpad Quesada Sentenced.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 22.—John Quesada, alias John Gilandia, a relative of some of the most prominent Spanish families in southwestern Texas and Mexico, has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor for holding up a clerk in the San Antonio ice factory and robbing him of seventeen dollars.

Seven People Drowned.

BALTIMORE, June 22.—A number of colored people employed as berry pickers on truck farms in Anne Arundel county clambered into a rowboat and paddled out into the stream at Curtis bay. The women became badly frightened, and during the excitement the boat was capsized and seven persons were drowned.

Bishop-elect Nicholson May Accept.

MILWAUKEE, June 22.—At All Saints' cathedral yesterday Dean Williams read a letter from Bishop-elect Nicholson, of Philadelphia, in which the latter said he would be here this week, and would then give his final decision as to his acceptance of the election as bishop. The feeling here is that he will accept.

Molders' Union Will Assist.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Molders' union No. 209 decided that they would aid the architectural iron workers in their strike by refusing to do any molding in the architectural line in the foundries. This order goes into effect today and practically makes a strike of 2,500 men engaged in that class of work.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

A deficit of $81,000 is shown in the public accounts of Prince Edward Island for last year.

An engine on the Nashette narrow guage road, about ten miles west of Willow Springs, Mo., ran into a push car containing eleven employees. Denis Kantzner and Fred Eberles were instantly killed and W. W. Rishman severely injured. The other eight men escaped by jumping.

Frank Mulock, of Newark, N. J., who has spent fifty of his eighty years in prison, was sent to jail for ninety days by Justice Preisel.

Joseph Barton, a farmer, was drowned in the Hackensack river at New Bridge, N. J., while bathing.

The slaughterhouse of Jacob Schlesmaer, on the Kearney road, Harrison, N. J., was destroyed by fire, involving a loss of $10,000.

Charles Woodruff, a farmer at Gifford's, S. I., has been missing from his home for the past three weeks. He is a man of about forty-three years, medium build, has gray hair and brown mustache.

Pasquale Delto, an Italian saloon keeper at 104 South Canal street, Newark, was arrested for assaulting the thirteen-year old daughter of Abraham Guenstone with a stick and breaking her leg.

To Sell a Railroad.

TOLEDO, June 22.—A meeting of railroad men which has more than ordinary interest has been in session at Lima, O. Among those who attended were the men representing President Van Horne, of the Canadian Pacific Railroad company; an agent of Governor David B. Hill, of New York; Dudley Farlin, of Albany, N. Y., and several capitalists from New York and Chicago. The object of the gathering was the formation of the Toledo and Western railroad to a syndicate. The syndicate is composed principally of Canadian Pacific people, Governor Hill and Mr. Farlin. John Wanamaker is also thought to be interested in it. It is said that the Canadian Pacific designs to build from Detroit to the new purchase and thus gain an entrance into Chicago, for which it has long been seeking.

Arrested for Burglary.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Asa Dixon, of Elizabeth, N. J., was arrested at Bridgeport, Conn., on Saturday by the Staten Island police to answer to indictments on account in the first degree and burglary. In September last Dixon, with a number of companions, burglarized the cabin of a yacht lying at Mariner's harbor. As he was about to sail away with the plunder he was discovered and pursued by the Staten Island police. Dixon had a rifle on board and fired several shots at a police man, but missed his mark. He succeeded, however, in escaping. He was indicted by the Richmond county grand jury.

Fish Killed by Thousands.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 22.—A singular mortality among food fish has shown itself in the waters of the Connecticut river and Holyoke, Conn., and Holyoke since the last storm. Thousands of these, consisting of black bass, shad, sturgeon, pickerel, bullhead and lamprey eels, lie in still water upon the west shore, between West Springfield and Holyoke, and emit a vile odor along the banks, while vast quantities have floated down the stream. The matter is to be investigated by the state fish commissioners.

Drowned with Her Two Babies.

DUNNVILLE, Ont., June 22.—Mrs. David Clark went out one day on an errand Saturday and then, taking her two young children in her arms, jumped into the river and all three were drowned. When the bodies were recovered the two little ones were still tightly clasped in the mother's arms. Her husband disappeared about a year ago, leaving a note saying that he would never return.

The President at Church.

CAPE MAY, June 22.—The president, with his guests, attended divine service in the morning at Beadle's Memorial chapel, Cape May Point. The president spent the afternoon at his cottage. He intends to return to Washington on Tuesday.

Quite a Find.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A nugget of gold weighing thirty-five pounds has been found in the gold district recently discovered in British Guiana, and has been sent to England as a specimen of the auriferous deposits of that colony.

The Match Off.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—The California Athletic club has declared the fight between Mayer and Mahan off on account of Mahan's illness, and awarded Mahan $200 forfeit. The fight was to have come off July 29.

In the Hands of a Receiver.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 22.—The Topeka Packing House Market, Dowding & Whitlock, proprietors, is in the hands of a receiver. The liabilities are $88,191, and assets about the same.

Weather Indications.

Generally warmer and fair.

RUMORS OF A CONFLICT

French and Siamese Governments Involved.

HOLLAND TO WELCOME WILLIAM.

Great Preparations Making for His Reception in the Old Dutch Capital. They Will Show Their Loyalty and Friendship.

LONDON, June 22.—A dispatch from Calcutta states that war is threatening in Asia between the French and Siamese. The Annamites, who are tributary to France, have already come to blows with Siamese troopsion the banks of the Mekong, and the Siamese are engaged in ravaging the territory claimed by the French to be within their jurisdiction. Nothing has been heard of M. Pavie, a French officer, who, with a party of assistants, was engaged in adjusting the boundary line, and strong apprehension is felt that he may have been a victim to Siamese hostility. Should this be the case direct hostilities between France and Siam are more than probable, especially as the Siamese feel but little disposed to make any concession. German and English influences are both powerful in the Siamese court and have valuable contracts that would be disastrously affected by war. The king of Siam, however, is believed to be desirous of peace, and has ordered his troops on the frontier to abstain for the present from any aggressive course.

Turkey Insolent.

From Constantinople comes the news that the porte refuses to be intimidated by the threats of the French embassy into hasty action in the matter of the recent riots at Jerusalem between the Greeks and Roman Catholics, in which the Turkish military police took the side of the Greeks. The French ambassador sent a peremptory demand for redress on behalf of the Catholics. Now protector France claims to be. The porte, however, ignores the French interference and is going about the investigation in a deliberate way.

The Dutch to Welcome the Kaiser.

Great preparations are being made at Amsterdam for the reception of Kaiser William, who will visit that city on his way to England. The Hollanders propose to show their friendship for Germany in a way that the kaiser will remember, and the old Dutch capital will witness the most brilliant spectacle it has seen in the century. Before starting for Amsterdam the kaiser will be present at the launch of a new large cruiser at Wilhelmshaven, the latest addition to the Imperial navy.

The Guelphs Not Popular.

The kaiser has put his foot down sternly against the Guelph party. Dr. Hanover, which has of late been assuming considerable boldness on account of the relationship of the kaiser to the house of Guelph, belonging to the queen and his presumed sympathy on that account. The kaiser, while avowedly proud of the Guelph connection and considering himself a member of that house, has given it to be understood that he will not tolerate any disparagement of Prussian supremacy in Hanover, and any agitation there among officials favorable to the Guelph movement must be sternly repressed.

Willing to Let It Drop.

The Liberal party in parliament is unfavorable to the pose was herring of the baccarat scandal by the questions which Mr. Henry Peyton Cobb, Liberal member of parliament for Rugby, proposes to ask in parliament today.

THE DETECTIVE MAY DIE.

Injured While Attempting to Arrest Marsh, of Keystone Bank Fame.

ASBURY PARK, June 22.—Detective Freeman, of Philadelphia, it is thought, will not survive the injuries he received Friday night at Spring Lake while trying to arrest a man there who was believed to be Gideon W. Marsh, president of the Keystone bank, of Philadelphia, who is a fugitive from justice. The cottage in which it was supposed Marsh was hiding is owned by his intimate friend, Harry H. Yard.

Detective Attorney Graham, of Philadelphia, had an interview with Freeman, during which the latter said he was sure Marsh had been at the cottage and that he saw him himself last Wednesday on the beach near Como. He said he did not arrest him then because he was sure of his game, and thought it would be better to take him in the cottage. It is believed that Marsh escaped from the cottage by going through the woods. Officers are scouring the surrounding country, and it is hoped that the fugitive will be arrested before long.

To Race for $25,000.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Walcott & Campbell, owners of Pesarra, sent a challenge to Green B. Morris, owner of Strathmeath, the Derby winner, to run a race against Strathmeath over the Derby course on a dry track with a wager of $25,000 that Pesarra would be the winner. Mr. Campbell proposed that the race take place before the Fourth of July at Washington park. Morris declined the offer, saying that Strathmeath was a candidate for the Realization stakes, run in July 1 at Sheepshead Bay, and that his horse stood a good chance of winning $30,000. He did not propose, therefore, to run the risk of losing a race before the event at Coney Island. If the offer was still open after the Sheepshead meeting he would accept.

Crops Damaged by Storm.

EFFINGHAM, Ills., June 22.—The southern part of this county was visited by a cyclone Saturday afternoon, crops, orchards and farm buildings suffering severely. John Grace's two-story house was blown down and John Wellenkamp's house and all outbuildings. John Bearman, a farmer, was struck on the head by a flying timber and fatally hurt.

Ordained to the Priesthood.

BALTIMORE, June 22.—Bishop Curtis, of Wilmington, Del., presided over the semiannual ordinations which took place in the chapel of St. Mary's seminary. A large number of candidates were ordained to the priesthood and minor orders of the Catholic church. Today the feast of the priesthood will be celebrated with great pomp.

Will Go Out of Business.

STOCKTON, Cal., June 22.—The Alta Insurance company will shortly go out of business after a life of three years. The directors have accepted an offer of the Connecticut company to reinsure the Alta's risks, and as soon as its affairs are satisfactorily arranged the company will be dissolved.

PORTER WILL NOT RESIGN.

The Superintendent of the Census Says the Work Is Progressing Satisfactorily.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Superintendent Porter denies emphatically the truth of the published report that the census bureau work is blockaded and swamped and its appropriation exhausted, and that therefore he is discouraged and intends to resign. He says he has no intention of resigning until the work of the eleventh census is completed. As to the work of the bureau being blockaded, there is no truth whatever in the statement, but on the other hand it is in perfect condition, well advanced, with ample appropriations yet unexpended to carry the work on for another year, or as far as congress expected it would be carried with the appropriations already made.

Superintendent Porter is more than pleased with the progress made thus far. Two volumes will be ready for the printer next month. The volume embodying the aggregate population of minor cities will be ready for the printer by Aug. 1 and the first 500 pages of the population compendium will go to the printer about the middle of August. By July 31 the tabulating cards will be ready and then it will be necessary to dispense with the services of 1,000 clerks now employed in the population division. The system adopted for collecting population statistics has given satisfactory results, and only a few days ago, after a careful examination by Canadian officials, was adopted by the government of Canada in taking a census of that country. The Austrian and Australian governments have also, after careful examination, signified their intention of adopting this system.

A SHERIFF'S NARROW ESCAPE.

A Tennessee Desperado Instantly Killed While Resisting Arrest.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—Walter Woolard, a desperate character, was instantly killed at Know College by Deputy Sheriff Jones, of Trousdale county. Woolard was arrested a few days ago on the charge of having stolen a mule belonging to his cousin, Haynes Blaylock, a farmer residing near Gallatin, Sumner county, and in default of bail was placed in jail at Gallatin to await trial. Woolard made his escape from jail on Monday night, and, proceeding to the home of a relative, secured a shotgun and made his way to Trousdale county.

Sheriff Terry, of Sumner county, immediately started in pursuit of Woolard, and learning that the fugitive was heavily armed, sent to Gallatin for assistance. Deputy Sheriff Jones responded, and Sheriff Frankes went to the relief of Sheriff Terry, who in the meantime had notified the sheriff of Trousdale county to be on the lookout for Woolard.

Deputy Sheriff Jones began a search for Woolard, and came upon him in a store at Know College. Upon being ordered to surrender, Woolard leveled his weapon at Jones, who seized the gun barrel. A desperate struggle for the possession of the gun followed. Woolard was about to get the best of Jones, when the latter drew his pistol and fired. The bullet entered Woolard's stomach and he fell to the ground a corpse. Woolard was twenty-one years old and well connected.

Threw His Son Overboard.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Among the passengers on the steamer La Bretagne, which arrived here yesterday, was the Feys family, consisting of the father, mother and a son and daughter, the latter two aged respectively eighteen and fourteen years. When they left Nancy, France, there were five in the family, but the fifth, Pierre, aged five, was the victim of his father's insane act and now lies at the bottom of the Atlantic. On the morning of June 15 Feys suddenly seized the little fellow from the deck and threw him far out into the sea. The vessel was quickly stopped and a boat lowered, but no trace of the boy could be found. The father was seized by several of the crew, when it was found that he had gone stark mad. He was placed in a straitjacket, and on arrival here was turned over to the police.

Killed by Unknown Parties.

WESTON, W. Va., June 22.—A double murder was committed in this city at 1 o'clock Sunday morning. John Smith and Wilburn Walker got into a difficulty with some unknown parties and sought shelter in the house of Henry Golma, a colored man. They were pursued and fired upon, the first shot killing Mary Golma. Walker ran out the front door, while Smith was between Walker and his pursuers, was shot four times. Smith and the woman died instantly. The unknown parties have escaped.

Sensational Shooting.

PITTSBURG, June 22.—A very sensational shooting affair occurred at McKeesport on Saturday, resulting in the death of Wilbur Mayers and the serious injury of Mrs. William Harding. Mayers, who was married, became infatuated with Mrs. Harding, and when she refused to elope with him he shot her twice in the breast. He then put a bullet into his own brain, dying almost instantly. Mrs. Harding will recover.

Cheers for Parnell.

CHICAGO, June 22.—James J. O'Kelly, M. P., and Timothy M. Healy, M. P., and Henry Harrison, M. P., addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of Irish-Americans at the Central Music hall Saturday. Every reference to Parnell was loudly cheered. Thunderous shouts greeted a message received by Mr. O'Kelly, which read, "Parnell will visit Chicago in the autumn."

Money Lost and Recovered.

BUFFALO, June 22.—Ex-Superintendent Maxwell, while waiting for the New York express at Batavia, set his valise containing a quantity of revenue stamps out of the waiting room. John Graw rushed into the depot, picked up the valise and jumping on the train, rushing out for Attica. The property was recovered as Graw alighted from the train.

Poor Place for Money.

BROOKLYN, June 22.—Mrs. C. Steubing, of George street and Evergreen avenue, placed $700 in a savings bank, their weekly safekeeping. Saturday she found it necessary to light a fire in the range. When the fire blazed up she suddenly thought of her money. Opening the oven, she found that the bills had been reduced to ashes.

The Jury Disagreed.

BUFFALO, June 22.—The jury in the case of Mary Ann Noonan against Dr. Scott Skinner, of Leroy, and Dr. George Herrmann, of Avon, to recover $5,000 for alleged malpractice, reported that they were unable to agree.

If you are a victim of any kidney or bladder difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv.

BIG RAILROAD WRECK.

An Excursion Train Dumped Into a Ditch.

ONE KILLED AND FORTY INJURED.

One of the Injured Died After Being Taken to a Hospital and Many Others Not Expected to Recover—Cause of the Wreck Unknown.

CLEVELAND, June 22.—A terrible wreck occurred on the Nickel Plate railroad (the New York, Chicago and St. Louis) thirteen miles west of Cleveland yesterday afternoon. The West Side Street Railway company gave an excursion to Oak Point for the benefit of their employes. There were two trains consisting of ten cars each. The first section left on time at 2.30. The second section was delayed and did not leave Cleveland until about 3 o'clock.

The Train Ditched.

When three miles east of Dover the second section jumped the track, ditching eight of the ten cars. Seven of the cars were overturned and four of them were torn into splinters. Many women and children were caught under the debris. About forty were badly hurt.

One Man Killed.

Edward Rogers was killed. He was horribly mangled, his head being crushed into a pulp, one arm partly severed and his breast crushed. Rogers was an employe of the Cleveland Buggy Co. company and at one time was a professional ball player on the Toronto (Ont.) team. His body was taken to Koehler's undertaking rooms.

Partial List of the Injured.

Burt Keefe, aged eighteen, skull fractured, legs hurt; will probably die.

Peter Rooks, aged twenty-one, foot crushed and wound in jaw.

S. M. Clark, aged twenty-six, ribs broken.

Conrad Grantly, badly bruised and internal injuries.

Mary Beady, aged twenty, ribs broken and internal injuries.

Edward Sheppard, aged twenty-three, right leg crushed and hurt internally.

William Stephenson, aged thirty-four, scalp wound and one leg crushed.

Lizzie Ray, aged twenty-six, hip badly bruised.

Charles Quirk, aged twenty-four, cut in the back and badly bruised.

Ernest Schrieger, aged seventeen, right arm broken and leg bruised.

One More Dead.

Ten or twelve were fatally injured, but their names could not be learned owing to the reticence of the hospital employes. Every ambulance in the city was called, and met the special train that went out for the injured. They were taken to different hospitals. A man taken to University hospital died last evening. Many women and children had their arms broken and were otherwise injured.

John Higgins, newsboy, was so badly hurt that he could not give a clear account of the wreck, but says the train was running very fast when it left the track. His clothes were torn nearly off, his face cut, and he was badly bruised about the body.

Engineer and Fireman Escape.

The engine buried itself in the ditch, but the engineer and fireman saved their lives by jumping. The cars piled down the embankment six feet into the ditch, which was filled with muddy water, and the passengers were covered with mud, and as nearly all were bleeding from cuts received, it was difficult to tell how badly they were hurt.

The Cause of the Wreck Not Known.

The cars next to the engine was smashed into splinters, and all who were in them are seriously injured. There were at least twenty who had to be carried from the special train that brought them to Cleveland to the ambulances, which numbered fifteen or more. It is not known what caused the train to leave the track, but it is supposed the track spread.

FOLLOWED HER LITTLE ONES.

Their Death Made Mrs. Klentz Despondent and She Took Paris Green.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Mary Klentz, a Hungarian, aged thirty-six, died yesterday morning from the effects of paris green taken with suicidal intent. For several years she had been employed as a housekeeper by Victor Klosch, who lives on the second floor of the big tenement house at No. 108 Pitt street, and according to his statement she has been very despondent since the death of her two little children, about two months ago, and frequently threatened to end her life.

Saturday evening she visited all her intimate friends in the house, asked them to forgive her if she had ever done anything wrong to them, and said that she was going away and would never return. She then retired to her room and took the paris green, from the effects of which she suffered intensely until yesterday, when death came to her relief. During the whole time she gave no intimation of what she had done, and her employer, thinking her ill was very attentive, did not summon a physician until it was too late to do anything toward saving her.

German Turners' Festival.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 22.—The St. Louis societies, eight in number, which are to participate in the festival of the Fourth Circuit of the North American Turnerbund, have arrived, making a total of twenty-four societies now represented. An impressive parade was held and also the exercises of the fest begun. A reception was given the visitors at Exposition hall, Mayor Sullivan and Herman Leiber delivering addresses.

Two Men Killed.

CLINTON, Mo., June 22.—The Kansas City, Osceola and Southern passenger train bound for Kansas City was ditched three miles this side of Osceola. The engine went into the creek, which was at the end of an abrupt curve. Engineer Leightner, of Kansas City, and A. H. Crandall, a mechanic, were instantly killed and several of the passengers were slightly injured.

Big Fire in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—The G. H. Thomasen Manufacturing Co.'s drying house, Second and Sydney streets, was totally destroyed by fire. The Larkin-Schaeffer chemical works suffered only a slight damage to their buildings. The Thomasen Manufacturing Co.'s loss is $50,000; fully insured.

An Extensive Failure.

DUBUQUE, Ia., June 22.—The firm of Walters & Rodgers, dating business under the name of the Dubuque Brass and Metal company, has failed. There are large creditors of the firm. The total liabilities will aggregate $75,000. The gross assets are not over $75,000.

DOLLY DAVIS NOT DEAD.

$4 Loaned That Is What She Says—Was It a Mistake?

NEW YORK, June 22.—The World has an article saying Dolly Davis, the well known variety actress reported to have been drowned, is not dead. Under ordinary circumstances this announcement would not create the least surprise, but it was Sunday afternoon that a jury, impaneled by Coroner Sutton, of Peekskill, held an inquest over the body of the unfortunate and beautiful young girl whose corpse was found floating off a lighthouse at Croton Saturday morning, and came to the verdict that the dead girl was none other than Dolly Davis.

Winnie Wilson who had known the variety performer for years—in fact, since childhood—went before Coroner Sutton and swore that they believed the girl to be Miss Davis. The affair is one of the most remarkable cases of mistaken identity which can be brought to mind.

But Dolly Davis walked into the reporters' room in the big dome of the Pulitzer building yesterday and astonished those present by announcing herself. Much surprise was created by her appearance when the morning papers had published columns about her death, but the little woman only laughed a gurgling laugh and asserted in her broken brogue the whole affair was nothing else than a most remarkable mistake.

Now comes the question. As the coroner's jury were badly fooled, and Dolly Davis is alive, who is the unknown girl? Who is the mysterious "M. E. J."? These letters were signed to a note found in the pocket of the suicide. Why did the young girl end her life?

If the girl was not a resident of the vicinity of Peekskill she will be sent to be buried in that particular cemetery? It is certainly strange that no one has missed her, that no word has come from any quarter about her.

STRUGGLE WITH A SNAKE.

A Dealer in Reptiles Has a Rather Unpleasant Experience.

NEW YORK, June 22—H. Haile is a dealer in all kinds of animals at 246 Grand street, Williamsburg. Recently he received a number of boa constrictors, which he keeps confined in a room in the rear of his store. A few days ago he received an order from one of the largest of the lot, one some fourteen feet in length. He prepared to ship the large snake and carried it in a bag to the front part of the store, where it was to lie in wait for him.

Unknown to Haile, the bag in which he carried the reptile had a hole in it, and through this the snake finally crawled, having been thoroughly aroused. Haile's daughter stood near by and the boa sprang directly at her. Her screams startled her father, who was preparing the box, and in an instant he grappled with the serpent and both feet upon the snake's head. A terrific struggle followed between man and snake. It was a question with Haile's arm and neck. The man fought desperately to loosen the folds of the snake, and finally managed to stun it sufficiently to cause the coils about his arm and neck to relax. He then placed it in the box. Haile's arm was much discolored and bruised from the terrible pressure. Though Haile has handled these reptiles for years he never before had such an experience before. He thinks his escape from death miraculous.

Novel Way of Collecting a Debt.

PUEBLO, Colo., June 22.—A constable of the town of Esda, in Kiowa county, held up the Missouri Pacific express for three hours. The salary of an employe of the road had been garnished by citizens of Esda, but the company had neglected to settle, and the matter was placed in the hands of the constable. When the express agent was asked to hand over the boodle the cab of the engine and several papers attaching the same. Nearly three hours were spent in telegraphing the superintendent of the division, who finally ordered the payment of the money demanded by the constable. A postal inspector was on the delayed train, and the unlucky man will be brought against the constable for interfering the mails.

Says He Was Cured by Faith.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Charles H. Weeks, an expert accountant of this city, was injured by falling from a railroad train last November, since which time he has been an invalid. Mr. Weeks, apparently suffering from a serious nervous trouble, which physicians were unable to name or cure. On Friday a number of revivalists and "Christian" workers began a series of meetings at Western Springs, a suburb of this city. Weeks was among the sick and crippled people who were taken to the place to be prayed for, and he says he was suddenly restored to health through faith.

Locomotive Engineers Meet.

CONCORD, N. H., June 22.—The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers held their meeting here yesterday. This is the first time the organization has met in this state. About 1,100 members were in attendance and nearly half as many ladies. Among the prominent members were Chief Arthur, Railroad Commissioner F. A. Stevens, of Boston; L. M. Butler, of Providence; F. P. Elsom, of the New London division; E. L. Bemis, chief of the Fitchburg division; N. E. Green, master mechanic, and N. S. Lawrence, of New London.

Killed by Lightning.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—During a severe electrical storm John Humphreys was instantly killed by lightning. Humphreys lived with his family and brother were sitting in a bedroom during the storm. Becoming dark Humphreys stepped to the window to raise the curtain, when an awful flash came and he fell to the floor. His brother was badly shocked and a little daughter was knocked down.

Hamilton Repudiates Campbell.

CINCINNATI, June 22.—The Democratic primary elections for delegates to the Hamilton county to the state convention were held Saturday. The issue was between Campbell and Neal. Mr. Neal, after the board of elections, said that not a single Campbell delegate of the seventy had been elected.

A Postoffice Destroyed by Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 22.—The postoffice at Mountain Springs, Ala., together with the records, letters, stamps, etc., was burned Saturday night. The stock of goods in the store where the postoffice was kept was also burned. The fire was of incendiary origin.

George Francis Train at Cairo.

CAIRO, June 22.—George Francis Train has arrived here on his journey around the world. He has been forty-two days on the voyage, and expects to complete his task by reaching Tacoma in sixty days from the time of starting.

J. E. M'DONALD DEAD.

Another Once Prominent Democratic Statesman Gone.

A SKETCH OF HIS PUBLIC LIFE.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 22.—Ex-Senator McDonald died at 11:35 o'clock last night.

With Joseph Ewing McDonald, there passes away one of the most notable figures in national politics. For over a half century he was the greatest of all the Hoosier Democrats after Hendricks been before the people. McDonald was born in Butler county, O., Aug. 29, 1819, and his father died when he was an infant. When he was only eleven years old McDonald was apprenticed to a saddler. To this fact is due his sobriquet, "Old Saddlebags."

Took to Studying Law.

In the "thirties" McDonald determined to secure a collegiate education and become a lawyer. He was graduated in 1840 from the Asbury university, and four years later was admitted to the bar. After serving three years as attorney general he was sent to congress.

He served only one term in the house, being beaten for a return by Oliver P. Morton. He then became ambitious to go to the senate, and undertook the reorganization of the Democratic party in his state, which had been sadly demoralized during the war.

Elected Senator.

He was made chairman of the Democratic state central committee, and in 1874 the Democrats captured the legislature by a fair majority. In return for his services McDonald was elected to the United States senate and took his seat March 4, 1875. He held it for six years. During his term he made himself very popular socially.

His home at the national capital was a resort for senators and congressmen. Mrs. McDonald had been a wife before becoming the senator's bride. The senator acted as her counsel in proceedings which resulted in an absolute separation from her former husband, and the Hoosier Democrat shortly afterward married her.

Presidential Aspirations.

Few men of more intense partisanship than McDonald ever entered the senate. His platform then, as repeatedly expressed by him, was: "Jacksonian Democracy and Free Trade." Recently, however, when his party shouted the shibboleth of free silver, McDonald embraced every possible occasion to denounce the scheme to degrade the American dollar by making eighty cents worth a hundred cents. McDonald had a strong following in the 1884 and 1888 Democratic presidential conventions. Many Indianians favored his nomination for the presidency in 1888.

The national bosses of the party wouldn't listen to it, but put up Cleveland, with Hendricks for second place. Four years later he was pressed for the vice presidency, but Indiana was loyal. Since that disappointment the ex-senator has devoted himself to his profession.

McDonald's face and form were known from one end of the state to the other. He was tall, of powerful, chunky build and weighed at least 250 pounds. His cheeks were chubby and his head was bald except for a circular fringe of snowy curls that decorated it just above the ears.

Bound, Gagged and Beat.

DELANO, Minn., June 22.—The body of Annie Brunner, aged thirteen, was found a few rods from the railroad track between Montrose and Waverly. She lived about a quarter of a mile from Montrose, and had been to school and was returning home Thursday evening when she was assaulted. Her parents supposing she had spent the night with friends were not anxious about her until Friday evening came, when they became alarmed and at once instituted a search. When found her hands were tied behind her, her feet tied together and her apron tied tightly around her face. Suspicion points strongly toward John Mazue, a fifteen-year-old boy of Montrose.

A Well Known Lady Dead.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Miss S. B. Packard, well known as one of the founders of the Spellman seminary, at Atlanta, Ga., died here Sunday. Miss Packard was on her way from Atlanta to her home in Massachusetts, and arrived here last Thursday. She was taken suddenly ill soon after leaving Atlanta, and when she reached Washington was unable to proceed further. Her remains were sent on to Massachusetts.

Robbed His Employers.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Inspector Byrnes received a dispatch from the chief of police of Columbus, O., saying that J. Arthur Safford, a clerk in Cumming & Rothe's stationery store there, had stolen $1,900 from the safe and left for New York. Detectives Mulry and Malvey arrested Safford in Fourth street Saturday night and was remanded to await the arrival of requisition papers.

Footpad Quesada Sentenced.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 22.—John Quesada, alias John Glanton, a relative of some of the most prominent Spanish families in southwestern Texas and Mexico, has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor for holding up a clerk in the San Antonio & G. factory and robbing him of seventeen dollars.

Seven People Drowned.

BALTIMORE, June 22.—A number of colored people employed as berry pickers on truck farms in Anne Arundel county clambered into a rowboat and paddled out into the stream at Curtis bay. The vessel became badly frightened, and during the excitement the boat was capsized and seven persons were drowned.

Bishop-elect Nicholson May Accept.

MILWAUKEE, June 22.—At All Saints' cathedral yesterday Dean Williams read a letter from Bishop-elect Nicholson, of Philadelphia, in which the latter said he would be here this week, and would then give his final decision as to his acceptance of the election as bishop. The feeling here is that he will accept.

Molders' Union Will Assist.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Molders' union No. 209 decided that they would aid the architectural iron workers in their strike by refusing to do any molding in the architectural line in the foundries. This order goes into effect today and practically orders a strike of 2,000 men, engaged in that class of work.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

A deficit of $61,000 is shown in the public accounts of Prince Edward Island for last year.

An engine on the Nabletts narrow guage road, about ten miles west of Willow Springs, Mo., ran into a push car containing eleven employes. James Kamtzer and Thomas Cheatham were instantly killed and W. W. Richman severely injured. The other eight men escaped by jumping.

Frederick Molock, of Newark, N. J., who has spent fifty of his eighty years in prison, was sent to jail for ninety days by Justice Preisel.

Joseph Barton, a farmer, was drowned in the Hackensack river at New Bridge, N. J., while bathing.

The slaughterhouse of Jacob Schlemmer, on the turnpike road, Harrison, N. J., was destroyed by fire, involving a loss of $10,000.

Charles Woodruff, a farmer at Gifford's, S. I., has been missing from his home the past three weeks. He is a man of about forty-three years, medium build, has gray hair and heavy mustache.

Pasquale Delta, an Italian saloon keeper at 153 South Canal street, Newark, was arrested for assaulting the thirteen-year-old daughter of Abraham Guenstone with a stick and breaking her leg.

To Sell a Railroad.

TOLEDO, June 22.—A meeting of railroad men of more than ordinary interest has been in session at Lima, O. Among those who attended were three men representing President Sat Horne, of the Canadian Pacific Railway company; an agent of Governor David B. Hill, of New York; Dudley Farlin, of Albany, N. Y., and several capitalists from New York and Chicago. The object of the gathering was the formal sale of the Toledo and Western railroad to a syndicate. The syndicate is composed principally of Canadian Pacific people. Governor Hill and Mr. Wirlin John Wanamaker is also thought to be interested in it. It is said that the Canadian Pacific designs to build from Detroit to the new Panhose and thus gain an entrance into Chicago, for which it has long been seeking.

Arrested for Burglary.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Asa Dixon, of Elizabeth, N. J., was arrested at Bridgeport, Conn., on Saturday by the State Island police on a charge of burglary and assault in the first degree and burglary. In September last Dixon, with a number of companions, burglarized the cabin of a yacht lying at Mariner's harbor. As he was about to sail away with the plunder he was discovered and pursued by the Staten Island police. Dixon had a rifle on board and fired several shots at a police man, but missed his aim. He succeeded, however, in escaping. He was indicted by the Richmond county grand jury.

Fish Killed by Thousands.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 22.—A singular mortality among food fish has shown itself in the waters of the Connecticut river between Thompsonville, Conn., and Holyoke since the last storm. Thousands of these, consisting of black bass, shad, pickerel, bullheads and lamprey eels, lie in still water upon the west shore, between West Springfield and Holyoke, and emit a vile odor along the banks, while vast quantities have floated down the stream. The matter is to be investigated by the state fish commissioners.

Drowned with Her Two Babies.

BLENHEIM, Ont., June 22.—Mrs. David Clark sent her son away on an errand Saturday and then, taking her two young children in her arms, jumped into the river and all three were drowned. When the bodies were recovered the two little ones were still tightly clasped in the mother's arms. Her husband disappeared about a year ago, leaving a note saying that he would never return.

The President at Church.

CAPE MAY, June 22.—The president, with his guests, attended divine service in the morning at Beadle's Memorial chapel, Cape May Point. Mr. Boyd spent the afternoon at his cottage. He intends to return to Washington on Tuesday.

Quite a Find.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A nugget of gold weighing thirty-five pounds has been found in the gold district recently discovered in British Guiana, and has been sent to England as a specimen of the auriferous deposits of that colony.

The Match Off.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—The California Athletic club has declared the fight between Mayer and Mahan off on account of Maher's illness, and awarded Mahan $250 forfeit. The fight was to have come off July 20.

In the Hands of a Receiver.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 22.—The Topeka Packing House Market, Dawdins & White, proprietors, is in the hands of a receiver. The liabilities are $98,191, and assets about the same.

Weather Indications.

A HAIR COLORIST TALKS.

SHE HAS HUNDREDS OF WOMEN BY THE SCALP EVERY YEAR.

A Peculiar Occupation—It Is to Women What the Barber's Chair Is to Men—Patrons Are Chiefly Elderly Women Who Fear Gray Hair—About Hats.

I color hair for a living.

In the last year I have had 607 women by the scalp.

I earn about fifty dollars a week cleaning, coloring and drying wigs, but my salary is only fourteen dollars a week. Occasionally I get a quarter of a dollar, a shell comb or a well worn hair ornament from a customer; and the firm allows me to keep all the handkerchiefs, veils, fans and umbrellas that are left in the toilet room.

Women are not generous as a class, nor just as a rule. They regard me as a sort of old war horse, and accept as their due all the vitality and muscular effort I can bestow. It takes a great deal of physical force to give a head of hair a chemical bath, lather it properly and dry it in a couple of hours. I work from 9 in the morning until 5 in the evening, and when I get home I assure you I am as lame in my arms and back, and as completely used up as a washerwoman.

But there is no monotony in the business. Every customer is a study, and, my stars, how they will talk! I decide they ought to be muzzled for the protection of their families and the reputation of their husbands. The histories of New York people which I get every mouth from these hazy, hilo, reckless women would make a book of horrors that if published would give society fever and ague, chills and epsoms.

Some of the information, non-scandalous, is often amusing. For instance, the wife of a Tammany man told me that Mayor Grant had thirteen tooth brushes in his toilet room. She went through his house during a recent absence and found many things to admire.

Another lady, a pupil of Mrs. Edmund Russell, confided to me that she was a Delsarte student and had been trying to teach Bishop Potter how to pronounce the benediction, a la Delsarte. He was so very graceless in the use of his dimity draped arms and hands. She said that the distinguished bishop was very good natured about it, and was improving very much in the uplifting of his Episcopal palms.

FACTS ABOUT THE BUSINESS.

A complete change has come over the hair business in the last twelve years. Formerly gray hair was dyed and dark bleached, but neither dye nor bleach is used any more for several reasons.

One is, that the powerful chemicals needed to turn black or brown hair blond, frequently penetrate the brain and produce fever; another reason is the very trying character of the blond hair against the face. Almost no shadow or relief is thrown by white or yellow hair, and unless a woman is young and fairly good looking, with small features, the bleached wig makes her positively ugly. Most children are fair haired, but after eight or ten years nature darkens the gold to bronze, brown or auburn, and it stands to reason that if a girl of sixteen cannot wear bright yellow ringlets certainly an adult of twenty-six or forty-six should not attempt to do so.

On the stage or in the street I have a horror of a shandelier candelabres, assisted by patches and powder, any one can don a blond wig, but to appear in it in the searching rays of daylight would be madness.

Now all the hair of fashion is colored whatever shade it will take. When a woman begins to get gray she becomes alarmed and unhappy. It mortifies her to have the fact published, especially if she is a public character, with her income dependent upon personal appearance as well as talent. She may be in society, and anxious to live over again the joyous days of youth is the ambition of her children. If her wrinkles and crow's feet cannot be rubbed out by hand massage, they can at least be filled in by rice powder and cleverly arranged lace drapery of lace scarfs, dotted veils and hair fronts. It only remains to rub out the lines of silver from the back hair to convince society that her devotion is not old.

There is scarcely a middle-aged woman on the stage who has not been enlisted to color her hair, and the example set by the actresses and singers who began their career in or before the seventies, the matrons and spinsters of society have followed. I have had my hands in the hair of nearly every prominent singer and actress on the stage and have pulled the wool over the eyes of half the women in the Four Hundred set.

ALL KINDS OF HAIR.

Young women have their hair colored to imitate their elders and old women to hide the gray. Now, coloring her is pretty much like kalsomining, and unless the operator understands the art the work will be streaky. This streakiness is what does the mischief. A woman finds that instead of a copper color her hair is multi-color—chestnut, iron rust, sassafras and mud-brown alternating. This of course is annoying, and results in making the victim the habitue of the hair establishments. She not only goes from one house to another for treatment, but gives herself shampoos with washing soda, strong ammonia, lye and other preparations in the hope of getting one fast shade of red or brown.

They come to us in all stages of mottling. The hair is generally straw like or dead, the oil ducts being parched, and very frequently it is so stained that it can be stretched like the rubber stems of imported flowers.

In this business we become very well acquainted with our patrons—that is to say, with their defects, and frequently with their skeletons. Although a woman may not give us her name she will tell us gossip and random talk together and learn her identity. You would be surprised to know what very poor material society women are made of. They have no hair, no complexion, no figure, very little eyesight, and frequently manufactured teeth.

I never recall a new customer without saying to myself, "What a fool you are making of yourself!" But then, business is business, and if I were to tell the woman that a colored maze would keep her in misery, cost a great deal of money, trouble and ridicule and deceive no one but herself, I should be "bounced!" from the staff. It's no use trying to fight nature. When it's time for the silver crop it will come in spite of everything. If my little old mother was foolish enough to have her gray hair colored cow's tail red like Bernhardt's, carrot red like Patti's, or brindle brown like Fanny Davenport's, I should advise her to have her own shade restored or wear a wig. She would save time, annoyance and money. But if all the old ladies followed her example there would be no further use for a hair colorist.—New York World.

It appears that Eleanor Kirk, the well known lecturer, has opened a fancy work basket of most extraordinary capacity, for the story goes that she received a bushel of letters a day.

THE YALE BASEBALL TEAM.

Some of the Players Who Have Done Good Work.

Famous athletic colleges may come and famous athletic collegians may go, but sport at the great universities goes on forever. For three or four years a Beecher or a Stagg or a Poe is famous. Then he drops out and a new man equally great takes his place. When the Yale baseball team lost Stagg, its "prairie pitcher," the athletic witnesses were in despair. Yale would not be a factor in baseball this year, they said. But when Bowers popped up in the box and began pitching great ball, they changed their wail to a hurrah. Since then Yale has been playing with her old time vigor and dash.

CAPTAIN CALHOUN.

Bowers is a slender fellow and lacks an inch of being a six footer. He is a native of Manchester, Conn., and has been a baseball player since he was eight years old. He puts up a great game and is as cool in the box as the Prairie Stagg himself. The man who holds down the second bag for Yale is Captain Gouverneur Calhoun. He hails from Chicago, and is an experienced player and a first rate captain. He does nearly everything well, and as Yale has played at short stop, right field and second base. He and Poole have played together several years.

CATCHER POOLE.

Poole is a veteran. He has played on the Yale Varsity team three years, was captain of the freshmen nine one year and was a prominent baseballist at Evanston, Ills., and at Andover, Mass. Few balls get by him, and steadling second is perilous business when he is behind the bat. First baseman McClung is the great football player. He has a figure that Apollo would not be ashamed of, and is an all round player of great merit. While fitting himself for Yale McClung captained the Exeter nine and officiated as catcher. His great work with the Yale football team last year will be well remembered. Cushing, the centerfielder of the nine, played ball with rare skill on the Cleveland High school while preparing for Yale. As a Yale freshman and as a Varsity team player, he has been a success. Contrary to general expectation, however, Yale did not prove a championship winner, for the honors were carried off June 13 by Princeton's tigers.

BOWERS. M'CLUNG. CUSHING.

Bicyclist R. M. Barwise.

Here is a picture of the young Chicago wheelman who won the Pullman Road race of 1891. There were but two men in the contest, but his handicap of 10 minutes on the sixteen miles gave the crack men little chance of winning. There was a close finish between Barwise and J. G. Starr, the 8:30 handicap man, but Barwise won by 5 seconds.

R. M. BARWISE.

Barwise is twenty-four years old and has only been riding since November, 1889. He belongs to the Chicago Cycling club, and only trained two weeks for the Pullman. The race was his maiden effort of importance, and he claims that his actual time was 36 minutes. He was delayed for some time by a freight train, and thinks that but for this interference his time would have been much better. He rode a cushion tired safety. When Barwise is not wheeling he handles the mortar and pestle and wrestles with unintelligible Latin abbreviations in a Chicago drug store. His friends believe that he will yet show some of the Chicago flyers a thing or two about fast bicycling.

Michael Is a Flyer.

Michael is a chestnut colt, 3 years old, by imported Glen Athol, out of Verbena. He made his first appearance on the turf as the spring meeting of 1891 of the Kentucky association at Lexington, and won in every race in which he started.

MICHAEL.

Michael is the property of Mr. R. A. Swigert, of Lexington, Ky. His career this season has been particularly successful, and much better things are expected of him in the future. One of Michael's latest achievements was on June 6, when he won the St. Louis Derby.

The Boston team has a penchant for dogs. The canines of various kinds, sizes and colors belonging to the players would stock a small bench show.

A BOY EMPEROR'S SLEIGH.

A Description of the Sleigh in Which the Youthful Emperor of China Rides.

Only the other day, in a great public procession, the president rode in a common "hired carriage." It was so common, and the horses so ordinary, that even the news papers remarked the extreme republican plainness. No greater contrast could be found, perhaps, than the gorgeous new sedan chair sleigh recently built in Germany for the boy emperor of China.

THE CHINESE EMPEROR'S NEW SLEIGH.

This imperial sledge is shaped much like the sedan chairs which were more common than carriages even in England in the last century, only instead of being borne on two poles it rests on runners. Sedan chairs are still used at the Chinese imperial court. At the emperor's wedding two years ago, when he was seventeen, the bride was brought in a red sedan chair from her mother's house to the throne room of the palace, where the emperor saw her for the first time.

The emperor's new sleigh is of wonderful workmanship, richly carved and painted and gilded. At the four corners of the roof are Chinese dragons, as if guarding the golden ball raised in the center which is the symbol of the emperor. In front is another dragon, larger and more terrible to look upon than the four above. The interior of the sleigh is beautifully fitted up; it contains a toilet case, a watch, a looking glass and perfume bottles.—Little Men and Women.

"Old Honesty."

A capital example of the straits which literal obedience without judgment may bring one into, is given in the Youth's Companion:

Tommy is a very literal boy. He is quite capable of standing on the burning deck, like that other lad who interpreted a command according to the letter of the law, until he should be roasted and toasted to a crisp.

"Don't take off your rubbers, Tommy," said his mother one morning, as she left him running across the wet lawn, and that night when she returned from her visit, and looked into Tommy's room, a strange sight met her gaze. The new Casabianca was fast asleep in his little bed, and from beneath the clothes there was sticking two black feet bedaubed with mud. Tommy had not taken off his rubbers! How was it possible to corrupt so obedient a child by telling him that he should have used his judgment.

It is well understood in the family that the children are not to eat cake. Tommy, visiting at an aunt's, remembered this on the first morning of his stay.

"Will you have a piece of johnny cake?" asked his Aunt Laura.

"I can't if you call it that," said he, honestly. "I'm not allowed to eat cake, but I could if you named it corn bread."

A Child's Song.

"Where is the little lark's nest
My father showed to me?
And where are the pretty lark's eggs?"
Said Master Lori Lee.
At last he found the lark's nest,
But eggs were none to see.

"Why are you looking down there?"
Sang two young larks near by.
"We've broken the shell that held us,
And found a nest on high."
And the happy birds went singing
Far up the summer sky.

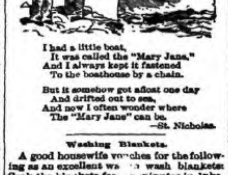
A Quiet Little Game.

Three knives or sticks are placed on the table. Sometimes a house is made the game is detailed to go out of the room. He must choose a confederate, but not mention who it is. The people in the room are asked to touch one of the knives, which were numbered one, two, three. The confederate notes which one is touched, and on calling in the person who was sent out, gives him the cue, touching his forehead if the first knife is touched, his cheek or nose if the second or middle one is chosen, and his chin if the third knife is the one.

The person who gives the cue signals must do so in a perfectly natural manner. A lady, who had perfect control of her features, sat in the middle of the room and gave one signal after another, the others all knowing that she was the confederate, but her movements were so easy and natural that they simply could not understand them. If any one sees, or thinks he sees through the game, insist on his going out; and, if he has really found it, keep on until the others have all found out, or are willing to "give it up."—Home Queen.

The Mary Jane.



I had a little boat,
It was called the "Mary Jane,"
And I always kept it fastened
To the boathouse by a chain.

But it somehow got afloat one day
And drifted out to sea,
And now I often wonder where
The "Mary Jane" can be.

—St. Nicholas.

Washing Blankets.

A good housewife vouches for the following as an excellent way to wash blankets: Soak the blankets for 20 minutes in lukewarm water before washing; have ready some soft soap or good yellow soap sliced thin and boiled to a jelly in a little water, allowing one pound to four blankets; wring them out of the first water, lay them in this and stir them about for some time, then put them to soak in water infused to soak. After the soaking rub each thoroughly in every part, wring out and shake well; unless very dirty they will not require another washing, but should be rinsed in soft warm water, and dried in a good wind.

Pay of Laundresses.

Laundresses work from 7:30 o'clock in the morning until 6 at night, with less than an hour's rest at noon. Few work more than five days in a week, and the average is only four. There is no denying the hardship of a laundress' life, who lives in an atmosphere of perpetual steam, often standing between a redhot stove and an open door or window, and compelled to be on her feet the entire ten hours of service. In consequence nearly all suffer from swollen feet. Brain fevers are common, and the number who go to the insane asylums is by no means small.

Shirts pay the best of any laundry work, varying from five to seven cents each. A good hand can iron thirty-five in a day, although twenty is considered a fair average. In a steam laundry a woman's chances are better at piece work, but in the so called home laundries, where family washing is done by hand, the wages rarely exceed five dollars a week.—New York World.

Mrs. Moulton's Writing Room.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton's place of writing is the front room on the second floor, which she says she hardly is called a study, for there is nothing severe or professional in its aspect. In the center of the room is a table always filled with the newest books, and over the mantel she has down pictures of poet or saint, or ideal form of beauty. The dainty desk has no official character, nor has its possessor any fixed methods of composition. A flower, a passing face, a sunset, a storm at sea, a picture, a thought or an ideal vision, each in turn will touch the spring of her poetic power and the melody flows forth.—Boston Budget.

An Opinion of Mrs. Oliphant.

The London Queen thinks that Mrs. Oliphant is "the most feminine of women writers," and when she talks about Burns in her new book on Edinburgh it finds "a miserable Mrs. Grundyism" in the remark that "a foolish and almost vulgar flirtation, ending in a quarrel, is the most unlicensed and exquisite songs of love and despair which has ever been written in any language—'As fond kiss, and then we sever.'" The faithfulness and truth of Queen Mary more than hints, belongs to the woman writer who objects to the flirtation rather than to the flirtation that gave the song. So are there always two points of view.

Two Factory Inspectors.

Mrs. Charles G. Ames, of Boston, one of the two women appointed by Governor Russell as factory inspectors, has made a study of organized charity for years. She worked in the hospitals during the war, and after her marriage to the present pastor of the Church of the Disciples in Boston, was made president of the Children's Aid society. Living then in Pennsylvania, she was occupied in much charitable work and reform in that state. Miss Hally, who will act with Mrs. Ames as factory inspector, is peculiarly fitted for the task by having since 1879 been a weaver in various Lawrence mills.—Exchange.

A Woman Who Keeps Her Youth.

Mrs. Roger A. Pryor is a shining example of that much talked about class of women who seem determined never to grow old. She owns to sixty years of age, but looks barely forty-five, and is a strikingly handsome woman. She has brought up five children, of whom four are married; and now, freed from binding domestic cares, is devoting herself especially to the Daughters of the Revolution. She is the head of the New York chapter of that body, and is deeply interested in all branches of its work.—New York Ledger.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

MRS. JOHN GABLE IN MORE TROUBLE

The Deserted Wife Desperately Trying to Raise Money.

Yesterday Mrs. John Gable, who was deserted a few weeks ago by her husband, for Mrs. Avery, with whom he eloped, endeavored to sell some of her furniture at private sale. She went to a second hand dealer on East Front street to have him look at the parlor suite with a view to purchasing it. She said to a NEWS reporter to-day: "It cost me $50, and I thought it ought to bring me half price, I needed the money to provide food for my children. Auctioneer Gillies told me I ought to get at least $25.

"Frank offered me $10, and finally persuaded me to accept it. Then he asked me if I had anything else to sell. I took him up stairs and showed him a sewing machine. This I thought ought to yield $25 more, but instead I was persuaded to include it in with the parlor furniture, being in such desperate need of money. I don't know what I am doing.

"Frank gave me the $10 and took a receipt for the money.

"Afterwards I was informed by a sewing machine agent that the machine belonged to him, as my husband had bought it on the installment plan and had not paid for it.

"Then I went to Mr. Frank and explained matters to him, asking him to return the receipt and take back the money unless he was willing to take the parlor suit at the $10 as originally agreed.

"He would not consent to this but instead threatened to come and take all my furniture. He attempted to do that this morning, when friends helped me prevent him.

"Then he threatened to use the law to harm me. I don't know what to do. I have certainly got my share of trouble. I am very hard of hearing. May be I have misheard him in signing a receipt giving all my furniture for $10 which I never intended doing.

"At all events I have been summoned to appear before Judge Coddington, on Frank's complaint I suppose, and I have no money to employ a lawyer to defend me."

At this point Mrs. Gable started for Judge Coddington's office.

BREVITIES.

—There is nothing truer than that the world owes you a living; but the world does not pay in advance. Do the work and you will get the living.

—The Westfield Athletic Club will play a game of base ball with the West Ends of Somerville next Saturday afternoon. The game will take place on the Westfield grounds.

—The public schools in this city and North Plainfield will close the school year on Thursday at noon, and the pupils are happy in anticipation of their Summer vacation.

—The members of the Plainfield Fire Department have received an invitation to attend the annual parade of the Atlantic City Fire Department which will take place September 30th.

—Y. M. C. A. members interested in bicycling are reminded of the run to Westfield this evening. All who wish to join the party are requested to be at the Association rooms by 7.45 p. m.

—A cool place to spend a warm evening, At Vincent chapel. Epworth League sociable, phonograph, refreshments, pleasure. It will be to-night. The League invites the public to attend.

—Mr. M. Quinn of East Fourth street expects this week to permanently take possession of the farm on Park avenue first beyond the city line, which he recently purchased from the Randolph estate.

—The Italians employed by the Water Works Company, have about completed laying the water mains in the eastern section of the city, and pipes are now being distributed throughout the southern and western sections.

—A quartette of local sports, took passage on the 1.17 o'clock train for Bound Brook this morning, where they are to go angling in the turbid waters of the Raritan river. The party was well equipped with bait, eatables, etc., and friends of the fishermen are eagerly awaiting their return with empty bread baskets and a cargo of fish stories.

—Inspector Byrnes says: "Criminals always array themselves in opposition to the authorities. They do so in every country on the face of the globe, and it seems natural that they should do so. This is really a high compliment to the worth of police officials. If thieves and gamblers give praise to the police instead of blame, the public could properly regard this as an evidence that the police were not doing their duty. We want no commendations from lawbreakers."

—Perhaps the portion of THE NEWS most generally read is the "cent a word" column. There the wants and wishes of the individual, the family and the business man are made known, every advertisement being read carefully by those interested. THE NEWS was the first paper in Plainfield to introduce this cheap form of advertising to the public, and it has increased wonderfully in popularity. Those who have used this column, even to the extent of only ten or fifteen cents, have been surprised at the results. If you want to buy or sell anything, or if you are looking for a situation or for help, try it.

FOURTEEN TO GRADUATE

From the North Plainfield Public School.

The following is a list of the pupils to graduate from the North Plainfield Public school next Thursday:

Grace Bonny.
Edith E. Miles.
Maggie Miles.
Harry McGee.
Maggie Swain.
Edgar Sheppard.
Raymond Carpenter.
Elizabeth C. Hull.
Ralph D. Whiting.
Edward Waring.
Frank Reynolds.
Alice Loomis.
Nellie Winckler.
Edna V. Hazeltine.

The commencement exercises will take place in Warren Mission chapel.

Mr. James McGee of the Board of School trustees will present diplomas.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lizzie Laing of West Fourth street started Saturday for Denver, Col., for a lengthy visit.

Mr. Charles Carpenter, for many years the efficient station agent at Dunellen, is now the general agent at Somerville, a position well merited.

Miss Anna Ptaschinski, her mother, and niece Miss Pauline Smith have returned to their home on West Front street from a pleasant visit to friends in New York.

The funeral of the late Elizabeth H. Opdyke, who died on Saturday, at the advanced age of 87 years, took place from the residence of her son, Henry B. Opdyke, on Farragut road, North Plainfield, at a quarter after eleven o'clock today. The services was conducted by a local clergyman, and the remains were taken to Newark for interment.

Dr. Thomas H. Stockton, the learned Methodist missionary whose sermon Sunday morning in the Methodist Episcopal church attracted considerable interest, will give a brief sketch, Wednesday evening in Vincent chapel on "Mission and Missionary work in South America." Dr. Stockton has been located at Buenos Ayres for a number of years and the talk will be well worth hearing.

Miss Alice Smith, Superintendent of Kitchen Garden work, read a very interesting paper relative to her teachings and experience in this department of the W. C. T. U., last Thursday. To the faithful labors and proficiency of this young lady (of whom the Union is justly proud), many families in this and other cities are much indebted for well-trained and helpful household assistants. After briefly reviewing the systematic course of the lower two branches, Miss Smith gave a pleasing account of a higher, the "Wide-Awake Circle," which is composed of about thirty young girls, whose ages range from 12 to 16, who are taught dress-making, crayon-drawing, darning and mending, together with temperance principles, and a love for all that is pure and good and useful in literature and in daily life. A Plainfield woman who knows of the work says: "May the Dear Father bless the noble young ladies who are ever ready and active to assist Miss Smith in her labors and may the pupils appreciate and profit by all instruction so lovingly given." An occasional sociable and entertainment helps to gladden and brighten both scholars and teachers.

Court of Errors and Appeals.

Vice Chancellor Runyon, ex-President of the Senate Adrain, Hon. George M. Robeson, Hon. J. G. Shipman, Hon. E. Q. Keasbey and other lawyers were in attendance at the Court of Errors yesterday.

The case was number 13, The Mayor, etc., of Morristown, v. George M. Miller and others, being on appeal from the decision of Vice Chancellor Van Fleet.

This case is a most important one, and concerns the right of a municipality to carry surface waters over private lands. George W. Forsythe, Esq., of Morristown appeared for the appellants and Hon. E. Q. Keasbey for Miller and others. No. 24, between the same parties, was argued with No. 13, and by the same counsel.

Wreck at Dunellen.

Another wreck occurred on the New Jersey Central Railroad near the Dunellen depot, early Saturday morning, but in this instance the damage was slight and no one was injured. The accident is said to have been caused by the breaking of an axle on one of a train of empty coal cars, going West, and the result was that a few cars were thrown from the track. Travel over the west bound track at that point was delayed for a short time only.

FROM OVER THE STATE

CLIPPINGS FROM EXCHANGES.

Next Sunday, in the Baptist church at Steelton, the Rev. Dr. Searles will publicly baptize the Rev. Mr. Sampson, who for some time has been pastor of the Methodist church at Rocky Hill. The reasons for Dr. Sampson's change of faith have not transpired.

George A. Sylvester, aged twenty-two, son of Reuben Sylvester, was in a small boat on Riggs's Mill Pond year Burlington fishing and was seized with an epileptic fit. He fell from the boat and was drowned before assistance could reach him.

Court Justice Alfred Reed in Camden on Saturday rendered a decision in the case of Henry A. Bosch, secretary of the Girard Benefical Association, charged with violating the State insurance laws. He decided that the order was not an insurance concern.

Already there are indications that the incoming class at Princeton College will be the largest on record. Some of the figures of the preliminary examinations already received bear testimony to this statement. The total number of applicants for examinations with Hillyer's examinations yet to hear from, is 418. The remaining examinations will swell the total to at least 450.

William Heath, a fireman on the steamship Gillert of the Hamburg American Steam Packet Company, caught his leg in the coil-rope attached to the vessel yesterday morning while she was laying at her dock at the foot of Fifth street, Hoboken, and was dragged overboard and drowned. A few hours later the body recovered, one of the crew of the same vessel fell overboard and was likewise drowned.

PAINTED THE PASTOR'S HORSE.

Young Men of Stirling Play a Trick on the Rev. J. Arthur Dill.

A Council of Morris county Presbyterian churches which was held in Morristown in March, ordered the Rev. J. Arthur Dill, pastor of the church at Stirling, six miles from here, to vacate his pulpit on July 1.

He was accused of reading love stories from the pulpit and of showing too much attention to the young women. This was unwelcome news to numbers of young women but it was hailed with delight by the young men. Since then, it is said, the young men have made Mr. Dill's life miserable in many ways, reaching a culmination on Sunday.

During the morning service, while the pastor was preaching, the young men unharnessed his bay horse, which stood under the church sheds, and, taking it into a neighboring barn, painted it in gorgeous stripes of red, white, and blue. Then they led it back to the shed and hitched it to the wagon again.

The pastor was angry, and the fact that no one has yet been found to betray the identity of the jokers is not soothing to his temper. He threatens legal action as soon as he can secure evidence.

Things Political.

[From the N. Y. Press.]

$4,664,879.

The United States Treasury has a surplus of that size. The un-American calamity howlers, Democratic and free trade newspapers will be as sorry for this as if it were the payroll of a big factory making its American goods heretofore imported to Europe and distributing the money to American labor instead of sending it over the ocean in the shape of gold shipments.

THERE IS MORE MONEY.

A leading cry of the third party agitators, echoed by the Democratic press, is that the country wants, needs and must, have "more money." The argument is that there is not enough circulating medium properly to transact the growing business of this growing nation. There may be some truth in that assertion. If it is true it shows a gratifying and healthy commercial growth. But when this cry for "more money" is used as a partisan appeal it lacks force in the face of facts. The fact is there is more. The volume of currency in this month of June is $73,000,000 greater than it was in June, 1890, and $200,000,000 greater than in 1889, $196,000,000 greater than in 1888. Going back ten years, to 1881, the volume now is $600,000,000 greater than then. The circulating medium of the country has been conservatively increased, and the policy of this administration has been to conservatively increase it, keeping soundness always in view.

Concerning the First Baptist Sunday-School Excursion.

BELMAR, N. J., June 22, 1891.

Mr. Chas. B. Brown, 19 Ondy Place, Plainfield, N. J.

DEAR SIR—Your favor of 19th inst received and in reply would say I am glad to hear you have decided to come to Belmar. I will now go ahead and make all the preparations that I think is necessary. I will have plenty of tables and seats arranged throughout my grove also swings. I have my whole fleet of sail and row boats ready with sufficient help to meet the occasion. There are two bathing pavilions on hand. I will see the stage men and have all the stages ready. I will make all preparations in the restaurant for that day. Of course we know it is customary for picnic parties to bring their lunch with them. We, however, to be fully prepared to meet all requirements in the lunch line, have a splendid croquet ground, and also a place to pitch quoits. I also have a first-class refreshment tent, with cooling glasses, and other drinks, which I will put up for you, of course free of charge. I will do all I can to make your Sunday-school excursion to Belmar a success, and hope the weather will be favorable.

Yours truly,
JOHN A. BOWLES.

Mount Bethel.

THE EVENING NEWS is all the go here.

Contractor John C. Cooper has the contract to repair Broadway from Bird's saw mill to Coontown.

Mr. Louis Perrine of North Plainfield was the guest of John C. Betzold last Sunday.

Mrs. Jacob Giddis and Miss Lottie Snow of Liberty Corner enjoyed a good time as the guest of Mrs. Adams Betzold last Thursday.

ROVER.

ENTERTAINMENT AND DOCK PRIVILEGES.

Ex-Congressman Kean Receives Elizabeth's Freeholders.

The Union County Board of Freeholders held a brief meeting yesterday afternoon at the Court House in Elizabeth. Afterwards they took carriages provided by Congressman Kean and drove to the the latter's gas works on the Elizabeth River, where dock privileges were granted Mr. Kean for 479 feet of water front along the bank of the stream. The Freeholders then, on invitation of the ex-Congressman, inspected his big gas plant, which supplies most of the gas consumed in Elizabeth.

The Board was hospitably entertained by Mr. Kean with a collation at the office adjoining the gas works. Freeholder West, on behalf of the Board, thanked the ex-Congressman in a neat and witty speech for his courtesy and hospitality.

The Board granted five dock privileges yesterday, viz: Two to Mr. Kean on the shores of Newark bay, one to the Gas Company, one to James Maguire, executor of the Wood estate and one to William N. Cutler, of Rahway, near the Rahway River.

Comptroller Carlton, City Treasurer Whelan, County Collector Wood, Surveyor Dunham, Alderman Halsey, Lawyer R. V. Lindabury and H. K. Darcy accompanied the Freeholders on their trip.

Judge Reed's Decision.

[From the True American.]

From the loose reports in the daily papers of yesterday respecting the decision of Judge Reed relative to the short-term societies, the impression is made that his decision reaches to the question of the validity of these organizations under the laws of this State respecting benevolent associations, and to the question of their responsibility under the insurance laws. It turns out that the decision in no wise touches these points. In the case in question, an officer of one of these short-term societies was arrested upon a capias, upon the complaint of Commissioner of Insurance Harvey, and was held to bail to answer. The case came before Judge Reed practically upon a motion to discharge the defendant from bail. In default of any detailed report of the decision, a representative of the True American called upon Judge Reed yesterday and learned that the case was decided upon the affidavit that was presented to Supreme Court Commissioner Cassidy. The Court held that the affidavit did not set out a cause of action against the defendant. It did not contain a copy of the certificate that was issued to the members of the society, nor any facts from which it appeared that the defendant was engaged as an agent in any insurance business under the New Jersey statutes. The whole case was decided on the face of the affidavit. There was no decision as to the liability of the defendant if the certificate and all the facts concerning the transaction of the business had been fully disclosed on the face of the affidavit. The decision of Judge Reed simply discharged the defendant from bail. The plaintiff (the Commissioner of Insurance) can file his declaration and proceed to have the cause determined as any other cause. Commissioner Harvey was not at his office yesterday, but it is to be presumed that the action indicated will be promptly taken and that in due course it will come before the Supreme Court and be heard upon the merits of the questions actually involved. Instead of being out of the woods, as some of the officers of these societies would try to make it appear, they seem to be only upon the threshold of the contest.

Views About "The News."

THE NEWS as our subsidized cotemporary publicly pretends to see it:

Our subsidized cotemporary as it publicly pretends to see itself:

By reversing the above you will see how our subsidized cotemporary privately sees itself relatively—that is thus:

THE NEWS:

Our subsidized cotemporary:

This will explain why it worries so.

But the actual facts are about as follows:

THE NEWS

Our subsidized cotemporary

If our subsidized cotemporary does as well as it pretends as a reward for its treachery to the public and connivance with that infamous combination which seeks to ruin this city, then why does it worry so much about THE NEWS? We are not complaining, nor diverging one iota from the path of right as we know it.

Our respectable neighbor, The Times, has at last learned the danger we pointed out in the beginning nearly two years ago.

The Times in the last edition says:

"No time in the history of the city has there been such a combination on the part of the Plainfield tax-payer, but the beneficiaries, the good repute, and the solvency of the city depend upon the joy of outside corporations, as at present."

And likewise the following:

BECAUSE he wants it, therefore he is to get it. In other words, because Mr. Low has told the Big Six that the city must pay him and his company, in addition to the water fee, $10 per hydrant to flush out his own sewers, therefore this added financial burden is to be put upon the shoulders of the Plainfield taxpayers. If this man had seen fit to work his laundry bill in his proposed contract with the city, it is safe to assume that the city might have been obliged to see that he was remunerated. To be sure the laundry bill is a private matter, but so also is the system of sewerage which is being thrust upon a very unwilling city.

Trouble in New Brunswick Schools

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 23, 1891 (Special.)—The offices of Superintendent of schools, occupied by Prof. A. A. Apgar, ex-State Superintendent of schools, and musical instructor, Mr. William H. Butts were at a meeting of the Board of Education, declared vacant from July 1.

The reason for this action has not been given publicity.

The vote of the Board was 7 to 5.

Bardsley's Sentence Postponed.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 23d. (Special.)—"Honest John" Bardsley was not sentenced to-day. Sentence was postponed until the figures and settlements he has prepared have been examined.

He claims they more than pay all claims.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

An Official Circular Showing Its Attitude Toward the Third Party.

The attitude of the Farmers' Alliance in New Jersey has, up to the present time, been a question of speculation, but C. P. Atkinson, the State organizer, has just published, and is now calculating an "official" circular. "Is There to Be a Third Party?" he asks, and then continues:

The farmers believe their demands are reasonable and just, and after careful consideration they have received the approval of other allied industrial organizations. The agency they intend to employ to put them in operation is the ballot, there is no ambiguity about that, and the money-power will use the same means to resist them. Then where is the need, where is room for a third party? What is being witnessed in Mississippi to-day, will be witnessed in every State in the Union before another twelve months.

The intensity of the contest between men, who all their life time have voted together, show this question has broken traditional party lines, and new alligments have taken their place. All that is required to extend this condition to every State, every county and every locality is united action of the industrial workers. Let them adhere unitedly to the demands they have made, and they will be opposed by a combination of of both political parties. If there ever was a time when the farmer needed wide order. "In things essential, unity; in all things, charity," should exert its full force that time is now.

Give all prominence and united support to the industrial demands and allow their third party to take care of itself, burying all personal differances, make one united determined effort to restore the prosperity of which the toilers have been wrongfully deprived.

The Wife Gained by Advertising Proved Pickle and Faithless.

Vice Chancellor Bird of New Jersey has granted an injunction on the prayer of Robert H. Maple of Neptune township which has brought to light a romantic marriage. Mr. Barrett is a well to do farmer, aged 65, living near Asbury Park. Maple inserted an advertisement in a city newspaper to the effect that he wanted a wife. In response Maple received a score of answers, including one from Florence D. Dodd of Brooklyn, who said she was a widow, whose husband had died of delirous tremens some five years previous. Maple and Mrs. Dodd were married on June 29, 1890.

One of the first things Maple did after marriage was to convey to his wife without consideration property worth $1,000. Later Mrs. Maple's affection for her aged spouse cooled, and then it leaked out that she was a much married woman, with two husbands living and with no divorce papers.

After securing possession of the property Mrs. Maple sold it for $400 to Barrett. The injunction was to restrain Barrett from paying at maturity the amount of the note to Mrs. Maple-Dodd.

—There were several cases of "pink-eye" reported recently to this city from Brooklyn. It began in one family with the baby and spread to every one of five other members, causing them much pain during the several weeks it lasted.

—"Strawberry rash" is the name given to an epidemic which has appeared in a number of localities this season to an unusual extent. Physicians claim that while the disease, which takes the form of a rash, has in previous years made its appearance at this season, never before has it been so prevalent.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is applying steam heat to its passenger cars on the Amboy division, and eleven cars have already been fitted up complete, and are now in working order. The cost of this work is said to be $1,000 each. The place formerly occupied by the stove is now taken up by an additional seat.

—Last Fall, Stephen Hull of Lambertville says he cut off four limb of a peach tree and threw it on his wood pile. This Spring, wanting a stake, he took the peach limb, sharpened one end of it, and drove it into the ground. A little while after this one of the small branches attached to the limb began budding, blossomed and now has on it two small patches in process of growth!—Lambertville Record. Remembering preceding the peach season, croptorics, curious growth, etc., commence. This is the first arrival.

F. C. Jobin, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., suffered with Catarrh of the Bladder. When about to give up, he tried Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and was cured.—ADV.

The Latest Miracle.

It is no trouble at all to believe in miracles when we have them every day before our eyes in plain sight. Surely a miracle equal to any related of old time is the kinetograph, Edison's latest. The name hopes from two Greek words, meaning to write motion. This is exactly what the kinetograph does. By means of electricity and photography this truly scientific miracle is accomplished. That is the kind the Nineteenth century miracles are—scientific.

By means of the kinetograph, photograph and phonograph it is now possible to see and hear a whole orchestra at any time and place just as the performers go through it on the stage, so Edison says. To begin: By all of the great magician, electricity, forty-six photographs are taken in a second of the motions of the singer on a stage. These photographs are so quickly made that practically it is one continuous picture. At this rate, Mr. Edison says we can secure a record of pure motion. The pictures are taken on a strip of gelatine film.

The machine which takes the pictures in rapid succession is the kinetograph. Connected with it is the phonograph which at the same time that the kinetograph takes the photograph records the sound. They are both worked by the same motor simultaneously. Thus the motion and sound that belong together are recorded together.

One part of the miracle is thus accomplished, the photographing of the continuous picture and the recording of the sounds that goes with the series of pictures. Another part remains no less efficient to be accomplished, and that is reproducing both to the eye and ear. Doubtless sounds have been faithfully recorded somewhere ever since the dawn of creation, but it was left for Edison to find a means of reproducing them and forcing them to give up their secrets. The pictures are taken upon a continuous roll of gelatine film. This pictured strip of film is unrolled from one spindle and rolled upon another by a motor which must be made to move rapidly and without a "jiggle." At the same time the phonograph is operated by the same impulse of power. In taking the photographs the slide of a camera is rapidly opened and shut upon this gelatine film, rolling constantly over whirling spindles, that is to say, unrolling and rolling up again. The plain film is unrolled and the pictured film is rolled up again, and in the reproduction it is rapidly unrolled before the eye. But if Mr. Edison can take 2,760 photographs in a minute he is a magician indeed.

Revolutionists Lack Weapons.

The weak point of the revolutionists is the lack of munitions. The total forces of the revolutionists number at present 8,000 men fully armed and equipped. Could the necessary arms be secured the number would at once be increased to over 16,000 men. There are now at Huasco, Vallenar, Freirina and Carrizal, bodies of men—in all some 8,000—who are only waiting to get arms and ammunition before they take up the march against Balmaceda. At the smaller places on the coast as far north as Arica are similar companies of would-be soldiers. The arms for these men were on the Itata, and had they secured them with what survives from the wreck of the Chilian revolution would have been settled in short order.

Balmaceda's army consists of 25,000 men well equipped, but only 3,000 are of the old regular standing army, the rest are recruits forced into the service.

Balmaceda's Volunteers.

"Balmaceda," said one of the gentlemen from whom we got these facts, "calls these men volunteers. To give you an idea of how voluntary the service of these men is, I have seen batches of them numbering from twenty-five to fifty each brought into Valparaiso tied together and surrounded by soldiers with fixed bayonets. This I have seen with my own eyes times. I also saw a letter from the intendente of one of the southern provinces written to Balmaceda in which the intendente said: 'I regret being unable to send you a larger number of volunteers owing to the scarcity of handcuffs,' so you can see what sort of fighting material Balmaceda has to count on. He pays the officers of his army extra wages to keep them in good humor and to have them rule the troops with an iron hand.

"Before we left Valparaiso I was almost convinced that Balmaceda would win the fight, so great did his power seem, but the more I see of the north I begin to be impressed with the numbers and determination of the revolutionists."

Among the most important leaders of the revolutionists, Don Pedro Montt, is said to be on board the Pacific Mail steamship City of Para, which will arrive here June 24. It is reported that he will confer with the authorities at Washington looking toward their recognition of the revolutionists as belligerents.

A rumor was also current in Spanish circles that the European agents of the revolutionists had paid the balance of the contract price due on the two cruisers that have just been finished for the Chilian government, and have loaded and dispatched these vessels to Chili, where they will fight against Balmaceda. If this rumor is true it will be the hardest blow the revolutionists have yet struck.

REVOLUTION IN CHILI.

Tactics Worse Than Those of a Czar.

TORTURING THE REVOLUTIONISTS.

Balmaceda's Barbarous Cruelties—Fine Driven Into the Hands and Fingers of Men Who Do Not Sympathize with Him—His So Called Volunteers.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Many startling facts in connection with the revolution now raging in Chili, which throw light upon the ferocity and despotism of Balmaceda, and now given to the public for the first time through the United Press. The three gentlemen, two of whom are prominent Chilians, from whom these facts are obtained, are at present in New York, having arrived here last week. They have witnessed the conduct of the revolution from its inception and speak from actual knowledge.

Balmaceda the Tyrant.

The combined stories of the three show that Balmaceda is well termed "The Tyrant." In santiago, where his headquarters are, no one dares utter a word against him. He has caused a cross of red to be painted on all the houses of people whom he suspects are not wholly in sympathy with him, and these are marked residences his police and soldiers go at any hour of the day or night. They ransack the rooms on the ground that they are looking for revolutionists who are supposed to be hidden there. The soldiers demand wine and food, and after having as good a time as they wish depart, only to repeat the offense in some other marked residence. The peaceful town houses are forbidden to lock their doors.

A Reign of Terror.

No one is allowed to ride on horseback through the streets after 9 o'clock in the afternoon; no three persons are allowed to walk the streets in company at any time of the day, and no two persons can stand and converse on the street. On a veritable reign of terror for all who either through fear or interest have failed to cast their fortunes with Balmaceda. The soldiers are and all who employ laborers have to furnish each one with a tag showing that they are regularly employed by such a merchant at such a place. If the laborer is caught on the street going to or from his work without this tag he is taken in by the soldiers of Balmaceda and impressed into his service. This system exists in Valparaiso also.

Driving Fine Into Victims' Fingers.

One of the gentlemen heard some terrible stories issuing from the jail. He inquired of a soldier the cause and was told that some of Balmaceda's soldiers were punishing a man who had refused to work for him by driving tacks and pins into his hands and fingers.

The next day he saw a horrible punishment meted out to a Chilian who had been interrogated before that he was willing to work his hands off for the revolutionists. The poor fellow's hands were placed on a block and his fingers pounded to a jelly by a big mallet in the hands of a soldier. He was then told that he could go and work his hands any way he wanted to and for any one. The man had denounced the affair to a friend—a resident of Santiago who was with him.

The next day his friend was missing nor did he show up again. The New York man returned to Valparaiso and just before he sailed he received a message from his friend saying that he had been locked up by Balmaceda's men, accused of being a revolutionist sympathizer.

Bardsley et al. to Show Cause.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Assistant City Solicitor McMichael and City Solicitor Warwick have presented to Judge Biddle on behalf of the city a petition for the allowance of a writ of sequestration against John Bardsley and others, and the judge granted a rule to show cause why the process asked for should not be allowed, and made the rule returnable on Saturday, the 27th inst., at 10 o'clock a. m.

MERTEN'S OWN THEORY.

He Says He's in Prison Because Mrs. Rotzall Was Jealous.

BROOKLYN, June 23.—Carl Merten is still confined in Raymond Street jail on a charge of stealing two letters from Mrs. Lydia Rotzall, of 197 Livingston street. In explanation of his arrest Merten says:

"When I was in Germany I few weeks ago I heard that Frederick Rotzall had fallen heir to 30,000 marks. On arriving in this country I started to find Rotzall, and learned that he was dead. Then I called on his widow, and she agreed to go to Germany with me to collect the money. I was to advance $500 for expenses.

"We were alone in the room at the time, and I confessed that I had also liked me very much. She put her arms around my neck and kissed me several times. I had a number of papers of my own, and found that after I had have taken the two letters by mistake. They were of no value. Shortly after that I was married, and I think Mrs. Rotzall incensed my arrest because I did not marry her."

Mrs. Rotzall denies that she kissed Merten, and calls him a wretch for making such a statement. The case will be called in Judge Walsh's court today. Merten has returned the letters to Mrs. Rotzall.

Requested His Dismissal.

BOSTON, June 23.—At the regular Monday meeting of Baptist ministers Rev. J. D. Fulton introduced a resolution against the influence of secret societies upon the church. In the course of his remarks he strongly denounced Masonry and declared that all those who swear allegiance to it he swears allegiance to a code antagonistic to God. Rev. Mr. Cleaveland, of Melrose, rose to a point of order on the conclusion of the address, and saying that he was a Mason declared that he could not listen to such uncalled for abuse. The chairman put the question to the meeting on sustaining the point of order and it was defeated—30 to 7. Mr. Cleaveland then arose and requesting that his name be dropped from the roll of membership left the hall.

Newspaper Men Arrested.

BUFFALO, June 23.—Messrs. Heusner, Ploegstra & Rodenbach, proprietors of Sunday Truth, and George H. Chandler, editor, have been arrested charged with conspiring to libel millionaire James Haskell L. Taylor. A week ago Truth published and gave wide circulation to an article charging Mr. Taylor with debauching young girls. Only a charge that the accused attempted to extort money from him to suppress the article. In the police court the accused were held in $500 each to appear on Wednesday.

Dollie Davis Is Alive.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Dollie Davis for more than two weeks has been the guest of Thomas Butler, comedian, and wife, at the Old Tree House, Coney Island, and at 10 o'clock this morning she will receive her friends at the office of her husband father, J. Charles Davis, 1145 Broadway. She will entertain her friends and those who have mourned her the dead just two hours, when she will return to Coney Island and continue reading the accounts of her tragic death.

Stung by Viscount Cross' Remarks.

LONDON, June 23.—In the house of lords Viscount Cranbrook, secretary of state for India, repudiated portions of the statement made regarding Manipur in discussion in the commons by Sir John Gorst, political secretary of the India office, and therefore Cross' subordinate. Sir John Gorst communicated to Lord Salisbury to the effect that the allusion left him no alternative but to resign. Lord Salisbury answered, trying to induce Sir John to remain.

Pork Under the Microscope.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Secretary Rusk inaugurated the first official microscopic inspection of pork at the Union stock yards yesterday and expressed himself as being well satisfied with the success of the experiment. "We will enlarge the scope of this undertaking," said the secretary, "and will probably have time when we expect to see Germany and France get over their prejudice against the hog product of this country."

Bloodhounds Called Into Service.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., June 23.—Several detectives from New York with bloodhounds, which are to be used in the search for the fugitive bank president, Gideon W. Marsh, Marshall Leads, District Attorney Gresham and the detectives had a consultation last night as to the best means to pursue to capture Marsh. The hounds will be let loose if it is possible to track the fugitive in that way.

Governor Hill Not Interested.

ALBANY, June 23.—The statement which has been recently going the rounds of the press that Governor Hill is interested in a projected railroad in Ohio with eastern capitalists and Postmaster General Wanamaker is untrue. Governor Hill has not now and never had a dollar's interest in any railroad, nor is he connected with one in any capacity whatever.

Homeopathists Adjourn.

ATLANTIC CITY, June 23.—The American Institute of Homeopathy and the Homeopathic convention ended their congress at the United States hotel yesterday afternoon. Dr. Richard Hughes, of England, reported for the committee on determining the next place of meeting that the homeopathic convention will next take place in England in 1894.

The Bowman Case Causes More Trouble.

LANCASTER, Pa., June 23.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Rev. N. A. Barr, of Adamstown, this county, who is charged with sending an abusive postal card to Rev. Bowman, of Cleveland, O. The prosecution is the outgrowth of the Bowman fight in the Evangelical church.

Phoebe's Fight Begun.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—W. P. Black and C. B. Waite, as attorneys for Miss Phoebe W. Cousins, have had a conference with Mr. Nettleton a brief in her behalf, setting forth the fact that she was illegally removed as secretary of the board of lady managers of the World's fair.

Arrested for Libel.

GLENN FALLS, N. Y., June 23.—A. B. Calvin, editor of The Daily Times, and Charles Buck, editor of The Weekly Republican, were arrested yesterday on suits charging them with criminal libel. Damages are placed at $10,000.

WHAT WILL HIS STORY BE

Bardsley's Statement in Court Expected Today.

MANY ARE ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT.

He Will Receive His Sentence Today and He Takes to the Penitentiary at Once. He Is an Almost Broken Down Man. The Bank Correspondence Made Public.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—Many men in this city are on the anxious seat, for today "Honest" John Bardsley, ex-city treasurer, is to be brought into court to receive sentence. It is known that Bardsley, through his counsel, Robert Alexander, will make a clean breast of his crookedness, and therefore it is that men prominent in political circles are in dread lest some of their dealings with the ex-treasurer and the broken banks will come to light.

Bardsley's Statement.

Bardsley's statement will consist chiefly of figures, and is said to contain in detail all of his dealings with the Keystone bank. He will doubtless tell about his loans of the people's money to private citizens, and how with it he embarked in schemes in which the money she squandered.

Startling Facts Expected.

It is known that Bardsley has had several long conversations with District Attorney Graham, and should his statement be what is expected, some of the fast trains from Philadelphia may carry citizens high in political circles who are eager to escape the meshes of the law.

His Last Day at Moyamensing.

Bardsley spent his last day in Moyamensing prison. After he is sentenced he will be taken immediately to the Eastern penitentiary. His imprisonment has worked wonderful changes in the bluff and hearty man. He is haggard, broken down, and has lost all his assurance. He was so strong within him when dangers threatened him on every side.

The district attorney expected to make a partial report yesterday, but did not do so. On this report will depend in a great degree the future course of the councilmanic investigating committee. The committee continued the inspection of the stock ledger of the Keystone bank.

KEYSTONE BANK CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Drew's Knowledge of the Bank's Insolvency Shown.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—The official copy of all the correspondence between Controller Lacy, Bank Examiner Drew and others, with reference to the affairs of the Keystone bank, which was sent to Mayor Stuart last week and by him was transmitted to councils in response to their resolutes, was given out for publication last night by Chairman Van Osten. The correspondence is very voluminous and much of it has already been published through the reports of the proceedings of the investigating committee and the statements of the people connected with the bank.

The first letter in point is that of Controller Lacey and gives the result of his examination of the bank's affairs when he paid his official visit on Jan. 9 and when he was informed by Cashier Mingle of $65,000, which had been abstracted by President Lucas. He also gives in detail the measures he took to recover the money from the Lucas estate and the success he met with in obtaining the bank building and a portion of the property at the seashore. He says that Marsh was ignorantly led into the irregular transactions while cashier by President Lucas, and that the latter, on his deathbed exacted a promise from the officers of the bank the deception under representations that the money abstracted would soon be returned to the bank from the result of the Lucas enterprises.

On Feb. 16 Mr. Drew wrote that he was about to make a statement of the affairs of the bank to the board of directors, and asked for written instructions upon which he could act. On the following day he sent a full statement of the condition of the bank to the controller and with it the statement that it would take a very long time to fully elucidate the methods by which a large a part of the capital stock had been misapplied, thus disclosing the deficits in the books. He added that he had been led to believe that Marsh had only been the tool of a designing chief, but late developments had made him entertain suspicions of Marsh.

On Feb. 28 Drew wrote that if it was decided to assess the stockholders the notice of assessment should be prepared by the strongest advice to the directors to have the money paid before the fact should be made public and thus prevent a run on the bank. In reply the controller urged that prompt measures be taken to rehabilitate the bank, and unless some other way could be found at once he would order an assessment of the stock to be made at once.

After the assessment of $250,000 had been made there were a number of communications and correspondences to the payment, and after his patience had been exhausted the controller telegraphed Drew March 19 to visit the bank in the morning and await his instructions. On March 20 the telegram was sent directing the bank to be closed.

The controller was informed frequently of the various steps taken

PEFFER'S BOLD SPEECH.

Cheaper Money Wanted and Must Have It.

HEAVY MORTGAGES IN THE WEST.

What He Knows of Wall Street Men and Methods—Farming Fifty Years Ago and Now—The Manner in Which Railroads Do the Business.

NEW YORK, June 23.—About three-fourths of the seats in the large hall in Cooper Union were filled last night with appreciative listeners to United States Senator Peffer from Kansas, who spoke on the third party movement. The chairman of the meeting told his hearers that one of the arguments against the third party was that they had no leader. In America, he said, no leader was needed, and at no period in a nation's history was a man needed to fill a gap that one was not found.

The Old Parties Denounced.

He then called upon the secretary, Mr. Stanton, to read a series of resolutions which denounced the old political parties and charged that the government had been run in the interest of trusts and monopolies, and that the issues of free trade and the tariff are fictitious ones and are forced upon the people for the purpose of diverting attention from the more important questions of land, money and transportation.

Senator Peffer said that thirty-two years ago a man from the western prairies warned the people of the east against a power that was seeking to control legislation. That man said then that all should be slaves or all should be free.

Peffer's Pungent Remarks.

"I am a land descendant," said he, "of that man, and I tell you here in the center of the moneyed power of the country, which is greater than the slave power, that Wall street moneyed interests have the people by the throat, and you of the east and we of the west must destroy that power or it will destroy us. When the man of Wall street dictates a policy to the secretary of the treasury it is adopted. When he opposes it it is defeated. Whenever the bankers of Wall street need any money they ask their partner in Washington to assist them, and he does it.

"But when the farmers ask their friends in Washington for a dollar they never get a farthing, nor do they get any assistance through legislation, and all this we intend to change. We do not propose to take away a man's property, on the contrary, we will protect every man's property. We are not anarchists. We will arm our legions with the ballot and not with the bayonet. Our rallying cannon or grim visaged war will march with our armies.

Fifty Years Ago and Now.

"Fifty years ago the farmer made his own implements, spun his own clothing from fiber raised on his own farm. He did not need money, because his wants were supplied by barter, not by sale. In place of the shoemaker, who came once a season to make the shoes for the family, six storied buildings turn out shoes nowadays so cheap that the farmer sells his product for cash and buys his shoes in the store. Nowadays it is only bonanza farming that pays. The capitalist who owns 30,000 or 40,000 acres, and hires an army of help where one machine moves about sixty-five acres in one day, that is the only sort of farmers who make money.

No Money in Farming.

"I came through Massachusetts and as I drove over the Berkshire hills I counted no less than seven signs offering farms for sale. The owners all said that there was no money in farming. I don't want money. I don't mean money that is worth nothing. We want good money, any kind, but we want it at a lower rate of interest than we are now paying. If a man invests his money in a farm he has to work hard to get a small interest. If another man invests the same amount in a mortgage his money goes to work the instant the deed is signed.

Pays His Respects to Bankers.

"He can afford to sit in idleness and let the other fellow work for him. The men of Wall street who write twenty-eight Years in the Street' and tell how they gave their money to save the Union, didn't tell that they bought the bonds at fifty cents on the dollar, at 12 per cent. interest, and when the victory was won and peace reigned they immediately went to work and had these bonds made equal to a gold standard.

Heavy Mortgages.

"Those same men want the secretary of the treasury to figure on 2 per cent. bond now. Suppose he lets the farmers have a little money at 2 per cent.? Our lands are as good as their bonds. If they don't give us cheaper money we will fight. These are not threats, but warnings. In Iowa there is $190,000,000 in mortgages at 8@24 to the head. Of this one-third is on city lots and two-thirds on farm property. In my own state, for the past ten years, $400,000,000 has been recorded in mortgages. Of that amount $160,000,000 is for farms, the total value of the farm lands being $688,000,000.

How Railroads Work It.

"The railroads, which are managed by abler financiers than farmers, mortgage their property for four and five times their value."

Senator Peffer spoke of the importance of women in politics, and pointed to his own victory over Senator Ingalls as the result of their aid.

On Trial for Thirteen Years.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., June 23.—The trial to test the sanity of Jonathan Jones, who, in 1878, killed David Roberts in Hooner township, was begun here yesterday. For thirteen years Jones' case has been before the courts. He has been tried repeatedly, and twice the case has been taken to the supreme court and the verdict set aside. The last trial occurred four years ago and resulted in a verdict of manslaughter.

Senator Cullom a Candidate.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Senator Cullom, of Illinois, announces that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency in 1892. He says the tariff will be the predominant issue, and that Mr. McKinley will surely win in Ohio.

Consumed by Forest Fires.

HALIFAX, N. S., June 23.—Forest fires have destroyed three stores and seven dwellings along the line of the Hall's Bay railway in Newfoundland.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

Fire destroyed the house and barn owned by Charles Smith, of Pittsfield, Mass., with their contents, including one horse. Loss, $5,500; insurance, $2,600.

The jury to try the indicted New York Central directors has been completed. The taking of testimony will begin today.

Peter McLaughlin was killed and John Polher severely injured by a premature explosion of dynamite at Leiper's quarries, Chester, Pa.

The trial of Meyer & Dickinson's second suit against the government for the recovery of duties on articles used as hat trimmings has been resumed in the United States circuit court at Philadelphia.

Acting Secretary Spaulding sold to Harvey Fisk & Sons, of New York, the entire issue of District of Columbia 3½ per cent. bonds, ($2,400,000) at $100.581 for each $100 bond.

J. H. Moreys, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., aged twenty-two, a clerk in Lamb & Co.'s dry goods store at Northampton, Mass., was drowned in the Connecticut river by the upsetting of his canoe.

The Florence National bank of Florence, Ala., has closed its doors. The immediate cause is said to be attributed to the press reports, which caused a run on the bank.

At the meeting of the trustees of Williams' college, Williamstown, Mass., Bernard C. Steiner, of Johns Hopkins, was appointed to fill the chair of American history during the absence of Professor Rice in Europe.

Peter Hoffman, of Wellsbury, N. Y., was struck and killed by lightning as he was looking out of a window of a tannery at that place. The building was not damaged.

Pennsylvania's World's fair bill has been approved by the governor and the commission appointed.

The appeal of ex-Senator McDonald will take place in Indianapolis next Wednesday afternoon.

Captain Lawler, of Marblehead, Mass., has sailed on his trip across the Atlantic in a dory.

The Bank Closed.

NASHVILLE, June 23.—The Nashville Savings bank, an old and heretofore considered a thoroughly reliable banking institution of this city, has closed its doors. Its managers, Messrs. Julius and Max Sax, claim that the suspension is due to the stringency of money and their inability to get discounts in the east. They say they will be able to reopen their bank in a month, and pay their depositors in full. The assets are $664,956. The liabilities will be about the same.

Bailout Denied the Charge.

LONDON, June 23.—In the house of commons Sir Wilfrid Lawson, member of parliament, moved that the house adjourn in order to discuss the subject of destitution in Donegal. He urged that the distress was great and that there were a number of cases of starvation, the government having given no relief. Chief Secretary Balfour denied the truth of the statement, and added that ample aid had been given. The motion was rejected—191 to 116.

Will Resume Shortly.

BOSTON, June 23.—Mr. Paine, of Whitcomb & Paine, was seen regarding the shutdown of the firm's shoe factory reported from Holbrook. He stated that, owing to the fact that the work in the cutting factory had run ahead of the demand, work had been suspended for the present, but would be started up again in a few days, as soon as the operatives in the main factory have caught up.

Wreckage and Remains from Samoa.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—The schooner Sea Waif, from Apia, Samoa, has arrived here. She had a cargo of wreckage from the United States ships Trenton and Vandalia, wrecked in the hurricane of March, 1889. She also had on board the remains of twenty seamen belonging to those vessels, who were drowned at the time. They will be buried at Mare Island navy yard.

High Water in Pennsylvania.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., June 23.—All the timber and logs along the river will, it is thought, be brought along by the heavy rise in the stream caused by the heavy rains of Sunday. A flood six foot deep is reported from Clearfield.

Paper Contract Awarded.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The contract for furnishing the treasury department with distinctive paper upon which to print money, etc., has been awarded to Crane & Co., of Dalton, Mass., at 42½ cents per pound.

Held in Heavy Bail.

WINCHENDON, Mass., June 23.—W. M. Williams, alias James M. Bradley, was arraigned yesterday charged with breaking into the jewelry store of Solon Abbott. He was held in $25,000 bail for trial.

What the Soldiers Cost.

SOUTH AFRICAN ATHLETE.

Howard Farrar Will Represent the Dark Continent at the English Championships.

One of the athletes the Manhattan A. C. team will meet in England is Howard Farrar, who hails from Port Elizabeth, South Africa. Farrar was born in 1868, and is 5 ft. 8 in. high and weighs about 130 pounds. He made his first appearance on the cinder path in South Africa in April, 1886, when he took first place in a one mile run in ten. 49s. At Cape Town, on Christmas day of that year, he won first prize in the following events, 440 yards, 58⅗; one-half mile

HOWARD FARRAR.

90s. 4 4-5s.; one mile, 4m. 51s.; long jump, 20 ft. 9¾ ins. and hop, step and jump, 43ft. 10 in. In April, 1885, he defeated Steve Brown in a series of races for the championship of South Africa. The distances selected were 440 yards, 1,000 yards and one mile. Farrar won in 51¾, 2:18 1-5 and 4:35¼ respectively.

In the following year he sailed for England, and was fairly successful against the picked athletes of that country at distances from 440 yards up to one mile. His best performances during the tour were: 440 yards, 51 1-10 seconds; half mile, 2m. 1 1-5s.; 1,000 yards, 2m. 17 2-5s.; one mile, 4m. 30¾s.; long jump, 21 ft. 10 in., and hop, step and jump, 43 ft. 5¾ in. He announced his retirement in 1887, but about three months ago he again made his appearance on the cinder path in search of fresh laurels, and the times recorded in the different races he has won up to date indicate that he may make things interesting for Dadman, Roddy, George, Connell and others of the Manhattan team.

President James A. Hart.

James A. Hart, the man who succeeded A. G. Spalding as president of the Chicago Baseball club, is a young man of large experience in the national game and well qualified for the important position he has just long ago assumed. Hart early displayed a desire to become a baseball Napoleon, for in 1877 he was manager of his college team at Gravel River institute, in Ohio. He stuck to amateur sport until 1884, when he became vice president and manager of Louisville. He has since been prominently identified with the fortunes of clubs at Milwaukee, Boston, Chicago and other places. He is thirty-six years of age, and one of the truly great men of the national game.

JAMES A. HART.

The longest flat phenomenal sprinter, Luther H. Carey, runs the race evidence before him that his disputed claim of 9¾ seconds for 100 yards day have been well founded. At Princeton the other day he did the "hundred" in 9¾ seconds, beating Lot of John Owen, Jr.'s, world's record of 9 4-5 seconds. Carey seems to be the greatest sprinter on the path today

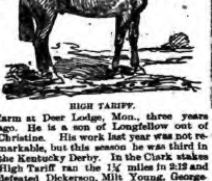
The Swift Yacht Merlin.

Here is a picture of the swift yacht Merlin, whose name is familiar to every lover of yachting. She is a centerboard schooner, and is one of the fastest "two stickers" of her dimensions that spreads its snowy canvas to the salt sea breeze. She was designed by Burgess, and built for Colonel W. H. Forbes, of Boston, in 1889. Her work last season was excellent. She not only won the Goelet cup for schooners, but defeated that sea sprinter the Sea Fox on every occasion when the two yachts met. She is a beautiful boat, and few yachts can excel her in windward work and in reaching and running.

THE MERLIN.

Swift High Tariff.

High Tariff, the winner of the Clark stakes at Louisville recently, is a handsome bay with all the delicacy and refinement of outline that marks a blooded horse. He was bred at Lexington, Ky., but first saw the light of day at Larribee & Eustin's farm at Deer Lodge, Mon., three years ago. He is a son of Longfellow out of Christine. His work last year was not remarkable, but this season he was third in the Kentucky Derby. In the Clark stakes High Tariff won the 1¼ miles in 2:12 and defeated Dickerson, Milt Young, Georgetown, Hart Wallace, Vallera and Sir Albert. High Tariff is said to be possessed of unusual spirit and much better performances are expected of him.



HIGH TARIFF.

MANAGER C. H. CUSHMAN.

He Has Long Been Known as a Big Base Ball Man.

There are few men better known, and certainly none more popular, than "Charley" Cushman in baseball circles. He has been closely identified with the national game for more than twenty years. In base ball parlance the confidence of the players under his control is almost as well known as an umpire, and while officiating in the former capacity in the National league a few years ago his decisions in nearly every match were with the approval of both sides. He managed the Toronto team of the International association during the years 1887, 1888 and 1889, qualifying the first season, winning the pennant in 1887, finishing a close second in 1888, and was also well up in the following year. He was selected to manage the Milwaukees, of the Western association, last year, and the work accomplished by the team under his pilotage was such that any manager could well feel proud of it. The team, in the opinion of many people, is considerably weakened this year by the absence of the two star pitchers, Jack Thornton and Clark Griffith, but Manager Cushman has secured some good talent to fill the vacancies, and has strong hopes of winning the pennant for 1891.

CHARLES H. CUSHMAN.

Tennis Player William H. Taylor, Jr.

One of the pioneer lawn tennis players of California is William H. Taylor, Jr., who won the championship of the Pacific coast several years ago when the game began to find favor there. He has repeated the performance each year since. The annual tournament is held July 4 and 5 at San Rafael, Cal., and each year attracts more and more attention. Last season Taylor found a man worthy of his best efforts in the person of C. H. Yates, but succeeded in defeating him after a hard fight. Taylor is a remarkably swift and accurate player on the hard courts of the Golden state, but on the softer courts of the east he would be at a disadvantage. He proposes to become accustomed to the eastern courts, however, and try conditions this year with the eastern players at Newport.

WM. H. TAYLOR, JR.

An American Beauty Abroad.

There are more American actors and singers who have made successes in London during the last two years than there are English professionals who have made successes in America. Gerald du Maurier is one of the most notable instances. She is the American girl who married Ivan Caryll, the young composer, awhile ago. She has carried M. Audran's opera "La Cigale" (which Marie Halton threatened to produce in America) past its two hundred and fifteenth performance. Miss Ulmer's personal charm, her chic and seductive voice, have done more to insure "La Cigale's" success in the London Gaiety than the music or book of the opera have done. Hence let the eagle scream.

ATHLETIC NOTES.

Peter Vredenburgh, one of Princeton's best sprinters, has been elected captain of the college team for next year.

The colleges lose some great athletes this month. From Harvard go Finlay, Hall, Davis and Lee; from Yale, Williams and Ryder, and Victor Mapes leaves Columbia.

Harry Jewett, the Detroit A. C. crack, has been capturing prizes right and left this season.

The English amateur championship games, at which the Manhattan A. C. team will compete, are to be held at Manchester June 27. If the great aggression of Americans do not astonish the Englishmen they will astonish all their friends at home.

"A Real Lady."

We hear the phrase so often, and how hard it is to define its exact meaning. We all know it by sight when we meet her, and yet her charm is as indescribable as the scent of a rose or the tints of the sunset or bank of violets. She is far above lack of positiveness and best painted in negatives. She is not obtrusive in appearance or dress; she does not claim your attention by any effort to attract it, nor does she seem conscious of your admiration if you evince it. She is never known to speak harshly, maliciously or loudly to another, or forget herself.

She does not laugh at anything that could by any possibility wound another, nor seek to introduce into the conversation any topic she has reason to think may prove disagreeable or embarrassing, but, rather, closes her eyes to whatever her keen tact tells her you desire to remain unnoticed. In her judgments she does not seek to impress you with her infallibleness, but is quick to add the saving clause. She does not envy or scorn another's possessions, and would not point out the crumpled rose leaf for the world. She makes no boast of anything, but does not decry herself in any way, so that her sweet pride is humility, and her sweet humility the truest pride.

She is no gossip, though she is not above taking an interest in the lowliest that crosses her path, and has a womanly sympathy for every sick and suffering thing. She takes up no fad or hobby to the exclusion of other duties, but is consistent in all things, and, without being foolishly conventional, does not neglect to fulfill the least demand of her position. She is not a religious fanatic, and has no bell of exclusive communication for those not of her way of thinking, but is in the truest and best sense a noble hearted, Christian woman, than which there is no better definition of a lady.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Should Women Cry and Faint?

I cannot say I agree with a French physician as to the advisability of women shutting down for "a good cry" when everything seems to have gone wrong for the time being, says an English lady writer. This worthy doctor, who evidently believes that a woman should be treated as a helpless being, declares that we do ourselves a great deal of harm by trying to be brave and enduring.

A woman, says he, should never try to bear pain without flinching. In fact, she should just scream and faint as much as she likes, and then she will surely get better much sooner than if she silently bore suffering. And what about our dignity, M. le Medicin? Does it become a British matron to figuratively "fall of a heap" and give way to outbursts of weeping because her gown does not fit or the parlor maid has given notice? And could we ever reconcile it with our sense of self respect to scream and kick and promptly give way to hysterics directly a neuralgic attack came on or the demon toothache clalmed us for its own?

No, no; we have our faults, and our nerves may be but "pair things," yet I hope and believe that we are mentally better balanced and physically stronger than to require to have a good cry on the slightest provocation.

Blessings Upon the Married Flirt.

Dorothy Maddox has been studying the ways of maidens, matrons and bachelors, and informs the girls that "it is no use. You might as well accept the situation and no longer declare war against the married flirt. She is a social blessing which monsieur is in no hurry to relinquish. She always knows just what to say and just what to do, is never on the qui vive for a proposal, supplies her own little amusements and her bachelor friends as well, and does it at her husband's expense, which is certainly for the bachelor an altogether jolly situation. Society girls, on the tiptoe of expectancy for a five dollar bunch of violets and a lace kerchief thrown in, are quite enough to scare off even the most sentimental fellow.

"The modern maiden wants too much. The married belle asks for nothing from her carpet knight save his delightful society. What wonder, then, that the bachelor of today has his own particular theories respecting life, regardless of the blandishments of the single Hebes of society!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

An Aid to the Complexion.

An infusion of meadowsweet flowers drank freely improves the complexion and clears the blood of scrofulous taint. The rule for making infusions is ten times as much boiling water as of the herb prescribed by the hakims or doctors of India and Afghanistan. The juice of the fresh willow leaves largely diluted is prescribed to guinea fowl in intermittent fevers, as it has less irritating effect. The sap of the willow gathered by slitting the bark when the tree is in flower is an old cosmetic and good for sore redness of eyes and dim sight.—Shirley Dare in New York Herald.

Disinfection by Sulphur.

The general plan employed in disinfection of the atmosphere, together with the surroundings in the room, is by means of sulphurous acid gas, secured by the combustion of sulphur. The sulphur, in powder or small fragments, is placed in a shallow iron pan (about three pounds for each 1,000 cubic feet of air space), which, after being moistened with alcohol, is ignited, all measures for thorough closing of every aperature in the room having been previously taken.

In order to guard against fire it is advised that the pan should be set upon a couple of bricks in a tub partly filled with water. After the room has been thoroughly fumigated the walls should then be washed with a disinfecting solution, such as that referred to for use in immersing clothes previously to their being boiled.—Herald of Health.

The Best Dress for a Good Woman.

The best receipt ever given for a lady's dress may be found in the work of Tertullian. He says: "Let simplicity be your white, chastity your vermillion, divest your eyebrows with modesty, and your life with reservedness. Let instruction be your earrings, and a ruby cross the front pin in your head; submission to your husband your best ornament. Employ your hands in housewifely duties, and keep your feet within your own doors. Let your garments be of silk of probity, the fine linen of sanctity and the purple of chastity."

There are several things to be especially avoided in selecting a site for your dwellings. Do not select them near swamps, millponds and stagnant water. Another thing to be avoided is the proximity to manufactories which are liable to give off noxious odors and drainage from which emails arise.

ATTRACTIVE FURNITURE.

Novelties in Mirrors, Dressing Tables, Bedsteads, Etc.

Novelties in dressing tables have an ingenious arrangement of mirrors. The main glass is flanked by two hinged wings which fold after the manner of the Psyche glasses so much in use. The best of them are made in Pollard oak with beveled French plate mirrors.

Some of the prettiest English dressing tables are made of curly walnut, a dark wood with little curls in the grain resembling the grain of bird's eye maple. A large dressing table of white maple mounted with brass costs $60 upward. This white maple is a beautiful wood for bedroom sets.

The newest library tables are massive affairs of oak and mahogany. They are carved in the kidney form popularly attributed to Chippendale, but in reality a Sheraton shape. There is a succession of drawers on either side of the table, and it is supported on short spindle legs beneath the drawers.

The old fashioned four-poster bedsteads offer such allurements to the decorator that they are largely sought. Sets of carved mahogany posts are so scarce that they are being reproduced. Some of the new sets of unstained mahogany have tall, four-posted bedsteads. Single antique posts in carved mahogany are successfully utilized for hall trees, being supplied with brass or mahogany pegs.

Hall trees are much used in bedrooms for receiving the clothing laid off at bedtime, according to The Decorator and Furnisher, from which the foregoing notes are gleaned.

It Is Well to Remember.

That buttermilk will take out mildew stains.

That bottles are easily cleaned with hot water and fine coals.

That a pallet knife should be used to scrape pots and kettles.

That old napkins and old tablecloths make the very best of glasscloths.

That zinc is best cleaned with hot soapy water, then polished well with kerosene.

That it is well to keep large pieces of charcoal in damp corners and dark places.

That oilcloth can be kept bright for years if properly varnished each season with any good siccative.

That if the hands are rubbed on a stick of celery after peeling onions the smell will be entirely removed.

That if soap is purchased in large quantities and kept in a warm, dry place half the usual amount will be required.

That tulle will not warp or crack open if the precaution is taken to put a pail of water into each directly after use.—Good Housekeeping.

Crimping Blonde Hair.

Blonde hair is improved by being crimped a little in the back; in fact, any except black hair looks better when it is a little roughened. Nowadays the wearing of false hair barely is tolerated, and women with but little of their own hair arrange what they have to the best advantage. Of course a blonde can give the effect of having a great deal, because she can make it fall in curls at the side as she will not use a crimping iron; instead she will put it up on pins, pinching it with a hot iron, being careful, however, to have a paper between the iron and the hair itself. This is very easily done, and every woman knows how to crimp her hair. Be careful in crimping pins, especially when placed from the back of the head.—New York Letter.

—In consequence of the commencement exercises there will be no meeting at Reform Hall on Thursday evening, 25th inst.

—Hereafter the pensioners of the United States government will be paid on August 4th, November 4th, February 4th and May 4th.

—The Salvation Army meeting, at Reform Hall, will be discontinued for the balance of the week in consequence of the painting and repairing of the Hall.

—A meeting will be held in the rooms of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Thursday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. Fernald will conduct the monthly programme of interesting temperance readings.

—The New Jersey Editorial Association, accompanied by their wives and daughters, to the number of 200, arrived in Washington Monday afternoon on their annual trip to the South. They left yesterday for the White Sulphur Springs.

—The regular business meeting of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society will be held at Reform Hall, on Thursday, 25th inst., at three o'clock. A full attendance is desired as this is the last business session for the season. A. L. MAXSON, Sec.

—Certificate of incorporation has been filed in the office of the County Clerk by the "London Coal and Iron Company," the incorporators of which are Archer N. Martin, C. E. Kimball and W. J. Curtis. The principal part of the business will be conducted at Summit.

—There is a report—but it comes from a deeply partisan Democratic source—that ex-Comptroller Anderson and other prominent Republicans have raised a fund of $50,000 with which to start a Republican daily paper in Jersey City. There is no love lost between the ex-comptroller and Editor Pangborn, of the Jersey City Journal, and the latter has at odd times been accused by Republican papers in other parts of the State of having a few feathers in the Democratic nest in Hudson county; but it is doubtful if a new Republican paper will be started there except as a genuine business venture.

—Councilmen Smith and Spangenberg of the combine made complaint before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon to the effect that they had been "falsely and maliciously" libeled in THE NEWS of Monday. The publisher waived examination and gave bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. The complaint is so frivolous that we are surprised that the justice would take it at all. He says he is compelled to by law so long as the parties are willing to swear that the publication is "false and malicious." The publication was true in every substantial particular to the best of our knowledge and belief, and we are sure that there was not anything in the article in anywise malicious unless it is malice to try and uphold our police force in their efforts to preserve peace and good order. To the facts related a News' reporter in company with two other reputable persons, can be informed by eye witnesses, and to much more that was not published, and under the same circumstances similar items will be published every day in the week from the same justifiable motives, and in the public interests generally. We have too much self-respect to knowingly publish any false statement. We don't think falsehoods would make the cases of these politicians any worse than they are. And as for malice, life is too short to entertain malice against any one, at least for one to whom life is so full of joy and sunshine as it is to the person in this instance accused. We are advised that these fellows have gone far enough now to justify us in a series of actions, including one of malicious persecution. But perhaps it would be just as well to give them a little more rope.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIABLE.

Vincent Chapel Filled.—Mr. Marx's Phonographic Exhibition.

The announcement that the Epworth League was to give a sociable, the last of the season, drew a large attendance at Vincent chapel last evening.

A most interesting programme had been prepared.

Mr. Ernest Marx, whose exceptional skill in photography has given him wide recognition, has taken up the phonograph as a new amusement, and having obtained permission from the company gave an exceedingly interesting exhibition of this wonderful invention. His supply of cylinders was large and varied, including among the number "Annie Laurie" by the Columbia College Quartette, "Holl, Jordan Roll" by the Royal Jubilee Singers.

During one of the interims between the readjusting of Mr. Marx's selections, Mr. Moon sang first to the audience, then again to the phonograph which later repeated it most successfully. Mr. Moon was accompanied on the piano by Miss Sharp.

Mr. Mitchell, president of the League, proposed a standing vote of thanks be given Mr. Marx at the conclusion of his selections. The rising was unanimous and complete.

Refreshment tables were placed at each side of the room. The table on the right hand, upon entering, was presided over by the Misses Cornwell and Burbut; and the one on the left by the Misses Pangborn and Kellum. These young ladies were kept busy supplying with lemonade and crackers the throngs about the tables.

The meeting adjourned about ten o'clock.

W. C. T. U. Matter.

Of the many interesting and educational meetings held at the rooms of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union special attention is called to the fourth Thursday in each month, the afternoon of the Home Protection Reading Course.

Sister members, women of Plainfield, Mothers, you are urged to make an effort to attend these meetings at 3:30 p. m., at No. 70 West Front street, for not only are they entertaining, but highly educational in their character.

Come, and enjoy selections from the gifted Miss Willard's pen, from "Glimpses of Fifty Years," "The Temperance Movement," and leaflets prepared as suggested helps for mothers and temperance workers by some of the best writers of the day.

Come, dear women of Plainfield, and blessing and blessed let us work together for the Home's good.

Mrs. Fernald, our bright, cheerful leader at these meeting, and who arranges the programme which is printed in The Union Signal, each month, has a cordial greeting for every one, and words of wisdom and encouragement for all.

The last meeting was of unusual interest. Mrs. Tomlinson read "A letter to Home Makers," written by Mrs. Fernald. Miss Yates read that wonderful chapter "Glimpses of Fifty Years" entitled "The New Chivalry," and which is so full of oriental beauty, of sad, touching pathos, and lofty aspiration. "The Home of Frances E. Willard," in the Chautauquan for May was read by Miss Jennie Bolen, and Mrs. Ely Taylor read a national leaflet: "Busy Women and the W. C. T. U."

The next afternoon of the reading course will be Thursday, June 25th. A good programme is promised and a large attendance is desired. All are welcome.

Dr. Winans Killed by a Fall From a Tree.

Dr. John Winans, a well-known physician of Lyons Farms, died yesterday from the effects of a fall from a cherry tree in his orchard. Dr. Winans did not regain consciousness from the time he was found under the tree on Monday until he died. He was discovered lying insensible on the ground by a servant, and was removed to his house. He was forty-two years old, unmarried, and was known in Union and Essex counties as a skillful practitioner.

A Painful Accident.

Mr. Leopold Kuntz, a young man in the employ of Mr. Frederick Casper, met with a painful accident Monday evening. He was engaged tapping a keg of beer when it slipped and caught two of the fingers of his right hand between another keg. One of the digits was amputated and the other was badly smashed.

Held for the Grand Jury

Augustus Sutterlin, Jr., was given a hearing before Justice Crossley last evening on the charge of assault and battery on George Lewis, Jr. After hearing the testimony, the justice held the accused in $750 bail to await the action of the Somerset county Grand Jury.

Cut By a Broken Bottle.

John Kleine, the assistant chef at the Albion, met with a painful accident yesterday. He thrust his hand into an ice box for the purpose of getting some article, when it came in contact with a broken bottle and was badly lacerated. Dr. Endicott attended him.

—Some thief or thieves effected an entrance into Mrs. Corwin's store on Park avenue last night. Only a few articles are missing.

—Hallock & Davis have a large assortment of straw hats for boys and children and they are selling them very cheap.

The Land of the Heathen and the Land of the Christian.—A Contrast.

WE SHOULD IMITATE.

We Americans are inclined to look upon the Chinese as heathen, but their summary way of dealing out Justice might not be inappropriate for many other nations to imitate, especially in regard to the treatment of swindlers. It would have the effect of breaking up the mania in this country for wrecking banks, etc. Tcheng-Ki-Tong had for six years acted as Secretary of Legation here and in London, and his life in this city, where he spent the greater portion of the time, was marked with many forms of extravagance. During the early part of this year the London Times published a despatch, coming ostensibly from Li Hung Chang, the Chinese Prime Minister, authorizing Tcheng-Ki-Tong to negotiate for his Government a loan of £7,000,000. Tcheng-Ki-Tong opened negotiations with two banks in London and a bank in Paris to furnish the loan. While the negotiations were in progress Tcheng-Ki-Tong was quietly installed, and the afterwards sailed from Marseilles for China to the great sorrow of a large number of creditors, whom he owed immense sums of money. In fact, it was absolutely believed that the Chinese diplomat had taken advantage of his official position to swindle right and left. Some of his dupes would probably have had him arrested if such a course had been possible, but, representing as he did the Emperor of China, it was true to pursue his swindling schemes with no fear of the French law before him, his position exempting him from the process of law. But Chinese law is far-reaching when the subjects of the Emperor are concerned and when Tcheng-Ki-Tong returned, there was no course open to him but to obey the Emperor's command. He not done so his family in China would have been held responsible for his act, and all his relatives would have been held to a strict accountability for the deeds of their kinsman. Rather than bring this disaster upon those relatives, Tcheng-Ki-Tong obeyed his sovereign's mandate to return to his native country. Upon his arrival there he was placed under arrest. His trial shortly followed, and death is the penalty for his wrong doing.—Bridgeton Pioneer.

HE CAN RIDE A BRONCHO.

But Not the Bicycle When It is Required to Run Over a Dog.

People have been wondering why the Methodist pastor, Rev. Mr. C. B. Mitchell has had one of his hands bandaged. He was hurt last Saturday.

The divine was coasting down a steep incline near Fanwood on a new wheel given to him by his parishioners when a dog ran out from a dooryard directly in front of him. A collision resulted and the minister was thrown headlong to the ground. His face and hands were filled with sharp stones, driven into the skin by the force of the fall, while the bicycle was completely wrecked. Mr. Mitchell in his boyhood spent some time on the plains among the wild broncbos, and acquired unusual skill at horsemanship that enabled him to break in the broncho to become as gentle as broncbos can be made. Hence the surprise that a little thing like a dog could cause such trouble. But the unexpected always happens.

Attempt to Wreck the Baltimore Flyer.

An accident was barely averted on Sunday night on the Central Railroad at Fanwood. Just beyond the station, where the road makes a long curve through a deep cut, somebody piled a heap of ties and stone pieces on the track. The obstruction was discovered by a track walker two minutes before the Baltimore flyer was due. He worked with frantic haste to clear the track, and just removed the last of the heap in sight of the engine swung into sight around the curve, 100 yards distant. The train sped by, trainmen and passengers ignorant of the danger that had threatened them but a moment before. It has not been discovered who tried to wreck the train.

Boys' Club Notes.

The rooms will be closed next Friday evening for the month of July and August, opening on the evening of Sept 1st.

The attractions for the boys next season will be evening classes of different kinds.

The ball nine will play the Unions next Saturday afternoon at 3:30. Following are the players and their positions:—M. Sutphen, 1st b.; Bolsterle, c.; C. Sutphen, 2d b.; Moran, c. f.; Conway, s. s.; Schenck, 3d b.; Adams, p.; Sheridan, l. f.; Winn, r. f.

The Superintendent's office will be opened every week day from 10 to 11 a. m. and 3 to 4 p. m. Only boys wishing to see him can call then. W. H. MINER, Sup't.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Adolph Schneely of this city died this morning. Deceased was fifty-three years of age.

Mrs. O. T. Mackey and Miss Perkins of New York are visiting Mrs. Wm. G. E. See of 168 West Front street.

The numerous readers of THE NEWS will be interested to know that Mrs. Evelyn Everett Spicer, the Rev. Dr. Talmage's favorite soprano, will be heard in the service of song at the Park avenue Baptist church next Sunday evening. Mrs. Spicer is a lady of culture and talented, with a voice of remarkable clearness and power, highly cultivated in the Italian school under the Professor who developed the voice of Mme. Patti.

A MILLION TONS.

Port Reading the New Coal Shipping Point.

The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company are pushing the completion of their new line of branch road from Round Brook to Sewaren, on the Long Branch division of the Central Railroad fronting on Staten Island sound. At the latter place coal shutes, wharves and trestles will be erected and the terminus of the new railroad will be called "Port Reading." There all the coal shippers to foreign ports and the City of New York will be loaded.

The opening of this port will develope that section of the State to a great degree. Several thousand hands will be employed and navigation on the sound greatly increased. The taking away of the coal shipped by the Reading railroad, which the opening of "Port Reading" means, from the Central railroad, will lessen the coal traffic over that road and the union crossing in this city over a million tons annually.

In talking to a Central Railroad man about the promised diminished revenue to the Central Railroad Company, he significantly said, "Oh, when that's gone, there will be something else to take its place."

A shipper at the Elizabethport docks said to a journal reporter that the present shipments of coal from that port are largely in excess of last year.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, under whose tracks the Reading road will pass, are elevating their tracks one mile east of Edgar station to permit the former road to go under. The Philadelphia and Reading road have driven experimental piles, and have purchased five hundred acres of shore front property known as "Star Landing."

It is said that the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company are now shipping 60 per cent. of the anthracite coal now mined in Pennsylvania.

The elevation of the Pennsylvania tracks at the point mentioned will be done it is said, at the expense of the Pennsylvania Railroad.—Elizabeth Journal.

CROPS IN NEW JERSEY.

The Heavy Rainfall Beneficial, but Too Late for the Hay.

The New Jersey Weather Service gives the following summary of its reports for the week ending June 19:

During the first five days of the week the temperature was decidedly above (from 10 to 12 degrees) and during the last two, decidedly below the weekly average in all portions of the State. Very severe and destructive thunderstorms occurred on Tuesday and Wednesday in the eastern counties, doing considerable damage, especially in Bayonne, Hudson county; Asbury Park, Monmouth county; Plainfield and Elizabeth, Union county.

The rainfall for the week has been up to and in some localities above the weekly average and was most beneficial to all crops, besides putting the soil in good condition for cultivation, but was too late to benefit the hay crop, which has fallen off several points during the week, owing to previous drought and the extreme heat of the first of the week. Peaches, pears, plums, fruit trees, and especially apples, are injured by plant lice. When the insects attack fruit as well as leaves, or where they are very numerous, he advises spraying with either the whale oil soap, one pound to eight gallons, or with the kerosene emulsion.

Wife Deserter Gable in Town.

John B. Gable, the upholster, who, it was alleged, eloped with Mrs. Wm. B. Avery a few weeks ago, and who left his family destitute, again arrived in this city on the 1:59 train this afternoon. He at once secured a hack and proceeded to his former home on Cottage place. It is not known what the result of the visit was.

Gable told a friend that he came to Plainfield to sign over the interest he had in two houses, to his wife. He will in all probability be arrested.

Wheelmen Ride in the Moonlight.

The Bergen County Wheelmen, Leonia, last evening gave a successful moonlight lantern parade from the Leonia Lyceum, through Englewood to Tenafly and return. Over a hundred cyclists were in line. There were delegations from Elizabeth, Rutherford, North Brooklyn and Englewood. A short halt was made at Englewood and a substantial supper was given at Leonia.

A Serious Runaway.

A carriage drawn by a bayhorse and occupied by two ladies residing on Grove street, was upset after the horse, becoming unmanageable had run several blocks at a headlong gallop. The accident occurred on West Seventh street. The ladies were thrown out and severely injured. Immediately care was given them by residents.

—Several Plainfield physicians are attending the annual convention of the New Jersey Medical Society which is in session at Atlantic City to-day.

—The following, among others, have decided to attend the Student's Conference at Northfield, Mass., W. D. Murray, Tiemann N. Horn, T. L. Hazell, C. B. Brown, Phillip Zimmer and C. H. Lee.

—The hay crop will be but little over half a crop this year, and the corn and potato crop will not be large. The report of the State secretary of agriculture on these crops is not highly satisfactory.

Will John Dillon be Leader?

DUBLIN, June 24, (Special.)—It is said that John Dillon is released from imprisonment. Justin McCarthy will resign the leadership of the Irish party in his favor.

Large accessions from the Parnellites are expected in the events of Dillon's acceptance.

Toms' Assailants Sentenced.

SOMERVILLE, June 24th, (Special.)—In the Somerset county court this morning Judge Bartine, sentenced Cook and Walker, the persons who were convicted of assault on an old man named Toms, to twenty years each in State prison.

From Over the State.

Prof. J. B. Smith, entomologist at the New Jersey Experiment Station at Rutgers College, says: The peach louse, which infests the roots of peach trees, is responsible for much so-called "yellows" that exist in this State. Potash, in the form of ashes, sunk in the ground about the roots will be found a remedy and at the same time a fertilizer. Tobacco used in the same way will have a similar effect.

Thomas Fitzpatrick of 35 Colden street, Newark was arrested at an early hour this morning by Detective Smith of the Second precinct on a charge of breach of the peace. The complainant was Paul Weckmueller of 22 Sussex avenue. He alleged that Fitzpatrick had called him vile names, told him that he (Weckmueller) was a thief and threatened to shoot him. Fitzpatrick told a very different story. He said that he went to Weckmueller's saloon to buy the proprietor to sell no more drink, especially on Sundays, to his boys. Weckmueller is a player in his saloon, he he said, and one of his boys, who is learning to play the piano, he said, was not there for Weckmueller's allowing him to play on the instrument. When he made his request, Weckmueller took him by the shoulders and pushed him out of doors. Justice Conlon took Fitzpatrick's own recognizance for keeping the peace, and discharged him.

Dr. Schlelmer may not know of it, but the Paterson Press has discovered quite a little friction in the workings of the new political machine at the Morris Plains Asylum. It says: A farmer in the vicinity has been in the habit of serving milk to the institution, claiming that he had a contract for a year. He was told that new arrangements would be made, but he insists upon leaving the usual quantity daily. An officer was set to keep him out, of the grounds by fastening the gate, but so far the attempt has been unsuccessful. The farmer, who has always been a "dyed-in-the-wool hard-shell Democrat," says he knows of no reason why he should be so summarily displaced, and declares that he will enforce his claims in the courts. The Press furthermore says that all the old "Republican" cows have been sold and replaced with others of undoubted "Democratic" blood. The genial doctor ought to see about this at once. If the farmer is a true Jeffersonian he should be paid for his milk. If he leans towards ex-Senator Everett or is under the Flagpeck proclivities he ought to be paid the highest market price. But if he is a Kirkpatrick, a Blodgett or an anti-Abbett man of any kind, no matter how good a general Democrat he may be his milk ought to be thrown out. It probably has microbes in it.

President Whelan Speaks.

President Whelan, of the Board of Health, and the officers of the Elizabethtown Water Company deny emphatically that they have secured any communication from Dr. Wolfe, of Newark, calling their attention to the drinking water being poisoned by dead fish in Drake's Pond, a tributary of the Elizabeth River, from which the drinking water is taken. The officials of the water company allege that the water is pure and pleasant to drink as it ever was, and say that the system of purification in operation is so thorough that no organic matter detrimental to health can get into the drinking supply, as the water is carefully filtered from one reservoir to another. In regard to dead fish being in the tributaries of the river the engineer of the water company says this is not an uncommon thing at this season of the year. The Common Council last night appointed a committee to ascertain if the water in the pond had been poisoned.

A Question of Honor.

Some years ago a western bank failed for a large amount. During legal proceedings growing out of the failure it was shown that a trusted employe of the bank had known for some time of fraudulent transactions on the part of the superior officers, and had aided them to conceal the crookedness from the public and even from the official bank examiner. The employe was exonerated on the ground that he was only obeying orders and was under obligations to do as he was told. But some time later the employe sought a clerkship in the government departments in Washington. He was extremely capable and a place was found where he did excellent service. But immediately this question was raised. Could a person who had knowingly assisted in fraudulent practices while a bank clerk be permitted to assist in keeping the records of the departments of the government of the United States where scrupulous honesty and exactness were necessary? The decision was against the clerk, and he was summarily dismissed. Served him right. A person who would knowingly assist in swindling operations, even when his bread and butter depended on it, could never be safely intrusted again with funds belonging to others.

An exactly similar case has lately come up in connection with another bank failure. As far back as ten years ago the assistant cashier helped to hide the bank president's stealings by making false entries till the thefts amounted to $300,000. Never, never again should such a man have any place of trust. Public opinion ought to hunt him to the farthest corner of the earth and punish him. He might indeed be permitted to carry a log to keep the breath of life in his false body if it was worth keeping, which is doubtful, but to handle money or transact business—nevermore. He could not even be trusted to be a hostler, since it would be possible for him to steal the horses' feed and falsify the returns.

High Life in Australia.

Nothing is more peculiar and amusing, not to say instructive, than aristocracy in Australia. Many of the richest and most respected citizens of the present day are descendants of notorious criminals, who left their country for their country's good. Even titled lady in Sydney is the daughter of a man whose coachman used turn and say, whenever his master found fault with him: "Why, sir, I once went to see you hanged. You were reprieved only just in time."

Many years ago some of the most desperate women of London, those believed to be totally depraved, were deported to Australia on a ship called the Red Rover. They were such fierce creatures that on the voyage out these women murdered the ship's doctor. A distinguished lawyer of Sydney is the son of one of the women, possibly one of the very ones who murdered the Red Rover's doctor. So that in Australia it is nowhere safe to allude in society to the former British penal colonies of the country. For this reason the whole of Australia ought to be a republic. It would make a grand one. The older one's family, the less inclination he would there be in general to make it prominent. That would do away with at least one nuisance in a republic, that of old families. Most interesting of all, however, in connection with Australian aristocracy is this proof that the most abandoned portion of a community can be taken into the open country, away from criminal associations, and they and their descendants become in time the very backbone and thews of respectable society.

Listen to what the professor of English literature in Columbia college, New York city, says: "To state my opinion frankly, there is not in our American literature of today, either in books or magazines, or in published sermons or lectures or speeches, any body of written English so strong and effective, or even so correct, and in the true sense, classical in point of style, as we find day after day in the best editorial writing of our American newspapers." Thank you, Professor Price. We have often observed the same thing, and called attention to it. The fact is that a considerable part of the work of the editorial writer is boiling down and summarizing the long effusions of scientific and religious writers and college professors, and putting the same in such shape so the public will be induced to read their ideas. How much would the public know of their learned essays otherwise?

If the Italians get scared off from coming to America anymore by reason of the New Orleans affair, who is going to build our railroads and clean our streets?

California brandies have taken first rank in the world. In France, where the best brandy is supposed to be made, at the Paris exposition, the California product received first prize, a gold medal and diploma. Never drink brandy, but if you will drink it let it be California brandy, the best on earth, and the product of your own country.

BARDSLEY'S CONFESSION!

But It Did Not Amount to Much as Such.

HENRY H. YARD IMPLICATED.

The Closing of the Keystone Bank Ruined Him—Admitted Loaning the State Funds, but Denies Having Profited by It a Single Dollar's Worth.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Bardsley's "confession" yesterday practically confessed nothing that has not been made public through the columns of the daily newspapers. It was more in the line of a defense of his own conduct, giving in detail his transactions. It bristled with figures intended to show where every dollar he has been accused of misappropriating has gone. The charges to which he has pleaded guilty—loaning the public funds at interest and speculating with them—he frankly admitted, but he emphatically denied that he had benefited by his transactions to the extent of a dollar.

Henry H. Yard Implicated.

Bardsley said that it was through Bank Examiner Drew's plausible statements of the Keystone bank's condition that he had deposited his money there. He further said that Mr. Drew knew of the bank's condition and was under obligations to John C. Lucas, the dead president of the institution, for money loaned and for valuable favors received. Bardsley implicated Henry H. Yard in his transactions by stating that it was through him that he loaned money to banks.

According to Bardsley's statement his present plight may be accounted for by trusting too much to the statements of others, and can be epitomized in his own words on telling the history of his deposits in the Keystone bank.

His Defense.

"I did not get the money and I have never got any part of it, and it is still in the bank or should be there. I knew that the closing of the bank would cause loss to the city and state and personal destruction to myself. I therefore made every effort to sustain the bank and its closing has been the misfortune of my life."

It was learned last night that over $300,000 of the missing state money was deposited in the Farmers' and Mechanics' bank. Investigation shows that this money was deposited in the names of Bardsley and State Treasurer Boyer.

More Trouble Likely.

This may drag the state treasurer into the affair and more trouble is expected. Experts have discovered another fact against Bardsley. They find that he did take oath as state official and that oath is now certified to on his bond given to the state. This may make his sentence ten years longer.

Fraudulently Added Wanamaker's Name.

Investigation also shows that besides holding the stock in the Keystone, oversued by the clerk Symington, Postmaster General Wanamaker's name is also on the books of the bank as a stockholder. In his evidence before the council's committee Mr. Wanamaker said he never owned any stock, and that he never held except the overissued shares, which he carried as collateral for money loaned, not having paid for them at any time. It is possible that President Lucas, besides overissuing stock in his bank, fraudulently added Wanamaker's name to the list of stockholders for effect upon other stockholders.

When Bardsley had concluded his statement District Attorney Graham moved that sentence be suspended. The motion was granted, the sweltering audience surged into the street, and Bardsley was taken back to prison in his carriage.

FOUGHT IN A SYNAGOGUE.

A Number of Persons Seriously Injured in the Scrimmage.

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich., June 24.—Ever since the Jewish synagogue was built, over two years ago, there has been a continued rivalry among the adherents. One faction claimed the rabbi in charge mingled more freely with them, and hence favored another rabbi for their faction. This embittered the other faction and trouble has been brewing for some time. Monday night while one party had possession of the synagogue and was attending to its devotions the rival faction walked in and drew for all fight. Clubs, knives, clubs and chandeliers were freely used and many heads were battered and cut, some seriously. Officers arrived on the scene as quickly as possible and after a hard struggle quiet was restored. The following were seriously hurt: A. Cohn, deep scalp wound, conditional; C. Cohn, scalp wound; Louis Steinberg, cut about face; S. Yalomosin, scalp wound. Many others were less severely hurt. A number of the participants in the row have been arrested and warrants are out for the arrest of fifteen others.

"That Boy Babbage" Dead.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 24.—E. F. Babbage, of this city, died suddenly last night at Alexandria bay. The deceased was well known all over the United States as "That Boy Babbage." For many years he had traveled as theatrical and minstrel agent for different companies and put in his time during the summer acting as a pilot and guide on the St. Lawrence river. He was also the author of a book entitled "Eighteen Years on the St. Lawrence." Mr. Babbage was fifty-one years old.

Three Bank Robbers Sent Up.

CHICAGO, June 24.—John Corbett, Frank Bennett and Harry Featherstone pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing the Merchants' Exchange bank at South Chicago last December and were sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Charles Mullen, the fourth defendant, failed to appear in court and his bonds of $6,000 were declared forfeited.

Parnell Will Marry Mrs. O'Shea.

LONDON, June 24.—Mr. Parnell has obtained a special license to marry Mrs. O'Shea. He has been compelled to do this owing to the delays interposed by his enemies in Brighton. He can now be married Thursday. He has intimated that no one is to be present at the ceremony, which will be conducted with the strictest privacy.

Same Old Story.

BOSTON, June 24.—J. W. Grummon, a young man who has been employed by the Hartford Life Insurance company for some months past, has been arrested charged with larceny and embezzlement of $1,300.

Jury Bribers Granted a New Trial.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—Judge Marr has decided to grant a new trial to Mac Crystal and Cooney, the jury bribers, on the ground that the testimony did not warrant the verdict.

SMASHUP AT WHITE PLAINS.

Thirteen Persons Hurt in the Collision of the Passenger and Gravel Trains.

WHITE PLAINS, June 24.—The railroad officials refuse to discuss the cause of the accident at the railroad depot here in which several persons were severely injured. The passenger train left Grand Central station at 8:02 and was on schedule time. It was made up of four passenger coaches and a smoker. The gravel train consisted of eleven flat cars. The trains collided directly opposite Superintendent Pirfle's office. The crash was heard for blocks away.

Fireman Elliott was inside the cab, and he terrible force he was crushed up against the boiler, knocking him senseless. The tank burst and the water poured over him.

Supervisor Rauch was struck by a large piece of timber and died severely. George Barrett, the baggageman, was thrown headlong out of the door, landing unconscious on the opposite track.

At once the wreck was cleared sufficiently to allow the regular traffic to continue. Two physicians were summoned and dressed the wounds of the injured. The doctors ordered the removal to their homes of Engineers Strang and Fowler, and Firemen Elliott and Sweeney. Elliott's condition is critical. Telegraph Operator Mitchell, in the dispatcher's office, who witnessed the collision, fearing the engines would blow up jumped from the second story window.

The injured, as officially reported at Superintendent Pirfle's office, are Ada J. Brown, Williamsbridge, badly bruised on the body; Miss M. Carter, Mt. Vernon, school teacher, cuts in the face; Henry Odell, Scarsdale, cuts on head; David Williams, of Mt. Vernon, lawyer, eyes bruised; John Sweeney, fireman, of Peekskill, head cut; Gilbert Isaacs, 163 Greenwich street, New York, legs cut and badly bruised; George Barrett, baggageman, head and neck injured; A. L. Babcock, of Sing Sing, deputy county treasurer, lips cut, teeth knocked out, bruised about body; B. F. Palmer, of Mamaroneck, deputy county registrar, bruised about the body; Fred Strang, engineer, back injured and bruised shoulders; Conductor Lauch, shoulders injured and body bruised; Frank Fowler, engineer, White Plains, cuts on face and several scalp wounds; George Elliott, of Pawling, fireman, severe internal injuries.

JEALOUSY THE CAUSE.

Two Boarders and His Daughter Shot by the Jealous Husband.

BEVERLY, Mass., June 24.—Warren A. Shaw, whose wife keeps a boarding house on Home street, entered it at 9 o'clock and shot Henry L. Roberts in the back while he was talking with Shaw's thirteen-year-old daughter in the kitchen. Arthur C. Morgan, another boarder, received two bullets in his breast and one in the thumb.

Shaw's daughter interfered, and was beaten over the head with the butt of the revolver. The wound be murderer died, but was saved by his daughter Lizzie, at whom Shaw fired a shot, which lodged in her leg. Policeman Raymond pursued Shaw and caught him, when Shaw turned the revolver on himself and blew out his brains.

The victims were sent to the Salem hospital. The bullet has been removed from Roberts. The cause of the shooting was jealousy. Shaw had not been living with his wife for the past two weeks. The daughter will be lame for life. Roberts is out of danger, and hopes are entertained for Morgan's recovery. Shaw was about forty-two years old and was a shoemaker by trade. Roberts is a shoemaker and Morgan is a barber.

Alley Bros., of Boston, Assigns.

BOSTON, June 24.—Alley Bros. & Place, leather dealers, 54 South street, have assigned. The liabilities are from $300,000 to $500,000. The business of the firm has latterly been managed almost entirely by Mr. Place, who resides in Woburn and has been regarded as worth $100,000 or more. The firm has done a business of $1,000,000 a year and is supposed to be making money. It has enjoyed good credit. W. H. Alley has resided in Chicago for several years, where he is engaged in the railroad supply business. Mr. Place has been an active member of the firm. The firm issued a statement of its financial condition last night and after balancing showing a surplus of $1,300,000 above all liabilities. It would seem, therefore, as if the firm's claim that the creditors will be paid in full will be realized.

Depositors Will Be the Losers.

NASHVILLE, June 24.—The failure of the Nashville Savings bank has created but little sensation in business circles, as it has been known to be in financial straits for the past year. The heaviest losers will be its depositors. The total liabilities are figured at $604,585.10, due principally to Nashville banks and the Hanover National bank, of New York city. These banks carefully scanned by first class paper. Hon. James M. Head has been selected as trustee and is directed at once to take charge of the bank and wind up its business.

Held on a Charge of Manslaughter.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—The coroner's jury investigating the cause of the accident on the Illinois Central railroad at Sauve station, by which six persons were killed, rendered a verdict charging F. C. Tenant with gross carelessness in leaving the switch open and Conductor Isam as an accessory in the act of neglect. Both men were held in the sum of $3,500 each on the charge of manslaughter.

The Treasury Surplus.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—The treasury has recovered from the heavy drain on account of pension payments and Treasurer Nebeker's daily statement shows a net surplus of $1,257,486. The surplus for July will probably daily increase from now until the end of the month, when it is expected to reach its normal condition, about $10,000,000.

The Prince Here.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Prince George of Greece, who accompanied the czarewitch on his tour around the world, has arrived here from Yokohama on the steamer Gaelic. He will proceed direct to New York, sail for London and go thence to St. Petersburg.

Weavers Gain Their Point.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 24.—The agent of the Shore mill having promised that the obnoxious overseer will resign and that the low price classes of work will be increased, the weavers returned to work and the mill is running in full.

Cause of the Collapse.

BOSTON, June 24.—In the supreme court yesterday a receiver was appointed for the Home Relief association, of Lynn. In serting a "total disability" clause in its bylaws caused the company to come to grief.

If you are a victim of any blood or nerve disease as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv.

SUED BY AN AGED WOMAN

The Lady Says Mr. Joyce Promised Marriage.

HE SAYS HE IS NOT IN THE MARKET.

A Man with a Like Name, He Claims, Is Getting Him Continually Into Trouble Through Mistaken Identity—Admits Borrowing Money from the Widow.

BROOKLYN, June 24.—In spite of the fact that Andrew Joyce is three-score and ten years he has and until recently a strong inclination to enter the matrimonial market. As a result he has just been served with papers in a suit for breach of promise of marriage. She whose heart has been wounded is a widow and she admits that she is seventy years old, and that she has been many times a grandmother. Another interesting item which the gossips are having fun with is the allegation that the fair widow expected $1,000 in trying to catch the recreant Mr. Joyce.

Is Old, but Looks Young.

It is many years since Mr. Joyce first embarked on the sea of matrimony, and now, although a widower, he enjoys the proud distinction of being a grandfather. He is still strong and vigorous, and were it not for his long flowing gray beard and white hair would pass for a man of forty.

He is in the real estate business, having an office at 281 Atlantic avenue. His residence is 282 Dean street, where he occupies a flat.

When the Lovemaking Began.

The plaintiff in the case is Mrs. Matilda Partridge, who lives at 714 Third avenue. Her complaint contains that the lovemaking of a business character. She says that on May 14 he borrowed $1,000 from her and gave his note as security. In consideration of this loan, she says Joyce agreed to marry her at once. Although he made that promise last month he has as yet failed to perform that part of the ceremony, hence her suit.

Mr. Joyce Is Surprised.

Mr. Joyce was greatly surprised when the legal papers were served upon him. He is reputed to have said he was out of the matrimonial market, and that it was an outrage to sue him. He admitted, however, that he had given the note for $1,000, but that it was purely a business transaction, and that when the note fell due he would take it up. This thing of promising to marry Mrs. Partridge, he said, was simply nonsense.

"I am too old for such things now," he added, "and you can safely say that that part of the suit, at least, will never be brought to trial."

Claims He Is Not the Individual.

Mr. Joyce evidently felt sorry for having admitted so much, because, when seen some time later, he denied that he was the party sued. He said there was an Edward A. Joyce, who was always getting him into trouble by his escapades, and he supposed that this suit was another case of the same nature.

He denied that he had been served with papers in any breach of promise suit or that he had borrowed any money from Mrs. Partridge.

In spite of this positive denial Lawyer Mott, who is counsel for the fair widow, says that Mr. Joyce did promise to marry his client, and that the suit will be pushed against him.

An Indian Uprising Feared.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 24.—The following dispatch has been received here from Lieutenant Brett, commanding a detachment in Kern's Canyon, A. T. The dispatch is dated at Areiba village, and is addressed to the assistant adjutant general: "Came to Areiba to arrest several Yrelies, who have been guilty of sheep-or's marks and threatened to destroy the schools. When we entered the village we were confronted by about fifty hostiles, armed and stationed by the school house. They openly declared hostility to the government, and a fight was barely averted. A strong force should be sent here with Hotchkiss guns, as I anticipate serious trouble if the hostiles are not summarily dealt with."

The People's Party in Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 24.—In an interview President Woodruff and George Q. Cannon, of the Mormon church, asserted that there was not a truth in the charge that the so called People's party of Utah, the membership of which is wholly Mormon, was dissolved by the church. The president had also disclaimed the right to control the political action of the members of the church. He also said that he favored the separation of the church and state.

Two Arrests on Suspicion.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 24.—Mrs. Allie Gamel died from the effects of poison administered by herself. The woman's husband, Stewell Gamel, or her sister, Lilly Loyd. The three lived together, and of late they have had trouble because of the alleged infatuation of Gamel for Lilly Loyd. Gamel and Lilly have been arrested.

Vetoed by the Governor.

HARRISBURG, June 24.—The bills dividing the state into congressional and legislative districts have been vetoed by the governor. The governor gives several reasons for this action, his main objection being that the bills are unfair and contain many irregularities contrary to the constitutional requirements.

Must Teach German.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 24.—The supreme court has decided in favor of the teaching of the German language in the schools, holding that the law is compulsory and that that language must be taught wherever the requisite number of patrons shall petition for the same.

Mr. Wright Took Charge.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—William Redwood Wright, who was appointed by the governor, has assumed charge of the city treasurer's office, and for the first time in nearly a quarter of a century the city treasury is presided over by a Democrat.

Death Sentences Commuted.

HARRISBURG, June 24.—The board of pardons has recommended that the death sentence in the cases of Marion Cowel, of Fayette county, and William Killer, of Philadelphia, be commuted to imprisonment for life.

A Postal Clerk in Trouble.

NEW YORK, June 24.—James C. Reilly a clerk in Branch A of the New York postoffice, was arrested on the charge of stealing letters and was held in $1,000 bail for examination.

ROBBERS RULE THE ROAST.

An Escaped Convict and His Followers Creating a Reign of Terror.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 24.—A band of robbers, headed by Frank Cooley, an escaped convict, is terrorizing the southern part of Fayette county. The gang recently robbed the Presbyterian church at Hopdentown, taking the carpet from the floor. A few days later they burned down the house of Charles Ewing, of Smithfield, who had talked about them.

Last Saturday they held up James Rohrer near Smithfield, mistaking him for a driver. Nearly every day some one is robbed on the highway. The country people are afraid to make a move. Cooley is a desperate criminal and declares he will never be taken alive. He was convicted two years ago for torturing and robbing an old lady named Ross at Smithfield, in this county. He and his companions burned her feet to make her tell where her money was. Cooley's gang numbers about twenty desperate men, and they have many abettors.

The Elliott Murder Trial.

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—The state has nearly exhausted its witnesses in the Elliott murder trial, and will probably rest this week. Detective William Hamilton, who conducted the autopsy of W. L. Hughes, testified as to the facts developed. He was also an eyewitness to the tragedy. The statements of many of the preceding witnesses relative to Bill Elliott barricading himself behind some women were fully corroborated by this witness. Silas Landeman also occupied the stand and concisely described that part of the tragedy wherein Patsey Elliott pursued Osborn into a back room. Although he and Pat had a desperate hand to hand struggle, during which a revolver was discharged and the former fell to the floor dead. He was not very close to the scene and saw Pat get off of his victim. During the close of the day's session Juror Legg took suddenly ill and the court was necessarily adjourned.

The Heirs Defeated.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 24.—The surrogate of Albany county has just handed down his decision in the matter of the final distribution of the estate of Eli Perry, who was a wealthy Albany merchant who died some years ago leaving a number of bequests to institutions subject to the life interest of his wife. Perry died a little over two years ago and the heirs set up the contention that Mr. Perry had given more than half of his estate to benevolent institutions and that such donations must submit to a diminution of their share of Mr. Perry's estate. Among the institutions to which Mr. Perry bequeathed money was the Rochester Theological seminary. The interests of the institution were carried before the surrogate by Marcenus R. Beigan. The surrogate does not sustain the contention of the heirs and the Rochester institution under his decision will receive the sum of $76,178.08.

Rhett Acquitted.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The jury in the case of William B. Rhett, who for the last ten days has been on trial for alleged assault upon two young girls, brought in a verdict of acquittal. Rhett, who is a member of the distinguished South Carolina family of that name, was remanded to Lndlow street jail to answer to two indictments charging him with assault. Both these indictments are parts of the general accusation against the prisoner it is not likely that they will ever be tried, and Rhett will probably be released on bail today.

Fought, Dipped and Shook Hands.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., June 24.—Joe Donner and Connie Daley fought three rounds with bare knuckles two miles east of this city. Donner, a light weight, knocked out his opponent easily. The fight was over a girl with whom the young men were enamored. Both the participants were in Canada to fight by, referee and seconds and given a dip in the Erie canal. They then shook hands and returned to the city friends. Daley was badly battered and one eye was closed.

Ives and Carter Matched.

MILWAUKEE, June 24.—Jacob Schaefer and John Callahan have each deposited $250 each with Frank Parker as forfeit for a match game between Frank Ives and Eugene Carter. The match will be for $500 a side, 600 points, 14-inch balk line, to be played in this city between Oct. 15 and Oct. 20, or as near those dates as a suitable hall can be secured.

Canada Abolishes the Sugar Duty.

OTTAWA, June 24.—In the house of commons Foster made reference to a reference to the reciprocity issues and the announcement of the abolition of duty on raw sugar, by which act the treasury loses and the consumers are freed from over $3,000,000. The duty on refined sugar is changed from 7½ per cent. of duty to 5 per cent. of value, equal to eight-tenths of a cent per pound.

His Resignation May Be Accepted.

LONDON, June 24.—The attitude of Sir John Gorst toward the Indian department, of which he is political secretary, is the engrossing topic of discussion in the lobbies of parliament, and the general feeling is that the cabinet cannot retain Sir John, or he retain his office, without mutual loss of respect and efficiency. Sir John's offer of resignation will, it is thought, be accepted.

Earthquake Shock Felt.

CHARLESTON, S.C., June 24.—At 11:27 last night a slight shock of earthquake occurred here. No damage was done.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 24.—At Pasadena and San Fernando slight shocks of earthquake were felt. No damage was done.

CHINESE ON A RAMPAGE.

Houses of Foreigners Set on Fire and Pillaged.

GUNBOATS HURRIED TO THE RESCUE

A Mob Attacks the Property of the Jesuits at Wuhu Wong and an Inland Mission at Nganking—The English Consulate Also Attacked.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.—Chinese newspapers received here give details of the acts of violence to which foreigners are at present subjected in China. The North China Daily News says it had been reported for several days that a mob had determined to loot and burn the property of the Jesuits at Wuhu Wong because of a rumor that a number of children had been killed and their eyes taken out to make medicine for the Jesuit fathers. Tuesday, May 12, a mob of Chinese gathered about the premises occupied by the priests and set fire to the cathedral and other buildings after driving out the missionaries and pillaging the place. The mob then attacked the English consulate and the official and his wife were compelled to disguise themselves in Chinese costumes in order to effect their escape. They and a number of other foreign residents embarked on a vessel belonging to the China Navigation company. During the night the rioters attacked the custom house and the residence of foreign officials, but were repelled.

Gunboats to the Rescue.

Three Chinese gunboats arrived on the scene the next day and the disorder ceased. The most notable demonstration against the American Methodist Episcopal mission but the missionaries at this place, acting on the advice of the British consul, embarked on a vessel and went to Shanghai. The Jesuits who escaped from Wuhu in a boat were picked up at Ohian King.

A Catholic Mission Attacked.

On May 16 the natives of Nganking made an attack on the Roman Catholic mission. The priests succeeded in keeping the mob off and one of the assailants was arrested and punished. An attack was also made on the inland mission at Northgate, but the authorities arrived in time to prevent any serious damage. A French and a German gunboat arrived on the scene on the 18th and the French commander sent word to the governor of Nganking that if the rioters did not obey the mandates of the magistrate he would not hesitate to take strong measures. The governor responded that order would be maintained.

Japanese Steamer Capsized.

The Japanese steamer Ishitaki Maru was capsized near Chefoo on the night of the 4th inst., and all hands, numbering over fifty, are missing. Only seven bodies had been recovered up to the 8th inst.

Irish Envoys Abandon Their Tour.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The Irish envoys and members of parliament, J. J. O'Kelly, William Redmond, John O'Connor and Henry Harrison will leave for the east at once. They will continue eastward until they reach London. Sunday the envoys talked the situation over and resolved to abandon their western tour. They declared themselves to this effect. An attempt was made by Chicago Irishmen to get the reconsider their determination, but it was not successful. The envoys promised to take counsel of New York sympathizers on the subject, but could not be induced to give their word to remain here and make the tour originally mapped out.

Fifty Buildings Wrecked.

LOUISVILLE, June 23.—Storms have been doing great damage in Kentucky during the past week. Last night a terrible cyclone raged in Monroe and Metcalfe counties. Not less than fifty buildings in the storm's track were destroyed. Several people were injured and many had narrow escapes. Washington county also suffered. Three hundred head of cattle to Mrs. R. Grundy's barn were killed or badly injured. A waterspout at Providence did much damage to crops.

Silver Ore Found in New York.

ROSSDOUT, N. Y., June 24.—There is considerable excitement in Clintondale, this county, over the discovery of ore supposed to contain silver in large quantities. Specimens have been sent to the United States assayer's office and a report is anxiously awaited. Farmers who own real estate in the vicinity of the find are holding their property at fabulous prices. The ledge of rock also contains zinc and iron.

Alleged Incendiary Arrested.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., June 24.—A Swede named Charles Petersen has been arrested for causing a dozen fires at Cobalt. He was held for trial. E. E. Worster, of the New Britain Herald, secured the evidence against Petersen and will receive the rewards outstanding for the arrest of the incendiary, who has kept the citizens of Cobalt in terror for several months past. The amount of the rewards aggregates $1,300.

Bylaace Is Chief Again.

BRIDGEPORT, June 24.—The mayor won a signal victory over the city attorney and old board of police commissioners Tuesday when Judge Thayer dissolved the injunction restraining Chief of Police Bylance from exercising the duties of that office. Upon the decision being announced the chief immediately took possession of his office.

Acquitted for Want of Evidence.

NEW ORLEANS, June 24.—In the case of Edward White, who was on trial for attempting to persuade Leonine Barthe, a witness, from testifying, Judge Baker said the evidence was insufficient to convict and directed the jury to 'bring in a verdict of not guilty. The case against Armstrong will now probably be abandoned.

Against Canadian Artisans.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—Assistant Secretary Nettleton has decided that a carpenter cannot come from Canada, engage work, and upon his return with his tools enter upon such work without violating the contract labor law.

Women May Vote in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, June 24.—Governor Fifer has signed the bill enabling women to vote for all school officers. Twenty-six of the forty-four states—a considerable majority over all—have now given women some form of suffrage.

Fire in New York.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Fire in the six story building at Hudson and Reade streets caused a damage to contents and building of $35,000. J. Cramser, shoes, is the principal loser.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Items of Interest Carefully Edited and Condensed.

Rev. M. W. Jacobus, of Oxford, Pa., has accepted the chair of professor of New Testament exegesis in Hartford Theological seminary.

Colonel John B. Weber, superintendent of immigration at New York, has been appointed chafrman of the immigration commission that is going to Europe.

For the first five months of the present calendar year, under the operations of the new tariff law, the receipts from customs at New York were $54,576,925; for the same months of the calendar year 1890 they were $63,975,795, showing a falling off of $11,-213,869.

One Italian was killed and another fatally injured at the Niagara Falls tunnel No. 1.

Seven horses were suffocated by a fire which started in Van Horn's furniture store, 78 Market street, Newark, N. J.

One of the buildings of the George Stratford Oakum works on Commerce avenue, Jersey City, was burned. Loss, $4,000.

The cornerstone of the soldiers' and sailors' monument at Yonkers will be laid on Saturday, and that of the monument dedicated about July 10.

The man who was drowned in the Hudson river at Glenwood Sunday has been identified as Nathrow Washburn, of New York. His body has not been recovered.

John S. Austin, detected robbing letters while clerk in the Jersey City postoffice, pleaded guilty in the United States court and was sentenced to one year's imprisonment.

Mayor Cleveland, of Jersey City, who was named on Judge Knapp's jury to witness the death of Edward W. Hallinger, who is to be hanged next Tuesday, has declined.

The body of the pretty young woman found in the Hudson off Croton landing Saturday, and whom it was supposed to be that of Dolly Davis, is still at an undertaker's establishment at Tarrytown. Nobody has come forward as yet to identify the remains.

The St. Louis Riot.

ST. LOUIS, June 24.—Dominico Ginnocho, Italian consul here, after investigating the Chain of Rocks riot, is of the opinion that the attack upon the Italian laborers was with the object of robbery more than anything else. Many of his countrymen who were run out of the camp have informed him that laborers of other nationalities assisted the negroes in making the assault. Mr. Ginnocho said there was no need of making a great hubbub over the matter. The laws would protect the Italians and punish the persecutors. He had instituted an active police investigation and so far was well satisfied with the result. Julian Montena, one of the men so badly cut, is at the city hospital. His wound is a dangerous though not necessarily fatal one.

Edwin Forrest's Widow Dead.

NEW YORK, June 24.—Catherine N. Sinclair, the widow of the tragedian, Edwin Forrest, died on Tuesday last at 63 West Eighty-fourth street. She was seventy-four years old. Though once well known as the wife of the famous actor and later on an actress of no mean ability, her closing years were passed in obscurity.

Jersey Cattle Breeders Meet.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 24.—The annual meeting of the Jersey Cattle Breeders' association is in progress in this city. In the morning its members spent their time visiting the different stock farms in the vicinity, among them the farms of Hon. H. S. Greenleaf and Jacob Howe.

Found His Body in a Pond.

BIDDEFORD, Me., June 24.—The body of Antoine J. Kaupert, who disappeared from his home in South Berwick about a year ago, was found in Round pond, near that place, yesterday. It is supposed that Kaupert, who was slightly demented, fell into the pond and was drowned.

A New Yorker to Print the Reports.

HARRISBURG, June 24.—Joseph G. Jennings, of New Y rk, has secured the contract for printing the reports of the supreme court for the next ten years at the rate of ninety-four cents per copy.

BETTY AND THE BABY.

My home seems deserted: I'm lonely and sad;
I miss all the pleasures of home I once had;
I try to be cheerful, I fail to be glad
Since Betty left home with the baby.

I sit in the rooms, and I read and I write;
I whistle and sing, but the only delight
That is mine is to joyfully dream every night
Of Betty, who's gone with the baby.

It seems that a mother's sweet face I can see
As I dandle the baby in joy on my knee,
But not quite so near nearly because than me,
Since Betty's been gone with the baby.

The house is a picture of silence and gloom
As I walk through its halls that are still as a tomb,
Like a crazy man, silently searching each room
For Betty, who's gone with the baby.

She has "gone to see me," and it's many a mile.
Every day that she stays seems a terrible while,
And I'm sure to be happy or else to smile
Until Betty comes home with the baby.

'Twill be joy to my heart when the message shall come
That the hen and our chicken no longer will roam,
Gee! won't this old rooster crow loudly at home
When Betty gets back with the baby!

HOW GIRLS SHOULD RIDE.

Sensible Suggestions to Mothers About Their Daughters' Riding.

There are very few accidents in riding for which the equestrienne is particularly responsible. Seventy-five per cent. of the women ride about lumbly, and poor form in their case shows much more plainly than in the men. Their shoulders are twisted, their hands unsteady, the toes are seen continually kicking the skirt, and they rise to the side. Here in New York we find much improvement in the public form, due to better instruction and the dread of scrutinizing spectators, but the actual knowledge of the horse is quite as deficient. There are women, of course, who go in for riding with perfectly the same idea as they do for bathing at Narragansett—because the rest do so, and the opportunity of exhibiting a fetching costume is not to be lost. These will ride about as they swim. A groom and the saving rope will always be at hand, and it is quite necessary that they should.

To the young women that have passed the age when they are susceptible to instruction we have nothing to say. When they become mothers, however, we tell them, with all the emphasis at our command, that if they allow their daughter to grow up with as little practical knowledge of the horse as they have, may the future result be upon their heads. First of all, it is a mistake to allow a girl to begin riding lessons too young. In the last year or so, children eight, ten and twelve years of age have been seen at the riding schools, making a very pretty ensemble in an evening entertainment, but much too tender to go on the road. It is well enough to allow them to become a bit familiar with the horse under private instruction, but fifteen is quite young enough for them to begin riding. No child has sufficient physical strength or judgment for the management of a pony earlier.

When your daughter begins her lessons, see for yourself, or get some one who does know, that her instructor is competent. Not one so called riding master in a dozen knows little else than to sit his animal and make it pirouette for the benefit of the spectators that gaze in horrified wonder at this offshoot of the circus ring master, in his tights and great boots. It is just as easy to learn to ride properly as not, but difficult to correct bad form in the saddle when once acquired.

See that her shoulders are squarely to the front; that her left knee is close to the horn, so that she may be easily seated in the case of necessity, and close to the saddle flap as well (this will stop the unsightly and incorrect pendulum motion of the stirrup foot and strengthen the seat); that she rises from the right knee, and not from the stirrup, as is the case with ninety-nine women out of a hundred; that she hands remain steady, and that in rising, sitting each and look do not fall into the absolutely unpardonable and ungraceful sawaw movement. The correct seat is very difficult to acquire, especially to the average young woman, whose sides are incased in tightly laced corsets and whose muscles are entirely deficient. It would be well to use light dumb bells and go through a series of body movements to make those muscles elastic.—C. W. Whitney in Harper's Bazar.

A Home Made Cannon.

Take a thick glass bottle, fill it three-quarters full of water, dissolve in that water about a heaping handful of the carbonate of soda. Make a cylinder of a large card, stop up one end of it with a piece of crumpled tissue paper, and put into this cylinder about a spoonful of tartaric acid. Fasten this cartridge thus manufactured by a pin and thread to the cork of the bottle, which is placed upright on the table.

Let the opening of the cartridge be at the top, and regulate the length so that it does not touch the water. Then cork the bottle tightly. Now our cannon is loaded. All that remains to be done is to fire it off; for this purpose place the bottle carefully in a horizontal position on two pencils laid parallel on the table to form a gun carriage. The water penetrating the tube or cartridge will dissolve the tartaric acid and the carbonic acid gas which will be the result will force the cork out of the bottle with a violent explosion. By the effect of this reaction the bottle will roll back, imitating the recoil of a piece of artillery.—Churchman.

Shirley Dare.

Shirley Dare, a nom de plume well known and beloved among women readers, conceals the identity of one of the most gifted woman journalists of the day. She is sensitive, shrinking, and avoids all personality, in person fair, with hazel eyes and red gold hair. The gentle melancholy and tenderness of her nature may be due to the sad story of her husband's loss of reason, which took place early in their married life.—New York Letter.

Queen Elizabeth's Jewels.

Queen Elizabeth was only better off than Helen of Troy and Queen Hashop, bride of Theokoon! In that she had jewels cut into faucets, on diamonds, rubies and sapphires, and more brilliant and resplendent than those of Lobia Paullina, because the jewelers had learned to cut them. A gold cloak clasp of Queen Elizabeth had six sapphires, sixty pearls, eighteen rubies and four emeralds.—Jenness-Miller Magazine.

A Girl.

Readers of John Ruskin's works will probably not recognize his master hand in the following comment on the lips:

No fountain from a rocky cave
E'er trickled with so pure a wave
Showcased as hungry as a wave
Those lips of thine.

"A girl is always like that when everything is right with her."

Mrs. Lucy Stone-Blackwell's Early Career.

The unlimited always beCorish among most when they see Mrs. Lucy Stone introduced to an audience, and then her husband, Dr. Blackwell, introduced. But the talented husband (and by this retaining of her maiden name she with intends to protest against what she would term the loss of individuality "inflicted" upon the wife by marriage). It is an interesting fact, but little known, that the clergyman who united Henry B. Blackwell to Lucy Stone thirty-six years ago was Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the noted author of to-day, then a settled minister in Worcester. At that time, as Dr. Blackwell himself says, "Mr. Higginson, the fiery abolitionist, made a public protest against the injustice of the laws, which wronged and degraded wives, and said that in conforming to the law, we did not express approval of the unequal condition it imposed upon the wife."

The daughter of that union adopts both her parents' names as her surname, Mr. Blackwell, by the way, is an Englishman by birth, and brother of Elizabeth Blackwell, the first woman in America who ever received the degree of doctor of medicine. His wife was the daughter of a West Brookfield farmer, I believe. At any rate, the father had a large family with advanced ideas of education, and frequently told his daughter that her desire for a college training was a crazy freak; her mother, he declared, had never been in college, and she knew all that was necessary for a woman—that is, reading and writing.

But the young girl was of different mind, and resolutely worked her own way through Oberlin college. During some weeks she had but fifty cents to spend on food for the entire seven days, and her cooking she herself did. Yet she became in later days a valuable co-worker with Theodore Parker, William Lloyd Garrison and Marie Mitchell, and is today an active factor in the temperance and suffrage movements of America. She is a most motherly looking woman, and possesses an engaging manner.—Boston Cor. New York Commercial Advertiser.

Have a Medicine Closet.

Medicines should be kept all together in some locked closet or high shelf. The practice of some housekeepers to set a bottle here and there all over the house is not only untidy, but dangerous, if there are children in the family. It is curious the fascination a bottle whose contents are unknown has for many children. Poisons should never be kept. If you buy five cents' worth of sugar of lead to set a doubtful color, or an ounce of hellebore to sprinkle infested plants, don't preserve the remnant for years, at a fatal risk, because you may need it some time again. Burn all such powders personally, or pour such liquids down a deep privy-well, and rinse the bottle before putting it into the ash barrel.

Keep medicines, all duly labeled, in a cool, dark place. Heat, even in a moderate degree, and light chemically affect some drugs to their detriment. Prescription ought to be labeled as for whatever and for which member of the family obtained. They ought not, even then, to be kept too long. Time works changes, which sometimes entirely transform, their effect—weakening it in some compounds and in others, greatly strengthening it by the evaporation of some volatile diluting liquid.

Powdered substances, such as borax, alum or magnesia, should be kept not in boxes or papers, from which they dust out, but in wide mouthed bottles. Those in which pomade or vaseline is sold are good for such purpose when they are emptied of their original contents. Camphor gum should be kept separate from other drugs, in a jar or bottle with tight cover or stopper. Otherwise its powerful flavor will permeate other mixtures or substances.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

To Make Orange Marmalade.

Choose the largest oranges, with clear skins, as the skins form the largest part of the marmalade. Weigh the oranges, and allow them an equal quantity of loaf sugar. Peel them, dividing the peels into quarters, and put them into a preserving pan, cover them well with water and let them boil for five to boil. In the mean time prepare your oranges; divide them into gores, then scrape with a teaspoon all the pulp from the white skin, or, instead of peeling the oranges, cut a hole in them and scoop out the pulp, removing carefully all the pips. Have a large basin near with some cold water in it, to throw the pips and peels into—a plnt is sufficient for a dozen oranges.

A great deal of gluttinous matter adheres to these, which, when strained through a sieve, should be kept for the pectics when ever received the degree of doctor of medicine. His wife was the daughter of a West Brookfield farmer, I believe. At any rate, the father had a large family with advanced ideas of education, and frequently told his daughter that her desire for a college training was a crazy freak; her mother, he declared, had never been in college, and she knew all that was necessary for a woman—that is, reading and writing.

SPORTING NOTES.

The yachting season has opened auspiciously, and the white winged dyers are skimming over the oceans and lakes. There seems to be little prospect of another race for the America cup, however.

The famous English yacht Thistle, which was worsted by the Volunteer in the race for the America cup in 1887, is now the property of Emperor William of Germany. He has changed her name to the Meteor.

Billy O'Brien, of Denver, is a Brennan during the winter months. The department at Kansas City recently showed its admiration for him by presenting him with a silver pitcher and two goblets.

The Slavin-Kilrain fight, scheduled for June 16 at Hoboken, N. J., aroused great interest in pugilistic circles. The match was looked upon as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, heavyweight battle since the Sullivan-Kilrain affair in Mississippi. By the jugglery of time Kilrain was trained for his meeting with Slavin by Muldoon, the man who put Sullivan in shape to whip Kilrain, but Sullivan and the great wrestler are strangers now. Kilrain trained in the same gymnasium at Belfast, N. Y., that Sullivan used. Slavin prepared for the battle of June 16 at the hostelry of Billy O'Brien's widow at Coney Island.

James F. Corbett says he will never fight before the California Athletic club again, and that he will not fight at all for a year. Corbett has not ceased growing, and he wishes to be at his best when he makes his next strike for large honors in the pugilistic world.

There seems little prospect that the American college teams and the best English players will meet this year. A series of matches between the great players of the two countries would be an event of much interest.

Clarence Hobart, the tennis champion of New Jersey, will have a strong field this year to wrest the American championship from O. S. Campbell.

THE CRIMSON'S GREAT CYCLIST.

R. H. DAVIS.

mile safety scratch race at Cambridge, began riding at Bologna, Italy, in 1885. After defeating a number of fast Italian riders

DAVIS returned to America and entered Harvard in 1887. He at once took high rank as a bicyclist, for at the freshmen games he lowered the college two mile record from 6:38 to 6:18, and later at the university games he surprised the collegians by again reducing the record, this time to 5:02 2-5. In the spring of 1889 he won the intercollegiate championship.

After capturing several other important events Davis met W. E. Crist at Hartford and defeated him in the one mile safety, establishing a new American record of 2:40. The same day he and Crist broke the tandem safety record for a mile, and made a new one of 2:44½. In 1890 he was disqualified at the intercollegiate championships, but again broke the record in the two mile event at a trial race. His time was 5:01. The same year, at Paddington, London, he did a mile in 2:39 2-5. He again captured the intercollegiate championship last year, but was defeated this year by Pratt, whose time was slow, 5:13 2-5. Davis is equally at home on the safety and ordinary. He expects to compete in the Italian safety championships this summer.

TWO STRAWBERRIES.

A treat of the season the father had brought,
Of berries, the choicest, the best,
So thought little mischief, our three-year-old chap,
Were strawberries he could e'er test.

Then feeling them over, and hulling them well,
I mentioned, "A fine treat for ton,
And if you'll not eat me for one of them, dear,
I'll tell you just what it's to be!"
Exacting his promise, I feared, you may know,
He'd tease so, as children will do,
Instead, he gazed longingly, then laughingly said,
"I think I might ask you for two!"
—Fannie L. Fancher in Housekeepers' Weekly.

Wealthy Girls Who Can Earn a Living.

There is a man abundantly supplied with worldly goods and with daughters who believe that every woman should know how to do at least one thing well. Consequently his five daughters know several things besides dancing and music and riding. One girl has learned stenography, and her fingers fly as expert with the keys of a typewriting machine as with the keys of a piano. Another is skillful with the needle and two others could earn their livings as practical seamstresses or as instructors in French or Italian, but everyday school teaching.

"I hope," says this father, "that no one of my daughters has ever to earn her own living. But I once had serious financial troubles in my younger days, and who knows that I may not have them again. If I were to be poor I should think that all my daughters could take care of themselves. Besides," he added, with a twinkle in his eye, "think of the gratitude some men will feel toward me when they find wives I have trained for them."—New York Tribune.

An Improved Needle.

The improved sewing needle, recently introduced, secured the end of the thread in the eye instead of having a running thread, as in the case of ordinary needles. The eye of the needle is round at the top and oval at the bottom, tapering away chisel shape at the top or head, in this way causing sufficient elasticity at the top of the eye to hold the thread perfectly rigid, and there is done away all cutting of the thread, which is necessary in the case of ordinary needles where a running thread is employed. The object of this unique invention is, of course, to allow the cotton thread to be easily passed through the hole and pulled up toward the head, so as to fix the thread in the chisel shaped eye, thus preventing the thread slipping out.—New York Sun.

Hardening Children Into Their Graves.

Dr. Milne, in his annual report on the health of Accrington, states that "many lives would be saved if mothers would exercise a little more common sense in dressing their children. Low bodices, short sleeves, and short cotton socks should be absolutely excluded from the toilet of young children during the height of the summer. Thousands of children are annually 'hardened' into their graves."—London Tit-Bits.

Pride Comes Before a Fall.

Miss Caustique—I hear you won the 440-yards run.

De Boaster—Oh, easily. The other fellows weren't in it.

Miss Caustique—Ah, you were the only one entered, I presume.—Harvard Lampoon.

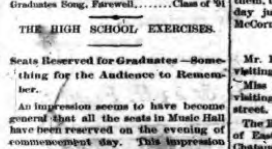
THE HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES.

Seats Reserved for Graduates—Something for the Audience to Remember.

An impression seems to have become general that all the seats in Music Hall have been reserved on the evening of commencement day. This impression the Board of Education wish us to correct. Sufficient seats for the graduating class and a few visitors only have been reserved. The rest will be open to the public.

The audience will kindly remember this request of the Board—"Maintain strict silence during the presentation of prizes and the opening address which will follow."



—Oh for a bath in the old ocean at Belmar. Go with the First Baptists, July 2d.

—Mr. Jacob Voehl is still selling meat at No. 17 West Front street. His advertisement will interest buyers.

—Services in honor of the Sacred Heart are to be held in St. Mary's Catholic Church to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The interior of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in North Plainfield is to be greatly improved during the coming Summer.

—Frank Vreeland was taken to State prison yesterday by Deputy U. S. Marshal Emory N. Yard, having been indicted last Tuesday by the U. S. Grand Jury at Trenton for forging a money order at Bound Brook. He has been there before, and remembers it well. He was on Jan. 7, 1886, he was sentenced for 18 months for stealing a horse and wagon.

—Complaint is made that the top dressing of stone used in macadamizing is not the fine stone called for by the contract, but full of coarse stone that will greatly mar the road upon which it is spread, being sharp and jagged as voted. The matter is referred to the Street Committee to investigate. The dirt used for filling in will leave the road a mass of ruts in six months time.

Plainfield Pastors Exchange Pulpits.

There were several exchanges of local pulpits, Sunday. The Rev. D. J. Yerkes of the First Baptist Church went to the First Presbyterian Church, while Rev. E. P. Ketcham filled the First Baptist pulpit. At Holy Cross Church, in the absence of Rev. T. Logan Murphy, Rev. P. Le Bas Cross, of St. John's Church, Elizabeth, preached. Rev. Mr. Jefferson, of Long Branch, preached in the Plainfield Emanuel Baptist Church, whose pastor, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, preached in Harlem. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, of the Trinity Reformed church, exchanged pulpits with Rev. A. R. Dills, of the Park avenue Baptist church.—Times.

Where Did These Toads Come From?

A peculiar phenomenon was noticed in one section of the city Tuesday. On Orange and Elm streets the sidewalks, roadways, lawns and gardens were covered with millions of tiny toads, less than half an inch in length. No one can account for their strange appearance, unless they rained down in the recent violent storm. None were found in any other part of the city.

Newly Elected Officers.

At a meeting of Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term:

C. C.—Mr. Rushton.
V. C.—Mr. Gullick.
Prelate.—Albert Ten Eyck.
K. of R. and A.—A. M. McKenzie.
Trustee.—Joseph Shepherd.

Mr. Graff's Bill of Exception Protests Against Senator Marsh as Prosecutor.

Lawyer Louis A. Graff, counsel for Samuel S. Beekman and Jennie Wiley, who were convicted of the killing of Peart Beekman, entered the Union county court of special sessions yesterday morning with a very large roll of legal documents proving to be the papers relating to his application for a stay of proceedings in the case of the prisoners.

From the Supreme Court he obtained a writ which he filed with County Clerk Crowell, and to the court he presented his bill of exceptions on which the case will be taken to the Supreme Court for a review of the proceedings. The exceptions are on several grounds. There are based on the illegality of Senator Marsh acting as prosecutor. The other exceptions are on certain lines of testimony and portions of the judge's charge.

Judge McCormick read over the bill of exception, and it was then signed by the members of the court. The whole proceedings go to the Supreme Court and may not be passed upon until February.

Under this stay of proceedings Beekman and Wiley will remain in the county jail until the Supreme Court's decision is given. Mr. Graff said the prisoners will be allowed the time consumed in waiting in the county jail on their sentence, and if the final decision is against them, their sentence bears date from the day judgment was passed by Judge McCormick.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Opdyke have returned to their home on West Eighth street from an extended western tour.

Mr. Fletcher Hallock of West Fifth street, is home for the Summer vacation from Lehigh University, Pennsylvania.

Miss Ida Kellum, after a pleasant visit to Mrs. Charles Lyman of Washington avenue and Miss J. Louise Pangborn of Rookview avenue returned to her home in Brooklyn yesterday.

A large number of the friends of Miss May Sanford were entertained by her at her father's handsome residence, corner of Front street and Sanford avenue last evening. An enjoyable evening was spent in dancing, which the delightfully cool weather rendered possible.

The drug house established by the late Peter Barclay, nearly fifty years ago, and in which Capt. G. S. Cook has been the presiding genius for about 27 years, has fallen into new hands. Under a few weeks. James C. Field, formerly of Clinton, but more recently of New York, has become the owner of the store. The latter gentleman will engage in other business and is selling out his stock.—Somerville Messenger. Mr. Field's many Plainfield friends will be pleased to learn of his new venture, and wish him success. While a member of the firm of Field and Campbell, Mr. Field's genial manners and good business qualities made him many friends, which, coupled with those of his partner, made such a business success of the formerly long-standing City Pharmacy. Later Mr. Field and Mr. Randolph discovered partnership relations, and Mr. Field accepted an exceedingly lucrative position in New York. Mr. Randolph, as is well-known, continued the drug business here.

The closing exercises at Leal's school were held Friday. Thirteen young men graduated. Of the class of '91, Messrs. Edward H. Bowne, of Plainfield, and Edward B. Kenyon, of Raritan, go to the College of New Jersey, or to Princeton, as the institution is more familiarly known. Messrs. Edward R. Finch and Harry D. West of Plainfield, go to Yale. Those who will follow Instructor Reynolds are H. Ryder Anderson, of New York city; Louis F. Beals, Robert A. Beebe, William A. Boone, Robert W. Davis, Edwin H. Frost, James Hurley, John Slevin and Walter J. Swain, all of Plainfield. Those who on Friday received honorable mention for penmanship were Lucius H. Miller of Roselle, who took first prize, and Walton W. Beals of Plainfield. For excellence in arithmetic, Edward W. Carrion of Elizabeth, and Carl S. Brown, of Plainfield, divided honors equally. For general excellence in all studies, Lucius H. Miller, of Roselle, took the lead, with Willie E. Tracy, of this city, a close second. In fact, in many studies the latter also attended the 100 mark. The speakers at Friday's closing exercises were H. W. Cowan, of Elizabeth; Lucius H. Miller, of Roselle; F. L. Taylor, Edard B. Finch, Harry D. West and Wm. A. Boone, of Plainfield; Edward B. Kenyon, of Raritan, and H. Ryder Anderson of New York.

A Fractured Collar Bone.

Miss Stiner, the fifteen year old daughter of the late John Stiner of Somerset street, North Plainfield, met with a painful accident Tuesday afternoon. She was engaged picking cherries from a tree, when she lost her balance and fell to the ground, thereby badly fracturing her collar bone.

"A TEMPEST IN A TEAPOT."

The World Devotes a Column to the Combine's Latest Trick.

The World publishes to-day a considerably mixed-up account of the recent episode resulting from the visit last Saturday night to Goff's saloon on the Boulevard in which Councilmen Smith and Spangenberg, notorious heelers, participated. Thos. Dowd were associated. There are two imaginary portraits. One is said to be of Smith. He is pictured with a huge moustache and chin whiskers, which he has not got. He wears a moustache closely trimmed and looks like what he is. The other is said to be a picture of THE NEWS editor, though it might answer just as well for any one else. But the only error in the article to which we wish to refer as of any importance is the statement that the police were in the saloon. Our police are already demoralized and cowed enough by the combine and toughs without making matters any worse.

The affair was correctly reported in THE NEWS. The police were not at any time in the saloon, but were called to quell a street fight opposite, and were abused by this Dowd.

The police suspected that by the same illegal methods employed in the Carey case an effort was to be made to remove them from office for doing their duty, and that seems to be the inference in the World article.

The following about the affair is from the Central New Jersey Times of this week:

Some one has been trifling with the coupling, trusting nature of the "Big Six." This is very evident, else President Smith and Mr. Spangenberg would not be seeking an indictment against Mr. Dowd on account of the article which appeared in the EVENING NEWS of Monday afternoon. The imaginative powers of the legal light who assured these gentlemen that the article in question was libelous, is something wonderful. It is possible that he was assisted in his attempts to picture the wrongs they were receiving at the hands of the editor, by their over-anxious desire to pose as martyrs before the Plainfield voter and the Plainfield taxpayer. It is more than probable that their natural credulity led them to believe that they were being abused simply because they were told so. This trusting nature of the "Big Six" has already led them into several serious legislative mistakes. They built a shell fishing car to the fairy-like descriptions of the charms and wonders of the deadly and dangerous trolley system of electric street railways. They bent low in admiration at Mr. Low's assured them that they was the great crying need of Plainfield, and said "yes, yes," willingly enough when the time came to put the burden for flushing out his own sewers upon the city taxpayers. They turned from the city's friend and legal counsellor to seek other advice, because some one had told them the ordinances of the city were like bricks against which the interest of legally incorporated companies might be dashed to pieces. And now they are about to impress views of the Press as its editor tries to show them that this little city can consume 250,000 feet of illuminating gas, under which condition the product is to be furnished at $1.25 per thousand feet. The absurdity of this proposition is apparent to every one, excepting to the innocent mind trusting "Big Six," especially when one considers that to-day the average daily consumption of gas is only 35,000 feet in the city, and borough of North Plainfield.

GABLE IN THE TOILS.

Arrested by Policeman Mattox Yesterday Afternoon.

John B. Gable, the upholsterer, who deserted his wife and children and eloped with Mrs. William B. Avery of North Plainfield was arrested by Special Policeman Mattox, in a store on West Second street, yesterday afternoon for obtaining goods under false pretenses. James C. Field, formerly of Clinton, but more recently of New York, has become the owner of the store. The latter gentleman will engage in other business and is selling out his stock.—Somerville Messenger. Mr. Field's many Plainfield friends will be pleased to learn of his new venture, and wish him success. While a member of the firm of Field and Campbell, Mr. Field's genial manners and good business qualities made him many friends, which, coupled with those of his partner, made such a business success of the formerly long-standing City Pharmacy. Later Mr. Field and Mr. Randolph discovered partnership relations, and Mr. Field accepted an exceedingly lucrative position in New York. Mr. Randolph, as is well-known, continued the drug business here.

Gable took his arrest coolly and when arraigned before City Judge Codington, pleaded not guilty to the charge upon which he was arrested. The judge held him in $800 bail for trial, which was set down for this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

Gable had some difficulty in finding a bondsman and it was after six o'clock before he succeeded. Then Michael Eitinger, a resident of Cottage place, went to his recase and furnished the necessary bond. Gable's appearance for trial this afternoon.

Gable told a friend last evening that he came to Plainfield for the purpose providing for the support of his family and that he would do so providing the police let him alone.

THE NEWS has from time to time called attention to the destitute condition of Mrs. Gable and her children and our efforts evidently touched one spark of manliness, however faint, in Gable, who came to this city yesterday to make provision for their support.

LATER.

At the hour appointed Gable appeared in the city judge's office. His wife did not put in appearance. After conferring, City Judge Codington and Overseer of the Poor Nodyne decided to send for her. Gable volunteered to go but at 2.35 o'clock she had not as yet put in appearance. It is generally understood that she will refuse to press the charge.

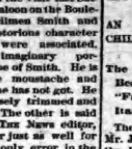
AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM CHILE, WRITTEN ON A U. S. WAR-SHIP.

The Land of the Incas.—Of Dusky Beauties and Annual Revolutions.—"Fresh" News of the New Ancient Iquique Trouble.

The following interesting letter from Mr. John F. Costello, the boatswain on the United States Flag Ship, Pensacola, was received by a NEWS' reporter yesterday. It was dated May 29th.



THE ship is now anchored off the coast of Arica, Chile, just 1000 miles from Plainfield by way of Cape Horn. Owing to the troublesome state of Chile at present I don't know where I shall be able to post this, nor, indeed, from what port. We have been constantly on the go, and for the past few weeks have been cruising in search of the "Itata," the vessel that stole out of San Francisco, taking a U. S. Marshal on board. She had surreptitiously obtained arms and ammunition for the rebels, at that port, and the U. S. authorities having found it out, of course, refused her permission to sail, but she stole out during the night bound for Chile. We have three ships on the look-out for her now. She is a Chilian ship, but we will capture her if we fall in with her. We were at Iquique lately, and the rebels had complete control. One of their finest ships, the "Blanco Encalada," was sunk by a government torpedo boat, at Caldera, and almost all hands were lost. Fighting is going on all the time, and at Pisagua, when we went there, the place was in ruins, people starving, and thousands dying of their wounds. Even fresh water, in the north of Chile, has to be bought, and sells at $1.50 an arroba—(4 gallons). This place, as you may perhaps know, was formerly in Peru, but Chile took it during the war of '79 and '80. We are at anchor close to where a great massacre of Peruvians took place. The rock is some 500 feet high, and during the war, in the year 1880, a fight took place in Arica, the Peruvians, to the number of 700, retreated to the rock, being pursued by the Chilian soldiers, and many of them were forced over the almost perpendicular sides of the rock into the sea; or to die miserably on projecting rocks, their bodies being finally taken by vultures. To-day we can see skeletons and fragments of clothing there. Skulls, skeltons, etc., are plenty here, even above ground. I have seen many in the old "inca" burying ground, they having been dug up by wild hunters. The Incas Indians, when dead, were embalmed, or mummified, and buried in a sitting posture with a fishing line in their hands. A large amount of pottery was put in the grave with them. Their eyes were taken out and the eyes of a cattle substituted in their stead. We have about a bushel of Inca eyes aboard now as curios. It is asserted that these mummies ante-date the Spanish conquest, which was in the year 1540. So they are pretty old; and still we have got to go to Chile, by which has been taken from the graves in a comparatively good state of preservation, owing, no doubt, to the nature of the soil. The Inca eyes I speak of are as natural as a living eye, having become dried, and are of a light blue or slate shades. It never rains, from about this latitude up to near the equator, and nothing grows; nitre and saltpetre being the products of the soil; which, were the northern part of Chile a rainy country, would not prevail. It consists of immense wealth to the country, but the business is mainly in the hands of foreigners, most of the owners being English. We have no idea how long we will be in the Pacific, but expect to soon return to Uruguay, where we are both to and from which ports we carry mails. The Chilians are having been complete possession of the hearts of some of the people aboard.

We are anxious to return to Valparaiso, which is a very pretty city, and being in the south, is productive.

A Party-Blower Forced Into His Head.

Cleveland Bunyon, the ten-year-old son of Walter Bunyon, of East Front street, was struck with a painful and, perhaps, fatal accident yesterday. While playing with a tin party-blower he suddenly stumbled and fell. The sharp toy was forced up through the roof of his mouth into his head. It almost penetrated his brain. It has been extracted by Dr. O. L. Jenkins says the accident may prove fatal.

Another version of the accident is that the boy was up in a cherry tree, and fell from it while in the act of blowing some thing through the party-blower, which is a tube of block-tin about 14 inches long. He fell, head-first, and his weight on the blower forced it into his head.

Mad Dog Shot.

A dog belonging to Mr. Frank Linke, the proprietor of the Manhattan Wine room on Somerset street, North Plainfield, was shot by Mr. Lewis Wyckoff at noon to-day. The animal showed symptoms of hydrophobia and snapped at every object that ventured near him.

Sudden Death of a Prominent Editor.

LONDON, June 25. (Special.)—Colonel Fitzgerald, editor and proprietor of the Philadelphia (U. S.) Item, considered the most valuable newspaper plant in that city, died here suddenly, to-day, of the grip.

He was accompanied by his son and had been on a pleasure trip through Europe for the past few months.

REV. DR. GEORGE TALMAGE DEAD.

A Brother of the Eminent Brooklyn Divine Stricken with Apoplexy.

Rev. Dr. George Talmage, brother of T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn died at Somerville suddenly early yesterday morning. He had been as well as usual, and was in his study that night at a late hour. He went up stairs to retire and was stricken with apoplexy while in the bathroom. He was found by his wife unconscious, and died in an hour.

Dr. Talmage has been living a retired life at Somerville. For several years he has served as pastor of Dutch Reformed churches at Whitehouse, N. J., Weskayuna, N. Y.; Greenport, L. I.; Hackensack, N. Y.; Paramus, N. J., and Port Jervis, N. Y. For five years Mr. Talmage was corresponding secretary of the board of domestic missions of the Reformed church, and was a frequent contributor to various church periodicals. In 1876 he was president of the General Synod of the Reformed church of America, and he has written and published a number of tracts and sermons.

The deceased was one of four brothers who entered the ministry. Two are living—Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, of Brooklyn and Dr. John V. N. Talmage, formerly of China, but now residing at Bound Brook, where he is suffering from ill health. All have been prominent in ecclesiastical circles. The father of these divines was David Talmage, who is buried in the cemetery near Bound Brook. He was at one time a member of the Assembly from this county. The old homestead is not far from there.

The Fourth at New Market.

July fourth will be celebrated at New Market, N. J., by a splendid programme of athletic sports, and a grand display of fireworks in the evening. The celebration will be under the auspices of Friendship Council, No. 81, Jr. O. U. A. M. The programme is as follows:

Reading the Declaration of Independence.
1. Swimming race.
2. Tub race.
3. Sack race.
4. Potato race.
5. Obstacle race.
6. Three-legged jump.
7. Wheelbarrow race (blindfold).
8. Tug-of-war.
9. Three-legged race.
10. 100-yard running race.

The game will be open to all comers and will take place in the order printed on programme, commencing at one o'clock p. m., sharp. A handsome prize or medal will be awarded the winner of each contest. Entrance to be made to any of the committee before one o'clock, p. m., July 4th.

A Children's Home in Westfield.

A meeting of the citizens of Westfield was held Tuesday evening to take definite action for the establishment of a Children's Home. A. E. Pearsall acted as chairman and Rev. J. K. Powell as secretary. Wm. G. Peckham offered the Fairview farm for the use of the home, free for one year, $50 for the second year and $100 for the third year. It was decided to accept Mr. Peckham's offer. The management of the home will be vested in a Board of Managers composed of two ladies from each church in the village, with two more ladies from the town at large, and an advisory committee of one gentlemen from each church and one from the town at large. It is intended to keep the home open the entire year. It will be started on a sound financial basis.

Youthful Burglars.

Last evening Tim Neva referred to the robbery of Mrs. Cornelius store. Since then a little boy, named Kennon, has been arrested charged with the crime. The little fellow, it is claimed, in company with two other boys was playing in the vicinity and while his two companions watched, he picked up a stone and going up to the window smashed one of the panes of glass. He, then, it is alleged, stole some candy and several other articles, dividing his booty equally among his companions. The matter will in all probability be settled outside of the courts.

Each Won One.

The Westfield Athletic Club's bowling team visited this city last evening and rolled two games with the Crescent League team of this city. A large number of the friends of both teams witnessed the games. Each team won one. The Crescents defeated their opponents by a score of 108 pins, and the visitors won their game by 40 pins.

How to Take Your Outing.

The Christian Union has been interviewing a number of prominent men on the best method of taking a summer vacation. All agree on one point—that the thing most needed is change; complete change. Do exactly the opposite of what you do habitually. So shall you get your soul and body out of the rut. The farmer should come to the city and the city man should go the country.

T. W. Higginson says that if a man's winters are cloistered he should take his outing at the gayest watering place he can find. If on the contrary he spends most of the year in the midst of people, let him court solitude for his vacation. Professor H. H. Boyesen, who is going to Norway, leaves this advice for his perspiring fellow sinners in America, "First and last, if you can possibly avoid it, do not board." Professor Boyesen also observes on general principles, "In no other situation that I know of is a man conscious of such rest in mere living, such light heartedness and bubbling gayety as in the saddle."

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, whose theology is by some of his brethren considered doubtful, thinks that ministers ought to have a good long vacation because they have to work on Sundays, when other men rest. He goes every year to Switzerland, to some quiet valley where no one knows him to preach. Rev. Dr. Rainsford says almost pathetically, "To sleep out under the pines is what I want." The lawyer, Edmund Wetmore, advises people to take a driving tour through the country, and if they cannot afford the horse and carriage go on a bicycle, and if not that then a walking tour of several weeks' duration.

The editor of The Century never has a vacation. He never gets off work more than two or three days at a time. But in summer he takes his work and goes to Buzzard's Bay, where Cape Cod is at his front door and the Middleboro lakes at his back door. General Christensen writes, "When I took my wife and our four youngest children for a three months' tour abroad"—which is so discouraging that we will not pursue all I part of the subject further. A country parson thinks that for persons situated as he is, nothing is so good as a short trip abroad. He tells us, by the way, that last summer he spent five weeks on a European trip, visiting London, Paris and Edinburgh, enjoying first class accommodations, and the entire journey only cost him $300.

"Printer" goes in strongly for pedestrian tours. "Get a good chum or two—a party of four is pleasantest—good easy shoes, no luggage to speak of and start. Don't hurry. Talk all you like, but never argue, which is excellent advice for all times.

F. S. Church, the artist, is another who never has any vacations. But he takes long walks into the country every Sunday, rain or shine. What he wants mainly for recreation is to get away from people. On his Sunday tramps he walks from ten to thirty miles a day. He says:

That starting off on Sunday morning for a long walk in the country, the quiet walk, and not eating or drinking anything in the way of extras, but taking the simplest sort of luncheon in my pocket, and lolling down on a rail fence and eating it, and then going home at night pretty tired, but bringing the freshness of all outdoors with me—does me five hundred times more good than going off visiting people, and eating dinners, and lying around, and having what is called a "good time." Yesterday I walked from Flushing to Jamaica, and taking my tramp went out into a suburban town and was astonished at very handsomely by some friends of mine. I ate a splendid dinner and smoked a good many cigars, and the consequence is that the next day I found myself saying to my model, I am irritable, and fool as if I had not had my usual vacation.

There was one Chinaman on the United States pension rolls for service during the late war. He lived in Pennsylvania and died recently. He was known as Tom Chinaman at his house. He was not one of the ordinary washee washee, yellow skinned importations however. When he was twelve years old a Presbyterian missionary brought him to America. When he was only sixteen, in 1861, he loved his adopted country well enough to enlist in the Union army. He was soon discharged, however, because it was thought he was not physically strong enough for a soldier's duties. Nothing daunted, he tried it again, enlisting the second time in a New York regiment, the Forty-second. At Cold Harbor he was the soldier who planted the flag upon the breastworks, all the rest of the color guard having been killed or disabled. Tom was captured at Petersburg, and kept a prisoner by the Confederates till the close of the war. There was no braver or better soldier than this Chinaman citizen. For he was a citizen, the first Chinaman naturalized by the government. His American name was Thomas Sylvanus. He had an American wife and three children. Just after the United States had granted him an increase of a pension he already enjoyed, poor Tom went out of this world to the American heaven, it is to be hoped, for he loved the United States as well as any man native born.

THE STATUE OF BEECHER

Unveiled in the Presence of a Multitude.

PRESIDENT SETH LOW'S ORATION.

Amid the Ringing by Five Hundred Youthful Voices the Cord Was Pulled and the Monument Exposed to View. Many Prominent People Participated.

BROOKLYN, June 25.—City hall plaza rang with the hearty cheers of 12,000 people and the swelling chorus of 500 youthful voices singing "Love Divine, All Love Excelling" at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Exactly at that time a little bit of a girl, clad in white, pulled a cord which caused the bunting to fall from the statue of Henry Ward Beecher.

As the familiar form and features of the great preacher, who had brought fame to Plymouth church and Brooklyn were disclosed to view it seemed as if he had returned to the scene of his work. It was unanimously acknowledged that Sculptor Ward had made a most excellent counterpart of Mr. Beecher.

The Dedication Demonstration.

The unveiling of John Q. A. Ward's statue of Mr. Beecher was made the occasion of a demonstration that in itself was befitting the man and the community. Most of the buildings in the neighborhood of the city hall were decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the event. The facade of the city hall was tastefully with patriotic designs. Suspended from the top of the balcony was a painting of Mr. Beecher. It was encircled with flags. Three large stands—one for the Plymouth church, Bethel and Mayflower Sunday school children, one for the invited guests and one for the speakers —were erected in front of the building. There was a number of benches scattered about upon the stone walks, and these the general public occupied.

The Thirteenth regiment, of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain for awhile, and the survivors of the First Long Island regiment which he helped to organize thirty years ago yesterday, were present in full uniform. Company G, of the former command, known as the Beecher company, because its members were mostly from Plymouth church, acted as a guard of honor.

The Beecher Family Present.

Invitations had been sent to most everybody of note by the citizens' committee, and many of these were present. The Beecher family was represented by Mrs. Eunice W. Beecher, Dr. Edward Beecher, William C. Beecher, Mrs. Mitchell H. H. Beecher and their wives; the grandsons Henry Ward Beecher and Harry B. Beecher; Mr. Beecher's daughter, Mrs. Samuel Scoville; another granddaughter, Mrs. Arthur White; Mrs. Edward Beecher and the Rev. Charles E. Stowe, a son of Harriet Beecher Stowe.

Among the others were Judges Pratt, Cullen, Bartlett, Dykman and Barnard, of the supreme court; United States Court Judge Benedict and a good chunk or two—a party of four is pleasantest—good easy shoes, no luggage to speak of and start. Don't hurry. Talk all you like, but never argue, which is excellent advice for all times.

F. S. Church, the artist, is another who never has any vacations. But he takes long walks into the country every Sunday, rain or shine. What he wants mainly for recreation is to get away from people. On his Sunday tramps he walks from ten to thirty miles a day. He says:

That starting off on Sunday morning for a long walk in the country, the quiet walk, and not eating or drinking anything in the way of extras, but taking the simplest sort of luncheon in my pocket, and lolling down on a rail fence and eating it, and then going home at night pretty tired, but bringing the freshness of all outdoors with me—does me five hundred times more good than going off visiting people, and eating dinners, and lying around, and having what is called a "good time." Yesterday I walked from Flushing to Jamaica, and taking my tramp went out into a suburban town and was astonished very handsomely by some friends of mine. I ate a splendid dinner and smoked a good many cigars, and the consequence is that the next day I found myself saying to my model, I am irritable, and fool as if I had not had my usual vacation.

There was one Chinaman on the United States pension rolls for service during the late war. He lived in Pennsylvania and died recently. He was known as Tom Chinaman at his house. He was not one of the ordinary washee washee, yellow skinned importations however. When he was twelve years old a Presbyterian missionary brought him to America. When he was only sixteen, in 1861, he loved his adopted country well enough to enlist in the Union army. He was soon discharged, however, because it was thought he was not physically strong enough for a soldier's duties. Nothing daunted, he tried it again, enlisting the second time in a New York regiment, the Forty-second. At Cold Harbor he was the soldier who planted the flag upon the breastworks, all the rest of the color guard having been killed or disabled. Tom was captured at Petersburg, and kept a prisoner by the Confederates till the close of the war. There was no braver or better soldier than this Chinaman citizen. For he was a citizen, the first Chinaman naturalized by the government. His American name was Thomas Sylvanus. He had an American wife and three children. Just after the United States had granted him an increase of a pension he already enjoyed, poor Tom went out of this world to the American heaven, it is to be hoped, for he loved the United States as well as any man native born.

A critical writer who professes to know declares that the coming woman in American fiction is the married woman.

large, then delivered an oration. He began by saying:

Brooklyn has poured forth her multitudes to greet the living and second time the statue of Henry Ward Beecher. To those of us who knew him well no statue is needed to recall the well set figure, the genial presence, the kindly manner and laughing eye, the playful lip, the easy bearing of the man who was so happily indifferent to conventionalities. To those who have we fully realized that we may not meet him some day walking the busier streets, or amid the scenes of the great of Brooklyn's daily life and of her civic pride. We are not here to unveil this statue of Mr. Beecher because he was a Brooklyner.

Brooklyn doubtless rejoices in his fame as a part of her own history, but the place he has held by in this city of his home by Mr. Beecher's friends of every degree and every clime in order to carry down to posterity his likeness as a strong, brave man for an inspiration to all that shall come after him. Every man, forsooth, must have his own ideals and strive after the great men of the earth overleap all boundaries and become the fellow citizens of all nations. Such a man was Henry Ward Beecher. From this city he swayed the minds and hearts of men in vast multitudes for forty years. From this center his words traversed land and sea, carrying inspiration, comfort, courage and sometimes rebuke of the exhilaration which freedom brings to the servant of a master who set them free.

The speaker then gave an interesting account of the life of Mr. Beecher.

CHINESE TURNED BACK.

Not Permitted to Come Here by Way of Canada.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Acting Secretary Spaulding has made a ruling in regard to Chinamen that will be widespread in its application. Three Chinamen arrived at Detroit from Canada, and the commissioner intimated that Canada was the country from which they came and to which they should be returned. Acting Secretary Spaulding directed that they be returned to China, and in discussing the points raised by the United States commissioner at Detroit, sent the following telegram to the collector there:

"The act of Sept. 12, 1888, not in force as treaty of last convention I can recall, and act of Aug. 13, 1890, page 267, statutes at large, makes appropriation, specifically, for returning to China all Chinese persons illegally in the United States. It is useless to return them to Canada to come back tomorrow. The above act was expressly made to meet the difficulty. Under it we retain any questioned to China, as the country whence they came, Chinese coming from Mexico and British Columbia, as they make those contiguous foreign countries the avenue for reaching the United States. The attorney general expresses the opinion that this action is directly in line of carrying out the estimates act, for which the appropriation was made. It is the practice on the Pacific coast where the court finds Chinamen illegally in the country for a marshal to turn them over to the collector at San Francisco for deportation to China. Department sees no occasion for different practice at Detroit."

DAMAGE BY STORM.

Eight Persons Drowned and a Town Wiped Out.

WATERLOO, Ia., June 25.—Reports were received by Illinois Central railroad officials here that a cloud burst at Calumet and a train storm along that company's lines from Storm Lake to Lemars, a distance of fifty-six miles. All the towns are considerably damaged. Four persons were drowned at Cherokee and four at Correctionville. The railroad depot at Calumet was blown down and much damage to property is reported. Weeks later it was discovered that Conway had doubled on his tracks and had been seen in Columbus, O. After a number of false scents he had the officers in New York, Richmond, Buffalo and other cities. Conway was traced to Philadelphia where he dropped out of sight again.

The Boy Heard From.

In February last Mrs. Conway received a letter from the missing boy postmarked at Louisville. It said he was well and in good health and that "papa was not drinking." The letter was given to the detectives, who made a microscopic examination of it. The envelope was forged, but the letter was peculiarly soft. On one corner of this were found these words impressed there by a hard blow of the stamper on the envelope: "Dublin, Jan. 14, 1890."

It was decided that this was Dublin, Ireland, and that the letter had been mailed to some one in Louisville, who had repeated it there. A few days later another letter came. This time the postmark was Danville, Ky., it contained a photographic proof of the boy.

Traced by the Runaway.

It was decided to go at once to Ireland. A detective went first to New York and began a laborious search. He found a Father Daly who remembered Conway, and said he had stopped several days under his care. Doyle told them that Conway had exchanged $6,000 of American money for Irish gold at Thos. Cook & Co.'s, banking house, 33 Nassau street, on the Bank of Ulster at Belfast, Ireland, and that he left him in American currency about $12,000.

After several days' search, the detective found that Conway went to Ireland on the City of New York, sailing on May 10, on May 9. Mrs. Conway and the detective started for Ireland on the Nevada. Conway was traced from Belfast to Dublin, Dublin to Cork, Cork to Queenstown, Queenstown to Limerick Junction, Limerick to Killaloe, and to the bridge. It is thought the main purpose is to tap the New England, and if that is done the Delaware and Hudson will be materially affected in its coal traffic.

What the Committee Found.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The testimony of Inventor Yardley before the Pinkerton investigation in regard to the affairs of the Keystone bank revealed the fact that 2,625 shares of the Keystone bank were loaned to Postmaster General Wanamaker in addition to the 2,516 shares held by him as collateral from Lucas. The discovery made by the committee that Mr. Wanamaker will be recalled to explain the startling disclosure.

NEW YORK, June 25.—A dispatch to The Police Gazette from San Francisco says: Jack Dempsey and Jack Fogarty will fight Erma P. Slavin for $10,000 a side and a purse of $25,000 either in the Olympic club, of New Orleans, or the Grandiss club, of Hoboken, to be decided between the middle weights September and February, and Richard K. Fox, Al Criddge or Dick Roche to be the stakeholder.

A United States Senator Arrested.

NEWPORT, N. J., June 25.—Mayor Wainwright has caused the arrest of United States Senator Blodgett, superintendent of the New York and Long Branch road, on the charge of violating an ordinance which compels his road to erect gates at street crossings. The hearing was adjourned one week. The authorities will also proceed against the directors of the company.

A CHASE AFTER A CHILD.

A Mother Crosses the Atlantic to Find Her Boy.

PATRICK CONWAY'S QUEER ACTION.

Deserting His Wife in Kentucky and Taking Along His Son—Letters Written in Ireland Mailed to His Wife in This Country—Reunited at Last.

CINCINNATI, June 25.—Patrick Conway, of Springfield, Washington county, Ky., disappeared one year ago with his seven-year old son David. He has just been found by a Cincinnati detective. Conway came from Ireland to Kentucky with his parents fifty-two years ago. He was born a Catholic, but gave little attention to religious matters. He married a Protestant girl, under whose guidance their children grew up in their mother's faith. Conway became quite a crank on the question of how to drink. He lost social cast, but his family stood high in the best circles. Eight years ago a boy was born to the couple.

Cruel to His Child.

Its presence was an annoyance to Conway, but it was passionately loved by the other members of the family. Conway was cross at first, and finally became cruel to the boy, who feared his father and avoided him as much as possible. Two years ago Conway became persistent in his attendance upon religious services and was a frequent visitor at the priest's house. He seemed anxious to have the youngest son reared in the Catholic faith. He frequently spoke of it and attempted to coax the child to church with him.

The Boy's Disappearance.

During the early months of 1890 Conway was unusually reticent about his business affairs. Mrs. Conway had a number of fine milch cows and several neighbors purchased milk of her. On the evening of July 2, 1890, Mrs. Conway's boy started to carry some milk to a neighbor's house. He did not return and a brother went in search of him.

Not finding the child about the street the father was sought, but he also was missing.

It was thought Conway might have gone into the country on a trading expedition, but a week elapsed and after seven days' absence it was found that Conway had drawn nearly all his money from the bank. Foul play was suspected and the streams and woods in every direction were searched.

A detective was then called in. He found that for a year Conway had been quietly disposing of every valuable he could without attracting attention, and it was concluded that Conway had taken the boy away on religious grounds.

The Chase Began.

Then began a long chase. Conway was easily traced to Louisville, but there all clews were lost. They were next heard of in Detroit and then Sioux City. Weeks later it was discovered that Conway had doubled on his tracks and had been seen in Columbus, O. After a number of false scents he had the officers in New York, Richmond, Buffalo and other cities. Conway was traced to Philadelphia where he dropped out of sight again.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

They Will Decide What to Do About McKinley.

COLUMBUS, O., June 25.—The general executive board of the Knights of Labor is in session here. There are in attendance General Master Workman Powderly, John Devlin, of Detroit, Mich.; A. W. Wright, of Niagara, Ont., and J. W. Hayes, of Philadelphia. The meeting will continue for several days and be an important one in many respects. It will be decided whether Major McKinley's recent announcement antagonized because President Harrison refused to allow the reinstatement of the discharged plata printers at the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington. Mr. Devlin said that no fault could be found with McKinley personally, as he had expressed sympathy with them, but if antagonism at all it would be as a leader of the Republican party whose head—President Harrison—had refused the demand of organized labor.

When asked if any action would be taken with reference to a third party, Mr. Devlin said he would not like to anticipate any action of the committee. He thought the present state of affairs in the matter of organized labor would be injured by the formation of a third party. "In Kansas and Nebraska," said he, "the time was ripe for such a movement, and instead of being a third party it was their first party. It is a question whether it would not be better in some states to make alliances with one of the leading parties."

GOVERNOR BOIES RENOMINATED.

Eulogized in the Democratic Convention of Iowa.

OTTUMWA, Ia., June 25.—The Democratic state convention was called to order at 10 o'clock yesterday morning in the Ottumwa Opera House by Chairman Charles Fuller. Walter H. Butler, of Fayette, was elected as temporary chairman. He eulogized the administration of Governor Horace Boies, and emphasized the inscriptions that were stretched across the play house, "Peace and Victory," "No Backward Step," "Public Office Is a Public Trust." At the conclusion of Mr. Butler's address the usual committees were appointed and a recess was taken. When the convention reassembled ex-Congressman J. R. Pusey, of Council Bluffs, was chosen by acclamation as permanent chairman.

After Pusey's speech C. A. Clark, of Cedar Rapids, placed Boies in nomination in a speech of [illegible] nominations seconded from all parts of the hall, and the governor was renominated by acclamation. The convention then at 11:30 took a recess until 1:30. The platform endorses and eulogizes Governor Boies' administration, affirms the license plank of the platform of 1889, denounces the Australian ballot and Reed's national control of railroads, denounces the McKinley bill, favors liberal pensions, urges the free coinage of silver upon a just ratio, and urges a liberal appropriation for the World's fair.

Regret the Failure as Fraudulent.

BOSTON, June 25.—A meeting of the eastern creditors of Stephen A. Ryan, dealer in boots, shoes, dry goods, etc., of Atlanta, Ga., under the style of John Ryan's Sons, was held this morning. Mr. Jones, who had visited Atlanta in the interest of the creditors, reported that he found the store in Atlanta in possession of the sheriff and creditors of mortgages on the stock. Ryan, the debtor's father, to secure him for indorsements on notes aggregating $375,319. The real estate had been turned over to the debtor's children. It is thought that a permanent receiver will be appointed Saturday. The stock is estimated to aggregate from $200,000 to $300,000 and Mr. Jones estimated the liabilities at $1,000,000, although he could not get exact figures. He said the failure was regarded in Atlanta as a fraud and generally believed by that city. Ryan would not be present if he could avoid it. No action was taken by the meeting.

Sent Back After All.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—W. H. Crawford, a Canadian, came from Canada, secured employment, and returned to Canada for his tools. On his return he was apprehended and sent back home as a violation of the alien contract labor law. He returned, declared his intention of becoming a citizen, filed his papers and returned to his place. His case was brought to the attention of the treasury department, and Assistant Secretary Nettleton has decided that his illegal intention to become a citizen does not alter his status before the law, and directs his return to Canada.

Want the Body of Jeff Davis.

NEW YORK, June 25.—The Mississippi delegation, headed by Governor Lowry, which was expected here yesterday to request that the body of Jefferson Davis remains to be interred at Jackson, Miss., has not yet arrived. The representative of the Richmond (Va.) committee, which have the other body, called on Mrs. Davis yesterday. She said that she could not yet give a reply and asked for ten days in which to consider the matter. She will telegraph her decision to the mayor of Richmond at the end of that period.

Railroad Earnings.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The May statement of the business of all lines of the Pennsylvania system is as follows: All lines east of Pittsburg and Erie show a decrease in gross earnings of $217,781 and a decrease in net earnings of $164,505. All lines west of Pittsburg and Erie show an increase in gross receipts of $211,854 and an increase of net earnings of $6,342.

THE HERO LOST HIS LIFE

Frederick Brokaw Drowned at Long Branch.

SANK IN SIGHT OF HIS PARENTS.

A Son of the Well Known New York Clothier Perishes in the Waves While Endeavoring to Rescue a Drowning Woman—She Also Dead.

LONG BRANCH, June 25.—A terrible accident resulting in the loss of the lives of a young man and woman in the clutches of the sea occurred here yesterday. Frederick Brokaw, the eldest son of Isaac V. Brokaw, clothier, of Fifth avenue, New York, and Maggie Doyle, a pretty dressing maid, are the victims. The saddest feature of the accident was that Young Brokaw's father and mother stood on the lawn of their summer home and witnessed his struggle for life and saw him sink beneath the waves.

The Three Women.

The three women servants employed by Mrs. Simon Hess, of New York, went in bathing. They were Annie Doyle, Maggie Birsch and Julia Tapia. Young Brokaw and Dr. Ferris, one of his most intimate friends and his guest, were lying on the beach talking when the three girls plunged into the water.

Miss Doyle was a good swimmer, and as the tide was low her companions followed her as she swam out into the breakers. When the girls were about seventy-five yards from the shore they swam into one of the sea "passes."

Carried Out to Sea.

The waves swept them from their feet and carried them out further seaward. Young Brokaw heard their screams, and tearing off his coat, ran to a boat, followed by Dr. Ferris. When they found that there were no oars the two men jumped into the sea. The sea "puss" had by this time carried the three women nearly 200 yards out.

The Boat Capsized.

James Bradley, who saw the plight of the women, launched a fishing boat from the life saving station and rode out to aid Mr. Brokaw and Dr. Ferris. Dr. Ferris had reached Maggie Hirsch and was supporting her head above water. Bradley pulled him and the girl into the boat, but the next minute a huge wave upset it and left the three struggling in the water. They succeeded in catching hold of the capsized craft, where they clung for life.

His Battle with the Waves.

Mr. Brokaw had at this time reached Annie Doyle, and was battling bravely with the strong waves to bring her ashore. By this time the beach was covered with people, including young Brokaw's parents and other cottagers.

James Dunn launched another lifeboat, and rowing to where Dr. Ferris and Maggie Birsch and James Bradley, Dr. Ferris became unconscious as he was being pulled in the boat.

Both Drowned.

The men then shouted encouragingly to young Brokaw. Suddenly the young man threw up his hands, and he and the girl sank beneath the waves. The waves threw the girl from his arms, and when they came up again they were a short distance apart. They sank once more, but did not rise to the surface again. Julia Tapia was rescued.

The News from China Vertied.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—Advices received at the navy department from Admiral Belknap, commanding the Asiatic squadron, confirm the reported trouble in China. Admiral Belknap has three vessels in Chinese waters—the Alliance, Palos and Monocacy—and should the danger of the situation increase these vessels would not be sufficient to protect American interests there. Admiral Harmony received orders to relieve Admiral Belknap some time ago, and will start for the Asiatic station this week. He will sail in the Lancaster and will probably be accompanied by some other vessel of the navy should future advices indicate the need of more vessels on the Asiatic station. The Chinese legation has received advices stating that the viceroy has been removed at Woo-Hoo, China, and that the Chinese government has taken steps to prevent any further outbreaks.

Governor Campbell's Victory.

CINCINNATI, June 25.—The Democratic state convention will be held in Cleveland July 14 and 15. The state central committee has decided that the ratio of delegates apportioned to each county must be made on the vote of 1890 and not that of 1889, which was the Governor's vote. This knocks out the primaries of the Hamilton county democrats, which were held last Saturday, and makes legal the primaries of several other counties which have already indorsed Governor Campbell. The committee also decided that Allen W. Thurman will be temporary chairman of the convention. This is a great victory for Governor Campbell.

Distinguished Chilians in New York.

NEW YORK, June 25.—Pedro Montt, Antonio Baras and José M. Santa Cruz arrived here from Aspinwall. Messrs. Montt and Baras are distinguished Chilian statesmen and the third member of the party is a noted Chilian naval officer. The purpose of their visit to this country is to try and induce the United States government to recognize the Chilian insurgents.

The Loring Cup Presentation.

HARTFORD, June 25.—President Smith, of Trinity college, presented to the Trinity alumni the loving cup, in memory of the late David Eisenbreth, M. D., a graduate of the college. The cup is the gift of Miss Eisenbreth, of New York, a sister of deceased. Dr. G. W. Russell, representing the Alumni association, made an excellent address of thanks.

Racing to Be Resumed.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 25.—There is much rejoicing here over reports that the supreme court has handed down a decision favorable to Monmouth Park and that racing will be resumed. Many horses have been shipped to the track and a large force of men are at work there.

Woolsie's Stand a Reduction.

CLEVELAND, June 25.—Over two hundred dockmakers walked out of the factory of Lenaman, Hirschsleimer & Co., one of the largest concerns of the kind in the country, because of a reduction in their wages. About 175 of the strikers are women.

No Longer Interested.

NEW HAVEN, June 25.—Dr. Joseph W. Alsop, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor in the last campaign in Connecticut, died suddenly at his home in Middletown.

The Dynamite Was Left by Anarchists.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., June 25.—On Memorial day explosives in this city held a jollification at a farm of a Bohemian named Mastalla, who lives at the extreme north end of the city, on which occasion Johnson Mead, now serving a sentence in New York state, was present. When the Mastalla family cleaned the house which had been occupied by the visitors on eight-year-old son found in the match safe an article which afterward proved to be a dynamite bomb. He showed it to his playmates, and the next day while he was examining it it exploded, tearing the flesh of the girl's left hand so badly that it will be necessary to amputate the ends of four fingers and the thumb. The boy was knocked senseless, and another daughter who was standing close by had the flesh of one hand badly lacerated.

Editor as Well as Detective.

ERIE, Pa., June 25.—Upon the recommendation of President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, the dismissal on of a new labor paper has engaged T. H. BUSINESS METHODS IN HOUSEWORK.

An Outline of the Plans Along Which the Improvement May Tend.

The plans women are making in the business world is to have a similar effect upon the money transactions in housekeeping. Half of the women in active business life today, though they may be neither wives or mothers, are the mainstay of homes.

To the business woman we must look to plan our system of housekeeping upon a business-like foundation. The house mother must depend more upon outside help and also do more for herself.

To meet this condition of things the markets provide every year a greater supply of food already prepared for the table.

The cooking schools and the constant improvement in kitchen utensils are doing much to make housework attractive to intelligent women.

A hundred years ago the average American girl was ready to work in the house of her neighbor, upon an equal footing with his daughters, for fifty cents per week. To-day the independent American woman cannot be a servant, subject to the direction of one who knows even less than she does how to cook or to keep house. She might be her own mistress and yet serve her neighbor.

Many a woman working hard for little money under many masters in other branches of business might resolve herself and friends into a working force, and supply wholesome, attractive food to the community in which she lives.

On the other hand, each member of the family must be trained to serve himself to a greater degree.

Thus the family circle could be kept from the uncomfortable atmosphere which often arises from the introduction of outside elements by their servants or relatives.

The near future will demand level headed, well trained business women to supply food to communities. The average bakery is not a success from a hygienic standpoint. Women's exchanges are as yet not possible in small towns, but there is no town of 1,000 inhabitants that would not give good support to a woman who was ready to supply wholesome, well cooked food at a fair profit.

Bone, muscle and brain depend upon the food. Educated brains must study the question of food supply, and strange proper combinations of food for all conditions of mankind.

Girls who didn't like to study books have thoughtlessly taught themselves cookery. Women who have failed because of unsystematic work elsewhere have taken orders for cooking, and then rallied at the partiality of women's exchanges.

The New England kitchen, which was started as an experiment in Boston by some scientific women who had seen similar institutions abroad, has found a place for itself, and demands come from all parts of the country for similar establishments.

The difficulty now is to find well balanced women who will take the training necessary to conduct such a business properly.

Even with washing, tossing and sewing done outside, there is much left for the house mother. But if she can buy soups, salads, desserts, meats, breads and the burdens of the housekeeping will be lighter than if she strives to direct a servant to do these things for her.

Are there not women who have had a business training who can undertake this missionary work for their sisters?—Anna Barrows in Homemaker.

Self Supporting.

It is pleasant and hopeful to note that so many of the young women of America are learning to value the mental powers and the education that will make it possible for them to support themselves if the necessity for doing so should arise. The daughters of comparatively wealthy men are not infrequently found assisting their fathers in the office or counting room as typewriters or accountants.

Many so called fashionable ladies make their own dresses and hats, we are told, having gone through a regular course of instruction in the art of millinery and dressmaking. An instance recently came to the notice of the writer that has in it a romantic interest. A young lady, reduced by the state of dependence to which they would be reduced if their parents or husbands should die, leaving them unprovided for.

A lady who had a beautiful home and three little children, and whose husband was supposed to be comparatively wealthy, one day found herself a widow and almost penniless, her husband having been engaged in unfortunate speculations just before his death.

The ladies' friends were profuse in their offers of sympathy, while wondering "what in the world she would do now."

She knew just what she would do. Within a month she had opened a millinery establishment that at once became very popular and profitable, for the bonnets she had worn in the past had been such models of elegance that her fashionable friends were glad to take advantage of her good taste. They never dreamed that she had made those bonnets herself, nor did they know that she had privately given herself a very good business education.

She was successful from the first, and the praises she received for her cleverness in providing women would have turned the head of a less sensible woman.—Youth's Companion.

For a Modest Friend.

Comparatively few people have a really convenient receptacle for sheet music. The rest of the world either piles it on the piano, where it gets dusty and is always untidy, or put it away in some inconvenient place, all kinds together, so that if one wants a song it must be found after searching through studies, dance music, sonatas, etc.

A good way to keep sheet music classified and free from dust is to have several envelopes, one for each kind of music. Make them of gray linen, or blue or brown denim, two inches larger than a sheet of music. Bind all the seams and edges with harmonizing or contrasting silk braid, and with the same colored embroidery silk work one word to designate the style of music to be found within, as" Songs," "Dance Music," "Symphonies," or whatever music is used by the individual or family. If preferred, these envelopes may be stiffened with pasteboard and lined. This will make them much more durable. If made in this way, the piece should first be bound with braid, and then overhanded neatly and strongly together.

Light brown denim, bound with darker brown braid and worked with brown silk, would be neat, or blue denim, with blue decorations, or gray linen, with red or dark gold color. In default of a regular music cabinet these envelopes may lie on any table, or on a chair standing beside the piano, or even on the piano itself.

A set of these music envelopes would be a very welcome gift for a friend devoted to the divine art in any of its forms.—Harper's Bazar.

Light in the Home.

The London Queen speaks with some interest of the general introduction of electrical lights in houses, but draws attention to that slaughter of the innocents which is the unfortunate result. It says:

"It is not a pleasant light to read by. It is mechanical and inartistic for home use, though suitable pre-eminently for lighting factories, large places, halls, theatres and dry goods stores, where it is desirable to have the strongest light that we can find.

"Gas, on the other hand, is more unbecoming than gas light, bringing out the defects of the complexion with unerring precision, while gems pale before it. No light is more ungrateful to the softening to the complexion than candle light, and where it is necessary to have stronger light for reading our fine improved lamps have completely taken its place. Gas should be relegated to halls and places where beauty of effect is secondary to mere utility. It is a great mistake to introduce into our home life any more mechanical contrivances than are essential to comfort. —New York Tribune.

Old Fashioned Codfish Pie.

The codfish pie of our grandmothers makes a famous dish. Here is an old recipe for it by a Connecticut lady: Line a deep baking dish with good pie crust, or with a good soda biscuit crust, made in the following manner: Sift together four cups of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two heaping teaspoonfuls of soda and two of cream tartar (or three heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder) and one teaspoonful of salt. Rub in one half cupful of shortening. Add milk enough to make a medium soft dough—about a pint. Some flour takes more than others. For the upper crust spread butter on twice, and fold and roll out. Cut out a round piece in the center.

Take a pint of picked up salt codfish, cover with boiling water, let it stand two minutes, drain, pour on more water, let stand and drain dry; put a layer of this codfish in the dish which has been lined with the crust, sprinkle with bread crumbs, pepper and a little salt if the fish is very fresh; put on bits of butter and some cream sauce which has been made by thickening one pint of boiling milk with two teaspoonfuls of flour, and season*with salt and pepper; break in three or four eggs according to the size of the dish*, piercing the yolks; repeat the codfish, bread crumbs, cream sauce and eggs; put on the top crust and bake a delicate brown. —American Angler.

Plain Windows Are Fashionable.

The king glass crase had its day and its use, in disfigured many a house, but it marked a new era. Up to its advent womanskind who could afford the luxury of lace curtains gloried in putting them before eyes over "decorative art" in all its phases. When, therefore, it came to pass that fashion decreed a daily penance of four or five hours under the influence of the sun filtered through this melancholy color, despite herself the victim really got a good deal of natural warmth and light at second hand. Even at such a disadvantage the fad proved a wonderful rejuvenator, appearing as it did when the race of vigorous American women seemed threatened with extinction. Things are better now. Sunlight is described by the canons of "society." The housewife cares less to preserve the colors of carpet and rug than that her house should be bright and cheery. Schools are beginning to reckon sunshine among their advantages. Calculus no longer regard a "dim, religious light" essential to devout frames of mind. Railways provide observation cars for their patrons. Let us hope that the window, pure and simple, has come to stay, and be duly thankful.—Chicago Herald.

The Woman Who Knows It All.

The "intellectual woman," who is so well informed and so anxious to have you know it, reminds me of a leek—useful, but tear starting. She has thought on every subject under and over the sun, and has formed her convictions on all matters, and the instant you broach a subject she hastens to assure you that she knows all about it. She sometimes possesses hand, but it betrays her too active intellect has sharpened them and hewed away the curves of beauty. She is inclined to dress severely, and to wear very dignified bonnets.

She thinks out her answers a sentence ahead of your remarks, and waits for you to finish, with mere tolerance. Her women friends speak of her with great respect as "such an intelligent person," and the clergyman of her faith is the only man who ever has enough masculine attention upon her. Her husband considers her a remarkably intelligent woman—but he is given to dining at his club a good deal, and weekly acknowledges that he cannot hold a candle to his wife in brain.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Ladies' Home Journal.

Walking and Dancing.

If a part of the time spent by young women in the drawing room were devoted to outdoor recreation, there would be a marked improvement in their health and general appearance. There would be roses in their cheeks and vigor in their step, instead of sallow cheeks and listlessness. With health comes beauty of face and form as well as sweetness of disposition.

Social dissipation is the bane of woman's life. A week's vital force is wasted in one night of ballroom excitement; and woman, unlike her sturdier brother, denies herself the means of recuperation afforded by sound sleep until sun rise. Hence she ages fast.

Some curious persons, with the aid of a pedometer, has ascertained that the distance traversed during an evening of twenty-two dances is thirteen and one-half miles, and this, too, in a foul atmosphere! If the average girl were asked to take a walk of anything like this distance she would treat the proposition as among the impossibilities.—George Simmons in Washington Star.

An Easy and Durable Way to Sew Sheets.

When one's household is large and there are no sheets ready to be kept clean, try our way of making sheets and pillowslips. I found I could not take time to sew the long seams "over and over," and handstitch the hems, and my neat, careful mother had taught me. But she did not have to keep nine or ten beds running, year in and year out—half of them for farm hands, whose work necessarily must badly soil bedclothing—else she, too, might have adopted this way.

I buy yard wide, heavy, firm sheeting, of medium fineness, believing it wears better than the coarser. I lay the sheeting in the long seams together, overlapping them nearly one-fourth inch, or sufficient to machine stitch each edge. This makes two stitchings lengthwise of each seam, leaving a smooth, flat seam, which does not break and rip with wear, as one stitching is very apt to do. Pillowslips I overlap and make in the same way, and have no bothering all ends and hems.—Clarissa Potter in Good Housekeeping.

Neatness in Girls.

Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when she is young she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable. Not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort, not so many colors in them, and people don't expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl.

A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her finger nails are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar is not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she cannot be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned it it will almost take care of itself.—Christian at Work.

Proof That Men Notice Women's Dress.

There is no doubt about it that the old idea that nothing escapes the eye of the poet is true, for Petrarch noted the tender green and the glowing pile of the velvet gown that Laura wore, as well as the great bunch of purple violets at her throat, at her waist and in the hand of the gentle lady. Tennyson lingers lovingly over the fairness of Elaine in her shabby gown. Swinburne tells of a beauty in a scarlet hood, Rossetti delights in describing full, soft folds of white, and Owen Meredith tells of a shimmering of silk worn by the women who lived in his poems as well as in his life. This is just a little sermon to remind womankind that men do notice what they wear, and that when these men are poets they write about it. So, after all, it is worth while to dress for mankind. —Exchange.

Miss Philpott's Long Hair.

The longest suit of hair in the world is perhaps that which grows on the head of Miss Asenath Philpott, of Galesville, Wis., here trailing on the ground when she stands nearly four feet, and measuring in all 10 feet and 7 inches. Miss Philpott is a slight, delicate woman, approaching middle age, and regards her magnificent tresses as rather a nuisance, complaining that their weight actually drains her strength. The present growth is of the past seven years, as in 1884 her head was shaved after a severe attack of brain fever. She cuts out from time to time large quantities of her hair and sends it east, where it has already made an account of its gloss and its greatly admired red gold tint.—Boston Record.

A Pleasant Fumigator.

A cheap and pleasant fumigator for sick rooms, one diffusing a healthful, agreeable and highly penetrating disinfectant odor in close apartments, or wherever the air has deteriorated, is made as follows: Pour common vinegar on powdered chalk until effervescence ceases. Leave the whole to settle, and pour off the liquid. Dry the sediment and place in a shallow earthen or glass dish, and pour upon it sulphuric acid until white fumes commence to arise. This vapor quickly spreads, is very agreeably pungent, and acts as a powerful purifier of vitiated air.—Detroit Free Press.

Women in the English Postoffice.

There are now nearly 700 lady clerks employed at the general postoffice in receipt of salaries ranging from £65 to £150 or £170 per annum. Of course by far the larger proportion is to be found in the second class, where there are over 500 at a salary beginning at £65 and rising by annual increments of £3 to £80. In the first class dividing there are about eighty-seven clerks, the maximum salary being £150, while principal clerks, of whom there are about twenty, can rise to £170 a year.—London Tit-Bits.

More than half a million of enthusiastic women are united in philanthropic, intelligent and co-operative work for the advancement of the interests and privileges of womanhood in the great national associations incorporated under the names of the National Woman's Christian association, National Suffrage association, National Centenary Association of the United Methodist church, the Wimodaughels, the King's Daughters and the Association of Working Girls' societies.

A troublesome cough may be relieved by a syrup of onions made by slicing raw onions into a bowl in alternate layers with white sugar. Cover and set in the oven until the juice is extracted, but to avoid waste squeeze onions, syrup and all through a strong cloth until no more juice is to be had. Give this syrup at intervals, and there is no danger of giving too much, for it will do no harm.

Mrs. General Custer is one of the few semi-professional women in New York who can hold the interest of a school full of boys. In her talks on frontier life to these restless audiences, who must be interested before they will consent to be instructed, she begins with some true Indian stories, bristling with tomahawks, feathers and scalps, and presently has the listeners spellbound.

Mrs. James T. Field, of Boston, the widow of the publisher, is said to possess one of the largest private literary collections in the world. In the library are quantities of valuable original MSS. and autograph letters, and in the garden at the rear of the house grow trees that were planted by many famous authors and public men.

Some women by hard labor in the fruit season sell canned fruit enough to supply most of their needs for the remainder of the year. Any person supplying a good article of food is sure of success. There are fewer fluctuations than in embroideries and paintings.

Soft water is better than hard for boiling vegetables, as the hard water toughens them. When cooking always keep the kettle boiling, if not steadily, and do not anything you may be boiling needs more water you can add it without stopping the boiling process.

The Archduchess Maria Theresa, of Austria, is a clever goldsmith, and her intimate and favored friends and members of her family are the happy recipients of gold brooches designed and executed by the noble lady.

CHILDREN'S SUMMER DRESSES.

Quaintly Pretty Costumes for Wedding, Seaside, Church and Everyday Wear.

Some of the prettiest frocks made for children lately have been copied from Kate Greenaway pictures. A quaint dress of pink muslin, with pattern of colored sprigs, designed for a tiny girl to wear as a bridesmaid, is shown in the illustration at Fig. 1. A frill trims the edge of the skirt and the short waisted bodice is ornamented with a crossover made of the same material as the dress. The hat is of drawn muslin trimmed with feathers. This costume would suit an artistic child with pretty hair and a nice complexion.

CHILDREN'S COSTUMES.

A serviceable dress for a girl of fourteen or fifteen to wear at the seaside is shown in Fig. 2. It is of blue serge—and she smartly has a jacket to wear over a cotton blouse. The skirt and the jacket are both outlined with rows of narrow braid. The costume worn by the young lady in Fig. 3 is made of some soft woolen fabric in French gray, and the cape is lined with silk in a delicate shade of pink and bordered with a frill. When a slight breeze causes the corner of the cape to turn back one catches a glimpse of the pretty interior. The Tam o' Shanter hat is made of the dress material, and has a fluted brim lined with pink. This would do nicely for a Sunday-go-to-meeting dress.

CHILDREN'S COSTUMES.

The little dress in the fourth sketch is of blue zephyr. It is daintily trimmed with hand embroidery and worn over a blouse of Turkey red, which is visible only at the neck and wrists.

In a pretty summer frock of white embroidered muslin, like that of Fig. 7, the sleeves are shortened with light blue at the middle and at the wrists, and a silk sash of the same color is tied loosely about the waist. The hat is made of muslin, with a shady brim gathered all around.

The small boy and girl at Figs. 5 and 6 are ready to start for a wedding. The little lady wears a dress of white muslin, and a short waisted silk frock. She has a basket of pink roses in one hand and the other is clasped in the right hand of her companion. The costume of the little man is white, with a frill around the neck for trimming.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," FRIDAY, JUNE 26 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

COMMENCEMENT.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES AT MUSIC HALL.

From Sweet Sixteen to Brave Nineteen They All Were There.—There was a Crowd and Music and Flowers and Speeches.—Wonderful Essays That Were Read and Handsome Prizes Distributed.—Dr. Carroll's Address.

PRESIDENT KIRKNER OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Eight dandelions and sixteen daisies marched in single file from the right on to the stage of Music Hall last night. From the left came President Jacob Kirkner, Dr. J. B. Probasco, J. W. Murray and E. L. Finch of the Board. At the head of the dandelions and daisies was the gardener in chief, Principal Julia E. Bulkley, and beside her was Edwin S. Hunt, first assistant gardener. The dandelions and daisies themselves were a splendid and lovely collection. Two thousand men, women and children who had massed themselves in the hall were for three hours delightfully entertained. All Plainfield was there, and altogether the first annual floricultural show of the Plainfield Public schools was a great success.

President Kirkner was master of ceremonies. The first of flowers to be brought forward for public inspection was of the daisy variety, Miss Lucy M. Titsworth. To her was entrusted the difficult task of reading the opening essay, and with great tact was this done.

Another of the daisy genus, Miss Martha A. Covart, was introduced and pleased everybody in pretty and unaffected fashion. The big audience thanked her warmly.

Then the first of the dandelions, Auguste L. Saltzman, stepped forward and told the audience all about themselves. Very surprising information he had to offer, and the Yankees who heard it were correspondingly grateful.

The band got jealous of the flowers at this point and, insisted on playing a selection, Bizet's Carmen. When it was through Mr. Kirkner rose again and introduced Miss Hannah L. Larkins. She told a story that led every young heart to applaud her finely.

Another of the same botanical class, Miss Margaret R. Cory, set the young hearts dancing again. The old hearts joined in, which meant that Miss Cory's favorite author was quite an old acquaintance of theirs.

Here came a manly specimen of the dandelion tribe. He was Fred A. Daboll, and he had such a good thing to tell about that many felt like rising up and saying so. That would have been impolite, however, and so they thanked him by clapping their hands very hard and long.

The band wanted to say something about Bathenstein at this point, and President Kirkner graciously allowed them to proceed. Then Miss Marian B. Nevius, one of the daisy family, let loose some historical facts that were valuable and very new.

It is the turn of the prize flowers then. The gardiners had given up in despair the task of picking out the best one in the lot. The flowers were allowed to vote on the matter themselves, and Alfred G. Killmer, a dandelion, was chosen to speak the valedictory. But first, one of the duties, Miss Edith L. Gilbert, read what our want really is, and yet it is a problem capable of being solved, if but the proper mathematician is at hand."

MR KILLMER'S ESSAY.

The topic of Public Benefactors was a good preface to the valedictory. In behalf of the class the Board of Education, teachers and principals were thanked for the long interest they had taken in this year's graduates. A retrospect of class-life brought out the fact that there were artists, poets and writers among them. By means of the semi-weekly rhetorical exercises they had been given free and pleasant play. In art, music, poetry and literature the way is opening for aspirants for honor.

"But at this, our last meeting" concluded the valedictorian "let us mutually resolve never to weary in well-doing and to make our class-motto our ideal for the future,—"To be rather than to seem."—to illustrate in our characters the noble elements of patriot and public benefactor. To all, board, teachers, principal and classmates, as the last word of our present relations, farewell!"

Dr. J. B. Probasco made the award of prizes. For excellence in penmanship the Kirkner prize of Bryants Library of Poetry and Song was given to Hattie I. King. To Carol Kaupman, Whittier's poems were given for greatest improvement. Mrs. C. H. Stillman's first prize of $15 in gold for mathematics was awarded to Margaret Ray Cory, the second of $10 to Alfred G. Killmer. Hudson's Shakespeare was awarded to Araldine Gilbert for the best English composition, the gift of George H. Babcock. To Edith L. Gilbert was given it, but the children rushed over plain and mountain to their fate. All were lost, shipwrecked or captured by the Saracens.

MISS CORY'S ESSAY.

My Favorite Author gave all that is known of Mother Goose. "All through life," the essay concluded, "we have an interest in Mother Goose. We listen to her in infancy, and in old age we still cling to her for the wisdom of her rhymes."

MR. DABOLL'S ESSAY.

In a sense the whole earth is a Cemetery of Nations, but chiefly so is that part between Persia and the Mediterranean Sea. In scholarly language was given the story of the nations, from the Assyrian to the Hebrew, that have risen and fallen in that narrow tract of land.

MISS NEVIUS' ESSAY.

The Historic Houses in America little known are Hawthorne's house of Seven Gables, Holmes' Boston home, Motley's the Old Manse at Concord, the Prince House at Boston, the Old Tavern at Portsmouth and Carlisle House in Virginia, where Washington used often to dance.

MISS GILBERT'S ESSAY.

The value of The Study of Latin was pointed out. The interesting history of the Class of '91 was also told. "The Class of '91 is the first in years which has had no re-union. Hence we have gathered their records," said the speaker, "and present them here to-night. Although they have not met as a class, yet the school is indebted to '90 more than to any one class for the generosity of its individual members. This generosity is deserving of public notice and public gratitude. From the flagpole above the High School floats a banner whose donor was a member of '90. The name of that donor, Ernest R. Ackermann, appears annually with the Greek and Latin prizes.

"Mr. Franklin S. Smith has given constant proof of his interest in the science work by gifts of apparatus, cabinets of minerals and an untiring energy and desire to arouse enthusiasm in that department. From another member we have been both benefitted and interested by descriptions of foreign travel, and as we listen our eyes seek a certain silken flag, framed upon the wall, and we think in this instance, not the star of a father but the banner of a mother has been inherited by the son. [Bishop Vincent and his son, George E. Vincent.—Ed.]

"Another member, Mr. Collins, is about to take his degree as Doctor of Philosophy in the University of Leipsic; and Mr. Angleman, a recent graduate of the Law School of New York University, resides honor upon her who laid the foundation of a higher education. Among the doctors, bankers and lawyers which '90 represents to-day, there are intelligent business men. There is a farmer in South Maryland. Among the girls of that class—rather the girls of ten years ago—there is one growing artist. They have chosen professions appropriate rather than public renown. We take occasion here to thank one who was not a member of '90 or indeed of any class in the school. In May Mr. H. G. Reynolds presented to the High School a piece of apparatus known as the microphone, a device known as 'Kipp's Generator.' Note should also be made of Mr. Krom's present of crystals of magnetic iron, which were in addition to his already generous gift of a case of minerals.

"Wellesley University has placed the High School graduates upon the list of acceptance of students by certificates. From Wellesley and Princeton colleges the most encouraging accounts of the scholarship of our students are received. From West Point the news has come that our one representative there graduates ninth in a class of 65.

In fact the High School has just cause to plume herself upon her friends and graduates. She is grateful for the honors, her personal gifts and her scholarly attainments. There is still a certain something she wants upon her chapel walls which modesty and natural pride forbid her to ask for. It will take considerable perseverance on the part of any past graduate or indeed anyone desiring to make a gift to discern what our want really is, and yet it is a problem capable of being solved, if but the proper mathematician is at hand."

The band here presisted in playing a waltz. President Kirkner presented the twenty-four diplomas to Alice J. Carroll, Margaret J. Cory, Martha A. Covert, Fred A. Daboll, Lucy V. Dunham, Frank H. Henry D. Carroll, LL.D., then addressed the graduates.

ADDRESS BY HENRY E. CARROLL, LL. D.

Young Ladies and Young Gentlemen of the Graduating Classes!

Out of the struggle for mastery comes the law of victory, and the glory of patient toil crowned with the glory of achievement! You have had your struggle, and this is the hour of your triumph. For the results gathered here to-night, you have striven hard and faithfully for more than a third of an average lifetime. Ernest R. Ackermann, to appear annually with the Greek and Latin prizes.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

There are in Toronto soldiers enough from the Union army in the late war to establish a Grand Army post there. This post belongs to the department of New York, and is known as yet simply as No. 823. But the old boys ought to get a better name than that.

A very busy United States government meat inspection bureau is at work in Chicago examining meat that is shipped abroad from that port. By a late order from the agricultural department all hog meats intended for export from Chicago to foreign countries are examined microscopically before they are permitted to be sent away, so as to have the certainty that they are not affected with trichinosis. By such measures as these American pork will certainly get a good reputation abroad. At home we know it is the healthiest pork on the world's market.

Independence Day.

Slight Thanksgiving day it you like; work New Year's day if your business is pressing; slur over Washington's birthday by casting up your accounts and doing odds and ends of business on the quiet, but keep the Fourth of July. It is enough to make us breathe the prayer of the Pharisee and thank God we are not as other men, when we contrast our own condition with that of most of the so called republics. These are bankrupt or hard pressed financially, all of them but France, and some of them are fighting among themselves in a way to make one despair of self government among all but blonde nations. We fought once, Greek to Greek, Anglo-Saxon against Anglo-Saxon, and settled the difference then and there. Since then we have gone on from glory to glory, and the Fourth of July belongs now and henceforth equally to both north and south. So let us celebrate it.

This year let some wise person prepare a speech setting forth the glories yet to come for our people, our splendid natural resources undeveloped, the mineral, manufacturing and agricultural possibilities that lie before us, and deliver it at the Fourth of July picnic. Let it not be forgotten that Gladstone predicted we should be by 1915 the most powerful people that have been known on the globe in historic times. Our resources are not half unfolded yet; Americans not yet half alive to the riches that lie all about them. There are money and food enough, rightly distributed, to maintain in this country in comfort and luxury 100,000,000 people. So unfurl the splendid stars and stripes on Independence day and pray that we may gain wisdom to distribute our treasures wisely.

The American Climate.

We have none. We simply have a whirligig of temperature which, like everything else American, tries to break the record. And it does it. No doubt of that. We defy any other country on this globe to show a thermometer that can tumble head over heels and skip down hill 53 degs. in five hours. Nay, more. It does worse than that. In New York city, at the breaking of the unparalleled heated term in June, the weather clerk was watching the thermometer at the moment the cool wave struck it, and actually saw the mercury go down 16 degs. in five minutes. Fact. We have in the authority of the whole United States government to back it up. In what other country of the earth can it be raining at 6 o'clock in the evening and the thermometer stand 30 degs. below zero at 6 o'clock next morning?

You never know when or how the heat or cold is going to strike you. It can be usually predicted of any place that it will be either warm or cold at a given time of the year, and certain spots are usually known to have a warm temperature while certain others can be depended on for a reasonably cool one. Everywhere but in America, that is. New England is supposed to be reasonably cool, for instance, yet on the late famous hot June day the thermometer was as high at Portland, Me., as in many of the southern cities. Boston and Galveston had just the same temperature at the same hour of the day. So did Cleveland and New Orleans.

At 8 o'clock in the morning where was the hottest place in North America? Was it Key West or Mobile or anywhere in Arizona? No, it wasn't. It was in Pittsburg, that cold northern city, above whose smoke the foothills of the snow clad Alleghenies frown everlastingly down. The temperature there at 8 o'clock a. m. was 86. On that same day, Providence, registered 107 in the shade, while New York city came in as a good second with 100.

On this day of days, where now was the coolest place in this scorched, roasted continent? It was in northern Maine, of course, or in the states bordering on British America in the northwest, or certainly in Canada. Well, so, it was and. It was nowhere else than in that alleged blistering desert, New Mexico. While New England fanned itself and blessed itself and used bad words because of the heat, Santa Fe bundled itself into its spring overcoat with the thermometer at 42.

THE STORM IN THE WEST

Great Damage Done in Iowa and Nebraska.

HOUSES AND BRIDGES SWEPT AWAY

Railroad Tracks Under Water and Trains Interrupted—Grain Fields Destroyed and Cattle Drowned—The Loss of Life Reported So Far Not Serious.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 26.—Northwestern Iowa has suffered heavily from the rainfall of the last few days. The Little Sioux and Floyd rivers are raging and overflowing their banks. At Cherokee fifty houses, and barns on the lowlands have been swept away, and the bridges along the Illinois Central railroad have been washed out. Only a few trains are arriving in Sioux City, and the Milwaukee, Sioux City and Northern and the Illinois Central roads are taking out gangs of men to repair the damage.

Immense Damage Done.

The storm converted the Sioux valley into a great lake. The valley is one of the most fertile portions of this part of the country and is thickly settled, numerous small towns being scattered throughout its length. The damage done will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Aside from the loss sustained from the sweeping away of homes, barns and stock, there will be heavy losses to farmers by the total destruction of great fields of wheat and corn. Although the flood came rather suddenly the people in the valley were not taken by surprise, as riders were started to carry the warning. Had the flood occurred in the night there would doubtless have been great loss of life. The overflowing of the banks of the Little Sioux and Floyd rivers was the primary cause of the flood. That was augmented by a cloudburst at Lemars, Ia. The combination was an irresistible one, and it was not long before the waters had reached there, all being to places of safety, in many instances driving their cattle before them.

The Third Wave.

The tidal wave struck Sioux City until this morning. It did not come with a rush, but gradually overflowed the banks of Floyd river and extended over the bottoms, many acres of valuable land. Several big factories were submerged, and the little town is now under two feet of water. On the Omaha branch of the Illinois Central railroad, which follows Little Sioux valley, the track is washed out in many places, and several miles of track under water. Should the line of the Illinois Central the Omaha seems to have been the first to suffer. Its tracks were washed out at Lemars and as far north as Sheldon. The Chicago and Northwestern reports heavy floods all along the Eagle Grove line, and numerous washouts in the vicinity of Correctionville, Cherokee, Cleghorn, Pierson, Cleg, Plymouth, Cherokee, Buna Vista, Woodbury, Ida, Sac, Monona, Crawford, Carroll, Harrison and Shelby. The telegraph wires are demoralized and it is difficult to get details of the general casualties. The territory invaded is dotted with villages and farms, and it is feared that the damage and loss of life has been great. The reports of the railroad officials give only the details as to the losses sustained by the roads. The main line of the Chicago and Northwestern, according to these reports, is blocked by the carrying away of bridges, etc., to the length of 135 miles. On the main line from Lynn Grove to Alton the bridge over Waterman creek with its trestle, 280 feet long, has been carried away. Ten other bridges, five each side of Waterman creek, have also been carried away. Near Paullina one bridge 190 feet long has been swept away, together with two smaller ones.

On the Moville branch, between Moville and Schaller, and on the Ida Grove and Onouaw branches, the water is so high and the telegraph lines so badly damaged that it is impossible to ascertain the damage done. In the section of the country where the storm was most severe the Chicago and Northwestern railroad has many bridges, and the loss to railroad property will be enormous. The bridge of the Illinois Central at Cherokee, over the Sioux river, has been washed away.

Devastation at Cherokee.

The following additional particulars of the flood at Cherokee have been received: The wagon bridge over the Sioux south of the town was carried away at about 10 o'clock. This was followed by all the houses on the flat part of the town, numbering over a hundred. The number of people driven from their homes is between 1,200 and 1,500. The river continued to rise until 3 o'clock, at that time being ten feet higher than ever before known. Every bridge across the Sioux river, both wagon and railroad, is gone between here and Onouaw, and probably every bridge in Cherokee county on the Sioux river. Most of the distressed people found shelter in the Grand Army of the Republic and Oddfellows' halls, and arrangements were made whereby they will be cared for until some action is taken. The town presents a sorrowful appearance. Those houses that remain on the flat are almost buried in mud. People have already begun to clear up the rubbish. The destruction of property is about $50,000. Besides, almost all of the railroad bridges along the Sioux way carried away by the flood. Only a few of the animals were saved as they came down the river. All those that were saved were stopped at Storm Lake. The weather is clearing.

Railroad Tracks Under Water.

OMAHA, June 26.—The storm throughout Northwestern Iowa, Dakota and Nebraska is general. The Elkhorn and St. Paul roads are covered with water at several points. No trains have arrived for twenty-four hours. At Westpoint, Neb., the water covers the track three feet. At Lemars, Ia., the joint track used by the Illinois Central and St. Paul roads is covered and no trains can be moved. Several washouts are reported on the Burlington and the Union Pacific and all trains are late. A special from York, Neb., says: By the washout of a small culvert two miles east of here a freight train of twenty-one cars and a locomotive were thrown down the bank. A brakeman has been taken out with a broken leg, and the engineer and fireman are still under the wreck. Engineer Delaney and Fireman Bear were shortly afterwards removed from the wreck. The engineer was dead and the fireman fatally injured.

Bridges Swept Away.

CHICAGO, June 26.—At the headquarters of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad reports were received which show that the damage to trestles and bridges in northwestern Iowa is almost beyond estimate at present. General Manager Stubbs had a telegram saying that at Waterman creek a bridge 190 feet long has been swept away; another bridge, 197 feet long, on the Waterloo section is gone, and at Waterman station a side track one-quarter of a mile in length was torn up and carried nearly half a mile from its bed. The Cushing and Moody bridge also went down, and it is believed that all the smaller bridges between Battle Creek and the Missouri river have been torn from their fastenings and swept away.

No Trains Running.

Trains are not running on either the Sioux Falls or Sioux City branches. The main line of the Southwestern has not, however, been affected, consequently business destined to points beyond the devastated territory can be sent via the Missouri valley. A five bridge across Maple river, 544 feet long, has been wrecked completely. The Illinois Central is equally as severely damaged on the Northwestern, but owing to broken communication hardly any telegrams have been received at the headquarters of the company in this city. At the general office of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul General Manager Erling said that the damage sustained by them was very light.

Damage in the Panhandle Region.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., June 26.—A gentleman who has returned from the Panhandle region, so badly affected by the recent high water, says that more injury was done in that section than was reported. Miles of railroad track were washed out, and the people were cut off from all but telegraphic communication. The bridges on both the Red and Pease rivers were washed away, and for a week no trains passed between those points, whole fields of wheat in the valley standing in the shock were carried away, and much stock was drowned.

Two Deaths in Virginia.

NORFOLK, June 26.—During a heavy thunderstorm in Princess Anne county the house of Mr. Howard Joynes was struck by a lightning bolt. Mr. and Mrs. Joynes and two small children were seated in the kitchen near the stove. The death dealing mass struck the stove, shattering it to atoms. The bolt struck Mrs. Joynes in the breast, killing her instantly. A small babe sitting upon its mother's lap was also instantly killed, yet no marks were found upon its body. The house caught fire and was nearly burned to the ground.

The Storm in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 26.—At 4 o'clock a. m. the heaviest rain storm of the season set in at this place and continued until noon. The Santa Fe and Kansas Pacific roads are washed out between here and Lawrence, and all west bound trains are laid up at Lawrence waiting until the track is repaired. Washouts have also occurred at Williamstown, on the Union Pacific, and at the Marais des Cygnes. The damage to the crops will be heavy.

Two Killed by Lightning.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 26.—A cloudburst occurred in Cherokee county, doing much damage to crops, etc. Harvey Agnew and Jacob Newton were struck by lightning and instantly killed.

A DRUMMER FOILED.

Instead of a Wedding Banquet He Is in Jail.

SARATOGA, June 26.—Frank Andrews, a commercial traveler living a wife and children in Albany, has been paying attention to the seventeen-year-old daughter of Reuben Barnett, a prominent liveryman here, for a year or more, representing himself to be a widower. The girl wanted to marry him and her parents gave a very reluctant consent. The father was going to Albany to satisfy himself that all was right met Andrews' wife, learned the truth and hurried back to Saratoga.

In the mean time Andrews and the girl had boarded a train and started north. They were traced by telegraph and followed by the girl's brother. He overtook the pair at Whitehall and compelled Andrews to return with him at the point of a revolver. The father of the girl was at the depot on the arrival of the train and was nearly prostrated from shocking Andrews, Andrews is in jail.

Miners Threaten Violence.

TACOMA, Wash., June 26.—It is rumored here that the miners displaced by the colored men imported from the south to take the places of striking miners at the Gilliman, Newcastle and Franklin mines are drilling to be ready to fight. From authentic sources they are said to be armed with rifles and a combination has been effected between them thrown out of work by the strike. It is said that any one to attempt to resume work at any one of the mines will result in gathering the entire force of armed miners for resistance. Residents here are awaiting results with anxiety.

The Elliott Murder Trial.

COLUMBUS, O., June 26.—In the Elliott murder trial the defense introduced several witnesses to testify that Osborn was hunting for Elliott the day of the tragedy. Joseph Fassett, an employe in Rost Brothers' saloon, saw Osborn the day of the murder and talked with him about the newspaper war that was being carried on. No testimony was given on which it appeared that Osborn was making any effort to find Elliott.

Parnell-O'Shea Marriage.

LONDON, June 26.—The marriage of Charles Stewart Parnell and Mrs. O'Shea took place at 10 a. m. The only witnesses present were the bride, bridegroom, and they were strictly enjoined to add a seal of secrecy. In order to satisfy Catholic sentiment there will be a second marriage, the ceremony to be performed in London, as soon as possible, if not immediately.

A Forger Resentenced.

ROCHESTER, June 26.—Edward Lawson W. Noyer, formerly editor of the Akron Eagle and postmaster at Akron, who was arrested last November on the charge of forgery and released on $10,000 bail, has been rearrested and imprisoned here. Recent developments show that he was guilty of executing forged notes that had not been discovered.

A Woman Convicted.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 26.—Edwin McMillon was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of his wife. The murder was a most brutal one, it being charged that McMillon murdered the woman by burning her with red hot irons and afterwards pouring live coals into the wounds.

Typhoid Fever in Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, June 26.—Typhoid fever is raging at Valley Falls, six miles north of here. Thirty-six persons are down with the disease. The cause of the epidemic has been traced to a contaminated well.

AN ARTIST'S SUSPICIONS

M. J. Green Believes He Is a Marked Man.

TWO PERSONS KILLED IN HIS STEAD

His Belief That He Is Being Shadowed by Enemies Who Intend to Assassinate Him—The Case Much Like That of Dr. Cronin in Chicago.

CINCINNATI, June 26.—M. J. Green, an artist now of this city, but formerly living in New York, has the unpleasant knowledge, as he claims, of being a man marked for death. Not only that, but he fully believes that two men who resemble him have been tracked, mistaken for him and murdered in cold blood by the assassins who seek his life.

William Kendall's Death.

Wednesday of last week the well preserved body of William Kendall, a well known business man, was found in the Ohio river four miles below North Bend, O. The inquest developed that Kendall, who was from Newport, Ky., of the Chamberlange Preserving company, was last seen in Cincinnati the Saturday previous.

It was just after dark and he was on his way to his home in Newport. The mystery of Kendall's death was not unraveled by the coroner's inquest and how the murder met his death is unknown. It was thought that he had been foully dealt with.

Like the Cronin Case.

The strange circumstances surrounding the death have since led to a remarkably interesting story. It is one developing startling facts similar to those in connection with the celebrated Clan-na-Gael murder mystery of Dr. Cronin, of Chicago.

On June 3 there appeared in a Chicago newspaper an account of the experience of an artist, M. J. Green, of 66 East One Hundred and Sixth street, New York city. Mr. Green is one of three children.

Killed Another by Mistake.

To a reporter he related his experience since he first became aware that he was being followed, and his belief, now, up to the time of his leaving Chicago, June 10, when he came to Cincinnati, where he has secured employment. Since his arrival here two men, "dressed exactly as I was," have appeared in a carriage in front of the house where I am stopping. The impression had been left behind him that his destination was Cleveland. On the morning of June 11 a party of Jack Cadar, a Hungarian of that city, was found near Chadwick street.

The Victim Cadar.

The corpse was found lying in a pool of water, and the chest was covered with blood, a bullet wound having pierced the heart. From the circumstances it was supposed the man had been murdered and the revolver dropped near by to ward off suspicion and lead to the belief that Cadar had committed suicide. This was another remarkable coincidence, inasmuch as the dead man's description tallied exactly with that of Green, who had just arrived in this city.

A Second One Killed.

The next striking coincidence was the death of William Kendall. A description of Kendall tallies with that of Green in almost every particular, so much so that after dark the two men would be taken for each other by a comparative stranger to both. This death, which looked very much like a murder, would indicate that Green had been traced to this city by his enemies and marked again for death. Kendall, however, was mistaken for him and killed, the body, being subsequently thrown into the Ohio river to ward off suspicion.

Green, about the time of the disappearance, frequently crossed over the river, and as Kendall was last seen going in that direction, it seems very plausible to link the two men together and evolve the theory that Green escaped, the victim being Kendall.

Will Shadowed Wherever He Went.

Green is fully convinced that he has been shadowed in this city, Covington and Newport by men who have plotted his death. He thinks that Kendall's life was taken by assassins who were bent on killing another man, and that man was himself. He says that the men who have been following him are two clandestine in their manner of getting away with a marked victim and the police do not know of their whereabouts. He thinks that if the authorities of Cincinnati are disposed to look into the matter they could easily unravel an interesting case. Green is not known in Cincinnati, unless it be by those he claims are shadowing him.

One Killed and Four Injured.

ST. LOUIS, June 26.—An accident occurred at the shaft of the Caldwell Coal company's mine near this city, in which one man lost his life and four others received serious if not fatal injuries. The men were propping up the roof when a rock weighing a ton and a half fell, killing Paul Blaise instantly, crushing Robert Maynard's back, breast and right arm, almost scalping Frank Dooley and crushing John Lewis and William Hall more or less severely.

Counterfeiters Caught.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The treasury department is informed of the arrest at St. Louis of Alfred C. Green, John C. Jacob, George Walker and Dan Lewbaugh on the charge of passing counterfeit five, ten, twenty-five, fifty cent and one dollar silver pieces. A number of molds and considerable metal was found upon them.

Mr. Gladstone Very Low.

LONDON, June 26.—The St. James' Gazette says serious alarm is felt by the friends of Mr. Gladstone with regard to the statesman's health. Sir Andrew Clark, Mr. Gladstone's physician, is apprehensive that his patient may not recover from the effects of the attack of influenza from which he suffered this spring.

Mysterious Disappearance.

ALBANY, June 26.—The members of the Episcopal church at Schaghticoke, Rensselaer county, are mystified over the sudden disappearance of their pastor, Rev. Mr. Dickinson. He took a train for Troy Monday and has not been heard from since.

Valuable Patterns Destroyed.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 26.—The boiler shop of Thomas Morgan iron works was destroyed by fire. Loss $30,000. The upper part of the building was used by the company of patterns which cannot be replaced.

Typhoid Fever in Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, June 26.—Typhoid fever is raging at Valley Falls, six miles north of here. Thirty-six persons are down with the disease. The cause of the epidemic has been traced to a contaminated well.

THE EXPERTS' REPORT.

Bardsley's Statement Will Be Torn to Shreds by It.

PHILADELPHIA, June 26.—The mayor's experts, Taylor, Fanuce, Lawrence, Brown and Thomas W. Bardsley, are now preparing a report which is likely to tear ex-City Treasurer Bardsley's statement to shreds. The report will be presented to Mayor Stuart by Saturday or Monday next.

Mr. Brown was disposed to be reticent as to the nature of the report to be presented, but it was learned that the experts have got enough information to totally disprove Bardsley's statement. It is said that in direct contradiction of Bardsley's statement it will be shown that $800,000 of the public money went into the Bradford mills, and that since Bardsley became city treasurer fully $3,000,000 have passed through the Keystone bank in a fund, from which Bardsley has drawn various amounts to pay the expenses of the Bradford mills.

District Attorney Graham has written a letter to Chairman Vanosten, of the councils' investigating committee, advising him to make another demand upon Mr. Alexander to induce his client, Bardsley, to appear before the committee. Sometime ago the committee had written to Mr. Graham upon a similar request. Mr. Graham repeated the request to Mr. Alexander, who thought the only statement Mr. Bardsley should make should be made in court. As the statement made by Bardsley has not satisfied the committee they again repeated the request to Mr. Graham.

Mr. Graham was asked when Bardsley would be brought up for sentence. He said he did not know, as Bardsley's statement was still being investigated to ascertain whether or not it was perjury.

"If it is true," said Mr. Graham, "why, of course he is entitled to any benefit which may result from his telling the truth. If it is not true, why it is information for the court to act upon."

Drew Still Under Suspension.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Controller Lacy said that Bank Examiner Drew was still under suspension. Investigations now in progress, he said, would determine his future course in Mr. Drew's case.

Alaska to Be Populated.

DETROIT, June 26.—Hadwig Von Dolcke, who has been practising medicine in this city for the last year, left on an important mission. He is bound for Iceland, his native country, where he will interview the government authorities at Reykiavek, the capital town, upon no less a scheme than transporting the entire population of Iceland to Alaska, establishing a colony under the government of the United States. It is understood that Dr. Von Dolcke will receive substantial backing from a number of capitalists interested in the development of Alaska, and that the United States government looks favorably on the project. The population of Iceland in 1880 was 72,443.

Corbett-Donohue Foot Race.

HAMILTON, Ont., June 26.—The final deposit of stake money for the sculling race between J. F. Corbett, of Chicago, and Denis Donohue, of this city, has been made. The race will be rowed Saturday. Corbett will row at 146 pounds and Donohue at thirty pounds above that.

COWHIDED BY A WOMAN.

A Witness in a Divorce Case Soundly Thrashed.

SHE IS WILLING TO PAY A FINE.

When the Spied Her Victim Working on the Road She Went for Him Like a Tigress—Her Weight Told Against Her in the Chase.

WATERBURY, Conn., June 26.—Mrs. Pearsall furnished food for a sensation, by publicly horsewhipping James Finnerty, one of the witnesses against her and Edward Camp in the Camp divorce case. Mrs. Pearsall is the rich Waterbury widow, the owner of a stand in Washington market, New York, for whom Edward Camp deserted his wife. The wife has just obtained a divorce, and has a suit for $60,000 pending against Mrs. Pearsall for alienating her husband's affections. Finnerty, the man who was horsewhipped, is about twenty-two years old, and for some time has been employed by the town to work on the roads.

An Objectionable Witness.

At the trial of the Camp divorce case he was a witness for Mrs. Camp, and testified that it was not an uncommon sight to see Mr. Camp and Mrs. Pearsall embrace and kiss each other. Finnery was at work on the road near Mrs. Pearsall's residence when she saw him, and immediately her wrath arose. Hastening to the barn she procured a stout rawhide and then ran down the road to where Finnery was working. She rushed on him with the fury of an enraged tigress, and, exclaiming, "You will show me up to the eyes of the world, you scoundrel," she flourished her whip and scattered all the laborers on the road, and thus directed their attention to Finnery.

Down came the lash on his shoulders, which were only protected from the sun by a thin cotton shirt. Down came the whip again, but before he regained his senses she had made half a dozen cuts with the whip.

A Took to His Heels.

Finnerty then started on a wild rush down the road, followed by Mrs. Pearsall, who, although she weighs 250 pounds, showed remarkable speed. For 100 yards she kept abreast of him, when her greater weight told on her and she was forced to *drop to the rear, while Finnerty kept go*at a rate of speed that would have done credit to an electric car.

Rushed Into the Law Office.

Finnerty never stopped running until he reached the office of Attorney O'Neil, on Main street, counsel for Mrs. Camp. Out of breath and completely exhausted he ran up the stairs leading into the office, threw open the door, slammed it back again and fell into a chair. When he recovered breath he told the astonished attorney about the horsewhipping and begged to have Mrs. Pearsall arrested. He showed several bruises on his head and body, which he said were made by the woman.

His story was taken down, and the prosecuting attorney will be asked to draw a warrant for Mrs. Pearsall's arrest.

Mrs. Pearsall Satisfied.

Mrs. Pearsall, after her exciting encounter with Finnerty, felt greatly elated. When she saw Finnerty disappear in a cloud of dust down the road she stood still to wait for the dust raised by the frightened man's heels to settle so that she could get her bearings to get home again. She expressed herself when she returned to her residence as being willing to pay a few dollars for the privilege of using her whip on such a man.

Stonewall Jackson's Remains.

LEXINGTON, Va., June 26.—At 5 o'clock a. m. the remains of General T. J. Jackson were taken from the grave in the city cemetery, where they were interred at the time of his death, and placed in the vault over which the monument is now building and which will be unveiled on July 21. The vault was sealed up permanently. It was Mrs. Jackson's request in a letter that the body be removed in the night, and that no one should know of it except the committee in charge. Her request was granted.

Stetson & Co. Assign.

NEW YORK, June 26.—G. W. Stetson & Co., of 69 Wall street, have made an assignment. The firm was organized in 1886, and was engaged in the iron and railway supply business. The liabilities of the firm are about $100,000, and they say they will be able to pay in full. The failure is assigned to the tightness of the money market and the consequent inability to make collections. Mr. Stetson is a brother of Grover Cleveland's law partner.

Summing Up the King Case.

MEMPHIS, June 26.—Judge Green made the opening speech for the defense in the King trial. He spoke for three and one-half hours and analyzed the evidence very carefully and thoroughly, enlarged on every slight discrepancy, devoted his time to arguing the insanity and self-defense theory, and made a powerful speech. Mr. Mitchell, of Mississippi, also for the defense, followed Judge Green in a short argument.

An American Citizen Now.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 26.—Colonel J. J. Coppinger, son-in-law of Secretary Blaine, commander of Fort Sam Houston and colonel of the Twenty-third Infantry, United States army, has become an American citizen. He made his final statement before the Forty-fifth District court, renouncing his allegiance to Great Britain.

Three Men Injured.

NEW YORK, June 26.—By the explosion of a barrel of alcohol in the basement of Columbia college Dr. John T. Nourse, an instructor in zoology, and two assistants—William Simpson and Thomas Tighe—were seriously burned. Dr. Northrop's injuries are so serious that there is danger of death resulting.

Racing Association Incorporated.

NEW YORK, June 26.—The Monmouth Park Racing association has filed articles of incorporation in the county clerk's office stating their capital is $100,000. The directors are D. D. Withers, Alexander J. Cassatt, William L. Scott, John A. Morris and James Galway.

Treasury Balances.

WASHINGTON, June 26.—The treasury statement shows a net balance in addition to fractional silver and deposits in national banks of $2,458,000.

Spurgeon Very Ill.

WARFARE ON THE ALPS.

HOW THE FRENCH DROVE THE AUSTRIANS FROM GRIMSEL PASS.

Finding the Road Blocked by a Strongly Guarded Defile, a Light Detachment Scaled the Icy Mountain Side and Fell on the Austrian Rear.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

NE midsummer night a group of French officers quartered in the village inn of Guttannen, in the valley of the Aar, in Switzerland, were excitedly discussing in the public room an order from their commanding general that the Austrian fastness in Grimsel pass be carried without fail on the following day. The duty was imperative as part of a general plan to break eastward through the long line of mountain barriers dividing Switzerland north and south from Zurich to the Italian border, and push the Austrian forces out of the Grisons and into and the Tyrol. The grand movement was necessarily made by isolated bodies of French troops, because the passes through the lofty mountains were few and far between. Five thousand men had been assigned to the task at Grimsel pass, and the Austrians had a like number established on Grimsel mountain to defend the pass, which was the highway between Lucerne and Milan. The excitement among the officers was increased by the report of a reconnoitering party that had just returned from the foot of the pass, stating that the Austrian position was impregnable. In the first place the river Aar had to be crossed at a place where the road runs the distance of 1,000 paces on a narrow ledge, between the river and a wall of perpendicular rocks. This point was guarded by a party of native riflemen in the Austrian service. The river crossing itself was cleared by the main body of Austrian troops distributed in a semicircle on the slopes of Grimsel mountain, with a reserve on the crest, the region of perpetual snow and ice. On either side of the Grimsel are the inaccessible walls of rocky, snow covered mountains, rising over 300 feet above the pass.

From the mountain crest of the Grimsel, down the sloping side to the river Aar, the surface is strewn with blocks of rock forming natural defenses, and just above the bridge, and looking down upon it, is a mound from which a heavy fire could be poured into any force attempting to approach the bridge, and in fact the pathway leading to the bridge is barely wide enough for two men to walk abreast.

The French were at a disadvantage in every way, for not only would they be exposed to the Austrian fire during the whole of their advance, but their own fire, being from below against all crests, as many hundred feet above them, would be thrown away, and after carrying the bridge and the foot of the pass they would have to scale an ascent as steep as to require the use of both hands in climbing. The Austrians confidently believed that should the French persist in an attack not-withstanding the natural obstacles, they would be annihilated.

A RASH BOAST.

The commander of the Austrian forces had boasted that he would not fire a shot, but would simply let the French come on and then hurl them back into the river with the bayonet. Such was the situation when the French officers received their orders to force the pass at all hazards.

The commander of the French force was a veteran officer, who had seen much service in Algeria, and was known as a man of iron will and indomitable courage. He was not to be daunted by the reports of the reconnoitering party, and was determined to carry out his orders to the letter. He was also a man of resource, and had a plan of his own for forcing the pass. He had noted the fact that the Austrian fastness in Grimsel pass could be carried without fail on the following day. The duty was imperative as part of a general plan to break eastward through the long line of mountain barriers dividing Switzerland north and south from Zurich to the Italian border, and push the Austrian forces out of the Grisons and into and the Tyrol. A CHERRY DIAMOND ATHLETE.

Eugene L. Sarre and His Record on the Cinder Path.

A familiar figure at nearly every amateur athletic meet in the vicinity of New York is a pleasant faced youngster whose short but muscular frame when it is not in action is concealed from view by a long sky blue gown. His name is Eugene L. Sarre, and although only twenty years of age he has won an enviable place for himself in the world of honest sport. One of his most notable achievements was on May 2 last, when he broke the world's record of 1m. 15⅘s. for the 440 yard hurdle race held by the world famous sprinter, L. E. Myers. Young Sarre finished with ease in the remarkable time of 56 3-5 seconds.

Sarre's 130 pounds of athletic manhood show up well in almost every contest. He can play a strong game of water polo, run 100 yards in 10⅘ seconds, 220 yards in 23 seconds, 440 yards in 52 seconds, half a mile in 2m. 8s., and a mile in 5m. 1 1-5s. He can leave the 120 yard hurdles behind in 17 seconds, and the 220 yard hurdles in 27 seconds; his best broad jump is 21 feet, and as a pole vaulter his record is very fair. Sarre is an unusually strong and plucky finisher, and has won eight lively races in the last stride. He improves steadily every month, and his friends all believe he will soon do a quarter of a mile in 50 seconds. Sarre may go to Europe with the Manhattan team, and if he does he will make a strong bid for the quarter mile run at the English championships, and the quarter mile hurdles at the northern counties championships.

A Japanese Baseball Player.

The national game has crossed the wide waste of waters and gained a very promising foothold in Japan, and the "Japs" can now steal the second bag, line one out into center field, abuse the umpire and cut third base when he is looking in the opposite direction in true American style. The colleges have taken up the sport, and it is rapidly becoming popular throughout the kingdom.

Tennis Suits for Men and Boys.

For tennis and country wear are white flannels and twilled English flannels with white ground, on which are woven narrow colored stripes, or else white silk stripes. These are used for the entire suit—jacket, shirt, long trousers and cap—in preference to the more showy materials formerly worn. The tennis shirt has a plain front with a single box plait. The jacket or blazer is now cut in a straight sack, similar in shape to the Tuxedo coat of last year. Wide trousers with a welt in the sides are part of this suit. The cap uses the same material, is like the yachting cap with a visor, and even the visor is covered with the serge or flannel.

Silk belts, leather belts, coon leather caps and foulard silk caps are the novelties for tennis players. A russet leather belt an inch and a half to two inches in width will be worn with tennis suits of any color. Silk belts four inches wide are in stripes, a plain color or black, and are fastened by little buckles with straps. Few sashes are sold, those of red being still the most liked. A yachting cap, to be worn also in tennis courts, is of blue foulard dotted with white, another is of white twilled silk barred with white, and a third of white flannel or serge. The coon leather caps match the belt in color. Laced shoes of white canvas and russet leather complete the tennis suit.—Harper's Bazar.

Novelties in Parasols.

The new parasols are truly wonderful. One of the newest is quite a bold departure, the outside surface presenting very much the aspect of sea waves. The one rib raised, the alternate rib depressed. Speckmountain silk is used in either of the silk laces, or in black or white lace or of chiffon. This white silk lace, fringed with grass, is to be a feature in fete parasols, and in lieu of ordinary fringe, silk is cut up into strips and introduced as trimming. Silk cord is applied to the edge of some of the new parasols, and a tassel ornaments the handle, starting from a species of fluffy silk ruche, which looks like feathers. Frills of chiffon, embroidered in colored flowers, cover some of the new parasols, especially the double squares; it remains to be proved if they will find favor.

A new silk and ribbon embroidery in relief is to be used in the adornment of parasols, and many plain silks show spots of metallic gold, while some are edged with gold braid. Some of the sticks imported from Japan are finely carved in many fantastic patterns. The natural wood sticks have artificial poppies, acorns, cornflowers, wild roses or sweet peas introduced into the handle. Of course the plain sticks are more generally useful than any other kind; the handles are a moderate length; shot silks are used and a great deal of cornflower blue.

How to Be Beautiful.

Beauty has its foundation in physical well being, which is the result of health and obeyed, these laws being clearly indicated in our physical and mental constitution. They consist of proper food and drink in such quantities as the system is capable of readily assimilating; air and sunlight in abundance; sufficient exercise, rest and sleep; and the required degree of perfect cleanliness. The whole secret of a full form and rosy cheeks lies in pure blood, manufactured from wholesome food by healthy and active vital organs.—Exchange.

TO BEFRIEND THE LITTLE ONES.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Elects Officers.

The Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to children held its adjourned annual meeting Thursday night at the Republican Association rooms.

The meeting was called to order by Borough Mayor Charles Plaée, its president, and ex-Councilman Wm. Thompson was made chairman and Joseph B. Coward acted as secretary. The following named gentlemen were chosen trustees for the ensuing year: J. E. Turrill, J. W. Rosbrugh, Ephraim Miller, Wm. Thompson, Charles Place, Rev. W. R. Richards, James W. Jackson, Joseph B. Coward, H. E. Carroll, J. Wesley Johnson, Louis E. Howard, Wm. F. Williams, James McGee, Morgan S. Taylor, Martin I. Cooley, E. W. Conklin, J. L. Hurlbut, Dr. J. Cooley, Albert B. Darby, H. B. Wells.

A resolution was adopted amending the by-laws, so that the annual meeting hereafter shall be held the second Monday in October.

After the annual meeting adjourned, the following-named officers were duly elected.

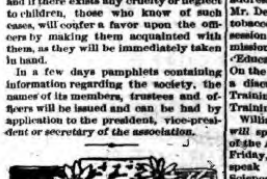
President—Charles Place.

Vice President—Ephriam Miller.

Secretary and Treasurer—J. B. Coward.

The officers of this society wish to call special attention of the public that it is formed for the special purpose of protecting children from abuse or neglgence, and asks the hearty co-operation of all our citizens in the city, borough and surrounding country. This society has done much good since its existence, and if there exists any cruelty or neglect to children, those who know of such cases, will confer a favor upon the officers by making them acquainted with them, as they will be immediately taken in hand.

In a few days pamphlets containing information regarding the society, the names of its members, trustees and officers will be issued and can be had by application to the president, vice-president or secretary of the association.



—Assessor Hubbard is engaging assessing the real estate throughout the city.

—The Sunday-school connected with the M. E. church will go on its annual excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove on July 16th.

—A day by the sea is restful, and will do all good who may go with the First Baptists to Belmar, July 2d. The committee is working hard to give the excursionists the best day of the season.

—The county never looked brighter and more beautiful than it does in the later June days. The recent rains have given to all kinds of vegetation a renewal of strength and freshness that gives it a charming appearance. The holding out of this weather for a short time will be a great blessing to farmers.

—There were 227 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, and for the proceeding week and 165, 211, 204 and 176 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 5,527 against 5,420 in 1890.

—"In the soup is the name of the latest puzzle. It beats tiddly winks or pigs in clover all to pieces. It consists of a small earthen bowl, a marble and a spoon. The spoon is simply a bit of wire slightly flattened at one end with which the player tries to lift the soup (the marble) out of the bowl. It looks easy, but don't you bet your money you can do it the first time.—Somerset County Democrat.

—The reason for naming that delicious fruit that is now in season, the strawberry, is the same reason that gives the rose a rose its name. There is real moss flung like a veil, over that loviest of roses, and there is real straw indented in the dimples of this queen of berries. If one of these golden specks is lifted with the point of a needle and examined under a microscope it will be seen to be a veritable straw.

—President Murray of the Y. M. C. A. of Plainfield had a tumble from his safety on Tuesday evening while riding along Central avenue. He collided with a wagon, and after picking himself out of the road made anxious enquiry as to the effect of the bump on the vehicle. He seemed much pleased on learning that it wasn't injured in the least. Mr. Murray's bruises were patched up with two cents worth of plaster and he proceeded on his way.—Union County Standard.

—The Plainfield News of Wednesday had a "special" from Somerville, dated June 24, saying that Cook and Walker had been sentenced by Judge Bartine to twenty years each in State Prison. As a matter of fact no court was in session that day, nor will there be this week, except the Orphans' Court, so that it was impossible for them to be sentenced.—Somerset Democrat. It appears that our correspondent was in error. Cook and Walker pleaded guilty to atrocious assault and battery, but not guilty to the charge "with intent to kill," and are in jail awaiting sentence.

Another Mad Dog.

A dog belonging to Mr. S. M. C. Allen of Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, showed symptoms of hydrophobia yesterday. Mr. Allen locked the animal up in a corn crib and this morning it became so rabid that he was compelled to shoot it. He says the dog was bitten about three weeks ago by a strange canine. He valued the dog highly.

Charles Wood Bailed.

Yesterday morning Charles Wood, the colored youth, who is charged with atrocious assault on Pasquale Crichetti, the Italian, in Peterstown, near Elizabeth, on Sunday night, was admitted to bail, his victim being declared out of danger and recovering. Wood's father became his bondsman.

LAW BARS KISSING.

DON'T STEP ON A FOE'S TOE.

Some Nice Legal Destinctions in Assault and Battery.

What constitutes a case of assault and battery? A Philadelphia Grand Jury a few days ago solemnly declared that kissing is a very pronounced case of assault, no matter if both of the persons who indulge in the osculatory bliss are willin' or not. This decision of such august body of men not only jeopardizes the festive youths and maidens in indulging their love making proclivities, but places a serious phase upon the general deportment of mankind. To what length decisions lead.

Sallie Seaseman and Isaac Purnell were found hugging and kissing each other for mutual enjoyment up near Twentieth and Green street one evening last week, and they were promptly arrested by a policeman and hustled into court. Neither Sallie nor Isaac had complained of an assault, and yet the Grand Jury indicted each for assault and battery upon the other. Such a radical opinion threatens to throw the whole social world out of balance for the rest of the Summer.

A LEGAL DEFINITION OF ASSAULT.

A well-known criminal lawyer was asked yesterday for a legal definition of assault and battery. He said:

"The willful hitting of a person by another is assault and battery. It matters not whether you shoot a man in the head, bowl him over with a club, hold his head under water until he is nearly drowned or give a violent shake of his hand, if you do it with the intention of hurting him you are guilty of assault. And, of course, the use of violence in kissing a girl would come under that head."

A celebrated English case has been cited involving a peculiar use in the form of slugging his friends, and a Frenchman one day seized his hand and squeezed it so tightly that it was forever after useful for use in the prize ring. That was an elegant case of assault.

INTENTION MUST BE DETERMINED.

The fiend who treads upon a man's toe in a crowded car is guilty of assault, provided he did it with a lurking suspicion that he could drive his victim from his seat and thus secure it to himself.

The idiot who rushes up behind you and slaps you on the back with a tremendous whack is indictable for battery, unless he can prove beyond question he did it in absolutely good fun in playfulness.

So to tweak another's nose, pinch his ear, make a dent in his hat or punch his eye with a well aimed fist are legal offenses if done with a malicious heart. A Philadelphia Grand Jury would indict a man for any of the above offenses as quickly as it did Sallie and Isaac for a little indiscriminate kissing on the street.

No person knows exactly when he may be seized by a policeman and indicted for assault and battery. Especially is the guileless manipulator of the sprinkling hose these days liable to come face to face with a Judge and Jury for squirting somebody by sprinkling a few drops of water on him. The decision in the case of Sallie and Isaac has set a most dangerous precedent.

WORLD'S CONFERENCE.

Great Meeting of College Students at Northfield.

At the invitation of Evangelist D. L. Moody, the World's Conference of College Students will be held at Northfield, Mass., this year as in the past, the grounds and the buildings of the Northfield Seminary having been placed at the disposal of the Committee in charge of the gathering.

Among the prominent speakers who are to be present are Rev. John Smith, M. A., of Edinburgh, Scotland; Professor W. W. Moore, of Union Theological Seminary; Professor W. G. Moorehead, D. D., of Xenia Theological Seminary, Ohio; Professor W. R. Harper, of Yale; Professor R. E. Thompson, of the University of Pennsylvania; L. W. Messer, General Secretary of the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association; R. E. Speer, of Prince. ton; W. H. Cossum, of the Student Volunteer Monument. Professor D. R. Towner will have charge of the music and A. A. Stagg, formerly of Yale, and now connected with the Young Men's Christian Association Training School, of Springfield, will have charge of the Athletic work.

The conference will open on Saturday evening of this week, closing on Wednesday night, July 8. It is expected that from 600 to 700 persons will be in attendance.

A number of persons from this city will attend.

Mantonomo Officers.

At a regular meeting of Mantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term.

Sachem—Wm. B. Rogers.
Senior Sagamore—Odell Odam.
Junior Sagamore—A. J. Stiglitz
Prophet—R. E. Seaman.

During the evening Palefaces Van Alstyne, Houseman, Mackey and Schiller were adopted into the order.

—The Hillside Tennis Club will give their next afternoon tea on Saturday, July 4th, at the usual hour.

—A large number of Plainfielders left this afternoon for Westfield to witness the ball game between the Westfield Athletic Club's nine and the West Ends of Somerville.

—This morning on the Plainfield Bicycle Club grounds a twelve inning game of base ball was played. The Resolutes defeated the Young Dwarfs by a score of 7 to 6. Battery for the resolutes, Kline ball, his victim being declared out of danger and recovering. Wood's father became his bondsman.

—To-day is 118th anniversary of the battle of Monmouth.

—Edsall makes a new announcement to-day that will be of interest to all who are in want of seasonable goods at popular low prices.

Sunday-school now meets at 10 a. m. Let the teachers urge their pupils to remain for the morning church service.

Miss Minnie French is home from the Woman's College, Baltimore. She had a pleasant year, and is anxious to return.

Mr. Clifford McGee was home last week from Yale for a few days, and then returned for Commencement after which he goes to Moody's Summer Bible school at Northfield.

Miss Clara Burt will soon be home from Wellesley where she has made another year's enviable record. Our Plainfield representative takes no second place among these bright girls at the noted school.

Bishop Vincent was almost as much disappointed in not being here last Sunday as were his numerous friends and admirers in this city. He promises to come at his first opportunity, and a very cordial welcome awaits him.

The pastor will be in the far West during the month of August. He preaches in Detroit the first Sunday in August, and then goes to the Black Hills, Chautauqua Assembly, where he delivers a course of lectures.

Bishop Hurst will preach one Sabbath in August, and other equally good preachers will be secured for the other Sabbaths. The pulpit supply committee intend that the stay-at-homes shall have the best preaching attainable.

The closing exercises of the Junior League took place this afternoon. The exercises by the children, the large number of rewards presented, the elegant refreshments served, the banting and the music, all conspired to make glad a chapel full of children.

The pastor wishes to thank his lady assistants who contributed so largely to the success of the last series of Junior League meetings. He also wishes to make public acknowledgment of the kind liberality of Mr. James McGee who met all expenses, which are never small, for the conduct of these children's meetings.

"LONG FORGOTTEN" WILL NOT FORGET AGAIN.

A Presuming Postmaster and a Sensible Plainfield Girl.

Christian R. Zeitinger, Postmaster at Delta, Frederick county, Md., says the New York Sun, was arrested and will doubtless be deposed for opening a letter on Dec. 23d, of Miss Florence Keith's of Plainfield, N. J., which was addressed to her mother, Mrs. Alice B. Keith, at Delhi, Delaware county.

It was signed Floss.

A few days later Miss Keith received the following letter, addressed to Miss Flossie Keith, which, upon the investigation she at once had instituted by the Postal Officials, resulted in Zeitinger's arrest.

The letter reads:

DEAR MISS:—Pardon my audacity, but a kind friend of yours requests me to write you. Meet me Monday afternoon.

The young lady was summoned as a witness, and returned to Plainfield last evening after giving her testimony. The young man was severely reprimanded and released on $1,000 bail.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Joseph Blatz of Somerset street, North Plainfield, is quite ill.

Mrs. Oscar S. Teale of Grove street will spend the Summer months in the mountains.

Miss Sadie Grant, daughter of Police Captain George W. Grant, formerly of this city but now of Buffalo, N. Y., is visiting her parents here.

Evangelist Watts spent yesterday with his parents in this city, after a very successful revival in New York city. He left to-day and will to-morrow dedicate a new chapel at Neutwick.

Mr. Isaac Vail of Washington valley today bought the property consisting of two houses on Richmond street near Putnam avenue owned by Mr. Leo Daft. The consideration is said to have been $7,000.

Mr. Charles B. Brown of Craig place, while playing tennis a few days ago slipped and fell, landing on his right hand in such a way as to sprain the wrist. It will be some weeks before he can again use the hand.

Hon. John Ulrich visited Scabright on Saturday last to take measures for the relief of the members of the Seabright Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, who had suffered a loss by fire in that town. Mr. Ulrich is Grand Chancellor of the Order in New Jersey.—Westfield Leader.

Fanwood Notes.

[From the Union County Standard.]

R. P. Moore has been off on a fishing trip. On his return he furnished his neighbors with choice specimens of speckled trout.

Mr. George Bamlin returned from his week in camp at Sea Girt, July 3rd, as brown as an Indian, and with as big a stock of stories as a veteran.

The beauty of Maple avenue, which is now nearly finished, is exceeding the expectations of everyone and is a splendid improvement to all the property adjoining.

Col. C. E. Moore has erected a big flag pole on his lawn, from which the stars and stripes floated each morning, forming a beautiful contrast with the surrounding green foliage.

Messrs. Stephens and Kempshall are jubilant over their defeat of Messrs. Kirk and Bate in the Crescent League's ball game which was Saturday evening of last week. The game was what is known as "terrific," and the large number of fair-minded gentlemen, after forty hands were played, had 34 more points than their opponents.

"What shall we do on the fourth?" is now agitating the minds of the club members. The old club house, which has been moved to Richmond street near Putnam avenue owned by Mr. Leo Daft. The consideration is said to have been $7,000.

Mr. Charles B. Brown of Craig place, while playing tennis a few days ago slipped and fell, landing on his right hand in such a way as to sprain the wrist. It will be some weeks before he can again use the hand.

Hon. John Ulrich visited Seabright on Saturday last to take measures for the relief of the members of the Seabright Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, who had suffered a loss by fire in that town. Mr. Ulrich is Grand Chancellor of the Order in New Jersey.—Westfield Leader.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS!

The agreement between Great Britain and the United States on the seal question is that no seals shall be killed until May, 1892, except the 7,500 necessary for the food and clothing of Alaskans. All British vessels breaking this agreement are to be arrested in Behring sea. United States ships may capture them, but they are to be turned over to British authorities for trial.

Secretary of the Treasury Foster on the silver question: "The policy that ought to be pursued in this country is such as to remain for the basis of our financial operations both metals. I do not undertake to predict what would happen if this country were to adopt unlimited free coinage. I am not without hope that in the near future we shall be able to secure an international agreement of such a nature as will maintain the parity of the two metals, thus accomplishing what is now so desirable, a broader foundation upon which to base the finances of all countries."

If you are going abroad this summer or any other summer, and want all the ocean trip you can get, and have not much money to spend, take one of the vessels of the slower lines of steamers. You will get first class accommodations for a third less price than you will pay on the swift ships, and get a longer ocean trip besides. The swift steamers charge more for passage for one thing, because the consumption of coal necessary to maintain the high rate of speed is so enormous that it makes a quick trip expensive. The slower journey is also far more restful than the hurried one to those who really enjoy ocean travel.

Keep the Eagle and the Goddess.

Some newspaper writers, otherwise able, have been to Europe and got their ideas mixed about what is beautiful and the reverse. These editors declare that America has the ugliest looking money in civilization or barbarism; that even Japan boats us in artistic beauty of coins. Particularly are critics are hard on the American eagle and the Goddess of Liberty on our gold and silver pieces. They even shock the patriotism of community by suggesting that the goddess and the eagle be left off the United States coin of the future.

Not in our time; that is to say, never, we hope. There is no handsomer money in existence than our coins with the splendid eagle on them, barring only that disreputable looking buzzard dollar. The only trouble with coins bearing the goddess or the eagle is that people in general do not see enough of them.

It is really a lesson in patriotism, these coins with the American eagle on them. To change them will be to destroy a sentiment that has grown in the heart of the American people for a century. It will do nothing but harm to destroy that sentiment. The American citizen associates the memory of Washington, the Fourth of July and love of country with that eagle upon our coins. Change him and give him a rest another way if you will, but let him stay forever and ever. And may that day never come when the Goddess of Liberty shall cease to be a national emblem and shine in the hearts and on the coins of the American people!

Jew and Czar.

Roman L. Zuhof, himself believed to be a Jew who is inclined to deny his race, writes in the Boston Globe a paper explanatory of the Russian hatred of the Hebrew. Russian taxes are oppressive and exacting beyond description; they must be wrung from the stupid peasant under all circumstances. Sometimes the tax gatherers take all, even his home, and put him to working on the roads to pay arrears yet remaining. But he could probably pay it more easily only for the Jew, who enters the Russian peasant's door first as peddler, then as money lender, and gradually gets all his money away from him. Jews keep inns. The peasant spends first his money at these inns, then pawns his clothes, then mortgages his next year's crops. Then he turns around in a fury on the Jew and blames him for it all, even for the government's extortions.

The Jew in Russia still suffers from many of the persecutions he endured in all Europe during the Middle Ages. He is forbidden to own land, to hold any official position, or even to dwell in the Russian capital cities. He must do something for a living, therefore he turns to mercantile life as almost the only occupation left to him.

Besides getting the name of being a usurer, always nearly as bad as that of the devil among a childish and improvident people, the Jew takes no pains to assimilate himself to the Russians. He holds himself aloof from them, as one quite outside of them and of another country. He follows his own customs and his own dress. He is as much an alien in Russia as the Chinaman in America, and prides himself on it, Zuhof gives us to understand. It may be that it is quite as much to carry favor with the Russian peasantry as from any other reason that the czar is using such severity against the Jews at present.

THE HARVARD BOYS WON

A Vast Assemblage Witnessed the Contest and Enjoyed the Sport—Time, 21m 32s.—Description of the Crews—Record Since 1852: Harvard, 16; Yale, 15.

NEW LONDON, CONN., June 27.—The great college boat race is over, and Harvard has won. Eleven boat lengths separated the two crews at the finish. Harvard rowed over the course—four miles—in 21m. 32s. and Yale in 21m. 52s. It was an ideal day for a boat race. The wind was light and very pleasant for all who witnessed the race because of the heat. The water was smooth, and in fine condition for rowing.

Harvard won just because its men rowed better and faster than the Yale men. The race was won on its merits, and the Yale crew was defeated simply because its opponents were a better lot of men. The friends of Yale were confident that the all blue would be carried to victory. The Harvard partisans were just as confident about the all crimson.

The Crowd in Attendance.

Long before the time for the race the river was crowded with all kinds of craft. Tiny steam launches darted hither and thither; steam tugs puffed and snorted as they carried passengers over the course; the paddlewheels of big steamers churned the waters and made them white with foam as they propelled the happy crowds on board of them. Thousands on the banks of the river was a cosmopolitan crowd. Farmers drove up in wagons with their families. Heavy coaches and carryalls, buggies, phaetons, express wagons and every kind of vehicle was to be seen, and in each were friends of the blue or the crimson. Another wonderful thing was the long observation train, composed of thirty-four cars, which ran down along the river edge, keeping the crews in sight during the entire race. It was a gala day in New London, and a right happy crowd was out.

The Start.

The start was made from Winthrop Point. About 11:30 o'clock two launches put out from the rowers' quarters. One had the Harvard crew on board, and the other the Yale. Each towed a long, narrow scow. The referee, Mr. Nelson William A. Mekeham, of Columbia; judges, Lawrence E. Sexton (Harvard), Bob Cook (Yale); timers, Charles F. Adams (Harvard), George D. Adee (Yale). The crews quickly took their positions, and were ready for the final ordeal. The excitement was then intense. The crowd of spectators stood in breathless silence watching the crews.

Slowly and deliberately the referee cautioned the men. Then there was a few seconds wait. The seconds seemed like an age. "Go!" suddenly sounded from the judges' boat, and at once sixteen oars dipped into the placid waters of the Thames. Harvard caught the water first and commenced rowing a 40 stroke. Then they had the east side of the river and quickly gained an advantage. Yale pulled a 36 stroke.

Before 200 yards had been traveled Harvard had gained a length. Both crews encountered a little choppy water, which somewhat, but they soon settled down, and rowed a good, steady stroke.

Yale Gaining.

At the half mile Harvard was pulling 39 and Yale 34. In the next half mile the the steamers following the boats crowded them somewhat and spoiled their work. Harvard caught a crab at 1.36 stroke, while Yale still kept at 34. Harvard was three lengths ahead. Harvard settled again in the next half, and at the two miles and 36 strokes, while Yale pulling 36 strokes a minute, Yale pulling 38. The leaders were still gaining and when half way over the course, at the end of the two miles, Harvard was six lengths ahead of Yale.

Just opposite the navy yard a tug crossed Harvard's bow and sent her in shore. The crew, however, not disturbed by this incident. At the two mile and a half buoy Harvard was leading by nine lengths and pulling 32 strokes to Yale's 28.

For the next mile both crews rowed about the same stroke, but Harvard still increased the space between them. At the three miles and a half they had 10 boat lengths. At the end Harvard pulled a 40 stroke, and won by eleven lengths.

The crews were made up as follows:

HARVARD.

	Age.	Weight.	Height.
M. Sewall, bow	19	168	5.8½
H. Whitney, (Capt.)	20	165	6
A. Lamson, 4	20	167½	6.6

B. D. Paine, 4	19	163	5.6½
W. H. Hoffman, 5	20	168	5.9
G. S. Brownell (Capt.), 6	22	176	6.1
F. Hopewell, 7	22	174	6.1
A. G. Patterson, stroke	20½	164	5.10
E. N. Bowne, coxswain		120
Average for crew	20½	170	5.8½

Harvard has won a majority of the races since they were inaugurated in 1852. Yale is ahead since 1876, when the contests were resumed, after having been omitted for some time. Out of the sixteen events since that date Yale has won nine and Harvard seven. Since 1858 Harvard has won sixteen and Yale eleven.

PARNELL'S PLANS.

Will Devote Himself to Irish Industrial Questions and Visit America.

LONDON, June 27.—Parnell said that he found it impossible to procure a license for marriage in any country except Ireland in order to avoid delay. He thought it best to marry in the registry office. The church ceremony would be performed in London as soon as he was asked to put in Gertrude's residence there, probably after the Carlow election. He would do his best to prevent outsiders, and especially reporters, from learning the time. He would certainly go to Carlow, starting tonight if possible. He was confident that he would win the only election since the divorce suit which he has had a chance of voting. He would take his wife to Carlow, if possible, but she was a bad sailor, and was likewise compelled to remain near her physician during the concluding trial of the suit over the will of her late aunt, Lady Wood, in which suit her brothers contested her right to certain property.

Mr. Parnell intended in future to devote special attention to Irish industrial questions, in which he was more interested than in any other. He had given a personal support to Mr. Balfour's Irish land purchase bill, believing it to be a measure well conceived, and that if it could pass it would benefit the tenants as well as the land owners. He intended in the autumn, if possible, to visit the United States. He believed public opinion to be virtually unanimous in his favor. He would try to attend the Baltimore convention. He had not thought, he said, that he intended to think, upon the political effect of his marriage. His wife was perfectly happy, and he was experiencing greater happiness than ever in his life before.

The Marriage Invalid.

BALTIMORE, June 27.—A clergyman eminent in the councils of the American Episcopacy, when shown the passage in the cable story of the Parnell-O'Shea marriage, which says that a religious marriage will take place in London so as to satisfy Catholics, said: "The statement is meaningless, inasmuch as no form of subsequent ceremonies could render valid the marriage of Mr. Parnell, which was invalidly contracted, according to the teachings and practices of the Catholic church."

Trying to Frighten the People.

NEW YORK, June 27.—A dispatch from Washington to The Journal of Finance asserts that the free coinage magnates are conducting a desperate campaign to secure the country by frightening it into the free coinage crusade. Over $25,000,000 of the gold exported to Europe, the dispatch says, has been taken for political purposes. It has been done by the orders of Jay Gould. The American millionaires who are able to pay premiums and ignore exchange rates. These men are the mine owners of the Pacific slope, and the foreign exchange who. It is alleged, are simply taking advantage of the extraordinary financial situation to reinforce their hoard of gold coin. In addition to this method of conducting the campaign it is asserted that millions of free coinage circulars are being spread broadcast throughout the land. Behind all the free silver pool having distributed over 2,000,000 free coinage circulars within the last thirty days.

Heavy Loss by Fire.

CLOQUET, Minn., June 27.—At 2.30 o'clock p. m. a fire occurred in the yard of the Nelson Lumber company near the mill. A strong wind was blowing at the time and the fire spread rapidly through the yard toward the mill. It looked at one time as though the whole town must go. The local fire brigade turned out promptly and through their exertions the fire was confined to the lumber yard. Over $5,000,000 feet of dry lumber was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $500,000. No persons were injured during the fire, which is still burning, though under control.

Pyrotechnics Caused the Blaze.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 27.—R. Howsden's wholesale and retail toy and notion store was completely gutted by fire at 2.30 p. m. An immense stock of fire works was being removed from the fourth to the second floor preparatory for the Fourth of July. A boy named Oscar Krats was carrying a carroll of pyrotechnics when one exploded. Almost instantly the entire stock exploded and rockets flew in all directions. Pedestrians on Main street fled for safety. No one was seriously injured. The firemen subdued the flames after a hard fight. Loss, $18,000; insurance, $11,000.

Preparing to Receive the Kaiser.

LONDON, June 27.—The Dutch fleet is preparing to welcome the German emperor at Vanuiden. All the sailing vessels, barges in Amsterdam are being decorated and preparations made for a great Venetian fete on the river Y. The German colony in Amsterdam will give a grand musical performance in honor of the emperor. The British fleet is also gathering at Sheerness for the naval demonstration which is to welcome the Kaiser to England on July 4.

Settlement of the Perry Estate.

ALBANY, June 27.—The final settlement of the estate of Hon. Eli Perry has been made. The sum of $1,000,000 was ordered to be paid to the following: New York Baptist Union for Ministerial Education, Baptist Educational Society for the State of New York, American Baptist Missionary union and the American Baptist Home Mission society.

Ex-Senator McDonald's Will.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 27.—The will of the late Senator McDonald has been probated. The bulk of his property is left to Mrs. McDonald. This includes his Washington street property, personal effects and library. His watch and law library are given to C. F. Woodruff. The rest of his property is disposed under the laws of descent.

Will Accept the Bishopric.

MILWAUKEE, June 27.—Dr. Isaac Lea Nicholson, of Philadelphia, has announced his intention of accepting the election of the Milwaukee diocese, to succeed the late Bishop C. F. Knight, who was elected two years ago.

Treasurer Woodruff Under Arrest.

LITTLE ROCK, June 27.—The grand jury of Pulaski county returned an indictment against State Treasurer Woodruff for embezzlement of state funds. Woodruff was immediately placed under arrest.

A Tannery Burned.

ELMIRA, N. Y., June 27.—Fred Stanley's tannery was burned last night. It occupied the entire length of two blocks and half the width of one. Loss, $60,000; insurance, $30,000.

TARRYTOWN'S MYSTERY

The Body of the Suicide Still Unidentified.

ATWOOD WAS NOT HER HUSBAND

His Real Name Is Harding and He Has a Wife Living in New York—His Remarkable Knowledge of Marks on the Body—Looked Up.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The mystery surrounding the beautiful dead woman at Tarrytown deepens. Dolly Davis' double, the woman who was found in the river at Croton Landing one week ago this morning, has been identified twice, and both instances the identification was proved erroneous. Harding's identification of the dead woman at Tarrytown as a romantic deceit was wonderful in conception and execution. He told the officials that he had looked at many bodies, and that always on such journeys he had taken his little girl with him.

"We saw, Louise and I," he said, many a body, and we were in many a dead house together."

Atwood's Story.

Coroner George Sutton with a jury of nine men reopened the inquest because of the positive identification of the woman by Frank Atwood as his wife. Before the jury Atwood told a romantic story of his married life. He said he was married on Nov. 3, 1888. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Allen, of the Church of the Transfiguration, in West Philadelphia, and his wife's maiden name was Purcell Maginis. He then proceeded to identify the woman by first accurately describing her complexion and peculiarities. There was, he said, a mole on the back of the neck, a crooked tooth in the upper jaw, while the front of the teeth were uniform and handsome. On the left leg was a scar above and below the knee cap, both of which had been caused by a scald. The physicians who performed the autopsy had failed to notice these marks, but upon making a second examination found them as Atwood had said. Continuing, he said:

His Relatives.

"My uncle is Hugh Atwood, 176 West Forty-second street, New York, proprietor of the Grand Windsor hotel. My father's sister is Mrs. Bagnell, 120 East One Hundred and Tenth street, while Frederick Harding, of Yonkers, is my brother-in-law. I was a worked for J. H. Rogers & Co., 178 Liberty street, and White, Post & Co., of Cleveland. My wife was well known to Mrs. Patrick, of Germantown, Philadelphia, to a Mr. Wagner, a collector in Ruppert's brewery, and to Dr. Brown, of Fulton and Water streets, New York. My parents are both dead."

Chief of Police Linden was consulted to verify the witness' statements, as the fellow's apparent anxiety to remove the mystery of the suicide in his mind. He was sent to New York in company with Officer Joseph Secor and Undertaker Vanderbilt. At 7 o'clock in the evening the inquest was adjourned.

A Sensation in Court.

Atwood was again called to the stand. "Have you been in New York?" asked the coroner.

"I refuse to answer," replied the witness, and he acted as though he meant it. He was turned over to the police, and George Harding, proprietor of the United States hotel, at Fulton and Water streets, was put on the stand.

"Do you recognize the body?" asked the coroner.

"I do not," replied the witness.

"Do you know Frank Atwood?"

"I am acquainted with the young man there whom you call Atwood."

"Is that not his name?"

His Real Name.

"No, sir; his name is Victor George Herding. That is not his name."

There was a sensation in the room for a while, and it took some time to restore quiet.

The left his home in Twenty-fifth street only a few days ago, where he lives with his wife and daughter," resumed the witness. "As far as I know they live happily, and I can only account for his present actions by the fact that he is not in his right mind. He has no sister in Yonkers, but has a brother-in-law there. He has been married four years and is twenty-four. He was sometimes violent after being on a spree."

"Atwood" was called in, and when asked if the witness was his father, replied: "I refuse to answer."

"Do you deny your own father?" asked the coroner.

"No; you are my father."

Mrs. Louise Herdling, the mother, also swore that Atwood was her son, and Philip Herdling, the uncle, who resides at Yonkers, corroborated this.

The testimony was then read to Victor George Herdling, alias Frank Atwood, which he refused to sign. He was then taken in charge by the police and locked up.

The Identification Complete.

The point which puzzles the authorities is that the identification by the so called Atwood cannot be shaken, and they say he knew the dead woman intimately. From a remark dropped by Chief Noonan it is inferred that he believes he is on the eve of clearing up the mystery, and that he has his clutches on the person who knows more about the death of the unknown woman than he will tell.

The inquest will be continued today.

Met a Horrible Death.

ALTOONA, Pa., June 26.—At the large quarries at Piney Creek Robert Calbert and a gang of men prepared two blasts and fired them. One, however, failed to explode and Calbert, with a fuse in hand and prepared to drill it out. He placed the end of the bar in the hole and let it drop, when an explosion occurred. The bar was driven through his body. He died in terrible agony about twenty minutes afterward.

Made an Assignment.

TRENTON, June 27.—Thomas A. Bell, the financial officer of the crippled Star Rubber company and the Trenton China company, has made an assignment. Besides the house he lived in and the two small farms his assets consist principally of $250,000 worth of stock in the Star Rubber and Trenton China companies. His liabilities outside of his indorsements are about $3,000.

Held for Trial.

BOSTON, June 27.—Conductor Kilburn Howell charged with smuggling goods from Canada over the Canadian Pacific road, was before the United States commissioner. He was held in the sum of $1,000 for trial at Portsmouth in September before the circuit court.

THE STORM CONTINUES.

Additional Details of the Damage Done in the Northwest.

STORY CITY, Ia., June 27.—Rain continued to fall all night and is still coming down. The work of repairing railroads and telegraph wires is much delayed in consequence. The greatest destruction by the floods was confined to an area of fifty miles in extent directly east of this place. Communication with Cherokee has just been opened by the Wisconsin line. Cherokee was the center of the storm and the place where most of the damage was done. Reports place the loss at Sutherland, Neb., by the storm, at $70,000 alone. Seventy miles of Illinois Central railroad track are submerged. The loss will reach $100,000. The loss of the Chicago Northwestern railroad will be fully as great as that of the Illinois Central. Advices from Correctionville say that the place is yet under water. At Aurelia the water stood six feet deep in the streets, but is slowly going down. The valley of a small creek running into the Little Sioux river at Cherokee was the only outlet for the water during the storm and was three miles wide. Nearly 100 in number—was swept away. No lives were lost at Cherokee. Fifty houses were washed away, however, and scores of others were shifted from their foundations, while every bridge and culvert in the county is washed out. Several miles of the Illinois Central road are under water and it will not be unable to resume operations for three or four days.

OMAHA, June 27.—The very heavens seem to have opened and the deluge of water has been falling since 6 o'clock a. m. The newly graded streets are washed out, sewers have burst and pavements are torn up in many places, and dollars have been lost by the cloudburst. Not a train has arrived in the city since morning and none on the Union Pacific and Elkhorn since noon yesterday. The wires have gone down and the lightning has played havoc with the electric lines. A tornado and waterspout at Palmer, Neb., while it did but little damage in town, entirely demolished crops in the surrounding country. At Dodge the river rose seven feet in an hour and drowned a large amount of stock in the stockyards there.

IDA GROVE, June 27.—Maple river here is the highest ever known. The town is inundated and all the bridges are washed away. No lives have been lost.

Jumped from a Train.

CHICAGO, June 27.—Mrs. E. L. Philo, aged twenty-eight years, was arrested here on a warrant sworn out by Deputy Sheriff Reno, of Denver. She was turned over to the Denver officer, who started with her for that place. When the train was near Ashton, a station ninety miles west of Chicago, the woman jumped through the open car window and escaped. The train was running at full speed at the time and Reno was doing, not thinking that his fair prisoner would attempt to escape. The train was stopped and the search is still, but no trace of the woman could be found. Mrs. Philo is wanted in Denver for jumping her bail bond. She had been arrested for a large forgery and the case was continued for hearing, the bond being fixed at $5,000. As soon as bail was furnished the woman disappeared.

Hon. John R. Alley Assigns.

BOSTON, June 27.—The Hon. John R. Alley, of Lynn, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to William A. Knowlton, who is one of the assignees of Alley Bros. & Place, the leather dealers who recently failed. Mr. Alley's liabilities are mentioned firm $500,000 or $600,000, but aside from this indebtedness the liabilities are very small. Mr. Alley's indebtedness to Alley Bros. & Place is understood to be secured in whole or in part. His affairs are found to be so involved with those of that firm that it was deemed best for him to assign to Mr. Knowlton, who is winding out his affairs. The announcement of the assignment made a decided sensation in Lynn, Mr. Alley's fortune having been estimated at $1,000,000.

No Yellow Fever in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—Many telegrams have been received from parties here asking if there was yellow fever in New Orleans. The dispatches were referred to the board of health. President Ogilvie promptly sent the following to the United Press: There is no case of yellow fever, or fever of a suspicious nature in New Orleans. Should any such case occur, prompt official notice will be given in accordance with agreement entered into between state boards of health.

Mr. Cleveland's Report Fair.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Referee Grover Cleveland's report awarding the Langdons $600,000 compensation from the city for property rights on the North river taken from them for the extension of the bulkhead line has been confirmed by the supreme court, general term. The Langdons appealed on the ground that the sum was inadequate and the city because the amount was excessive. The court pronounces Mr. Cleveland's report fair and impartial.

The Company Compromised.

BOSTON, June 27.—The agreement for judgment for $33,500 for the plaintiff had been rendered in the superior court in the case of Silvia M. Gardenier against the Old Colony railroad company. Injuries received in the Quincy accident last August. All but six of the cases arising out of the accident have been settled by the company. There were originally 150. The $33,500 is the cost of the accident to the railroad company thus far has been more than $400,000.

May Make a Statement.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—The councils investigating committee will meet again on Monday and they will willingly give Postmaster General Wanamaker an opportunity to make a statement, should he desire to do so, regarding the stock of the Keystone bank purporting to have been issued in his name, but if a committee do not intend to again ask the postmaster general to appear before them.

Secretary Proctor at the Encampment.

CONCORD, N. H., June 27.—Secretary of War Proctor, together with Governor Page and a number of Vermont military men, arrived here. They were escorted to the encampment of the Second National Guard, where a salute of seventeen guns was fired in honor of the secretary.

The Appeal Will Not Be Entertained.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Secretary Noble is back in Washington. The appeal of Special Agent Thompson from the action of Superintendent Porter, who suspended him for disobedience of orders, will not be entertained.

HURLED FORTY FEET.

Seventeen Bricklayers Dashed to the Ground.

TWO OF THE NUMBER ARE DEAD.

It Is Feared Several Others May Die of Their Injuries—Six Men Killed by the Collapse of a Colliery in Pennsylvania During a Storm.

ELIZABETHPORT, N. J., June 27.—There was a fatal accident at the new building in course of erection by the Worthington Pump works in which two men were killed outright and several were injured so badly that they will die. Seventeen bricklayers and their helpers were working on a scaffold on the third story. Suddenly a loud crash was heard and the entire number of workmen were precipitated headlong to the ground. The scaffold had broken.

Two Instantly Killed.

An instant later the groans and cries from the wounded and the shouts for help from those who were not so seriously hurt were heard. The men who were killed did not even utter a moan. Death was instantaneous. Help quickly came from the other workmen. The distance the men had fallen was fully forty feet. The first man picked up was Michael Nolan. He was dead. He was thirty-five years of age and single. The next dead body was that of Gabriel Williams, thirty years of age, also single.

Removing the Injured.

Willing hands hauled away the boards and timbers of the scaffold that pinned the wounded to the ground. Patrick Meher of Elizabeth, who was badly crushed, and Remus Humble, a colored man of Newark, whose head was crushed and whose limbs were badly broken and maimed, were next pulled out. They were sent to the Elizabeth hospital. James Kelly, Michael McCarthy and Patrick Jones, who were very badly hurt about the body and limbs, were sent to their homes, where they were attended by physicians. The other workmen, who had escaped more fortunately, either limped away to their homes or assisted in caring for the dead and wounded. A doctor was hastily summoned, and he did what he could on the spot for those who were hurt. A crowd soon gathered and there was considerable excitement.

It is feared that some of those who were taken to the hospital may die. The building inspector is making an investigation of the accident. The scaffold was supposed to be entirely secure and strong, but the presumption is that it was overloaded.

Who Was to Blame?

Seventeen men were too many for it. The roof of the men and many loads of bricks they were laying was more than the scaffold could stand. It is not yet decided whether the boss or the workmen or the contractor is to blame for the accident.

Six Men Killed.

MOUNT CARMEL, Pa., June 27.—This section was visited by a wind and rain storm of unusual severity. When the storm was at its height the rumbling was heard above the noise of the storm, causing people to flee from their homes in terror. For a time it was feared that a terrible calamity had taken place, but when the storm lessened, that the crash was caused by the collapse of the Paterson Coal company's large colliery, two miles west of this place. Four slaters—J. M. Blossom, Richard Roberts, J. B. Dodson and William Lodge, from Shickshinny, Pa.—were on the roof at the time of the accident, and were hurled to the ground, a distance of 130 feet, and crushed to a jelly by heavy timbers falling upon them. Two other workmen from Luzerne, Pa., whose names could not be learned, were also working in the building and shared the fate of their companions. It was two hours before the bodies of the men could be recovered, owing to the debris that was heaped upon them. The colliery was to have been started next month, but the buildings are totally wrecked and it will take considerable time to make necessary repairs. The loss to the colliery is about $130,000.

What the Trouble Is About.

SANTA FE, N. M., June 27.—The latest Indian news from the New Mexico and Arizona border, or from the Indian country lying between the Navajo's agency at Fort Defiance and Keam's canyon in Arizona, is to the effect that about 100 disaffected Indians who quarreled with their neighbors, both of the Mequi and Navajo tribes, are ambushed in the mouth end of the Keam's canyon. Bad blood has existed for a long time between the powerful Navajos and the weaker but fierce Mequis. Cattle and stock stealing has been the grievance between the two factions. Recently a company of cavalry was sent from Fort Wingate. This force having been found insufficient, two other troops have been sent to Keam's canyon. The Navajoes as a whole say they do not wish war with the United States, but the Indian department at Washington seems determined to send their children to eastern Indian schools in violation of treaty stipulations. They are willing to send their children to schools on their own reservation, but will not let them go east.

Suicide or Deception?

PORTLAND, Me., June 27.—A man giving the name of Westbrook boarded the steamer Portland at Boston and immediately retired to the stateroom. Upon the arrival here of the steamer it was discovered that the bed in the stateroom had not been occupied. In the room were a box addressed to Amos W. Carson, Haverhill, Mass., and letters to Mrs. Amos Carson and Charles York, Haverhill. It may be a case of suicide, but appearances indicate a clever deception. The man had time before the boat left Boston to change his clothes and get ashore.

The Proceedings Were Illegal.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 27.—The quo warranto proceedings brought against Chief of Police Rylands, which were to have been heard before Judge Thayer, were withdrawn by Attorney Wheeler and a new form of proceedings brought. The first were held illegal as they were not brought in the name of the state's attorney, but in the name of the citizens. The new form bears the name of the state's attorney and will be tested.

Two Women Killed.

LINCOLN, Neb., June 27.—Mrs. G. F. Hawey and Mrs. A. M. Tabro attempted to cross the railroad track at Grafton in front of an approaching train. They were struck by the engine and both instantly killed, the bodies being badly mutilated.

Passed a Second Reading.

LONDON, June 27.—In the house of lords Lord Derby supported the Irish land purchase bill as a laudable effort to solve a part of the land problem. Lord Salisbury said that the bill was not entirely satisfactory. The government desired to multiply the number of land owners, and the house of commons had acted generously in voting a large sum to assist purchasers. The bill passed a second reading without a division.

Favor Harrison's Renomination.

PHILADELPHIA, June 27.—Collector Cooper has accompanied the Pennsylvania Editorial association to Atlantic City, was asked whom the editors favored for the presidential nomination and replied: "All the Republican editors are of the one opinion. They favor the renomination of President Harrison. They say he has proved himself to be a safe man and he has given general satisfaction."

Still Seeming Up.

MEMPHIS, June 27.—In the criminal court the arguments in the King trial were resumed. Mr. Mitchell, of Mississippi, concluded his speech for the defense and was followed by Mr. Thurston for the same side. Dr. Luke Wright consumed the balance of the session in an argument for the state.

LANGUAGE STATISTICS.

Interesting Facts Regarding the English, French and German Tongues.

The language in which Shakespeare and Milton wrote was the language of less than 6,000,000 human beings, and when Washington was president less than 16,000,000 people used the English tongue. At the same time (time of our first president), French was the mother tongue of at least 30,000,000 of people, and by some writers it is said that 50,000,000 of French speaking people were living at the time of the Revolution of 1789. Between that day and fifty years ago the English language equaled the German in the number of those who spoke it, and now the latter is left far behind in the race.

Now, says the Chicago Times, German is spoken by 10,000,000 persons in the Austro-Hungarian empire, by 40,000,000 in the German empire, by 40,000 in Belgium, and by about 2,000,000 in the little Alpine country in Switzerland. Besides the countries mentioned, in which German is usually classed as the native tongue, it is spoken by about 2,000,000 persons in the United States and Canada, giving a total of about 90,000,000 who use the German language.

With French the case is much the same. That language is now spoken by the 38,000,000 inhabitants of France, by 3,500,000 people in Belgium, by 200,000 in Alsace-Lorraine, by 600,000 in Switzerland, by 1,500,000 in the United States and Canada, by 250,000 in Hayti, and by 1,250,000 in Algiers, India, the West Indies and Africa; total, 45,000,000.

English is spoken by all but less than 1,000,000 of the 38,000,000 in the British Isles, by probably 57,000,000 of the 60,000,000 inhabitants now believed to be in this country, by 4,000,000 persons in Canada, by 2,000,000 in Australia, by 3,700,000 West Indians, and perhaps by 1,000,000 in India and other British colonies, bringing the total to over 100,000,000.

Persons Who Sneeze.

The custom of giving thanks for sneezing originated long before the Christian era, says Harper's Bazar, authority for the following:

In the Twelfth century lived Eustathius, a man "profoundly versed in ancient classic lore." He too yielded to absolute belief in this old time superstition.

In his most valuable legacy to the world of letters, a commentary on Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey," we find:

Telemachus (then second cousin) Constrained, his nostrils echoed through the crowd;
The unfolding queen the happy omen blessed—
So may these impious fall, by fate opprest.

Odyssey, B. XVII.

And Homer lived hundreds of years before the Christian era!

It is said that when the king of Monopotamia sneezes, acclamations are made in all parts of his dominion.

In Siam "long life" is wished to persons who sneeze, and among Persians, if often repeated, is considered a most auspicious event.

The year 750 A. D. is usually reckoned the first of the custom of saying to one who happened to sneeze, "God bless you."

In a Seventeenth century work may be found these lines:

It is an order when you sneeze,
Good sirs, will pray for you;
Mark this, and doubt it not, for I thinke
He is your friend must sneeze.

Scientific Cranks.

Every time we strike a match, says The Aluminum Age, we are indebted to the men who have studied science for the more love of it. The man who went all away at coal tar "just to see what was in it" made the whole world their debtors by discovering alizarin, the coloring principle of red dye. And to whose use the world is indebted also for aniline, antipyrine and more than 100 other coal tar products. Scientists, wondering what was in crude petroleum, found paraffine and vaseline. Pasteur wondered what caused fermentation. He found out and brought a new era to wine making. The singing and dancing of the tesakrelle attracted the attention of a brain, and we have as a consequence all the applications of steam. The swinging of a chandelier in an Italian cathedral by an acolyte gave a young Galileo was the beginning of a train of thought that resulted in the invention of the pendulum, and through it to the perfection of the measurement of time, and thus its application and use in navigation, astronomic observations, and in a thousand ways we know of. Who can tell what to-day's practical value that the debt to scientific thought, even in this one instance, can never be known.

Wages in Various Parts of the Country.

In these days of strikes among workingmen it is interesting to note that in New Yorker, that there should be such a wide difference in their wages in various parts of the country. Brickmasons are paid 31 cents an hour in Atlanta, while they get 62 cents in St. Louis. In Lexington, Va., a carpenter gets 18 cents an hour, while his brother in New York gets 50 cents. A plumber gets 38 cents in Vicksburg and 69 cents in Chicago, while a painter gets 25½ cents in New Orleans, 35 in Memphis, 51 in Kansas City and 52½ in New York. Again, a roofer gets 19 cents an hour in Atlanta, 34 in New York, 37 in Brooklyn and 38 in Santa Fe. Unskilled labor gets only 7½ cents an hour in Atlanta, while it gets 25 cents in St. Louis. St. Louis pays the highest price to masons; New York to carpenters; San Francisco to painters; Chicago to plumbers, Santa Fe to roofers, and Galveston to common laborers.

Lord Byron's "Don Juan."

The book, which made on its publication a great stir, bore no name, and being therefore not copyright, was republished in cheap editions by the pirates. Application had consequently to be made for an injunction, and for a time it was seriously questioned whether the court of chancery would afford protection to the book. However, the injunction was duly obtained; but Lord Byron strenuously refused to make any alterations in the poem as suggested by Mr. Murray, the publisher. Byron died in 1824; his "Memoirs," which had been sold in 1821, by Murray, being burnt at the family's request a few months afterward. It was thought that portions of them were too gross for publication.

Funny Ways of Conjugating Verbs.

Children have funny ways of conjugating their verbs, as was illustrated by a little boy of my acquaintance told about in Wide Awake. This little man had been out with his sled and came in saying eagerly:

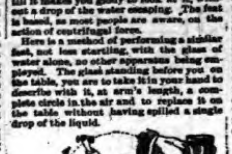
"Oh, mamma! I have been out with my sled and I slud clear to the foot of the hill, while Johnny Atkinson only slud half way. It's much good fun to slide!"

CENTRIFUGAL FORCE.

A Simple but Interesting Test Which Illustrates a Great Natural Law.

You may often see at the circus or the theatre a juggler place a pail of water in a hoop, which is rapidly round and round till it makes you giddy to look at it, without a drop of the water escaping. The fact is, he knows, as most people are aware, on the action of centrifugal force.

Here is a method of performing a similar feat, not less startling, with the glass of water alone, no other appurtenance being employed. The glass standing before you on the table, you are to take it in your hand to the length of the arm's length, and complete circle in the air and to replace it on the table without having spilled a single drop of the liquid.



A CLEVER TRICK.

The secret lies entirely in the manner of holding the glass. Instead of grasping it as if you were about to drink, take it with the palm outward and upward (as shown in the diagram at the upper corner). Swing the arm boldly around and describe a circle without a pause, but without excessive haste, in the direction shown by the arrows in the illustration. The glass will be found when it has completed the circle to be held in the hand in the manner represented by the remaining figure of the cut. This is the position in which it is to be replaced on the table. By beginning with the glass half filled with water and increasing in dexterity and skill in practice, one will be able after a little practice to perform the experiment easily. It is desirable to make the first attempts in the open air. An important point to observe is that there should be no hesitation or unevenness in the circular motion.

The Life of Submarine Cables.

A hard and fast law as to the life of a cable cannot be laid down, for the duration of the sheathing wires is governed by more than one element. The quality of the galvanizing, the presence or absence of such protection as compound tapes, or hemp, and the physical and chemical nature of the bottom, are considerations which must be taken into account. Submarine cables may have a life of more than ten years. They can be successfully repaired at even a considerably greater age. There are now in existence 40 working cables about 44,000 knots of cables, having a life of fifteen years and over; of this amount some 21,000 knots are twenty years (and over) of age. These are nearly one-half of cables now working over twenty-five years old, but these are principally lines of unimportant length, and lying in shallow water. Cables we have cited, says The Electrical Review, are laid in all portions of the globe, and submerged in all sorts of depths; and although the companies owning them have spent, and are prepared to expend, considerable sums in repairs, we do not think that the complete renewal of such section every ten years has entered into their calculations. Present experience would lead us to allot to submarine cables laid under favorable conditions an average life of from thirty to forty years, but, as before stated, no hard and fast figure can be given.

When a Belt Jumps Off a Pulley.

It does make a tremendous racket, to say nothing of the danger. If you appreciate the danger to life, when a belt jumps off a pulley and proceeds to wind itself down around the shaft. The belt has no business to jump off the pulley, and will not do it if properly proportioned for the load it is to carry, well taken care of and not overloaded. Still, these conditions are hard to be met, and where a supply of prevention has become exhausted a few pounds of cure must be used. A tin tube running loose upon a shaft will do no harm except to make a little noise. When a bell jumps off on such a tube there is no chance for it to wind up. A good deal more noise is the result, and less danger and damage, according to the Manufacturers' Gazette.

Turquoise in New Mexico and Arizona.

Among unique specimens of jewelry that have been collected from the Indians of New Mexico and Arizona, the turquoise in a phosphate of aluminum colored blue by copper plays a prominent part. These specimens are interesting, says Popular Science News, from which the accompanying illustration is reproduced, as indicating that this beautiful mineral was prized as a gem by the aboriginal inhabitants of this country, as well as by those natives of oriental lands who discovered it independently.

INDIAN JEWELRY.

Fig. 1 represents a necklace of perforated beads of turquoise, with a rude pendant of the same material. Fig. 2 is an object of remarkable interest—a small image of a prairie dog, carved from white marble, with eyes of turquoise set into the stone. Its neck is encircled by a collar, to which is attached a piece of mother-of-pearl. This object was an ancient fetich of the Pueblo Indians, and was supposed to have the power of causing rain. Fig. 3 is a silver ring set with turquoise, and Fig. 4 a heart-shaped piece of the same mineral, engraved with a figure of two crossed arrows, and provided with a silver ring by which it can be suspended.

Fish of Different Colors.

Divers in the clear waters of the tropical seas find that fish of different colors when frightened do not all start in the same direction, but that each different kind takes shelter in that portion of the submarine growth nearest in color to that of the fish.

MORE MICROBES

Unenviable Advice to Timid Souls Who Tremble at the Thought of "Germs."

"Save us from the microbes! It has been discovered by some one that hail is infested by microbes, and we consequently earnestly urge our readers to always seek shelter in a hail storm as a precautionary measure. This is bad enough, but now along comes another scientific chap who tells us that Vichy water, which an ignorant and guileless world has been drinking for centuries, is loaded to the muzzle with "germs!" Presumably all other bottled waters are in the same dangerous state, and the water furnished to all of our cities is more or less condemned. Then there is boiling in the same category. What are we to do? Science is a dabster at pointing out horrible perils that surround us on all sides, but always quite shaky when it tries to prescribe remedies. It is well for the timid, who tremble at the presence of the microbe, to think no more about him; to eat and drink as usual, and should an ill result let the indicated remedy remove it." The Homeopathic Envoy, which is authority for the foregoing, admits that its advice is not scientific, but affirms that it will promote happiness and prolong life if followed.

Health By Rule.

The following programme for the preservation of health is laid down by Hall's Journal:

Rise early and never sit up late.

Wash the whole body every morning by means of a large sponge, and rub it dry with a rough towel.

Drink water.

Avoid spirits and fermented liquors of every kind.

Keep the head cool, and sleep in an airy apartment.

Eat no more than enough and let the food be plain.

Let your supper be light.

The Average Age.

Anybody about to choose his or her life's vocation will naturally feel more or less interested in the following: In Germany it is found the average age of professionals and tradesmen are as follows: Specialists in sciences, 71 years; beautiful sciences, 70.9 years; abstruse sciences, 70.2 years; public affairs, 68.18 years; natural sciences, 65.7 years; fine arts, 67.6 years; school teachers, gardeners and butchers, 56 years; tradesmen, 56 years; lawyers and financiers, 56 years; doctors, 50 years; bakers, 51 years; shoemakers, 47 years; smithies, 46 years; tailors, 46 years; stone breakers, printers, etc., 40 years.

One Thing and Another.

Excessive moisture of the hands is a disagreeable trouble for which the following is said to be a remedy: Tincture of belladonna, half an ounce; eau de cologne, four onions. Rub it upon the hands several times daily.

It is stated that there are 27,000,000 poros on the surface of our bodies, which, if placed in a line, would extend twenty-eight miles in length, and that we lose two pounds of water in the twenty-four hours by perspiration.

Good deodorizers for the sick room: Cafe ine pounded in a mortar and roasted on an iron plate, sugar burned on hot coals and vinegar boiled with myrrh and sprinkled on the floor and furniture.

According to a medical man horseradish is exceedingly irritating to the stomach and should be used with much care.

Freshly powdered charcoal is an excellent absorbent of foul gases.

ETIQUETTE

CUSTOMS NOW IN FASHION.

A Bit of Anglomania—Favorite Ways to Which Brides-maids Test Their Destiny.

To "the English" is undoubtedly the social fashion of the present, but, as a critic of this species of affectation remarks: "American women do not, unfortunately, seem to catch the true spirit of anglomania, but, like parrots and children, pick up that objectionable slang which seems the perquisite of the first London ass, and of which that circle should be left in undisturbed possession. To hear such words from a pretty mouth as 'I feel awfully seedy,' 'It's beastly hot,' or 'Don't tell me such rot,' is shocking to those who are accustomed to elegance of speech."

A plain round cake for the bridal party alone takes the place nowadays of the remarkable structures of former days so necessary and known as the bridal cake. The bride cuts it, and somewhere in it is the pretty ring which is to bring luck to one of the bridesmaids. A newer and approved fashion of foretelling their matrimonial fortune is to pass around to the maids on a silver salver a number of tiny white cakes, one of which contains the magic ring.

Another new fancy is to have the bride's bouquet formed of as many separate clusters as there are bridesmaids. Just before she leaves the room, after the reception, for the purpose of donning her traveling costume, the bride divides the bouquet, tossing a bunch to each bridesmaid, and she who catches the first is supposed to marry within the year.

It is more than ever the fashion to send out cards by mail announcing a baby's birth. These consist of a little card on which is engraved the infant's name, with the date of birth just underneath, and the mother's card inclosed in the same envelope.

Formal Luncheons and Breakfasts.

"At luncheons, walking or carriage costumes are worn and bonnets may be retained; the gloves are removed at the table," says the Home Journal. "Ladies should arrive twenty or thirty minutes before the hour named for luncheon, and it is polite to take leave fifteen minutes after leaving the dining room. An invitation to a ceremonious luncheon requires as prompt attention as one to a dinner, and whether accepted or not, a "call must be made within a week, or upon the first reception day of the hostess. Invitations to a breakfast require an immediate acknowledgment and a call within ten days after the entertainment. After returning to the drawing room, guests depart within half an hour."

FADS AND FASHIONS IN SILVER.

New Things for the Boudoir, Library and Dinner Table.

Elsie Bee tells in The Jewelers' Circular of many taking novelties in silverware; among them the following:

Trays of all sizes and shapes meet the present fad for setting handsome glass pieces on a silver receiver.

Silver bowls are also designed for a variety of purposes, as for salads, fruits, cracked ice and desserts.

A handsome Wedgwood bottle mounted in silver and set in a circular silver tray, elaborately carved, furnishes a unique inkstand for a library.

There are some dinner tables at which the groom's gift to the bride's sense from a silver nutmeg grater, and relieve olives of their pits with a silver olive corer.

The tendency is again for gold linings in silver cups, bowls, cream jugs and the like.

A novelty in individual salts are canoe shaped ones, with tiny silver paddles for spoons.

The bedrooms and boudoir there are silver fluted twisted candlesticks with carved standards.

Scissors with silver handles that fold over and protect the sharp points are made for carrying in one's pocket.

Jewel boxes of rock crystal mounted in silver are counted among other high art novelties that find a place in the boudoir.

Silver powder boxes beautifully chased and decorated with medallion portraits of historical persons are greatly admired.

How to Do Up Cretonne Draperies.

Large cretonne draperies, such as curtains and furniture covers, should be sent, if possible, to a steam laundry, but if it is necessary to do them at home, they may be washed thus: Cut up some soap in small pieces (about a pint will do) and fill up with boiling water; leave this until it is in a jelly. When ready to wash the cretonne, put this jelly in a tub with plenty of boiling water, and let it soak for a few hours. Then wash the articles thoroughly in it. When the dirt is out rinse the cretonne in a tub of clean water with a little blue and some salt. If very much soiled it may be necessary to put it through two tubs of soap and water. Roll the cretonne in an old blanket and squeeze out the water; pull into shape and hang up to dry. This method comes from a practical source, but it must be remembered that it is wiser to send valuable curtains, etc., to a cleaner's. However, this plan is a safe one to try for small and unimportant articles.

Easy Soap Making.

The waste grease and fat from the kitchen can be disposed of to very good advantage by making it into soap. A country housewife tells of an economical way of getting good soap with very little trouble: Fry out bits of beef suet and other fat and waste grease and strain out the oil into a stone jar until you get from four to four and a half pounds. Put the contents of a pound box of concentrated lye into a stone vessel and pour three pints of cold water into it; stir with a stick until it dissolves and becomes boiling hot; then let it cool till lukewarm. In the meantime, melt the fat, and when it is very nearly cool mix barely lukewarm, pour a tiny stream of lye into the fat, stirring briskly, otherwise it will not form soap. In a few minutes it becomes thick, like honey. Then pour into a wet vessel and next day cut into bars.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST." MONDAY, JUNE 29 1891 PRICE TWO CENTS.

A SUNDAY OF FIRES.

THE NUMBER UNPRECEDENTED FOR ONE DAY.

All Comparitively Slight Because of the Promptness of the Firemen.—Otherwise the Result Might Have Been Very Disastrous Because of The High Wind.

At about 11.55 o'clock yesterday morning an alarm of fire was sounded from box 13, situated at the corner of Park and North avenues. The fire proved to be in John A. Thickstun's lumber yard at the corner of Third street and Madison avenue, and when the department arrived the sheds in the rear of the office were burning fiercely. Dense volumes of smoke blinded the firemen and interfered with the work of extinguishing the fire.

Two stream of water were turned on the burning buildings, but the fire had gained considerable headway and it was not until nearly one o'clock that the fire was entirely out.

The firemen worked hard and confined the flames to the buildings in which they originated. The sheds were set afire by a spark from a locomotive. A large quantity of coal and about one thousand barrels of wood were stored in the yard. Mr. Thickstun estimates his loss at about 1,000. The buildings are insured in a company for which Mr. William A Woodruff is the agent.

Gazelle engine was located on the well at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue. Sparks from the steamer set fire to the roof of the building used as the headquarters of the Plainfield Relief Association. The damage was slight.

Before the Thicksun fire had been extinguished an alarm was sounded from box 47, which is located at the Pond Tool Works. Gazelle No. 1 and Warren No. 1 of North Plainfield answered the alarm but when the companies arrived at the works the fire had been extinguished. A brush heap which had been set afire by some boys, ignited the fence surrounding the works. The damage was slight.

Three fires within twenty minutes. That is something unprecedented in the history of the Plainfield Fire Department, all the fires occurred at about the time services was over in the churches, and large crowds of people witnessed the firemen extinguishing the flames.

When Gazelle Engine Company No. 1, was responding to the first alarm, the pole chain in some unaccountable way became detached from the collar on one of the horses. Luckily the driver, Mr. Eugene Wood, was not compelled to turn a corner, or a serious accident might have occured.

When Warren No. 1's horses were responding to the fire at the Pond Tool Works, one of the horses became exhausted and fell to the road badly cutting both knees.

While responding to the alarm of fire at the Pond Machine Tool Works yesterday morning Zephyr Hook and Ladder in attempting to cross a bad water break in the roadway on West Third street at Plainfield avenue was so badly wrecked that an expert advised the officers of the fire department not to allow the company to respond to anymore alarms until the damage had been repaired. The rods supporting the driver's seat were twisted out of shape, both axles were bent, and sprance underneath the truck was snapped off short. The company, nevertheless, responded to the alarm of fire at three o'clock. But they proceeded very cautiously.

ANOTHER ALARM.

The chimney on the rear extension of the house of Miss Rebecca Page caught fire at about three o'clock yesterday afternoon and caused another alarm to be sounded. The flames were extinguished, however, before any damage resulted.

STILL ANOTHER FIRE.

During the fire at the residence of Dr. Rebecca Page yesterday afternoon, a spark from Gazelle engine, which was located at the well on West Scopd street near Park avenue, set fire to the awning in front of Mr. Joseph Miller's Elkwood cafe. The flames were extinguished before much damage resulted.

Abused His Benefactor.

Saturday evening as Mr. Morgan Mague was walking toward his home, he found a man lying across the railroad track near the Plainfield avenue bridge. Mr. Magué aroused the fellow and as soon as he got him on his feet he saw that he was under the influence of liquor. The man was very abusive and when Mr. Magué told him that he was liable to lose his life he told his benefactor that it was "none of his funeral" if he did. While the two were standing one of the Royal Blue Line trains passed at lightning speed. Had it not been for the opportune arrival of Mr. Magué the unfortunate, who was under the influence of liquor, would have been ground to pieces.

Sunday School Children on a Picnic.

The Sunday school of St. Joseph's Catholic church, North Plainfield, held a picnic Saturday afternoon in Johnston's woods. The children were accompanied by the pastor, Father McKernan and the teachers, Miss Nellie Dowd, Miss Margaret Daly, Miss Justina Smyth, Miss Mamie Dowd, Miss May Hughes, Miss Duffy, Miss Minnie. Mrs. McCollough, Mrs. Dowd, Mrs. McCann, and Mrs. James Farley. They returned in the evening, all satisfied that they had had a most enjoyable time.

FOUR BURGLARIES.

POOR MRS. GABLE ONE OF THE VICTIMS OF THE THIEF.

She Was Chloroformed and Robbed of All Her Cash—Daniel Hibbitts Another Victim.

Some sneak thief effected an entrance into the residence of Mrs. John B. Gable on Cottage place some time after midnight last Saturday and after chloroforming Mrs. Gable ransacked the bureau drawers and buffet. He was rewarded by finding a pocketbook containing nearly eight dollars, some silver plated spoons and a few other valuables. It was all the money the poor woman had in the world and she feels her loss keenly. The police are investigating the robbery.

Other Robberies.

Some thief entered the residence of Mr. Daniel Hibbitts on West Fifth street last evening and decamped with twenty-six dollars in money and other valuables. He left no clue to his identity.

The residence of James Keefe on Sixth street was also entered, but Mrs. Keefe saw the burglar and asked him what he wanted. As soon as he saw that he had been discovered he left by way of the back door, which he had previously taken the precaution to leave open.

The residence of James Cline on Liberty street was also entered by a burglar at about two o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Cline saw the fellow and her screams frightened him away.

A STRANGE FIGHT.

Two Cats Attacked by Three Large Dogs but Them to Flight.

In the lane east of French's mill on Somerset street, at noon to-day three large hounds attacked two cats, one black the other gray. Two of the dogs cornered the gray cat, which was trying to escape. It turned on the dogs suddenly and clawed them one after the other so vigorously that they turned and fled yelping with pain. While the fight was progressing the second cat approached to help and was set upon by the third dog which had not yet got into the thick of the fight, but the black cat's claws proved too much for him. The cat attacked him furiously. The last seen of the dog he was running up Somerset street and no amount of coaxing by the owner could persuade him to return. The dog running yelping through the street startled the alarm of "mad dog! mad dog!"

The cats scampered off beneath a building, after first chasing the dogs, and later returned as if ready to renew the fight, their tails erect and greatly swollen. Evidently the fight was a remarkable one.

The owner finally succeeded in persuading two of the three dogs to accompany him, but the other as stated disappeared, evidently concluding that he knew when he had enough.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS AGAIN VICTORIOUS. —THE WEST ENDS DEFEATED.

An Uninteresting Game on the Plainfield Grounds.—The Northside Athletic Club Failed to Score.—Features of the Game.

The Crescent League base ball team added another victory to their list last Saturday afternoon. Their opponents were the Northside Athletic Club of New York.

The game was very uninteresting as the visitors were outclassed.

The Crescents had them at their mercy and from the start until the finish made runs whenever they wanted to. It was like playing with a lot of little boys, and although there was only a small audience present, many left the grounds before the fifth inning had been concluded. Both teams were disgusted. The visitors because they had accepted the challenge to play with such a strong team and the Crescents because they did not have a better aggregation of players pitted against them.

In the the first inning the Crescents put seven runs to their credit, and scored every other inning with the exception of three.

On two occasions the Northsides succeeded in getting a man as far as third base, but there he remained until the side was retired.

Taylor, the new pitcher, pitched an errorless game and little Bonner caught him to perfection, having only one error and that was not costly.

The Crescents made six errors and the visitors made sixteen.

McIndoe, as usual, played a good game at first base and made two long hits, one of which struck the centre field fence.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

The Westfield Club is in its glory. It succeeded in defeating the Somerville West Ends by a score of 8 to 7. They said they would do it and they did it. A large number of Plainfielders witnessed the game, and they say it was one of the most interesting that they have witnessed this season. Of course there was the usual "kick" on the umpire. The West Ends claim that he gave some very bad decisions, and several Plainfielders who saw the game agree with them. In the eighth inning the Somerville team threatened to leave the field, but after a consultation decided to finish the game. There was considerable money lost on the result. The Westfields will play the Crescents some time in August.

The painters and tinners crossed bats in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon. The tinners won by a score of 20 to 11.

DOWD AGAIN ARRESTED.

This Time Special Policeman Scherman is the Complainant.

On Saturday evening Policeman Kiely arrested Thomas Dowd, Jr., on a warrant issued on the complaint of Special Policeman Scherman. Mr. Scherman complains that on Saturday evening, June 20th, at Greder's grove in Evona, Dowd threatened that he would "do him" at his first opportunity.

His arrest is the result. At a late hour last night ex-Policeman Nicholas Kelley succeeded in finding a bondsman for Dowd in the person of Cornick Caufield. He then went to the residence of Mayor Gilbert and induced him to go to the jail and release Dowd. His Honor complied with the request, but held the accused in $200 bail to appear before City Judge Codington this afternoon.

The case came up for trial this afternoon but City Judge Codington postponed it until July 8th.

A Fractured Leg.

A man named Clark, who resides at Scotch Plains, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. He had a kicking horse and whenever he drove, in order to prevent it from kicking, he tied the animal's tail to the whiffletree. While out driving yesterday the animal in some way succeeded in freeing its tail and then began kicking. Mr. Clark jumped out of the vehicle in which he was seated tried to catch the horse by the head. Before he did so one of his hoofs struck him on the leg, thereby fracturing the limb.

Was She Drugged?

Policeman Frederickson found Mrs. Martin Stevens lying on the sidewalk on Front street, near Peace, Saturday evening. He endeavored to arouse her but it was some time before he was successful. The woman appeared to be in a dazed condition. He took her to the station house and after she had had a few hours sleep she was apparently all right and Mayor Gilbert sent her home with her husband.

She told the Mayor that she had started for the drug store to purchase some medicine, but that is all she could say.

Sterpon Discharged.

The case of the city treasurer vs. Felix Sterpon, the Italian who was arrested a few weeks ago on the charge of selling liquor without a license, came up before City Judge Codington this morning. On motion of Corporation Counsel Marsh who appeared for the city, the defendant was discharged. Lawyer Charles W. Van Winkle appeared in behalf of Sterpon.

Complaining of Hunters

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Hunters have already made their appearance along the Passaic and with their bird dogs are looking for woodcock. Saturday two men from Orange were hunting for those birds on the premises of John Wendell. He ordered them off, but they refused to go and quite a tussel ensued. Mr. Wendell went to get warrants out for the parties, and, during that time, they made their escape with their horse, wagon and dogs. The farmers will here after be on the look-out for them. Farmers along the Passaic have come to the conclusion that all hunters must stop trespassing upon their grounds unless they first obtain permission.

A FARMER.

A "Till We Meet Again" Service.

The Park Avenue Baptist Church was crowded last evening to the extent of its entire seating capacity. It was the last evening service before the pastor's vacation, and the programme printed in Saturday evening's News was the order of the service. The theme for the evening, "Blest Be the Tie Till We Meet Again," was felt in every note of songs, every word of prayer, and every verse of Scripture.

That sweet singer, Mrs. Spicer, of Brooklyn, who is beginning to be well known and loved by the Park avenue congregation, sang two solos most acceptably. Her singing of "Judith" was especially pleasing. "The anthem, "Hark, Hark, My Soul!" was well rendered by the choir. Miss Runyon's superb contralto was never heard to better advantage. Miss Hiderth alone is now in Plainfield people, but her sweet soprano was a delight to all. The congregation sang the grand old favorites, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds, and "Abide With Me," as though they loved to sing.

It was a delightful hour, sweet, clear, voices of some little boys who seemed to feel that it was good for them to be there.

The pastor made a few impressive remarks to his people, bidding them take with them on their vacation, the Christian wherever you go. He closed by saying: "It is just a year ago to-day that we pledged the first dollar on our church debt. The pledging of that debt ushered in a year of greater prosperity than the church has ever known. It is with a happier heart than ever before that I enter upon my vacation. There is a great work before us. As we separate for the Summer shall we not pray, "The Lord watch between me and thee, When we are absent one from another. God bless and keep you all." The congregation then joined in the closing hymn, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

THREE COUNTIES REPRESENTED.

More Dock Privileges from Land Owners on Newark Bay.

Friday the Boards of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson and Essex counties met with the board of this county to consider applications for dock privileges. The assembly was made at noon at the court house at Elizabeth and the freeholders in carriages went to a dock down there, and on board of a steam tug visited the sites of the proposed wharves. On returning to the court house the boards held a joint meeting. The applications were from George P. Wetmore and P. Sanford Ross, Frank H. Gardner, of Bayonne, and the Bayonne Improvement Company for privileges to build wharves on Newark bay.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Herman Dengler of West Front street was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Burk at Dunellen yesterday.

Miss Adelaide Brock of Mountain avenue has returned from a month's visit to Montclair greatly improved in health.

Miss Delia Halpin, of Grove street has just returned from New York, where she went to attend the marriage of her brother.

Mrs. Evelyn Everett Spicer, the sweet singer from Brooklyn, and her husband, were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson of Watchung avenue.

Both Councilmen Ackerman and Rushmore were kept busy attending fires yesterday. They are members of Alert Hose Company and judging from the way they respond to an alarm they make excellent firemen.

The family of Mr. Charles Hyde of East Front street left Saturday for Titusville, Pa., where they went to attend the wedding of Mr. Louis Hyde, who is to be married to-morrow to Miss Emory, daughter of the late Senator Emory of Pennsylvania.

It was a very kind thing for Mr. Ernest Marx, of Leland avenue, to go to such trouble to entertain the Epworth League last Tuesday evening, with his wonderful phonograph. His selections were all fine and entertaining. The young people were delighted and passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Marx for his excellent entertainment.—Ex.

Mr. George W. Taylor, who formerly resided on West Second street, has become so charmed with the city of steady habits, Philadelphia, that he has decided to locate there permanently, with his wife and three daughters, which comprises his family. Their many friends in Plainfield will regret their departure.

If there is a township in Somerset county that can beat this trot it out. ROVER.

11,000 Cars to be Destroyed.

For ten years or more the D., L. & W. Company have not built a four-wheeled coal car. The coal "jimmies," were condemned by the company at that time. There are, however, 11,000 of these unsightly cars on the road. Under a recent act of the Legislature of the State of New York, on and after September 1st, 1892, all cars entering the State of New York, must have patent couplers. The act also forbids the running of four-wheeled coal cars. This necessitates before now and then the demolition of the 11,000 coal cars, and the building of a large number of eight-wheeled cars to take their place. The Scranton shops of the company will make the new cars.—Ex.

Releasing Convicts.

With regard to the Ticket-of-Leave Law, the Trenton Times says:

If a man in the State prison has sufficient friends outside to certify that, when released, he will have employment, he is in a fairly sure way of getting out of its stone walls.

But the Trenton Times omits for state that the individual must likewise have a political pull, and must be able directly or indirectly to help forward the ambitious schemes of the Trenton oligarchists, otherwise he may lie in jail till he has done his full time. No pulice, no release.

Fourth of July Excursions of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

In pursuance of the usual custom the Pennsylvania Railroad company will sell excursion tickets for the Fourth of July holiday between all stations on the system east of Pittsburg and Erie, at a rate of two cents per mile.

The tickets will be sold on July 3d and 4th, and will be valid for return until July 7th, 1891, inclusive.

—Remember the excursion to Belmar. Particulars are in the advertisement elsewhere.

—On the 14th day of June, 1777, Congress adopted the National flag, since then ever used as the emblem of the sovereignty of the republic. Before that date there were many standards employed by the different colonies, nearly every one adopted an emblem of its own. There is a flag still in existence in the possession of the Philadelphia Light Horse Troop, presented to it by Capt. Abraham Markoe, in 1776 or 1775. The origin of the national flag is unknown. Some suppose that the idea to extend the spread eagle was borrowed from the coat-of-arms to which George Washington was entitled under English heraldry. There were three stars and three stripes and a raven issuing out of a coronet on this coat of arms. But this is conjecture, and can not be substantiated. Paul Jones was appointed to the command of the Ranger on the same day the flag was adopted, and it is said that he was the first to unfurl it. A movement is now on foot, originating with the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, to recognize the anniversary of this day, called in patriotic nomenclature, "Flag Day."

To college graduates: Forget all you can of your Latin and Greek during the vacation, then start in and begin your whack at real life the 1st of September.

The little magazine Far and Near, published by the working girls' societies, has one feature that might well be followed by much more ambitious publications. This is its lessons in every number on the government and political history of the United States. The instruction is given in the form of easy talks between a teacher and the class, with questions and answers. By the time these working girls are mothers they will be able to tell their children more about the government of their own country than numbers of mill' maires' wives can do today.

The experts of food products are this year showing a decline over the corresponding months of last year. Perhaps this is already the beginning of the time predicted by economists, when the United States will have no wheat, corn, pork or beef to export, but will need it all for home consumption. The prediction is also made that then will come as prosperous times for farmers as they enjoyed at the close of the war. It may be so. Still, England has for many years consumed considerably more than her farmers could produce, and yet the British agriculturist has not been prosperous.

Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton college, recently preached the one hundred and fifty-fourth baccalaureate sermon in that venerable institution. It was a striking sermon in some respects. Dr. Patton confessed himself disheartened when he saw how men, Christians in other respects, denied essential Christian truth. He said Christianity was not a life, but a doctrine, and a life because it was a doctrine. And he declared in effect that Christian genius was more important that Christian life, using these remarkable words, "Now, I dare say if I must choose between life and dogma I would say that Christianity is not a life, but a dogma."

Which Is Right?

In The North American Review General Rush C. Hawkins declares that in this republic brutality and avarice are triumphant and ride rampant over decency and humanity in our civilization. The government is swindled from beginning to end in its business contracts. Railroad wrecking is a favorite American industry which has enriched a set of individuals whose presence would adorn penal institutions. The star route thieves robbed the government of $6,000,000, while the thieves who steal government timber on public lands have been carrying on operations for fifty years.

There also is the stock watering trade, which has flourished to such an extent that over-issues of stocks and bonds amount in this country to not less than $5,000,000,000, "an indirect mortgage upon the national products, industries and labor of the whole country." Avarice knows no bounds. It will palm worthless goods on the public and imperil the safety of life in its greed. Our buildings are dangerous frauds. Of the Indian agents employed by the United States it is said, "Every wretches scrub has got down a city to rood a pig." The brutality with which sheep, cattle and hogs are treated in the west is something to sicken the soul of a civilized being. Therefore, all these things and many more considered, "brutality and avarice are triumphant in the United States."

But no, says in reply Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll. What if we do water stock? "We all know that the amount of stock issued has nothing to do with the value of the thing represented by the stock," which may be put down under the head of great truths. In closing his defense of the American people from General Hawkins' charge of universal avarice and brutality, Colonel Ingersoll uses these eloquent words:

> There is in our country no real foundation for the charges of universal depravity. This is my judgment, is the best government, the best country, in the world. The citizens of the republic are, on the average, better clothed and fed and educated than any other people. They are fond of life, more determined to make it, take advantage of the forces of nature, than any other of the children of men. Here the burdens of labor are lightest, and the possibilities of the individual greatest, and here, in my judgment, are to be worked out the most important problems that ever engaged man.

Here in America is a finer stock of what is the finest race to mate than you will find in other lands. We do not cringe to those whom chance has crowned. We stand erect.

Our politics are corrupt and rotten. Bribery is almost a national failing. The hand of honest want is rarely left unfilled. Great combinations of wealth oppress and defy all.

Here you will find democracy in the family—republicanism by the fireside. Say what you will, the family is apt to be a model after the government. If a king is at the head of the nation, the limited imagination of the monarch of the home is in this country we have carried into the family the idea on which the government is based. Here husbands and wives are beginning to be equals.

The highest [illegible] of civilization is the treatment of children. Children. By this standard America [illegible] among nations.

There is a [illegible] a scope, a grandeur, about the country and a simplicity that satisfies the heart and the imagination. We have our faults, we have our vices, but our country is the best.

No American should ever write a line that can be knowingly quoted by an enemy of the great republic.

THE KAISER'S WELCOME

All England Will Do Honor to Wilhelm.

BREAKERS AHEAD FOR BISMARCK

It Is Believed That the Emperor's Fondness Has About Been Exhausted by the Iron Chancellor's Attack—Parnell's First Political Battle Since His Marriage.

LONDON, June 29.—All signs point to an enthusiastic reception of the German emperor. Queen Victoria will take no part in the public reception to the emperor, partly because she wishes the emperor and not herself to be the central figure of display, and partly also because she wishes to make the Prince of Wales prominent as the representative of English royalty. The queen will personally receive the empress at Windsor castle tomorrow. He is her favorite grandchild, chiefly on account of his mother, to whom the queen is deeply attached, and partly also because Victoria is said to have a grandmother's faith in the kaiser's future as an arbiter in the affairs of Europe, and confidence that he will yet win military fame for the rather unmilitary house of Hanover.

Criticised from the Pulpit.

The Rev. Dr. Parker, in his sermon to the Temple, severely denounced the selection of Sunday as the date of the kaiser's proposed visit to the naval exhibition. The preacher urged that it was a bad lesson for Englishmen thus to desecrate the Lord's day in pursuit of secular amusement and inordinate curiosity. He is low of the German empire enough to give a better example. The reverend doctor alluded to the ample time which royal and imperial personages had at their service for amusement on week days, and thought the emperor might spare a little such time for the occasion in question.

Wonderful Loyalty to Imperialism Now.

It was noticed that the remarks did not evoke any signs of earnest approbation. The fact is that everybody is tired of the sensational welcome to kaiserdom, and assents that might have been popular two weeks ago are received now with indifference and aversion.

Trouble Ahead for Bismarck.

Much indignation exists in government circles in Berlin at the renewed bitterness of Bismarck's organs toward the kaiser and his policy, and especially at the severe assaults upon the triple alliance. The belief that the articles are inspired by Bismarck widens the breach between the ex-chancellor and the emperor, and there is yet a possibility that Bismarck may find himself called to account, not in the way the Prussian code prescribes for an officer of the imperial army, endeavoring to undermine the faith of the people in the sovereign. Those who are near the kaiser say that his animosity toward Bismarck has grown rapidly of late.

Italian Legislators Excited.

ROME, June 29.—The sitting of the Italian parliament was attended by great excitement. Premier Rudini declared in the clearest and most positive terms that Italy's government would adhere firmly to the triple alliance. He added that Italy and Europe might rest assured that if these alliances should be broken up the peace of Europe would long be preserved.

A Fight Seemed Imminent.

Later in the discussion the Radicals contrasted the offensive and defensive alliance by Signor Martino. Angry Radicals sprang from their seats with violent gestures, drowning the voice of the speaker with shouts by Cavalloti rushed at Martino and would have struck him but for the interference of friends. The utmost confusion and excitement was acting in the wildest manner. The president of the chamber, after vainly attempting to restore order, was obliged to suspend the sitting in order to let members come to their senses. Parliament was then prorogued for the summer holidays.

County Carlow's Campaign.

LONDON, June 29.—During the course of the next ten days the County Carlow will be the center of political interest to which all eyes will be turned. Carlow is the smallest county in the kingdom, being only twenty miles square. It contains an electorate of 1,000 men, all of whom are Tories. Mr. Hammond, the candidate put forward by the McCarthy faction, is a prominent and popular merchant of the town of Carlow. Dr. Anderson Kettle, Parnellite nominee, is a stranger to the country and is a tenant farmer of the County Carlow.

The towns are for Mr. Parnell, but the rural districts are believed to be inclined to the McCarthy party. The Tories of the district will vote for Mr. Parnell, if they vote at all.

It is a significant fact, to which Mr. Parnell's recent marriage has contributed, that two priests have openly and boldly declared for him, while the McCarthyites are far less confident than they were at the previous elections.

A Baroness in Jail.

BERLIN, June 29.—Society is agog over the flagrant case of Baroness Rodenthal, whose family is one of the very highest in West Prussia. She has been sentenced to two months' imprisonment in a fortress for lese majesty.

The offense consisted in vulgar and insulting language in reference to the emperor, spoken during a discussion with a servant.

Fell Dead in the Pulpit.

SARATOGA, June 29.—Rev. William M. Ogden, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross at Troy, New York, died suddenly this afternoon. He was fifty-five years of age and had been pastor of the church for twenty years. He was well known in Episcopal church circles throughout the state.

Thousands Saw Him Drown.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 29.—Edwin Ormster, who arrived here recently from Chicago, was seized with cramps while bathing at Rest lake. Thousands witnessed his struggles, but Ormster sank before any of the spectators could aid him.

A Famous Fire Fighter Retires.

LONDON, June 29.—Captain Eyre Massey Shaw has resigned as chief of the metropolitan fire brigade. In 1861 he succeeded Superintendent Braidwood, who was killed in the great Tooley street fire. He now retires after thirty years' service.

They Want No Sunday Sessions.

BUFFALO, June 29.—In accordance with an agreement, all the pastors of the Methodist church made a vigorous protest against the Sunday opening of the Columbian exposition.

SKELETONS IN AN ICEHOUSE.

Thirty of Them Found by Chicago Fuel Hermet.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Thirty skeletons have been found in an old icehouse at the corner of Ashley avenue and Hough place. For several days numerous complaints have been made to the health department and to the Deering street police station by residents of the vicinity who asserted that a nuisance of the most aggravated form made life almost unbearable. Investigation was made by both departments but 'without locating the trouble. Finally, however, the mystery was solved. Several boys found near the corner a human skull and several thigh bones bleached white. The lads told the first policeman they met of their discovery and he notified the health office.

Dr. Ware, with several assistants, visited the scene and made a more thorough search than had before been made. A bad odor was detected from Schimenann's old icehouse on the corner. The searchers flipped up a part of the floor and were horrified to find rows of skeletons, to some of which shreds of flesh still clung. Who the unfortunates were is not known, and the authorities will make every effort to find the guilty persons. The theory advanced by the health officers is that some attache of a medical college brought the subjects there to bleach. The bones were allowed to remain in the building until the matter can be more fully investigated.

One explanation of the ghastly find is that Robert A. Hawes has been carrying on the gruesome business of cleaning human skeletons for the medical profession in the building. The board of health will look into the matter.

GENERAL ALGER AND 1892.

He Thinks Blaine and Cleveland May Both Run Again.

OMAHA, June 29.—General Alger arrived from his western tour today. When reference to the political situation he conversed freely. "Without a possible doubt," said he, "Blaine wants the presidential nomination he can have it. I find this feeling generally gaining throughout the west. In the east I am confident he is stronger than he has been in years. Many of his influential opponents of 1892 are now anxious to have him nominated. Harrison is second choice, not that his administration has been unsuccessful, but for the simple reason that Blaine is the most popular man in America.

"From my observations through the western states Cleveland has the lead in Democratic popular favor. His silver idea I find injure his chances very little. I honestly think the Alliance will be in the field with a national ticket, but the old soldiers will certainly cut more of a figure in the approaching contest than ever before. That element will totally dominate Harrison in 1892, and its strength will settle the contest in any event.

"But the Democratic question is a troublesome one, and you can't tell what the situation will be with the farmers organizing, and it is troubling thinking politicians very much."

As to his personal candidacy the general was evasive, but he was satisfied the west would control the situation

MUST HALLINGER DIE!

His Counsel Will Make an Attempt to Save Him.

JERSEY CITY, June 29.—Edward W. Hallinger, who is under sentence to be put to death in the Hudson county jail tomorrow, received a welcome visitor yesterday. Lawyer Charles J. Peshall came to confer with him in reference to a move Mr. Peshall will make today to get a stay of sentence pending an appeal.

Mr. Peshall will make an application to the Chief Justice for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that Hallinger's trial and conviction were unconstitutional, because he was condemned without a jury.

Hallinger insisted on pleading guilty, and Judge Knapp ruled that a jury should be dispensed with, and a trial had to decide the question of the sanity. The application for a habeas corpus is denied Mr. Peshall will immediately give notice of an appeal, and he appears confident of getting a stay pending the appeal. Hallinger says he is prepared to die, and will try to act like a man.

Hero Brokaw's Funeral.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 29.—Great crowds of people were present in Long Branch yesterday at the funeral of Frederick Brokaw, who lost his life while trying to save a servant girl from drowning in the surf. The services were held at the home of the young hero's parents. About 200 employes of Brokaw Bros. attended in a body. The services were very simple, the Rev. C. J. Young, of the Mason Taylor Memorial church, officiating. The body will be taken to Newark tomorrow under escort of the Princeton Baseball club as a guard of honor and interred in Mount Pleasant cemetery.

The Consent Resign.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—The board of censors of the Catholic Protestant Society, consisting of Drs. Goodell, Fills, Hunt and Da Costa, has placed its resignation in the hands of the secretary of that institution. This action was taken because the college postponed consideration of the board's recommendation that Dr. Joseph Price, a member of the college, be censured for using slanderous language toward another member.

A Woman's Fatal Fall.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Mrs. Ellen Dougherty and Joseph Reed, occupants of the big tenement at 350 West Thirty-second street, were the victims of the fall of a building because of the pranks played upon Reed by Mrs. Dougherty's children. Reed became very much angered, and rushed at her with the intention of striking her. The woman in trying to escape fell off the building and was killed. Reed is under arrest.

Honduras Will Be Represented.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Captain Gilbert P. Cotton, special commissioner of the World's fair to Central America, reports that the government of British Honduras has accepted the invitation to participate in the World's Columbian exposition, and has appointed commissioners to look after an exhibit.

Coffee Roasted Too Thoroughly.

BALTIMORE, June 29.—The large brick warehouse of Chase's wharf, at the corner of Thames and Philpot streets, used by E. Levering & Co. for roasting coffee, was destroyed by fire last evening. A large stock of coffee was in the building and it burned fiercely. The loss is estimated at $125,000; insured.

If you are a victim of any bladder or kidney difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—Adv.

YOUNG YARD CONFIDENT

Bardsley's Alleged Confederate Faces a Jury.

THE TEN CENT RESIDENCE STORY.

The Experts Claim to Have Discovered That the Germantown House Owned by "Honest John" Was Bought with Public Money, Not with His Wife's Dimes.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—R. H. Yard, the supposed manager and protege of the late John C. Lucas, faced a jury today in the quarter sessions court to defend himself against a score of charges growing out of his dealings with Bardsley. Yard is confident that he will be acquitted, while the district attorney is just as confident that he will be convicted. The trial will be a notable one. No greater contest has been in the criminal courts for years. It is the battle royal of the last case. Back of Yard are the brokers and bankers who have loaned Bardsley money, paid him interest and assisted him in his stock speculations.

The Sub-Committee Anxious.

The sub-committee of councils in the Keyser-Bardsley litigation is anxiously awaiting the outcome of the point raised in court as to its authority to continue its work. If the point raised by Messrs. Shields and Sulzberger, that the councils committee cannot legally compel Yard to answer is held by the court to be well taken, it will abruptly end the investigation. In the minds of a great many people this will be a grave public disaster. The committee has much more to do before the truth is known about Marsh's confederates and Bardsley's dealings. If the committee is improperly constituted, then its work will end or it will have to get the proper authority.

Purchased with Public Money.

One of the most interesting and important discoveries made by the mayor's experts, who are overhauling city books and Bardsley's papers to test the truth of the ex-city treasurer's defense made in court, bears on the purchase of the house in Germantown. In his pathetic statement read before Judge Wilson about his frugal life of self denial Bardsley said that the Germantown house, purchased with his wife's savings of her ten cent pieces and his savings from all outside sources. Mr. Graham will be able to show when Bardsley bought the house and that instead of being bought with Mrs. Bardsley's ten cent pieces the house was paid for with a check drawn against public money.

A Setback for Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—President Judge Finletter, of the court of common pleas, No. 3, has handed down the decision of the court dissolving the preliminary injunction which had been granted upon upon the application of the city restraining the sale of the Bradford hills property under the judgments for $173,681, confessed by John Bardsley's Bradford mills to City Treasurer John Bardsley's sureties, John and Joseph Dobson. The court has refused the city's prayer for a receiver. "The bill," said Judge Gordon, "is not dismissed, but will pass through the court and be heard according to the usual routine of such causes. The full court may make another decision when the case comes up for final hearing."

AMERICAN SEAMEN WARNED.

Chilian Insurgents May Assault Them If They Visit the Shore.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—The following cable dispatch, dated Santiago, has been received at the state department:

"The chief of the Chilian insurgents, the ex-captain of the Chilian navy, George Monti, has notified the American consul at Iquique that the crews of American vessels ought not to go on shore, as they would run the risk of being assaulted by revolutionary mobs."

Ocean Grove's Camp Meeting.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., June 29.—The twenty-second annual camp meeting at Ocean Grove was opened Sunday. The opening address was made by Rev. E. H. Stokes, the president of the association. Rev. Joseph Smith, of Trenton, delivered the opening sermon. Eight thousand persons were present at the evening services, which were conducted by Rev. Charles J. Young, of the Mason Taylor Memorial church. The Elberon surf meeting was largely attended. Rev. George L. Barker succeeds the Rev. Charles Wood in conducting the young people's meeting.

Wood's Friends Want Justice.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 29.—Governor Humphrey has taken the Wood murder case out of the hands of the local authorities of Stevens county. The friends of the late Colonel Wood are reticent regarding the action they will take concerning the murder. They say, however, that if the murderers, Brown and Powell, are not impartial trial no bloodshed will follow. If, however, the trial is a farce a determined effort will be made to mete out summary justice to the murderer.

The Mercury Was Away Up.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—Sunday was the hottest day in California for seven years. The mercury stood at 92 degrees on the signal service tower, 105 in the shade at street level and 120 at Tulare, in the San Joaquin valley. It is expected that most fruit will be benefited, as the weather heretofore has been too cool to ripen properly.

Youthful Train Wreckers Arrested.

LOA, Minn., June 29.—Frederick Schlosmaker, Henry Kinsonan and Albert Schling have been arrested for attempting to wreck a passenger train on the Great Northern road on the evening of June 19. They are boys of only sixteen and seventeen years of age.

Elks at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, June 29.—The Baltimore lodge of the Order of Elks gave a grand reception at Avondale, near Baltimore, to the visiting Elks. Over 500 members were present. Past Exalted Ruler Campbell delivered an address of welcome.

Lightning Killed Pickle.

ALTNEA, Kan., June 29.—At 4 o'clock Miss Pinkie Cochran, the seventeen-year-old daughter of a prominent farmer, took shelter under a tree during a thunder storm. Lightning struck the tree, killing Miss Cochran.

Wheeler for Governor.

DES MOINES, June 29.—Republican county conventions were held in a great many counties in Iowa, and the result clearly foreshadows the nomination of H. C. Wheeler, of Sac county, for governor.

THERE WAS NO MURDER.

The "Dolly Davis" Mystery Cleared Away at Last.

NEW YORK, June 29.—"Dolly Davis," the woman who was identified at Vanderbilt's morgue, in Tarrytown, as Marie Eugenie Josephine Aripeed by her sister, Marguerite, was the wife of Eugene Duval, a wealthy Frenchman who committed suicide by drowning in 1885. She lived prior to her marriage in the household of Edwin Field, in Tarrytown, for nine years. She left Mr. Field's in 1883 to get married, and returned two years later with a boy baby in her arms. The child died on July 31, 1885, and was buried in the Sleepy Hollow cemetery in Tarrytown.

The funeral services of Mrs. Duval were held yesterday in Vanderbilt's morgue. Mr. Thomas, of the Second Reformed church, and the Rev. Philip Germond, of the Methodist Episcopal church, officiated. At the cemetery Walter Sackett, the assistant superintendent, refused to allow the body to be buried because Coroner Sutton had failed to send the certificate of death to Undertaker Vanderbilt, and he had refused to issue the burial permit. There was a delay of two hours, and the large crowd patiently waited around the grave until the undertaker searched Coroner Sutton's office in Tarrytown for Mr. Davis, the pursuit clerk, who signed a permit after much persuasion. The child's body, which had been disinterred, was reburied with its mother after a short service.

A letter which was addressed to Marie Arigoel, of 125 West Thirty-fifth street, and inclosed in a letter to Mrs. Henriette, of Irvington, with instructions not to deliver it until after eight days had elapsed, was received by Miss Arigoel last Friday. It was from Mrs. Duval, and exploded the mystery at once. It reads as follows:

MY DEAR MARGUERETTE—I made believe last Saturday I wrote to Marie that I was going to Europe, but I was not able to carry out any of myself. Everything passed good for you believe all as well as Mrs. Henriette and her auntie. Everything left save for you to take my trunks are in your home. This letter will never come to you till after my death. I send it to Irvington so that you will never send it to you until after eight days. Poor girl, she does not know what she is going to bear from me. I am tired away. Keep all I left and clothes for me.

You see I am doing everything so that you will not be bothered after my death. I don't want you to wear any mourning for me after I am dead. Don't forget to take the dead corne back. I will go tomorrow to the grave of Eugene and if nothing stops me I will kill myself. Be grateful to me for all I did for my life. I live one day sick and one day well and I prefer death. I have lived this long to pay all my debts. Adieu, my regrets. Adieu goodby to those who are dear to me. For you I hope good luck. If you go back to France don't do like I did and remain there.

EUGENIE.

The coroner's jury rendered a verdict "that Miss Arigoel came to her death by drowning at her own hands." Herding was shown to the dead woman's sister, but she did not recognize her. This also cleared Herding of the suspicion of murder.

YANKEE TARS AT REST.

Funerals of the Victims of the Samoa Disaster.

VALLEJO, Cal., June 29.—The remains of the nineteen sailors who were drowned at Samoa during the great hurricane in March, 1889, were interred with imposing ceremonies in the naval cemetery on Mare Island. The bodies were taken to the cemetery, seven in one hearse and twelve on a caisson constructed of gun carriages, and were escorted by a battalion from the Marine corps, a regiment of the National Guard of the Independence, members of Farragut post, G. A. R.; Commander Besson, of the French frigate Bubourdieu; Admiral Irwin and staff, and Commander Wilson, a survivor of the disaster. Commander Clark was in charge of the escort.

At the graves the religious services were conducted by Chaplain M. K. Tenney, and at their conclusion a parting salute was fired and the last call was sounded by the bugle.

A Madman in Church.

VINCENNES, Ind., June 29.—Services at the Christian church were interrupted by the entrance of William Sachs, a saloon keeper, who had been suddenly seized with insanity. Rushing down the aisle, he grasped Mr. Clark to save his wife, shouting and exhorting in the wildest manner. The women and children and a great many of the men fled from the church, creating a panic in their efforts to escape the madman. The chief of police and Lieutenant Rose, Joseph Smith, of Trenton, delivered the opening sermon. Eight thousand persons were present at the evening services, which were conducted by Rev. Charles J. Young, of the Mason Taylor Memorial church. The Elberon surf meeting was largely attended. Rev. George L. Barker succeeds the Rev. Charles Wood in conducting the young people's meeting.

Soldier Boys in Camp.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., June 29.—Sunday was a quiet day for the Thirty-second and Forty-first regiments in camp. In the morning the members attended divine service in the Young Men's Christian association tent. The service was conducted by Rev. Emil Meury, chaplain of the Thirty-second regiment. Rev. James H. Darlington, chaplain of the Forty-seventh regiment, preached an earnest sermon from the text, "Fight the good fight, lay hold on eternal faith."

Harvard May Meet Oxford.

BOSTON, June 29.—The statement that Oxford would like to arrange with Harvard for a race aroused great interest at Harvard to-day. Many are anxious to go, and declared their ability to whip the Oxford crew. The general impression here is that while it is impossible for either give or accept a challenge from Oxford this year there will in all probability be a race fixed for next summer should Harvard again prove victorious.

Wilmington's Big Fire.

WILMINGTON, June 29.—The South Side mills of the Wilmington Iron company, covering about four acres of ground, were burned Sunday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $600,000; partly covered by insurance. The mills gave employment to about 6,000 hands. Horseshoes and railroad spikes were the principal goods manufactured.

A Methodist's Long Service at Haverstraw.

NYACK, N. Y., June 29.—Rev. A. S. Freeman, D. D., celebrated the twenty-fifth year of his pastorate in the Central Presbyterian church, of Haverstraw, Sunday, his fifth year at Nyack. The church was crowded at all the services.

It Was Three Times and Out.

MANSFIELD, O., June 29.—William Thomas, aged twenty-five, a well known character, was found dead in bed in the morning. He had taken morphine with suicidal intent. This was his third attempt at self destruction.

A Guy Wire Killed Him.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 29.—W. Bennett, a railroad brakeman, while passing through an alley touched a guy wire which was crossed with an electric light and was instantly killed. He leaves a wife and two children.

WHERE'S YOUNG WARNER

An Englishman with $10,000 Has Disappeared.

A MYSTERY AT THE METROPOLIE.

The Missing Man Made a Strange Acquaintance Named Rowland on the Steamer and Both Are at Present Out of Sight—Has Warner Been Murdered?

NEW YORK, June 29.—A case which is replete with mystery and strangely suggestive of a parallel with the Wright-Buttinger case is now perplexing the police of this city, to whom it has been reported. As in the famous Staten Island mystery, the principals who figure in the case are two young men of almost the same age. They became acquainted aboard an incoming ocean steamer and grew to be fast friends. One of the young men, Charles Warner, the one whose mysterious disappearance is now reported to the police, had a large sum of money on his person.

The other, a man named Rowland, was not so well provided. Upon the arrival of the vessel in this port both young men left the vessel together and made arrangements in the neighborhood to secure a furnished room.

A Strange Circumstance.

This is regarded as strange, inasmuch as their destinations were supposed to be in widely different directions, and that Warner was expected to join his brother, who had already made arrangements for his reception. Every precaution had been taken to notify the young man where he could find his brother, and that he knew of the latter's address is proven by his own letters.

The vessel arrived in this port on the 23d, but not a trace of the young man or his companion can be had. He has disappeared as completely as if he had fallen out of existence.

He Carried $10,000.

Charles Warner is twenty-four years of age, and is described as being about 5 feet 10 inches in height, with blue eyes, light hair and mustache and dark complexion. When he left the ship he wore a dark blue silk faced English reefer jacket, a dark derby hat and pants of dark striped material. He carried a case. In a belt he had gold and Bank of England notes to the value of $10,000.

Charles Warner was to join his elder brother, Thomas, who had preceded him to this country by only a few days. The brothers intended to go into the drug business in this city with the money, which represented the proceeds of an estate which had been settled on the young men.

Foul Play Feared.

Thomas fears that Charles has been murdered and robbed. When seen today at the place where he is living Thomas said:

"The more I think of Charles' disappearance the more I become satisfied that he has become the victim of foul play. He was not the kind of a young fellow to do anything rash. He must have been influenced by somebody.

"I took every precaution to guard against Charles going astray. He has not lost my address, for if he had he would have inserted an advertisement in the newspapers, knowing I would certainly see it. I have hunted high and low, and can ascertain nothing."

Mr. Warner's young man named Rowland in Devonshire, England, who was an assistant to Charles in a drug shop there. The assistant is described as a man fully 6 feet in height, of dark complexion and features, and about twenty-five years of age.

MURDER FOR A WOMAN.

A Well Known Brooklyn Society Man's Awful Crime.

BROOKLYN, June 29.—Young Darwin J. Meserole, a son of General J. V. Meserole, president of the Williamsburg Savings bank, died and killed Theodore Larbig, a married man, at 378, Sackett street, Brooklyn.

The shooting took place in the flat occupied by Mrs. Dovie P. Comstock, a married woman, who a year ago left a wealthy husband and several children in Providence, R. I.

Larbig was a traveling salesman for the Phillips Insulated Wire company, of Providence. He was forty-three years old, and lived with his wife and two children at 28 Second street, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Comstock is only thirty years old, and is considered a pretty woman. She is stylish and gives evidence of culture and refinement. She first met Larbig in Providence, and the outcome of the introduction was her leaving there to reside in Brooklyn.

Later she enmeshed young Meserole. The two men were jealous of each other. Larbig and the woman quarreled in the presence of Meserole, and Meserole says he shot Larbig because the latter assaulted Mrs. Comstock and attempted to kill him. The Meserole family have held a place in Brooklyn society almost as prominent as that held by the Astors in New York. They are looked upon as leaders in Brooklyn social life.

Killed on a Fatal Corner.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The cable road found a victim in Theodore Beekman, of 467 East Ninth street, yesterday. It is said that he attempted to board a Tenth avenue car as it was rushing around the curve at One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street. He was killed instantly. His clothing was torn into shreds and the body shockingly mutilated. The gripman, Harry Somers, of 409 west One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, was arrested.

The corner where the accident happened is a fatal one. Several children have been crushed to death there, and innumerable accidents have happened.

Beaten by Masked Men.

WEST MEDWAY, Mass., June 29.—While John Welch, George Gibbs and Herbert Pratt, of this place, were fishing near here, they were set upon by ten masked men and Pratt was terribly beaten. Gibbs escaped. Welch was not molested and it is asserted that he instigated the assault. Pratt having given important testimony convicting liquor dealers. Welch, Peter Gallagher, Michael Henry and John Henry have been arrested.

Tossed to Dr. Graves' Door.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—A detective who has been working on the Barnaby case has left for Denver. He inquired into the condition of Mrs. Barnaby while here and found that she was enjoying good health. He claims that he discovered where the bottle of whisky was purchased, and traced it to the door of Dr. Graves.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past and they never cut as good as when new. Wm. Madison, head gardener for J. T. Cleveland.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction.
WM. MCCABE,
Head gardener for C. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley

There is no need to send your mowers to any factory while Carney Bros. are here. They understand the mower.
HENRY HALL, landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish.
PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Mc'ee

The above are just a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers in our care, and it shall be our endeavor to succeed and every mower home in near right order. Don't forget the number, 24, as we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the most obedient servants,

WOMEN AND MEDICINE.

MEDICAL PROFESSION THOUGHT TO BE THE BEST FOR THEM.

An Interview with Dr. E. B. Voorhies, of New York, One of the Pioneer Students in the Study of Love That Govern the Body—Prejudice an Obstacle.

The marriage question recently discussed by medical women in its bearing upon emancipation of women has brought out expressions of thought upon the subject from many who did not at first put themselves on record. Among these is Mrs. E. B. Voorhies, whose long medical experience has covered the period of the rise and progress of the woman physician from the time when she was a small and comparatively unwelcome factor until now, when she is an acknowledged and valued power in the social and professional economy of modern life.

Several years ago Mrs. Voorhies was the cause of stimulating official inquiry into the abuses practiced against the Aleut women, and recent reforms in Alaska are directly due to her efforts. But although she is an earnest friend and partisan of women, her aversion to any sort of public appearance is so well known that her friends held out small encouragement that she would give an opinion.

Therefore it is with considerable misgiving that I sit down in the handsome drawing room and await the coming of the typical medical woman.

Presently there enters a beautiful old lady wearing a soft, white gown, with a little blue shawl folded across her shoulders—quite evidently a grandmother. A woman whose presence is so sweet that one forgets how fine and commanding it is also.

This curious, winning personal charm is notable because it must have been a most important factor in the success this remarkable woman has achieved in her profession.

THE WORK OF SOCIETY WOMEN.

The same questions which have already been asked, to wit: "Should women physicians marry?" and "Is it possible to fulfill the duties of wife and mother and at the same time attend to the demands of a medical practice?" are propounded, and the answer comes promptly:

"Well, judging by my own experience, I should say 'Yes.'

"I have been able to keep house for many years and look closely after home interests besides receiving a goodly number of professional calls every day. I see no reason why a woman, married or single, if she is willing to devote herself to her home and her profession, may not make home happy and herself independent, be of more value to her own family, to other homes and to the world at large than the society woman who spends her afternoons calling, driving and shopping, her evenings at dinners, theaters, operas and late suppers, her mornings in bed or at the dressmaker's, leaving servants to run her house and to ruin her husband into debt." I hear more groanings and lamentations from society women over the ending and beginning and a family than from any other class."

"Then you are in favor of a profession for women?"

"That is another question, but I am. And I also think medicine is her best field of usefulness, although a good many incline to the law and the church. Of course preaching is ever easier than practice, and looking after the soul is much less tron ble than curing for the body. The three professions are all good for women if they are endowed with an aptitude for either, and there is no reason why they should not succeed there as well as men.

WOMAN'S GREATEST OBSTACLE.

"The worst obstacle in their path will be the prejudice of the men and the opposition of a few members of the profession, but no matter how high opposition and prejudice mount they will be surmounted in the end. Every woman who obtains, relives for one of her sex who is oppressed and wronged vindicates her right to be a rescuer; every woman preacher who stands as a star in the firmament of her rejoicing; every woman doctor who cures a patient whom a man doctor has failed to relieve scores a triumph for every other woman in the profession."

"That is a triumph that has probably often been repeated in your experience, Mrs. Voorhies?"

"Yes, and I have seen a great deal of suffering in my day. So much that I wonder any can doubt that 'it is better to be dead than to live.' I have lived in fifty-four winters in this cold world, and for thirty years I have practiced medicine in New York city, but my cared patients are all the green world over hens of me, for I have never in my life put up a sign of my calling. All the advertising I crave is given in the gratitude, confidence and love of my patients."

"These years must have shown you great changes in the status of women physicians?"

"Wonderful changes, indeed," was the reply. "When a small band of women students were first admitted to the clinics at Bellevue hospital their appearance was invariably hailed by hisses and groans from the gentlemen. This was early in the sixties. Professor Ward was dean of the college and did his best for us, but many of the professors in Bellevue were with the opposition, and we had a hard road to travel.

WHEN THE CHANGE CAME.

"Finally the columns of The Times and Tribune were opened for the discussion and discussion of these abuses, which were then abated. But lady doctors were looked upon with distrust. A stirring command and a certain number of the shudder were the popular accompaniment to any allusion to them. And men did all they could to hinder the spread of a movement which has won the gratitude of millions of afflicted women. Well, the students who hissed in those days are practicing now, and many of them are among my best patients, their friends and their families to me for treatment.

"Thirty years ago there were, I believe, three women physicians in New York; now there are hundreds. If you want to know how highly they are esteemed, why not inquire of the ladies who gladly seek their ministrations? Men doctors now recognize our usefulness to women. Physicians in various parts of the country send their patients to me, and one very eminent doctor in this city has sent my over 2,000 cases—ladies of the families in which he practiced, who prefer to be treated by one of their own sex.—New York World.

When Miss. Periergin finished the last portrait that was painted of Von Moltke she received from him the complimentary assurance that it was the best portrait that had yet been completed. When she said to him that she was proud to have been allowed to put such apiece of the history of the world on her canvas, the great general replied with Old World courtesy, "And I, madame, assist in the work a piece of the history of art."

College Girls as Wives and Mothers.

College training for girls, being a progressive movement, naturally has its opponents. Many of these disapprove of it because, as they say, education unsexes her; it will unfit women for the homely duties of wife and mother and fasten them to lives of professional drudgery. It is also asserted by some that the college girl spends so much time with the books that she will be receiving attentions that would lead to matrimony, and that when she graduates she is a little passe.

These objections are the result of ignorance, for it is a well known fact that since the establishment of the colleges for women it is found that they can be prepared for them in the same time that men give to such preparation, and this is no longer in the case of a bright girl than she used to devote to preliminary work for the seminary course, which was considered the proper thing for girls. Mrs. Frances Fisher Wood, herself a graduate of Vassar, a trustee of Wellesley and a writer and thinker of note, has been moved by the facts and figures showing the qualifications of college girls to make certain investigations into the after life of the college graduate. She finds that they excel as home makers, and especially noted for their system and executive ability.

They are generally leaders in social and benevolent enterprises. She also discovers by careful inquiry and consultation of statistics, that nine-tenths of the children of college women survive infancy, a greater proportion than found in any other class.—New York Ledger.

Nick Cavanaugh's Occupation.

Miss Margaret Cavanaugh, a Harlem girl, is conducting an upholstery business established by her deceased mother a generation ago. She has among her patrons many of the best and wealthiest families in New York. Miss Cavanaugh has neither a shop nor a stock. She has, however, something vastly better than either—good taste, experience and good taste. She is as authority on drapery and an excellent judge of stuffs, tapestries and woods. Her method is to go to a house by appointment, look at the work to be done, and put a value on her services for the contract. This agreed upon, she produces a book of samples, from which she selects the goods which has won the gratitude of millions of afflicted women. Well, the students who hissed in those days are practicing now, and many of them are among my best patients, their friends and their families to me for treatment.

"Thirty years ago there were, I believe, three women physicians in New York; now there are hundreds. If you want to know how highly they are esteemed, why not inquire of the ladies who gladly seek their ministrations? Men doctors now recognize our usefulness to women. Physicians in various parts of the country send their patients to me, and one very eminent doctor in this city has sent my over 2,000 cases—ladies of the families in which he practiced, who prefer to be treated by one of their own sex.—New York World.

Things Worth Knowing.

There are some things that the average woman does not always find out, and it is just as well to let her know once in a while in this.

Moire is different from watered silk, the waves of the first being smaller than those of the second.

That bengaline has the effect of a coarse gros grain, but as if the cord had not been inserted.

That surah is a soft silk, the threads of which mingle rather than look straight, as they do in most other silks.

That soleing is a general term for all wool fabrics.

That olive is a green, just the color of olives.

That bellstrope is an Irish bull, being a deep blue rather than the bellstrope itself.

That fashion is the proper name for any fitted covering worn above the waist.

That the word "waist," as it is frequently used, is by many writers results the story of the American woman credited with going to an English tailor and asking him if her waist would be ready by fall. The tailor, with a low bow, promised to the English shopkeeper and said, "Madam, there is no doubt that your bodice will be sent to you before the autumn!"—New York Sun.

How to Sew Wounds.

In small wounds a bit of rag will keep the pieces of cut skin close together, but in larger wounds the edges must be mechanically brought together. Some do this by means of sticking plaster, but more satisfactory results are got by putting in a few stitches. Any one with a little nerve can put stitches into the edges of a wound. Bring them together, and keep them in contact by tying the thread.

An ordinary needle will do; thread it with silk, pass through a piece of skin for one or two old, outside of the wound and about one-twelfth of an inch from its edge, draw the thread partly through, then pierce the skin of the opposite edge of the wound inside of the wound, bring the two edges together, tie the thread with two or three knots, and the operation is complete. Put the stitches about a quarter of an inch apart, and sew up all the wound.

Use a clean needle, uncolored silk thread, and dip them into boiling water before using.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Blindness in New Born Infants.

There are, says Mr. H. Snell, ophthalmic surgeon to the Sheffield General Infirmary, and to the Institution for the Blind, few things more sad in my experience than to witness infants only a week or two old, under my treatment, with one or both eyes either already lost or irreparably damaged. Nor is this feeling rendered less by the reflection that this disease which has led to such dire results could have been in the first instance prevented, or, if that opportunity had passed, timely treatment would have brought about a recovery of sight.

A card bearing the following caution has been distributed among parents bringing children to the general infirmary: "Important—If a baby's eyes run with matter and look red a few days after birth, take it at once to a doctor. Delay is dangerous, and one or both eyes may be destroyed if not treated immediately."

Why Girls Cannot Throw.

The difference between a girl's throwing and a boy's is substantially this: The boy crooks his elbow and reaches back with the upper part of his arm about at right angles with his body and the forearm at forty-five degrees. The act of throwing is accomplished by bringing the arm back with a long, working sweep from the shoulder to wrist. The girl throws with her whole arm rigid, the boy with his whole arm relaxed. This one trifling seeming difference may be explained by the fact that the clavicle or collar bone in the female anatomy is some inches longer and much more outward curved than the masculine frame. The long, crooked, awkward bone interferes with the full and free use of the arm. This is the reason why a girl cannot throw a stone.—Chicago Mail.

How Sandoni Is Made.

Sandoni is composed of castile soap, 1½ drams; glycerine, ½ dram; alcohol, 1 ounce; soft water, 4 ounces; and oil of wintergreen, anise or cinnamon for flavoring. The accompanying powder is composed of equal parts of prepared chalk, orris root and carbonate of magnesia.

How to Eat Cucumbers.

Cucumbers should never be eaten without vinegar and pepper. Otherwise the large quantity of woody fiber contained in them would create indigestion and fermentation. Oil and salt should not be used. They render cucumbers unwholesome. But here is an excellent way to eat them: Peel, then cut into slices lengthways; sprinkle both sides with corn meal, pepper and salt, and fry them brown. Cucumbers treated in this way make a delicious dish.

How to Use Coal.

Many a housekeeper complains that the coal supplied to her cellar is of different qualities. But here is an excellent way to eat them: Peel, then cut into slices lengthways; sprinkle both sides with corn meal, pepper and salt, and fry them brown. Cucumbers treated in this way make a delicious dish.

How Waves Are Calmed by Oil.

Owing to its inferior specific gravity oil forms a floating film, which defends the surface of the water from contact with the currents of air, and the friction between the winds and the waves is greatly diminished, in the same manner that the friction between solids is by application of oils.

How to Strengthen the Eyes.

A simple and excellent plan to preserve and strengthen the eyes is this: Every morning pour some cold water into your washing bowl; at the bottom of the bowl place a silver coin or other bright object; then put your face into the water with the eyes open and fixed on the object at the bottom; move your head from side to side gently, and you will find that this morning bath will make your eyes brighter and stronger and preserve them beyond the ordinary allotted time.

How to Make Hens Lay in Winter.

Mix a portion of minced meat every day with their other food, and see that they have plenty of gravel, old plastering or powdered egg shells to peck among. The latter may also be mixed with their food.

How to Remove Ink Stains.

Lemon juice readily removes ink from the hands. Diluted spirits of nitre, applied with a feather, takes ink spots from mahogany, which should be rubbed over immediately with a rag dipped in cold water, or a white mark will be left. Ink spots in linens fabrics should be wet with milk and covered with common salt before the articles are washed. Another way to take out ink is to dip the spots in melted tallow. Ink stains may be taken out of boxwood, ivory or bone by a little salt of lemon. Almost every acids, acetic acid or tartaric acid and hot water. All strong acids, however, injure the fabric, and the spots should be well rinsed in cold water after they are used.

How to Relieve Rheumatic Pains.

Lime or lemon juice, used in liberal quantities, frequently relieves the paroxysms of rheumatism. One noted physician claims that by the persistent use of this simple acid for three days (all stimulating liquids being avoided) the most confirmed rheumatism will relax and the tone of the muscular and nervous system be restored to its usual character. Another simple remedy is to bathe the parts affected with water, in which potatoes have been boiled, as hot as can be borne previous to retiring. Obstinate cases have yielded to this simple treatment.

How to Cure Warts.

Touch the wart daily with a little lunar caustic or with nitric acid or aromatic vinegar. The caustic and acids cause stains, which wear off in a short time; the vinegar scarcely discolors the skin. Applying the warts to the conductor of an electrical machine for several days in succession will also remove warts.

How to Purify Water.

A saturated solution of permanganate of potassa will speedily cleanse foul water. About a teaspoonful to a hogshead should be used. Another method is to put a tablespoonful of pulverized alum into a hogshead of water and stir the water well. The impurities fall to the bottom and the water will soon possess nearly all the clearness and freshness of the finest spring water.

How to Play Baccarat.

The dealer and each side of the table have two or three cards. The object is to get as near nine as possible, and tens and court cards do not count. If the two first cards dealt do not together amount to five the player asks for another. If above five he does not. The sole question in doubt is whether a player whose two cards together make five ought to draw a third card or not. Because of this doubt French courts have ruled that baccarat is not a game of chance.

How to Preserve Milk and Cream.

Put the milk or cream into bottles and place them in a saucepan with cold water, which rise gradually to the boiling point. Then take from the fire and cork instantly. Again raise the milk to a boiling point for half a minute, and let the bottles cool in the water in which they were boiled. Milk thus treated will remain perfectly good for six months.

HER MISDIRECTED SYMPATHY.

The Reward of a Good Natured Woman Who Was Impulsive.

She was one of those impulsively kind hearted women who extend their sympathy to everybody and to everything that they think needs it, whether it is invited or not. She sat in one of the cross seats of an elevated train the other day, and opposite her sat two women. an umbrella leaned up against the seat between these two, and the two women both in now numbers of popular magazines.

The sympathetic woman was talking of an umbrella she had recently lost by leaving it in the car. She had gone down to the place where such lost articles are stored to reclaim it, but it was not there. The disappointment she felt in not finding it there, however, had been dwarfed by the sorrow she experienced when she saw the rows on rows of other lost articles which their owners had not come to reclaim. She pictured to herself in vivid colors all the tears and regrets that that great array of lost articles represented, and she almost wept herself.

All she was telling all this to her companion one of the women opposite got up and left the car. The umbrella was left behind, and the sympathetic woman saw at a glance that another loss was about to overtake her very eyes. She thought of calling the forgetful woman back, but she was already out on the platform of the car beyond hearing. She thought then of taking care of the umbrella herself and advertising for the owner. She was then on guard would keep the umbrella himself or some dishonest person would claim it and take it away.

But then if she should take it herself people might think she, too, wanted to steal it. That would be horrible. But what was she to do? If somebody had put himself out a little on her account she would not have lost her umbrella. Now here was an opportunity to do a kind act, and prevent another woman from a similar loss, and she could not make up her mind just what way to do about it. How provoking!

Just then a brilliant idea flashed across her mind. The woman was on the station platform now, and the car window was open. The train was moving on by this time, but in the twinkling of an eye the sympathetic woman had grabbed the umbrella, thrown it out upon the station platform, and with her head out of the window was calling and gesticulating wildly to the astonished woman at whose feet the umbrella had fallen.

She was rudely recalled by a nervous hand clutching her arm and a feminine voice shouting in her ear: "How dare you throw my umbrella out of the window, you horrid creature! I'll have you arrested!"

It was the other woman.—New York Tribune.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, JUNE 30, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

"The News" for the Summer.

Parties leaving town for the Summer may have THE NEWS mailed to them without extra charge. The address will be changed as often as desired.

—The guests at Hotel Netherwood will indulge in a full dress dance next Saturday evening.

—A tally-ho party from Short Hills dined at the Albion yesterday. The members were bound for Normandie-by-the-Sea.

—Mr. Louis Callman to dispose of the balance of his stock will auction it off as advertised. It will be an opportunity for bargains.

—The time draws near for those to prepare who are going on the First Baptist Church excursion to Belmar. Advertisement gives particulars.

—The members of Engine Company No. 3, will resurrect their old cannon next Friday evening and will usher in the glorious Fourth by firing salutes.

—A young man named H. M. Coward had his hand badly cut while at work in the Potter Press Works Sunday evening. The wounds were dressed at the Muhlenberg Hospital.

—A meeting of the Young Peoples Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will be held in the lecture room of the chapel to-night at eight o'clock.

—The case of Charles Lyman vs. Levi Hetfield is being tried this afternoon before Justice Nash. Mr. Lyman brought suit to collect per centages which he says is due him for leasing certain stores and houses belonging to Mr. Hetfield.

—Mrs. Gable requests us to deny the statement published in The New York World of this morning to the effect that the money which was stolen from her Saturday night had been given her by her husband. She says she realized the sum from the sale of her furniture.

—A fancy fair in aid of St. Joseph's Church will open in Saenger and Turner Hall, Sept. 7th, and continue each evening to Sept. 12th. Many valuable and useful articles will be disposed of. Contestants are already in the field for gold watches, a girl's tricycle, and a first-class bicycle. The fair will be duly advertised.

—A learned New York physician has just made public his opinion that there is nothing in the weather or the atmosphere that should prevent muzzles on dogs. It may be remarked, incidentally that neither is there anything in the weather that should prevent five hundred Flemington dogs from wearing muzzles over their ugly snouts, but they don't wear them just the same.—Flemington Democrat.

—Recently a card was published in our daily cotemporary purporting to be signed by Policemen Kiely and Giese, in which they were made to appear as saying that they knew that Councilmen Smith and Rosbergberg were visiting boulevard saloons in their interest. The policemen say that such a card was presented to them, but they refused to sign it, denouncing the publication as a forgery. We know nothing about the card referred to, not having seen it, and make this denial at the policemen's request.

—In planning for the Summer vacation there is something more important to be considered than the mere cessation of work or study or even than change of scene. The vacation should be so planned that it will give real recuperation to mind and muscle, instead of affording opportunity for leisure and dissipation. It is just as easy, in fact easier, to make the vacation harmful instead of beneficial. To the tired denizen of the city quietness and absence from care amid pleasant rural surroundings is probably as conducive to a desirable result as any mode of spending the vacation that could be found.

PERSONAL.

Ex-Mayor J. H. Van Winkle and bride have returned to this city from their wedding trip.

Messrs. James and John Browman of this city are registered at the Brunswick, Asbury Park.

Mrs. F. C. Langhorne and daughters of Putnam avenue are guests at the Atlantic Hotel, Asbury Park.

Mrs. F. A. Pope, Mrs. J. A. Smith and Miss C. C. Knight are at the Garmarey House, Asbury Park.

Mr. Henry R. Newbald and family of Scranton will spend the month of July at Lake Placid, N. Y.

County Clerk Leonard A. Giegerich of New York entertained a number of his friends yesterday at a reception tendered in honor of the birthday anniversary of his wife and father. Several Plainfielders were present. Yesterday was also the anniversary of the death of his mother.

Among the notices in the last number of The Illustrated American, entitled "Women" and edited by Mary L. Bisland appears the following: In the private New Jersey town of Plainfield lives Mrs. Bret Harte, wife of the novelist, with her handsome young daughter Jessamy. Mr. Harte has become a devoted lover of England, where he spends the larger half of his time, but his wife will not resign her allegiance to her own country, and so remains on this side to educate and bring up to young ladyhood their only child.

THE SCAFFOLD ACCIDENT.

The Burial of the Victims.—No Inquest to be Held.

County Physician Westcott of Panwood on investigating the matter of the accident at the Worthington Pump Works at Elizabeth decided that a coroner's inquest would not reveal anything of interest. It was apparent that the scaffold was ordinarily built and the breaking was due to overweighting it by the hod carriers. He gave permit for the burial of Williams and Nolan.

The bodies of these unfortunates enclosed in neat coffins were side by side in Dunning's undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon. The women at whose houses the men boarded, and several of their fellow workmen, looked upon the faces of the dead men and spoke kindly of them.

Gored by a Cow.

Willie Smalley, the eleven-year-old grandson of Peter Brown, of Yoseller Avenue, Bound Brook, is lying at his grandfather's home from injuries inflicted by a vicious cow. Sunday he was sent to bring the cow from the pasture, where it was tethered by a long rope. A few minutes later his terrifying screams aroused the members of the family, who rushed to the front porch just as the cow came tearing down the road, dragging the boy after her. The lad had tied the rope about his body. Jacob Smalley and John Body, two farm hands, headed off the infuriated animal and when it turned upon the boy with a vicious lunge, and before the men could prevent it gored him frightfully. The cow seemed possessed with a fiendish desire to kill the little fellow, and for a while it seemed as if the object would be accomplished. The farm hands finally drove it away, but not until the lad's body was a mass of bloody wounds. His scalp was badly torn. Drs. Matthews and Phinney say he may possibly live.

Bad Legislation.

Our last Legislature was one of the best examples of a careless and practically-bad body which New Jersey ever had. In all directions, on all sorts of bills, there were such little deceptions, frauds, misfulfillments of promises, that it is only necessary to puncture the record anywhere to discover this fact. It extended to what people look upon as trifling matters as well as leading, public ones. Perhaps in the matter of excise board legislation, the creation of officers, the removal of several judges and so on it was to have been expected that the hand of Ishmael should be laid on everything good, or fixed, but in small things one would suppose the committees and members would act sensibly and with a knowledge of what they did. On the contrary of the nearly three hundred acts passed there are scores which change laws as even their introducers can not explain, which will require repealing or re-enacting in better form next year.—Trenton Times.

Five Buildings Burned.

Two large barns, with their contents, and seven small buildings were burned yesterday at Piscataway town. The fire was started by sparks from a wood fire in the house of Elston Mundy. Mr. Mundy's barn was burned. The sparks were carried nearly a quarter of a mile and communicated to the barn of Millsord W. Martin, which, with all its contents, and three smaller buildings, were burned to the ground. The loss is about $2,000.

The loss on the buildings is estimated at about $1,000. There is some insurance but how much is not known. as Mr. Thomas, the owner, is away. The insurance on the contents was $688, besides $200 on a horse and wagon, which were out at the time of the fire. Mr. Martin on Saturday had brought in three acres of hay, which were licked up by the flames; his insurance by no means covers the loss. Mr. Mundy's loss on the building is large.

A Casino for Westfield.

The Westfield Investment and Improvement company filed articles of incorporation here yesterday with the Clerk of Union county. The object of the company is to build a handsome casino and music hall at Westfield, something after the fashion of the Union County Country Club. The incorporators are Martin Wells, Jonathan H. Vail, William G. Delamater, Thomas Bloodgood, Charles F. Oxley, Nathaniel B. Gardner, Alexander S. Clark, Charles B. Peddie and Luther M. Whitaker.

Stalled the Trains For Miles.

A loaded scow collided with the draw of the Newark Bay bridge on the Jersey shore at Elizabethport yesterday, and travel was blocked several hours. Trains were sent out by way of Newark. The draw was thrown off its bearings. The boat was not much injured. The Philadelphia express, due in at Elizabeth at 10:45, did not get there until 1 p. m., owing to the accident. Trains were stalled along the road for miles.

Base Ball.

The Crescents will cross bats with the Phillipsburg team on the Fourth of July morning and with the Flushings in the afternoon. Both teams are said to be strong and the managers say a good game may be looked for. The general admission to the grounds has been reduced to fifteen cents.

—Judge Codington fined Gamey Nelson $1 this morning. He was charged with trespassing on coal cars. Four small boys who were charged with the same offence were discharged with a reprimand.

THAT LATEST SCHEME.

HOW THE COMBINE'S METHOD IS RIDICULED BY EXPERTS.

The Proposed Plainfield Sewerage Franchise Published Broadcast.—The Laughing Stock of the Country.

The Engineering Record, regarded as an authority on such subjects, has a page devoted to the sewerage franchise which the combine is trying to foist on the city of Plainfield. It gives the franchise in full with the following introduction:

THE PLAINFIELD SEWERAGE FRANCHISE.

The following is the form of the proposed franchise offered by the City Council of Plainfield, N. J., and now under consideration locally. As a specimen of how not to embark in such an undertaking it is suggestive. In many of our readers the absence of vital provisions to protect even both parties to it will be obvious. A further discussion of the various phases of such a contract is left to our readers.

It then editorially comments as follows:

THE PLAINFIELD SEWERAGE FRANCHISE.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., by the action of its City Council, proposes to undertake the experiment of having the town provide with a sewerage system on what is termed the franchise plan. Six members out of eleven of the Council have voted to grant a franchise, without competition, to certain parties, who propose to organize a company to construct and maintain a sewerage system for the period of fifty years, the city to have the privilege to buy the system at expiration of twelve years, at a price to be agreed on by arbitration.

THE ENGINEERING RECORD, in its issues of April 5th and June 7th, 1890, discussed the system of sewerage known by what is known as the franchise plan, which in communities that cannot borrow money may prove of great benefit to the property owners directly and the community, providing certain principles of action are recognized and lived up to in practice. The franchise, or contract, is, however, ignores these. For the city of Plainfield no adequate plans or specifications have been submitted as a basis for the contract, nor is there any provision for the employment of a competent auditor or engineer to look after the city's interests in the matter of construction, and evidently none has been employed in its behalf in the preparation of this agreement of the Council, indicating gross ignorance if not corrupt intent on their part.

For the contractor, such a contract as is proposed offers no inducements to the prudent investor, for he will understand the nature of the undertaking and what will be needed to make it if not a commercial success at least a fair risk.

Plainfield is an attractive suburb of New York, with a population which includes a large number of intelligent and well-to-do spirited citizens. These people are not likely to submit to allow the city to be burdened with an inadequate and poorly constructed sewerage system, and any attempt, therefore, to carry out the Council's proposed agreement will result in litigation and delay. Should the pipes be laid in certain streets, there is nothing in the franchise to prevent property owners not built its own sewers, she should at least make such a contract as will secure, under proper conditions, an adequate system of sewerage removal and disposal, and for this service a compensation and protection to the contractor that will be reasonable. While this enlargement gives us the facilities for the new phases of work, it also affords us more plain class room accommodation."

"Would it be advisable to have more students in the Normal School?"

"That's a question that may be answered from two standpoints. If you mean is it advisable to have more persons trained pedagogically, for me answer in the affirmative would seem like one in New Castle advising people to use more coal; but if you mean is there a demand for more teachers with Normal training, I answer yes. The Normal School at this time is not able to supply more than one-half the direct calls upon it, and yet a very large portion of the employes of the State do not apply directly to the school for teachers."

"What will be necessary in order that more students may be admitted to the school?"

"It will be necessary to change the law."

"How would you have the law changed?"

"Personally I have no suggestion. This is not a personal matter with me. I am simply here to carry, as an executive officer, the rules of the Legislature through the Board. Of course, if the Legislature want more students, it is only necessary to provide that there be more students allowed for each representative."

Our Horses and Roadways.

In America we have sought to improve the horse and paid little attention to the roadways on which the horse has to travel. Poor streets and roads wear out horses and impair their usefulness. It is said that a horse in England does twice as much work as a horse similarly employed in this Country, and the explanation given is that the Englishman has invested in perfect and permanent roadways what the American has expended in perishable horses that require to be fed. A mile of good road is more economically supported than one poor horse.

We are gradually waking up to this truth, and improving our streets and roadways. Comfort, pleasure, health and economy are all involved in the question. A badly paved city is undesirable for residence for various reasons. The wear and tear on various vehicles alone amounts annually to more than the interest on the sum that would be required for good pavements. In the country the farmer is most seriously handicapped than any one. His horses are disabled and he is cut off from markets that he might otherwise reach if the roads were in good condition.—Newark Journal.

STATE EDUCATIONAL NEWS.

Principal Green, of the State Schools, Explains an Important Act of the State Board.

[From the Trenton True American.]

Of interest throughout the State will be the following resolutions, now for the first time published, adopted by the State Board of Education:

1st. Beyond Dec. 31st, 1891, and after this date all examinations for State certificates (Rules and Regulations for the Government of School Officers, Sec. 9) shall be conducted by the State Board of Examiners, subject to the following regulations:

1st. Two such examinations and only two, shall be held annually in the city of Trenton, beginning on the first Tuesday of June and December respectively.

2d. These examinations shall be public, and all questions used shall be approved formerly by each member of the Board of Examiners.

3d. The results of such examinations shall be reported to the Committee on Examinations at its next meeting.

4th. When State certificates are rejected by the State Board of Examiners, the fact and reasons shall be reported to the Committee on Education at its next meeting.

2d. Resolved, That in admitting students to the Normal School, where there are more applicants for admission than there are vacancies, under section 55 of the school law, preference be given respectively to graduates of High School on approved list, persons holding teachers licenses, persons holding county certificates, persons entertained under entrance examination.

Yesterday a True American reporter found Principal Green at the State School and asked him the purport of the resolutions.

He replied: "The first four were intended to give diffuiteness as to time and manner granting State licenses. Hitherto the examinations have been arranged to accommodate applicants, but the duties are such as to render it necessary that specified times be appointed in order that the examiners may be spared so much special work.

"The last resolution," continued Principal Green, "is made necessary by the fact that there are more applicants for admission to the Normal School than can be admitted under the law. Section 55 of the school law provides that the number of pupils in the Normal School shall not exceed two for each member of the Senate and General Assembly. Under this law of course, there can be but 248 students in the school. Previous to this year, the number of applicants has never exceeded the limit, but at present there are about 320 old students who intend returning in the Fall, hence there can be but forty new students admitted. Already there are about thirty applicants, and some process of preferring applicants must be adopted. That is the object of the last resolution.

"Can the Normal School accommodate more students than the law permits?"

"It can. In order to apply some phases of work necessary to the development of our school, we were recently obliged to enlarge our school building. While this enlargement gives us the facilities for the new phases of work, it also affords us more plain class room accommodation."

"Would it be advisable to have more students in the Normal School?"

"That's a question that may be answered from two standpoints. If you mean is it advisable to have more persons trained pedagogically, for me answer in the affirmative would seem like one in New Castle advising people to use more coal; but if you mean is there a demand for more teachers with Normal training, I answer yes. "It will be necessary to change the law."

"How would you have the law changed?"

"Personally I have no suggestion. This is not a personal matter with me. I am simply here to carry, as an executive officer, the rules of the Legislature through the Board. Of course, if the Legislature want more students, it is only necessary to provide that there be more students allowed for each representative."

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A JEALOUS LOVER'S AWFUL DEED.

Shoots his Sweetheart Dead, and Commits Suicide.

LAWRENCE, Mass., June 30th. (Special.)—John Rafurch aged 24, called on his sweetheart, Sallie Burchard, aged 18, at the factory where she works, and after a few words with her drew a revolver and shot her through the heart, killing her instantly.

He then committed self-murder by shooting himself through the head.

Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause of this double murder.

Both bore excellent reputations.

A NIGHT'S WORK FOR NOTHING.

Robbers Find it Poor Paying Business Robbing Bordentown Stores.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., June 30th. (Special.)—The stores of a prosperous flour and feed firm—Wm. R. Blimm & Co.—were entered by robbers last evening. The stores were rifled and the safe-door drilled and blown open.

All the money had been deposited last night and except for a few dollars worth of goods the thieves got nothing.

The damage done the safe will be the greatest loss.

NOT LIKE THE NOVELS HAVE IT.

Real Life as Seen by a Runaway Girl.

NEW YORK, June 30, (Special).—The police early this morning found an exhausted and homesick maiden of 17 years, wandering about, and took her in charge.

Her name is Mary Smith and she lives at Arlington, N. J., and ran away a few days ago to "see the world."

She hadn't seen much, but had seen enough, and was anxious to get home.

Her parents were notified.

Tickets-of-Leave.

Some extra work is imposed upon the Court of Pardons by the new law, authorizing it to grant tickets-of-leave to convicts in the prisons of the State. The big State institution contains close to a thousand prisoners, and fully one-third of them are seeking their release, now that a way of getting out—without breaking out—has been established. The prisoner's application to the court of parole must show, among a lot of other things, that somebody in the State will employ him after he is set free, and that he is set free, and that the convict will obey the rule which requires him to report to the authorities periodically concerning his whereabouts, condition, etc.

Almost any prisoner can get somebody to swear he will employ him, and everyone of them, without exception, will promise to report to the authorities faithfully, and those being among the main essentials to procure freedom, every convict imagines his chances for release to be about the number who can get out under parole will really always be comparatively few, still there is much work put upon the worthies of the law. It was intended for the benefit of minor offenders, but so far murderers principally have profited by the act. The doors of the Trenton prison have been opened to four or five of them.

Among those who are seeking a pardon are:

William Haddock in self defence, threw a fist-iron at Matt. Dugan, and the man died from his injuries. Haddock got five years for the crime. He was foreman in the State Gazette composing room for twenty years, and will probably get back to his position, if the efforts of his friends to secure his release are successful. Haddock is not yet 35, but since his trouble has become old and broken. There was never murder in his heart, and he has suffered all that a man of keen sensibility endures in his position. Prison Keeper Patterson will recommend the granting of Haddock's petition.

Among the other applicants for pardon is Horace Van Nest, the only one of the three, who was sentenced at the same time, was pardoned after serving thirteen months, and three of the two-boys died in prison. Horace Van Nest still protests his innocence, and, as he has a strong petition, is hoping for favorable action by the Court.

The Toy Pistol.

The near approach of the day which arouses young America's patriotism, warrants us in uttering a word of caution about the deadly toy pistol. There is a law against the sale of these dangerous playthings, but it is disregarded by many dealers in such goods in various parts of the State, and hence we find that the toy pistol is sold with impunity, and in defiance is found in the hands of scores of children on the Fourth. Parents should, for the sake of their children, see that the law is respected.

And another exceedingly dangerous Fourth of July explosive is the mammoth fire-cracker which contains a small pinch of dynamite. These rascals go off with the force of a field cannon and with as great a report.

—The borough Council will hold its regular monthly meeting Friday evening at eight o'clock.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—This morning City Judge Codington sentenced a man who was last night arrested for drunkenness, to ten days in the county jail.

To Make a Speech.

All the world wants to know how to make speeches, particularly short extempore addresses. Colonel Higginson has for one of his rules this. Never carry a scrap of paper before an audience. There is no doubt that a speech, less at least half by being read. When a speaker is reading his manuscript he has no chance to fix the audience with his eye and thus control it. A speech, however, needs none the less careful preparation because it is to be spoken. On the contrary, it needs more.

There is no such thing as really extempore speaking. The only way to get a reputation for it is to be always ready. When you expect to speak, prepare your remarks very carefully beforehand. Sit down quietly and preach it all over to yourself. Do this several times if you are a novice. Put down nothing on paper beyond the mere heads and make them very short. Then, when you are called, rise and say what you can remember of the brilliant oration you had all prepared in your mind. You will probably forget half of it or more at first, but your audience will not know that. Wendell Phillips said he never made a speech in his life that he did not forget and leave out the best points in it, and if that was the case with him, others need not be discouraged. It is better to leave out some than to read your speech from paper. As you progress you will find that you forget less and less.

Professor Churchill, of Andover Theological seminary, gives some valuable suggestions on public speaking, as follows:

As you rise to speak cast your eyes easily over the audience for a few seconds, then fix them upon the farthest auditors directly in front of you, and begin to speak in a pleasant tone of voice and with an easy naturalness of manner.

Regulate the "pitch" and "force" of voice by actually talking to your farthest auditors. The introductory matter should be delivered as if conversing with people at that distance. At the opening of your address you do not need to attempt anything more than to make the most distant listeners hear you distinctly and without effort on their part. In order to do this:

Exercise deliberately—that is, take sufficient time to utter every syllable that a correct standard of pronunciation demands should be enunciated. The great Mrs. Siddons' prime rule was, "Take time." Be especially careful to "take time" during the delivery of the first half dozen sentences. This one characteristic of good speaking in the introductory matter is deficient, and all your success will depend upon starting right.

Act quite as natural, be yourself at your best —that is, talk to your audience in your own way, only with the increased earnestness that arises from your deep interest in the subject and your desire to secure the same interest in them. The effect which comes from the reflex influence of the sympathetic attention of the audience is very powerful.

The perfection of public speaking is the perfection of talking to people earnestly. It is the tone and manner of good conversation raised to its highest power.

A Child's Death.

In a neighboring city lived a six-year-old boy, who was the picture of happiness and rosy health. He had never been ill a day in his life, and was of a nature so sunny and merry that he was remarkable. One day his mother went home and found him deathly pale and sobbing and catching his breath. He sprang toward her with a scream, and buried his face in her garments. From that day the little child never laughed again. He grew paler and thinner and pined away. He seemed to be overcome by some nameless terror, which he could not explain. His parents only knew that it was with him night and day, like a horror that froze his poor baby brain. At last the little boy died, and physicians could find no other cause for his death than that commonly used to cover a great many things, "heart failure."

The fact cannot be denied. This sweet, gentle, merry child, beginning life with as fair prospect as a boy could have of living to be a noble, honorable man, was frightened to death. During his mother's absence he had been playing as usual on the sidewalk near his home. Some older boys, twelve and fifteen, who, it is certainly to be hoped, knew not what they did, gathered around the child and began to torture him with stories of ghosts and blood curdling stories, and made awful threats of what they were going to do with him. The innocent child believed every word. It threw him into convulsions and turned his brain, and so he died, frightened to death by that fearful cruelty boys are wont to practice toward those younger than themselves.

There is much in that expression "in touch." Insects communicate by touching one another's feelers. Who knows what volumes of conversation pass between horses or cattle that stand and rub their noses together? If you want to progress, keep in touch with the times. If you want to influence those around you for good, put yourself in touch with them. If they know you are in sympathy with them you can move them almost at will.

Edward Atkinson predicts that the southeastern portion of the United States will become the most prosperous place on this continent. Moreover, a large part of this region is still practically unoccupied. There is room here for thousands of energetic young men to go in and make their fortunes. Here are mineral, manufacturing and agricultural facilities unsurpassed.

WANAMAKER IS WILLING

Ready to Testify Upon Twenty-four Hours' Notice.

AN ATTACK UPON SENATOR QUAY.

Many Prominent Philadelphia Republicans Think That His Leadership Is "Unscrupulous in Its Methods and Disastrous in Its Results."

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—The Bardsley investigating committee resumed its sittings and examined a number of witnesses. A communication was received from Postmaster General Wanamaker in which he offered to appear before the committee at any time upon twenty-four hours' notice, and a reply to the request made to Lawyer Robert Alexander asking that John Bardsley be again allowed to appear before the committee for examination was also received. Postmaster General Wanamaker's letter was as follows:

Mr. Wanamaker's Letter.

CHAIRMAN VAN OSTEN:

DEAR SIR—It seems to be thought by some that certain evidence offered in the last meeting of your committee is not in harmony with the testimony delivered by me when I appeared before you as a witness. I assume that your committee fully understand the matter. If, however, there is any explanation asked from me I will be glad at twenty-four hours' notice to meet any member of the committee and explain any point that I have made clear at any meeting of which I have notice.

Yours respectfully, JOHN WANAMAKER.

Bardsley Would Reply to Writing.

Lawyer Alexander's reply to the request of the committee to further question ex-City Treasurer John Bardsley was that his client would rely upon the writing to any question which might be sent to him in writing, and would in that way give the committee all the information in his power. As his client has been convicted, and practically convicted, he did not think it would be proper to allow him to appear in person before the committee.

The first witness examined by the committee was S. P. Durham, of Trenton, N. J., the president of the Mechanics' National bank of that city. He testified that H. Yard had been a depositor at his bank for nearly eighteen years.

The Wanamaker Bank Stock.

Certificate No. 490, for 200 shares of Keystone bank stock, issued to John Wanamaker and with the power of attorney signed by him, was placed in the bank by H. H. Yard.

It was placed there as collateral security for a loan, but President Durham declined to state the amount. Certificate No. 907 of Keystone bank stock, issued to A. L. Dingles, was also taken as collateral by the bank and money loaned to Yard. The officers of the bank themselves suggested that the stock be transferred and held in the name of Scudder and Durham, as they believed they would be better protected. He had no knowledge that Yard acted for anybody else. The money had not yet been paid although the bank had made a formal demand for it. The $20 millions had never in any way communicated with John Wanamaker in relation to the stock.

For Mr. Wanamaker's Accommodation.

Effingham P. Morris, president of the Girard Trust company, testified that the company had never loaned any money to John Bardsley or discounted notes for him. Certificate No. 230 standing in the Keystone bank stock had atone time been in the possession of the trust company, being a part of a lot of 1,000 shares on which the company loaned John Wanamaker money on March 3, 1886. The loan was called in on Oct. 24, 1889. His company loaned money to the Keystone bank on three occasions: Jan. 30, 1888; Nov. 10, 1890. The loan was made to President Marsh, who explained that it was for Wanamaker's accommodation. The trust company held security 1,461 shares of common and 243 shares of preferred stock of the Electric Trust company.

Howard Spencer Jones, to whose name some of the Wanamaker stock was transferred, testified that he had been in Wanamaker's employ for twenty-seven years. He said he knew nothing of the two certificates which stood in his name beyond the fact that he remembered signing the transfer at Wanamaker's request.

Rankin, in whose name some of the certificates were transferred, he said, was a youth employed in Wanamaker's office at one time. Asked if the heads of national banks and trust companies were also called, but they all testified that their institution had never made any loan to John Bardsley. Scudder had his paper or borrowed money from him.

Senator Quay Criticised.

An address to the citizens of Pennsylvania has been issued from 230 of Philadelphia's most influential business and professional men, all of whom are Republicans, to point out the causes of the degradation of public affairs in the State and the necessary steps toward improvement. Senator Quay's management of the Republican interests is criticised, and the necessary steps toward improvement. Senator Quay's management of the Republican interests is criticised, and the overwhelming majority of their constituents.

"These things," the address says, "have found a fitting culmination in the robbery of the people's treasury. As a party we cannot be called upon to nominate a state and city treasurer and an auditor general, to be killed, to be given to honest men or the party will meet with another defeat. In the presence of these facts Pennsylvania Republicans must not hesitate as to their duty or in doubt as to their course. It is a crisis, and it can only be met by the retirement of Mr. Quay from the supreme political leadership is necessary, and an unflinching demand must be made for the retirement of those men from the places which they have disgraced."

All persons throughout the state in sympathy with this movement are requested to address Lock box No. 783 Philadelphia postoffice. The appeal is signed by John H. Converse, George Burnham, John T. Bailey & Co., Ivy, Joseph May, Rev. Alexander Mackay-Smith, Richard Wright, Rev. Stephen W. Dana, D. D., James E. Rhoads, M. D., Henry Hartshorne, M. D., and others.

The Trial of Yard.

At the trial of Henry H. Yard for conspiracy with Bardsley and others to secure public moneys the question whether the subcommittee of Select had authority to subpœna Yard and whether he is compelled to answer its interrogatories was argued.

A NEW DISEASE FOR AMERICA.

Russian Jews Do Bring Who Have the Blackpox.

LONDON, June 30.—A Berlin dispatch says that considerable excitement prevails in that and other German cities over the appearance of a fatal disease known as blackpox among the Jewish refugees from Russia. The disease has already spread to German residents from the refugees, who say that the Jews cross over, and that great consternation is felt wherever it has made its appearance. The blackpox is said to be the result of the horrible squalor and filth in which many of the immigrants exist at home, and its breaking out is partly consequent on the privations to which they have been subjected. The German health authorities everywhere are keeping a vigilant lookout to prevent the spread of the disease from its immigrant victims, and, as far as possible, a quarantine is maintained until they are safely shipped to New York. At Hamburg and Bremen the immigrants are busily taught how to keep not to say anything about Russia on their arrival in America, but to claim that they were Austrian or German subjects. In this way they hope to escape the scrutiny likely to be bestowed on the Russian Jews.

Constitution of the People's Party.

MILWAUKEE, June 30.—The constitution and bylaws, as revised and changed by Secretary Schilling, of the new People's party, provides that any citizen may become a member by signing the declaration of principles and the platform of the national body and pledging himself to unqualifiedly support the principles so enunciated. Any member who makes a motion to indorse a candidate, or to enter into fusion with any other political party, shall immediately cease to be a member of the new party.

To Reinstate Nelson.

DENVER, June 30.—President Beaman, of the American Trotting association, will issue a circular to-day reinstating the great stallion Nelson and his owner on the tracks of that association. President Beaman says that there is no rule by which a man can be debarred from his track to win cash he has entered, although it may have been arranged beforehand for that horse to win the money. He also says that the manner in which Nelson was suspended was illegal. Nelson has the world's stallion record of 2:10¾.

No Jinrikshas for Chicago.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Assistant Secretary of State John W. Foster has directed that the two Japanese men imported by Mr. Wolf, of Chicago, must be returned to Japan. Mr. Wolf imported from Japan two vehicles known there as jinrikshas and two Japanese men to propel them by hand, his intention being to place them on the public parks of Chicago for the purpose of hauling children free of charge. He agreed to give the men twenty dollars each per month.

To Distribute the Centennial Balance.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—Judge Butler has filed an opinion that the balance held by the centennial board of finance should be distributed among the stockholders. The fund amounts to $13,101.61, and as there are 2,975 such holders widely scattered the dividend will amount to but two or three cents a share to each. It had been proposed to donate the fund either to the Pennsylvania museum or the Historical society.

Charles Warner Turns Up.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Charles Warner, of Devonshire, England, who was reported missing with $10,000 which he was known to have in his possession, and who was believed to have met with foul play, has been found. His disappearance turns out to be no more than the usual consequence of a stranger landing in a strange city in ignorance of the whereabouts of his relatives.

An Old Baltimore Firm Fails.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—The firm of H. Straus Brother & Co. has made an assignment to ex-Judge Fisher. Simon Rosenberg and Henry L. Straus. The firm had been doing business in this community for fifty years and retired from active business in the spring of 1890. The preliminary liabilities are $100,000 and the contingent liabilities $200,000. The assets will aggregate $250,000.

The Eastern Yacht Club's Regatta.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., June 30.—The annual regatta of the Eastern Yacht club was sailed yesterday afternoon. The weather was all that could be desired and some splendid contests took place. The winners in the different classes were Mayflower, Enone, Gossoon and Fancy. Gossoon wins the Puritan cup for the fastest time over the long course.

A Desperate Triple Murderer Arrested.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Lewis Dillinger, alias Paul May, who a year ago escaped from the jail at New England, No., a few hours before he was to have been hanged for the murder of his wife and two men, was arrested in this city after a desperate running fight with the police officer, during which twenty-four shots were exchanged. Dillinger received several shots.

Clothing Manufacturers Give Bail.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 30.—The twenty-one clothing manufacturers indicted for conspiracy appeared before Judge Kinney in the forenoon and pleaded guilty and gave bail in the sum of $2,000 each. District Attorney Benton and Sol Wile had previously appeared before the judge in special term and fixed the bail in this amount.

Warned and Then Shot.

PEORIA, Ills., June 30.—Some time ago Royal Fisher and Jay Gilbert signed "Society of Justice" and bearing a skull and crossbones giving him warning that he had to be killed. This morning his dead body was found in his barn riddled with shot. The notice is believed to have been sent by friends of his divorced wife.

William Will Respect the Sabbath.

LONDON, June 30.—The outcry raised by the members of the Sabbath observance societies and others against the proposed private visit on Sunday, July 12, to the London naval exhibition has resulted in the engineering committee deciding to postpone ment of the visit to some day during the week beginning July 13.

Andersonville's Surgeon Dead.

HALIFAX, June 30.—Dr. Stevenson, who was the surgeon in charge of the Andersonville prison during the American civil war, has just died here. He came to this country at the close of the war. He wrote a book in defense of the starvation of prisoners at Andersonville.

If you are a victim of any bladder or kidney difficulty as well, you will find Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy precisely the curative agent you have been seeking.—ADV

WHY BISMARCK RETIRED

The Old Kaiser Wanted Him to Go.

HOW HIS WISHES WERE RESPECTED.

The Present Emperor Knew That His Grandfather Wanted Von Caprivi to Succeed the Iron Chancellor and Took Action Accordingly—Inside History.

LONDON, June 30.—The Times this morning published an interview its famous correspondent, M. Blowitz, has secured with Count Von Munster, in which the count says that the retirement of Bismarck was determined upon by the late, not the present, kaiser.

Count Von Munster did not feel justified in making the story public before, seeing how closely it would tread on the heels of the facts themselves. Now, however, a sufficient time has elapsed, and he has removed the restriction he placed upon himself, and tells the following remarkably interesting story:

The Count's Story.

"On Wednesday, the 18th of March, last year, I arrived in Berlin, and my first call was on Prince Bismarck. The prince, after we had exchanged our first greetings, told me that he had resigned. He stated this with a smile on his lips, as if congratulating himself on being able to resume the country life of which he was so fond, and being able, during the few remaining years left on him, to pass his whole time without being harassed by constant anxieties and worries.

With Manly Resolution.

"His speech with the accents of a man who divests himself of his honors and his power with ease and manly resolution, and who, with the satisfaction of having well occupied his life and accomplished his duty, resumes the path which leads him to a nobly won repose.

"This twofold idea haunted me while the prince was speaking, and when I all at once called to mind two scenes which I had witnessed, two conversations which I had heard, and from that moment, while listening to the prince's monologue, I understood how the emperor could have conceived the idea of provoking and accepting the chancellor's retirement and what successor he would give him.

Bismarck Was Headstrong.

"At a tea party which he attended the old emperor, who had long been conversing with Lady, uttered the following words: 'Yes. I assure you you do not see things as close at hand as I do, but Bismarck has become very headstrong, and it takes all my strength of will to put up with him. But when I am driven to extremities the choice of his successor will not embarrass me, for it will be General von Caprivi.'

"'I assure you his appointment is the best choice to be made if it is ever necessary to part with Bismarck.'

Aroused by Nepotism.

"I was, therefore, almost convinced that General von Caprivi would arrive in office, for I knew the Emperor William well enough to know that he would act with the same language to his grandson. I remembered, too, that a good while before the Emperor William's death he attended a hunting party given by his grandson, the present emperor.

"Prince Bismarck had shortly before appointed his son, Count Herbert, the secretary of state, minister of foreign affairs. The Emperor William I said:

"'It must be allowed that this young Count Herbert has got on extraordinarily fast under the rule of his father, and it is the greatest act of nepotism which politics have ever recorded.'

"I took the liberty of saying to the emperor, 'But how is it your majesty has not made the remark to him?'

"'Why,' said the emperor, 'I cannot at this moment part with the prince; he is necessary to his country. Since he does not feel the impropriety of these extraordinary promotions he will not take the remark coolly, and it might have more serious consequences than I intended.'

A Prearranged Plan.

"Reflecting on these two conversations I was the less surprised both at Prince Bismarck's resignation and at the young emperor's resolution; for I saw that in accepting the resignation he had, as it were, followed the indications of his grandfather's desire, and had beforehand chosen the successor pointed out by his grand father."

THEY MAY FIGHT M'KINLEY.

If So, Captain Meredith's Case Will Be the Cause.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—The fight of the Knights of Labor against Captain Meredith, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, has assumed increased interest in view of the fact that it has been taken up by the executive committee of that order. Information has reached here that Messrs. Powderly, Wells and Hayes have left Columbus, O., to visit Washington in connection with the matter. Accompanying them are Daniel J. Ryan, secretary of state of Ohio, and D. K. Watson, attorney general of Ohio.

The Knights in a former interview with Secretary Foster made the threat that they would use the power of that organization to defeat the election of Mr. McKinley for governor this fall if their demands for the reinstatement of certain Knights of Labor discharged from the bureau of engraving and printing at Washington were not complied with. It is with this object in view that the principal officers of the Knights of Labor are now on their way here, accompanied by two of Mr. McKinley's close friends.

The Missouri River Running Wild.

ATCHISON, Kan., June 30.—The Missouri river has cut through Doniphan point, a few miles north of Atchison, and converted several Missouri farms into a vast island. The river is now running at a rate exceeding twenty miles an hour, and it is feared that the entire current will change in less than forty-eight hours. The will have a lake eight miles in length in the old bed. The river has been rising rapidly for twenty-four hours, and an overflow is looked for in the bottom land affected by the cut.

Typhoid in the Water.

FLORENCE, June 30.—The commission appointed to inquire into the prevalence of typhoid fever in this city has condemned all the existing supplies of water in Florence, and recommended that all visitors should only drink bottled water if they do not desire to contract typhoid fever.

British Sealers Will Not Suffer.

LONDON, June 30.—The political secretary of the colonial office, Baron Henry de Worms, in the house of commons last evening said that British sealers would not suffer much by the prohibition from catching seals for the period decided upon.

TO OVERTHROW HIPPOLYTE.

Ex-President Legitime Will Again Attack Hayti's Ruler.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The officers of the steamship Orinoco, which arrived from West Indian ports to-day, say that Legitime, ex-president of Hayti, who was driven from that country two years ago by Hippolyte, is at present residing in Kingston, Jamaica, on the 23d inst. for Turks island. He had a large following, and his objective point is probably Hayti, where he will endeavor to overthrow Hippolyte. As there is great discontent in the black republic it is thought his forces will be largely augmented upon his arrival in Haytien, who have tired of Hippolyte's tyranny.

Hippolyte Caused Slaughtering.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Letters from Hayti state that since the demand made by the French minister for indemnity for the killing of M. Rigaud foreigners are treated with consideration and that the reported assassination of President Hippolyte had caused the murder of a Mr. Pugot. He immediately caused his wholesale slaughters and modified the penalty against the government to exile, over 100 men being banished from the island.

The Delamater Depositors in Despair.

MEADVILLE, Pa., June 30.—The Delamater bank failure which occurred nearly seven months ago, now seems forgotten by all except the unfortunate depositors. George Delamater, late Republican candidate for congress, and his son Puget Sound, Wash.; T. A. Delamater, late superintendent of the Meadville and Linesville railroad, is in Chicago; Vice President Fisher, ex-cashier of the bank, is preparing to go to Sharon, Pa., and George Delamater, father of the young men, is repeatedly asked by his many unfortunate depositors seem to have given up all hope of ever getting anything.

Hallinger's New Lease of Life.

TRENTON, June 30.—Edward A. Hallinger, the colored murderer, sentenced to be hanged today, was denied a writ of habeas corpus in the United States district court. His counsel at once appealed to the supreme court of the United States. This acts as a stay of execution, and the case will be decided at the next three years. The ground for the application was Judge Knapp's neglect to take testimony to determine Hallinger's guilt after he pleaded guilty; and also that Hallinger is a British subject, and under existing treaties entitled to a trial.

Dunwoody Succeeds Greely.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—By direction of the president and at the request of Secretary Tracy the following officers have been assigned to duty with the weather bureau: Major Henry H. C. Dunwoody, signal corps; First Lieutenant William A. Glassford and First Lieutenant Joseph E. Maxfield, signal corps; Second Lieutenant John P. Finley, Nineteenth infantry. The transfer of Major Dunwoody, it is thought, will give him charge of the weather bureau, as Chief Signal Officer Greely's assignment to the bureau was not reported.

Accused of Nepotism.

Chinese Lepers Were Slain.

OTTAWA, June 30.—Dr. Smith has returned from British Columbia, whither he was sent to investigate reports of leprosy among the Chinese. He found that all the developed cases in Victoria, six in number, had been aggregated on an island about a mile from the city, to which place where they have been supplied with necessaries sufficient to last them eight months. In two cases Dr. Smith found that the victims had died. They got out in a canoe and by slain by their fellow countrymen to prevent the possibility of contagion.

The Trial of Peck.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., June 30.—Smith M. Lindsay, the noted lawyer of Utica, has arrived here with a commission to act for Attorney General Tabor with Attorney Al Lansing, of this city, in the trial before Governor Hill's referee, Judge Gilbert, of Clinton county, of the charges against District Attorney Peck of this county, for malversation and malfeasance in office, three prominent citizens having preferred the charges and presented the same to the governor for his removal. The trial begins today.

The Connecticut Senate Meets.

HARTFORD, June 30.—The senate met yesterday and will adjourn until the first Monday in September. E. K. Hubbard was appointed a trustee of the Connecticut hospital for the insane. Middlesex is to fill the place of the late Dr. Alsop. Senators Fox, Holden and Saumway were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of Dr. Alsop. The day was given up to considering the report of the committee on resolutions on the death of Dr. Alsop.

An Army Officer's Disgrace.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—An evening paper states that Lieutenant Benjamin S. Weaver, of the Third United States infantry, stationed at Benicia, Cal., has deserted and gone to Chili, and that a young woman from Fort Bidwell, named Miss Rose Hooper, has accompanied him. The company funds, it is said, are also missing. Weaver has a wife living in Columbus, O. Weaver was dismissed from the army in 1886, but was reinstated by President Cleveland.

Drugged and Kidnaped.

NEW YORK, June 30.—Alexander Kilpatrick, nineteen years of age, who says he belongs in Pittsburg, arrived from Europe and is detained at the barge office. He says that a hotel keeper at Pittsburg named Lyon drugged him with liquor, and while in that condition he was shipped to Gibraltar. He says he was very cruelly treated on board the ship and that he escaped and worked his passage over to this country.

Gladstone Getting Stronger.

LONDON, June 30.—Mr. Gladstone is getting stronger already under the influence of sunshine and sea air, and the color is returning to his cheeks. This, however, does not mean that he will be able to be admitted on all hands that Mr. Gladstone improves when he is away from work, but he just as much improves when away when he attempts to give attention to public business.

Three Men Killed.

JANESVILLE, Wis., June 30.—An accident occurred at 9 a. m. at the Fifth ward school building resulting in the death of Patrick Hagerey, John Flaherty and Richard T. Benuvitz. The men were at work tearing down the old building when the walls fell in. All were taken from the wreck dead.

Printers' Refused Nine Hours.

NEW YORK, June 30.—At a full meeting of the Typothetæ society the proposition of journeymen printers asking for a reduction of labor to nine hours was refused. Secretary Pease is of the opinion that the adoption of the resolution will lead to a general strike a September.

Green Gooseberry Jam.

Green gooseberry jam makes a change and is generally firmer for pastry than the ripe gooseberry jam. Put a small teacupful of water in the preserving pan, then add gooseberries, and let the juice be drawn out a little, taking care they do not burn. When the fruit is warmed through sugar to taste, reckon ½ lb. to 1 lb. to a pound, and boil it well stirred meanwhile. Boil from half to three-quarters of an hour.

An Omelet.

Allow one egg for each person; two eggs make a small omelet. Beat the eggs well till light, season with pepper and salt and a spoonful of finely chopped parsley; put a little butter in a pan, and when it is melted and hot put in the eggs, etc., and fry. When the under side is colored and the top is about the consistency of scrambled eggs slip it out of the pan into a hot dish, fold it over and serve at once.

Two Good Cakes.

The following is a new and splendid cake: Put it make a good layer jelly cake; spread between the layers a thick coating of tart apple jelly and sprinkle this with preserved ginger chopped fine; ice with orange icing.

A delightful cake is three layers of nice white cake put together with maple sugar filling, with the same spread over the top. Boil a pint cup of maple sugar till it becomes quite thick; when it has cooled a little beat it rapidly till it turns creamy and yellowish in color.

How to Demonstrate That Ice Has Heat.

Two pieces of ice can be quickly melted in a cup cooled below the freezing point by rubbing them against each other.

This Date in History—June 30.

1805—Archibald Campbell, ninth earl of Argyle, beheaded at Edinburgh.
1862—White Oak Swamp, Charles City Cross Roads, Frazier's farm and Malvern Hill, also The Second corps, Sumner's, Third, Heintzelman's; Fourth, Keyes'; Fifth, Porter's; Sixth, Franklin's, and McCall's division of the First corps did the hard fighting of the day (McClellan's account).
1862—Lee pushed forward rapidly; Third division of cavalry corps, Army of Potomac, fought with him in advance at Hanover, Pa.; battle of Bayou Teche.
1864—Last day of the month of slaughter; the last sentence was pronounced on the officer that in the eight weeks and two days since Grant ordered a general advance the Federals in all had lost 60,000 men and the Confederates 50,000; the policy of direct attack was therefore abandoned and that of slow siege and flanking adopted.

CHAUNCEY WILL NOT RUN

Depew Out of New York's Gubernatorial Fight.

IT WOULD COST HIM TOO MUCH.

The Various Positions He Would Have to Surrender if He Accepted the Republican Nomination for Governor—No Desire to Cause Trouble in His Party.

NEW YORK, June 30.—When the Hon. Chauncey M. Depew sails for Europe tomorrow he virtually lays down the Republican nomination for governor of New York, with all the splendid possibilities opening from it into national politics if he should be elected. Mr. Depew fully understands that his departure at this time is a virtual refusal to allow the use of his name in the state convention. When he was asked by a reporter as to the truth of a report that he had declared to a friend that he could not accept a nomination for governor this year, Mr. Depew did not deny it. His decision is based on business and personal reasons, which he could not discuss with the public. "I shall go to Europe on Wednesday," was all that he would say further.

What He Would Surrender.

Mr. Depew would be obliged to resign his numerous positions as railroad president and director, absolutely sever relations of a lifetime and violate business agreements which are of unusual importance. He has already indorsed President Harrison for renomination, and believes he will be renominated and re-elected. His own candidacy for governor would at once be regarded in political circles as making him a possible candidate for president in the event of his carrying the state. This idea pushed to the front, either by indiscreet friends or by the scheming enemy, would be a distraction from the campaign that might seriously injure the party by creating new dissensions, which Mr. Depew is determined shall not arise on his account.

Depew Greatly Touched.

The flattering manner in which his name has been mentioned for the governorship, and the practical unanimity with which Republicans over the state have intimated that the is the popular choice, have touched Mr. Depew deeply as evidences of the affection of his party friends, as well as his friends irrespective of party; but it is certain that in going to Europe tomorrow he takes a step which is intended to withdraw his name from further consideration in this connection.

The state convention to nominate a governor is likely to be called the first week in September. This authentic announcement of Mr. Depew's position will now add to the activity of the friends of Mr. Cornelius N. Bliss, ex-Mayor Schroeder, of Brooklyn; Postmaster Van Cott, Mr. Wadsworth and other conspicuous Republicans whose names have been mentioned for governor.

A LOUD ROYAL SMACK.

The Queen's Kiss Was Heard All Over the Chapel.

LONDON, June 30.—Alexandra Victoria Alberta Edwina Louise are the names with which the infant daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Fife was christened. Among those present were the queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, the Duke of Clarence, the Duke and Duchess of Teck and the Duke of Cambridge.

Her majesty and the Queen of Denmark, the infant's grandmothers, acted as sponsors, the Princess of Wales being proxy for the mother. The queen handed the infant to Archbishop Benson of Canterbury, giving it a kiss heard all over the chapel. The infant was dressed in Irish lace, an heirloom in the Fife family. The christening water was brought from the River Jordan by Lord Rowton, who recently returned from the Holy Land.

A tremendous crowd was in St. James street, principally ladies, and the infant, being held aloft by the nurse while passing, was received with hand clapping and cheers.

The Trainmen Guilty of Conspiracy.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 30.—The committee appointed to investigate the charge of conspiracy preferred against the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen reported to the supreme council of the federation, finding the brotherhood guilty of conspiracy with the Northwestern officials to provide men to take association switchmen's places. When the vote on the penalty of expulsion was taken two firemen, Debs and Hannahan, voted against it.

Testing His Rain Machine.

SPRINGFIELD, O., June 30.—Frank Melbourne, the Australian inventor of a rain machine, which he claimed caused frequent heavy rainstorms in Canton, O., last month has arrived for a public test next Tuesday. He will, he says, cause rain to fall over 70,000 square miles. The government authorities have invited the inventor to Kansas to experiment.

A Home for Poor Hebrews.

HARTFORD, June 30.—A deed has been recorded in Marlboro, in this county, transferring to the Baron de Hirsch fund a tract of land near the Marlboro mills, on which buildings are to be erected to be occupied by beneficiaries of the Hirsch charity. The Marlboro place will be colonized with poor Hebrews shortly.

Has Flack Married Again?

NEW YORK, June 30.—Those who ought to know what they are talking about are confident that ex-Sheriff Flack has married again, and, what is more, they say that the second Mrs. Flack is none other than Mrs. Carrie Raymond, who played such an important role in the famous divorce suit of a year ago.

Clark Hatch a Fugitive.

DENVER, June 30.—Clark W. Hatch, who was acquitted of the murder of his uncle in this state and who was recently tried on a charge of forgery preferred by the Travellers' Insurance company, is missing. He has not reached his home in Colorado Springs and is now said to be a fugitive.

Lowrey Lodged in Jail.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 30.—M. T. Lowrey, for several years a general agent of the New York Life Insurance company, was brought here by a special agent of the company and lodged in jail. He is charged with obtaining large sums of money under false pretenses.

Burned in an Oil Explosion.

PITTSBURG, June 30.—An explosion at the Forest Oil company's well at Corapolis completely wrecked the derrick and boilerhouse and terribly burned two oil drillers named Winges.

PRINCE GEORGE'S STORY.

He Tells How He Saved the Czarewitch's Life.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Prince George of Greece has arrived in Chicago from Omaha. He was accompanied by Captain Lahmer, of the Russian navy, and one servant. The prince is traveling incognito, and registered at the Auditorium as Count Folstor. Referring to the attack in Japan upon the Russian grand duke, the prince said that none of the reports thus far printed were correct.

"We were on one side of the street and a line of police were on the other side. Two officials headed the line, then came the grand duke. I followed, and back of me was the Japanese minister. Suddenly a man stepped past the line of police, raised his sword with both hands above his head, and before anyone could interfere he brought it down with all his strength. Fortunately the grand duke, though obliquely in front, saw him and stepped aside in time to save his life, though not a cut.

"The sword's point gashed his scalp from nearly the crown of his head to just over his right eye, and then the saber swung again and once more the grand duke was cut in nearly the same place.

"Then the grand duke ran, the assassin following him. I rushed after them and just as the sword was raised to strike again, I rapped the scoundrel on the head with my stick and brought him to the ground. That was all."

"These reports," said Prince George, "about the disappearance of one of the czarewitch's special messengers at or near Denver are all wrong. I am a very near friend of the Russian prince, and I understand just now he sent dispatches to his father in Russia and what messengers took them. The route across America being the most convenient, is the favorite. Every dispatch of the kind sent by the prince has reported safe and sound at St. Petersburg. They are not going about advertising the fact that they are bearing dispatches to the czar."

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

JOSEPH K. EMMET.

The Actor Widely Known and Loved as "Fritz."

SOME INCIDENTS OF HIS CAREER.

A Poor Sign Painter in St. Louis. Afterward a Minstrel and Song and Dance Man, and Lastly the World Famous Dutch Comedian — His Marriage and Divorce.

When Joseph Kline Emmet breathed his last the other day at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson out of the most remarkable figures of the American theater passed away. He was never a great actor, but it is probable that he made more money than any other man, except Joseph Jefferson, ever made on the stage in the same length of time. His wonderful success was undoubtedly due largely to "personal magnetism" —something which nobody understands but which we all know exists. There was something about his songs, although his voice was no better than that of thousands of other men; there was something about his smile that attracted his audiences to him, and put them in sympathy with him at once. He had a way of making each pose of his heaven feel as if he were playing to him or her alone. Women and children he particularly pleased. In all of his plays children were in some way introduced, and a big dog was also a feature of each of his later productions.

As a man Emmet was generally charming. Frank, jolly, modest and unselfish, his character would have been a wholly delightful one had it not been for one weakness. This was a love for liquor. But Emmet was not a common drunkard. The craving for drink seemed to be a disease over which he had no control. For long periods he would go without a drop, only to suddenly surprise his friends by entering upon an unrestrained debauch that would last for weeks. Many times he disappointed his audiences because of this overpowering appetite for alcohol. But, strangely enough, he never seemed to lose the public's favor. Another man's career would have been ruined by such conduct as Emmet indulged in dozens of times.

JOSEPH KLINE EMMET.

It was during and doubtless because of one of these protracted sprees in 1880 that his wife, who had gone hand in hand with him for twenty-seven years, cheerfully helping him at first in abject poverty and afterward sharing his princely wealth, applied for and obtained an absolute divorce. He offered no defense, but declared that he loved her and blamed only himself. He gave her a beautiful home and settled both in Albany and nearly half a million in government bonds. Shortly before his death it was announced with how much truth I do not know) that he was about to marry Helen Sedgwick, an actress. He had no money but himself, and when not owned by liquor he seemed to love all men.

He was born in St. Louis, March 16, 1841, of Irish-American parents. As a boy he showed considerable ability as a mimic of dialects, and his voice always had in the accordion, for which a club formed by him became famous in the city. It was during one of these serenading parties that he met the young woman—a daughter of one of the best families of St. Louis—who is afterward his wife. He also became an expert on the snare drum. One day in 1865, when a party of friends were visiting his Albany home, he pointed to a bestreet old drum, beating out a conspicuous place and said, "That drum was the foundation of my fortune." And it was, for it won for him his first appearance on the stage. This was as drummer for a company of bell ringers. Before this, however, he had learned the sign painter's trade and made a fair living by it. Some of the signs which he turned out are still in existence in St. Louis.

His early theatrical efforts were confined to the street rank minstrelsy and song and dance work in variety shows. In 1869 Charles Gaylor, who made a fortune by writing plays for variety actors, wrote him a play entitled "Fritz, Our Cousin German." This was produced at the Buffalo Academy of Music, Nov. 22 of that year.

The day before this play was to be produced Emmet was at a loss for a costume to wear in it. He walked down Exchange street, and near the railroad station met a German just arrived on an immigrant train. The German's clothes were exactly what Emmet wanted, and finally he bought them for ten dollars. The next night, when he appeared on the stage dressed for his part, even Gaylor failed to recognize him.

EMMET AS FRITZ IN A MASHOUSE.

The success of this play and others which followed it (each with a stupid but brave and honest German for its hero) was immediate. Money rolled in in floods—in thousands of dollars out of them. When he was sober he was not an extravagant man, and notwithstanding the enormous sums he squandered during his debauches, he died rich.

His house at Albany, which he gave to his wife, was his greatest pleasure, and he never parted with it. It is said that he never saw it after the decree of divorce was granted her. It is a fantastic pile of massive stone, a little heavy clinged, in a cemetery at the foot of the Hills on which it stands, now lies all that is mortal of the man who built it.

EDWARD MARSHALL.

TO RACE ACROSS THE SEA.

Captains Lawler and Andrews Off on Their Daring Cruise.

Two famous if somewhat notoriety seekers of the Bay State, Captain William A. Andrews and Captain Josiah W. Lawler, started from Quincy pier, Chelsea, Boston Harbor, June 25, on the most perilous and reckless ocean race in history.

The rival captains are to cross the briny deep to Land's End, England, in mere cockle shells of boats, and the man who first puts foot on British soil at the point named will win $5,000, a silver cup, and notoriety enough to make Steve Brodie jump off the Brooklyn bridges with a millstone round his neck from sheer envy. Both men are not unknown to fame in similar achievements. Andrews and his brother crossed the Atlantic in the Nautilus, nineteen feet long, in 1878, and in 1886 Andrews alone undertook to repeat the feat in the fifteen foot Dark Secret. He sailed half way across the Atlantic, his little boat became water logged and he returned to New York.

CAPTAIN LAWLER AND THE SEA SERPENT.

These dreadnaught skippers have now attempted a feat that breaks all previous records. Andrews' boat is the Mermaid, total length 15 feet, keel length 12 feet, beam 5 feet, depth 9 feet, draught 1 foot. She is flat bottomed, centerboard craft, built of white cedar, with oak ribs, and she has no air tight compartments or cork linings. Lawler's boat is the Sea Serpent. Her demensions are about the same as the Mermaid's, but she is a counter sawyer on cedar and oak, and has two metal air tight compartments.

In passing compliments on the way across the canal Andrews will have a red fire, while Lawler's compliments will be indicated by green. Andrews is forty eight years old and Lawler eleven years younger. The latter has been a sailor since he was 15, has his votes from a nautical standpoint, and the general public, as well as all the fastened sea serpents and mermaids in Cape Cod and Long's End, will be pleased to hear that the hardy mariners have safely braved the deep.

The Oldest Retriever.

The oldest retrieving dog in the country is owned by Al Heritage, veteran sportsman of Jersey City. He is a white and liver colored setter named Duke, and a more knowing dog could not be found anywhere. He is 19 years old, and probably a few other dogs that can equal Duke from a running standpoint, but they are much younger and possess the sense Hibernus of Duke which made Duke popular in his early days.

Duke's record as a retriever of pigeons stands second only to that of L. M. Gilbert, of Philadelphia. Gilbert has been known to retrieve 1,500 birds in a day. Duke's highest number is placed at 1,000. It is very seldom that a bird gets away from Duke. If he fails in catching the bird in the first bound, and the bird has as yet not flown to any great height, he makes a leap in the air and down the bird comes.

Boston's Independent Theater.

There seems to be some possibility that the scheme of an independent theater in Boston will be realized. According to present plans the theater will be worked on the co-operative plan. No plays that have been produced before will be eligible for production. Writers must submit their pieces to a reading committee. They must be unsigned and typewritten. No. 1 play shall be produced on independent theater in succession. The theater will retain an interest in the plays it may produce. Studies of American society, of working, social life, of the wonderful life, will be preferably studies in American history will be considered next in order, and famous modern plays by the best dramatists of Europe will be next.

The Tragedy of Dolly Davis' Life.

A pretty girl, who had lived all her life in the atmosphere of the theater, had received a careful stage training and had shown considerable ability as an actress, gave up the struggle the other day and drowned herself in the Hudson river, near Tarrytown, N. Y. Her name was Dolly Davis, and she was unable to earn enough in her profession to buy food and clothing. There is a warning in her tragic end which might well be taken to heart by the hundreds of young women who are crazy to go on the stage.

How to Clean Marble.

A strong preparation for cleaning marble is fine pumice stone, newly slaked lime and verdigris, mixed thick with soft soap. Dip a woolen rag in this compound, and rub the stains one way. Then wash off with soap and water. Another excellent preparation is made of two parts of common soda, one part of pumice stone and one of finely powdered chalk, which should be sifted through a fine sieve and mixed with water. It is used in the same manner. Iron rust can be usually removed by rubbing with lemon juice.

HE WON THE SUBURBAN.

Lonstaka, the Horse That Left Tenny in the Rear.

LOANTAKA.

Tenny, Ten Troy and the other favorites vainly reaching for them from the other side of the race track fence, to use a somewhat hyperbolic illustration. Loantaka has always been considered quite a race horse, but strange to relate no one, comparatively speaking, looked upon him as a possible Suburban winner. Loantaka was foaled five years ago at Wyndham Walden's farm in Maryland. Two years later, however, he changed to Mrs. George Lorillard and was saddled with the musical name Loantaka, which when translated means Ugly Dumbling.

In the matter of pedigree Loantaka had every excuse for winning the Suburban. His dam was Peggy Dewdle, a mare descended from Lexington, one of England's most sensational Derby winners, while his sire was Sensation, by Leamington. Loantaka is at present owned by David W. McCann, of Philadelphia, who bought him for $275 at the Mrs. George Lorillard sale, August 19, 1890. The best performance of Loantaka's career, the Suburban excepted, was the victory in the Sheepshead Bay handicap last year with 115 pounds up. He covered the mile and a furlong in 1:53 3-5, and debuted such cracks as Firenzi, Castaway II, Longstreet and Tristan. In the recent Brooklyn handicap Loantaka was thirteenth. He is a brown horse, and as honesty a horse as his first name would indicate.

DRAMATIC NOTES.

J. K. Emmet, contrary to general belief, did not originate the song, "Sweet Violets," which he made so popular. It was introduced first in a play called "Quartz Valley," which he bought for $2,000, and one act of which he utilized in "Fritz Among the Gypsies." He rewrote the music, but did not alter the words.

Ellen Terry describes stage fright this way: "You suddenly feel as if your tongue had become dislocated and was lying powerless in your mouth. Cold shivers begin to creep downward from the nape of your neck and they seem to meet in the small of your back."

"Mrs. Robert Ray Hamilton," who proposes to go on the stage next season, says she is having three plays written around her, and negotiates are now on foot. Charles E. Gardner will be her manager.

BASEBALL BREVITIES.

The Harvard baseball club has elected Louis A. Frothingham, '93, captain for the season of 1892. Will the boys in blue play Princeton next year?

That the battle between the National league and the American association means war to the knife is shown by the blacklisting by President Young of Meekin and Raymond, who jumped their contracts with the Western association.

With Keefe, Rusie and Sharrott, Ewing and Wolf, New York has an array of pitching hard to knock out of the box.

SPORTING NOTES.

Regardus, Bandle, the late Seth Green, Edward Gilman and C. W. Bradford are said to be the only men who ever succeeded in catching a clean score of 100 live birds.

The Corinthian Yacht club, of New York, was organized in 1888, and its present leading officers are: Admiral, Charles H. Tweed; fleet captain, August Belmont; secretary, M. Roosevelt Schuyler; measurer, John Hyslop. The club house is at Tompkinsville, S. I., and the membership is large.

At the third international bench show of dogs of the Industrial Exhibition association, to be held in the city of Toronto, Canada, Sept. 14 to 18, it has been decided to hold the following dog races: Grand greyhound sweepstakes, all entrance, divided 50 per cent. to first and 40 per cent. to second, to which the Exhibition association will add a silver medal valued at $20, to be shown as the winner and running to medal (open to all). Greyhound race, 200 yards, $15 to first, $7 to second and $3 to third. Whippet race, 200 yards, $15 to first, $7 to second and $3 to third.

A Homemade Bicycle.

A highly interesting relic was lately discovered by a touring party of the Messrs. C. C. (Australia). It consisted of the remains of an old spider wheeled bicycle made at a place called Healesville, by a gifted mechanic named Henley, some twelve years since. Up to the time in question it seems that Henley had never seen a cycle, but his ambition to possess some such vehicle was fired by pictorial representations in the press. Henley set to work with such material as he found ready to his hand, and fashioned a backbone out of a gas pipe, the rims of a half section of pipe, and the spokes of fencing wire. The bearings consisted of blocks of red gum-wood and the wheels ran on rope tires. This rare old home made crock is now a wreck, which the Melbourne C. C. have secured for their club rooms.

Bicyclist F. Ed Spooner.

One of the best known road riders of the Lincoln Cycling club, of Chicago, is F. Ed Spooner, whose picture appears in this article. One of his most notable victories was in May, 1889, when he won the 100 mile race at the Chicago exposition tournament. He repeated the performance in June, 1890, and covered the distance in the fast time of 5h. 32m. 12 4-5s. He is a rider of considerable speed and endurance, and has met and defeated a number of good wheelmen.

F. ED SPOONER.

Only three star tragedians will be on the road in the United States next season—Edwin Booth, Robert Downing and Frederick Warde.

How to Raise the Body of a Drowned Person.

A French-Canadian proceeded in this fashion: He supplied himself with some gallon glass jars and a quantity of unslacked lime and went in a boat to the place where the man was seen to go down. One of the jars was half filled with lime and then filled with water and tightly corked. It was then dropped overboard, and soon after exploded as the bottom of the river with a loud report. After the third trial, each time at a different place, the body rose to the surface.

How to Remove Mildew from Cloth.

Put a teaspoonful of chloride of lime into a quart of water, strain it twice, and dip the mildewed places into the solution. Lay in the sun to dry. If the mildew has not disappeared repeat the process.

How to Obtain a Letter of Credit.

Any first class bank will issue a letter of credit upon the receipt of the amount of the credit and a small commission. This letter enables you to draw any sum up to the amount of the credit from any of the bank's correspondents abroad. A list of those correspondents is usually printed upon the back of the letter.

How to Make a Welsh Rabbit.

The following is the old English plan: Melt a tablespoonful of good butter in a saucepan and add about half a pound of rich crumbly cheese cut in half inch bits. Stir the mass over the fire, and while the cheese melts pour in a gill of old ale. When thoroughly mixed add a pinch of cayenne pepper. Lay slices of thick toast moistened with boiled milk on a platter, pour the melted cheese over them, and serve hot.

How to Tell Steel from Iron.

Aquafortis applied to the surface of steel produces a black spot; on iron the metal remains clean. The slightest vein of iron or steel can be readily detected by this method.

How to Estimate What a Horse Can Draw.

A horse can draw on metal rails one and two-thirds as much as on asphalt pavement, three and one-third times as much as on good Belgian blocks, five times as much as on ordinary Belgian blocks, seven times as much as on good cobble stones, thirteen times as much as on ordinary cobble stones, twenty times as much as on a good road, and forty times as much as on sand.
